JUDGMENT.—This, as is now admitted, was a suit for possession by partition of a half share in a house. I mention the fact of plaintiff being out of possession because this fact appears to have been slurred over at the time when the question of Court-fees was discussed prior to the admission of the appeal. The plaintiff purchased the half share he claims under a sale-deed executed by Jaggu. The common ancestor of Jaggu and the answering defendant Ram Sewak was named Sital. Sital had two sons Jaggu and Hanuman. Jaggu is the plaintiff's vendor. Hanuman was the grandfather of the answering defendant Ram Sewak. The plaintiff's case is that though the family has admittedly now separated this property remained common property of which the answering defendant and Jaggu are tenants-in-common and that Jaggu, therefore, owned an undivided half share which he was entitled to transfer to the plaintiff. The defendants' case was that Jaggu separated from the rest of the family in the lifetime of Sital and went to live in Ismailpur in another house also said to have belonged to the family, that Hanuman alone came into possession of the house in suit; that the original house which had belonged to Sital fell down altogether; and that the present house was built by Hanuman on its site with his own money.

The Court below had dismissed the suit. The main plea in appeal is that the learned Subordinate Judge has made out a new case for the defendant which he himsef did not set up and has erred in law in doing so.

There is also a question of limitation which has been decided against the plaintiff, but this question is intimately connected with the main question whether the plaintiff is a co-owner of the suit property or not.

The scope of the principle that a Court ought not to set up on behalf of a party a new case which has never been pleaded by him is well illustrated by two cases which have been cited by appellant's learned Counsel in support of his argument. The first is the case of Babu Ram v. Babu Ram (1). In this case the issue was one of priority between two charges on the same property, namely, a mortgage and a takavi advance. The Court below held in favour of the mortgage on the ground that the takavi advance was not given for the benefit of the property on which it was secured. It had never even been suggested by the defendant that the takavi had not been given for the benefit of this property, and this Court held that the lower Court had no right to dismiss the suit on that ground. The other case is Sheo Charan Das v. Baij Nath Singh (2). This was an application for restoration of a case on the ground that the defendant was absent looking for his Pleader when the case was called on and dismissed. The summons had been served on the defendant's chela and the defendant did not dispute that this was a sufficient service. The lower Court restored the suit, not on the ground pleaded by the defendant but on the ground that the service had never been properly served on him a ground which he himself never took up.

On the other hand there is another well-defined class of cases to which the principle does not apply. It frequently happens that neither party in his pleadings discloses the entire truth. It may happen that the evidence adduced discloses a set of facts which is either midway between, or at any rate different from, the case which either party has set up in his pleadings. In such cases the Court is obviously bound to take notice of the true state of facts as proved by the evidence, and to give effect to the legal rights which arise on that state of facts. This is what has happened in the present case. The finding of fact of the Court below, based, it may be noted, mainly on evidence led by the plaintiff himself, is as follows. The original house which stood on this site consisted of two portions, a front portion occupied after separation by Hanuman and his descendants and a back portion originally occupied by Jaggu. The site of the house does not belong to the parties but is nazul. About 25 years ago Jaggu's portion of the house entirely fell down and ceased to exist. Jaggu himself went to live in Ismailpur in a house belonging to his father-in-law. Hanuman subsequently built a new back portion to the house and that portion has been occupied by himself and his descendants ever since. It is further found that there is no other property belonging to the family which would necessitate any formal partition. It may be noted that even in the sale-deed on which the plaintiff's case is founded a separate portion of the house purports to be transferred, as the boundary of the share sold is given as the eastern portion of the house occupied by the vendor's nephew Sheo Shankar. Sheo Shankar is the son of Hanuman and the uncle of the answering defendant. Under these circumstances the learned Subordinate Judge drew the inference, as he was entitled to do, that although there was no formal partition either through the Court or through arbitrators the parties did from the time of separation occupy the front and back portions of the house respectively in separate and adverse possession, and that the half share of the house now claimed was built after the separation by Hanuman with his own funds and in his own separate property. From this finding the dismissal of the plaintiff's suit naturally followed. The decree of the Court below is correct and is not liable to be set aside. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 66 Ind. Cas. 620: 8 O. L. J. 343.
(2) 57 Ind. Cas. 563; 23 O. C. 104.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 26 OF 1924
November 27, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

MAHAMAD NIYAJUDDIN KHAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus
JETHU—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), Sch. II—Landlord and tenant—Surrender—Licensee from tenant, position of—Suit by fresh grantee to eject licensee of former tenant—Limitation, Commencement of.

On the surrender of a tenancy a license granted by the former tenant expires and the licensee becomes a trespasser from the date of the surrender, and his possession becomes adverse to a fresh grantee of the tenancy rights from the zemindar, from the date of the grant, and limitation for a suit to eject the licensee by such grantee begins to run from the date of the grant under Sch. II of the C. P. Tenancy Act. [p. 824, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against a decree of the Additional District Judge, Nagpur, dated the 29th November 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 28 of 1923.

Mr. J. C. Ghosh, for the Appellants.

Sir B. K. Bose and Mr. P. N. Rudra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are apparently simple, but raise a difficult question of law. The disposal of this case also affects a number of people, and it will, therefore, be necessary to set up the facts in detail.

In the famine of 1913 a number of people of Balaghat came to Nagpur to earn their livelihood. One Mr. Bhide, who was an occupancy tenant of certain lands near Nagpur, gave these people the plot in dispute on a permanent lease for the purpose of building houses and they settled on it. Subsequently, Bhide being in financial difficulties surrendered his holding to the Malguzar, the Raja of Nagpur, and it was granted in perpetuity to the appellants. The area occupied by the defendant and his fellows is about 2 acres out of 69.70 acres. The appellants have started a farm on the holding and erected a large bungalow and they wish to get rid of the Balaghat people who have built a village on a portion of the land.

It is stated that some persons have vacated, but the defendant, who presumably represents his fellow squatters, has resisted the plaintiffs' claim. The suit of the plaintiffs has been dismissed by the lower Courts on the ground that it is barred by limitation under Sch. II of the Tenancy Act of 1920, read with s. 104, having been brought more than two years after the grant of the lease to the plaintiffs. The date of the lease is October 1919, and the suit was brought in August 1922.

It is undisputed law that on the surrender of a tenancy the license granted by the former tenant expires. The defendant, therefore, ceased to be Bhide's licensee from the date of his surrender, which is 2nd October 1919, and is a trespasser.

It is contended on behalf of the plaintiffs that no adverse possession on the part of the defendant arose until he refused their request to quit the land, which was within two years of the present suit. Schedule II of the Tenancy Act provides two years' limitation for possession of a holding by a tenant from which he has been dispossessed or excluded from possession by any person, the period beginning from the date of dispossession or exclusion.

We are not here concerned with the question of dispossession, but as a portion of the holding is actually occupied by the defendant's house, it is obvious that the plaintiffs are excluded from that portion of the holding, and the question then is whether the exclusion begins from the date on which the plaintiffs became entitled to possession or from the date on which the plaintiffs asked the defendant to quit.

It is not the plaintiffs' case that the defendant is his licensee. On reading the plaint and the pleadings it appears that the plaintiffs do not set up any case that the defendant was on the land with their permission, and, therefore, no question of the grant of a fresh license, either express or implied, arises. The position of the defendant is that of a trespasser from the date on which Bhide surrendered the land. It has been held in Karelal v. Badriprasad (1) that when the grantor of a license with respect to immoveable property dies, his heir is competent to treat the licensee as a trespasser without giving notice of revocation. This case is based on two English cases Wallis v. Harrison (2) and Coleman v. Foster (3) in both of which it was held that on the termination of the license the licensees were liable in trespass to the transferees, the license being of a personal character not merely as regards the grantee, but also as regards the grantor. In the absence, therefore, of any fresh license by the plaintiffs the defendant was a trespasser from the date of Bhide's surrender, and therefore, it would appear that his possession must be regarded as adverse to the plaintiffs from the date of the lease to them.

(1) 68 Ind. Cas. 107; 18 N. L. R. 76; (1922) A. I. R. (N.) 162.

(2) (1838) 51 R. R. 715; 4 M. & W. 538; 8 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 44; 1 H. & H. 405; 2 Jur. 1019; 150 E. R. 1543.

(3) (1856) 108 R. R. 442; 1 H. & N. 37; 4 W. R. 489; 156 E. R. 1108.

I have been unable to find a case exactly on all fours with the present case, nor have Counsel on either side been able to quote one. But there can be no doubt that the plaintiffs' right to recover the whole of the land as tenants accrued on the date of acquiring the lease of the holding in October 1919 and that they were excluded by the defendant from that date. The date of the exclusion, therefore, was in October 1919, and the only way in which the plaintiffs could avoid the provisions of Sch. II would be by showing that they granted a fresh license to the defendant, or by an agreement between them, the defendant was allowed to remain on the land, which comes to the same thing. But in the plaint and in the pleadings the plaintiffs have not set up any case of this character, although they say in the plaint that the defendant did not quit when asked to do so. It appears, therefore, that in October 1919 the license granted to the defendant ceased and he became a trespasser as regards the plaintiffs from that date. His possession, therefore, was adverse to the plaintiffs, who were excluded from possession of a portion of the holding by him and, therefore, the suit to eject him should have been brought within two years from October 1919.

In these circumstances I agree with the view of the Courts below that the suit is barred by limitation, and the appeal, therefore, will be dismissed with costs. It is not necessary to go into the other contentions which had been raised by the defendant and were not dealt with by the lower Appellate Court.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 696 OF 1923.

October 24, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.

DIVI DWARKACHARYULU—PETITIONER

versus

KOTHAPALLI SRIKRISHNAN—RESPONDENT.

Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920), as amended by Madras Act II of 1922, Sch. X, r. 15, sub-cl. (3) —Local Board Oath of allegiance, failure of members to take -Election of President by such members, validity of -Meeting for election of President -Adjournment Election at adjourned meeting, legality of

Under the Madras Local Boards Act of 1920 as amended by Madras Act II of 1922 every person appointed or elected to be a member of a Local Board is bound to take the oath of allegiance before he takes his seat, that is to say, before he enters upon the rights and duties of his office.

The election of a President by members who have not taken their oaths of allegiance is an election not by members of the Union Board at all, and is invalid.

Under sub-cl. (3), r. 15 of the Transitory Provisions in Sch. X of the Act, the power to elect a President is conferred only on a meeting called by the President on the date and at the time fixed by him.

Where a meeting called for such a purpose is adjourned, an election of a President held at the adjourned meeting is invalid.

Petition, under s 115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the judgment and decree, dated the 10th February 1923, in O. S. No. 137 of 1922, on the file of the District Court, Kistna at Masulipatam.

Mr. B. Jagannadha Doss, for the Petitioner.

Mr. P. Somasundaram, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In this petition, I am asked to revise an order passed by the District Court of Kistna setting aside the election of the petitioner as President of a Union Board.

The two grounds on which the learned District Judge set aside the election are (1) that the members of the Union Board had not taken their oaths of allegiance before the alleged election was held and (2) that the meeting at which the election of the President took place was a meeting not held on the day and at the time fixed by the President of the Taluk Board as required by sub-cl. (3) of r. 15 of the Transitory Provisions contained in Sch. X of the Local Boards Act, but on subsequent date to which the meeting originally called was adjourned by the President of the meeting because there was no quorum present on the first occasion. I think the decision of the learned District Judge on both these points was correct.

As regards the first contention, the Act required that the oath should be taken by every member before he takes his seat. That undoubtedly means before he enters upon the rights and duties of his office. As the right to elect a President is part of the rights which accrue to him only as a member of the Union Board and as the terms of the section prevent him from taking his seat, that is to say, from exercising any rights of his office before he takes his oath of allegiance, it is clear that the election of a President by members who had not so taken their oaths of allegiance was an election not by the members of the Union Board at all but by some irresponsible body.

With regard to the second question, if the words of the rule were that a meeting shall be called by the Taluk Board President for the purpose of the election of the President of the Union Board and that the President of the Union Board shall be elected at such meeting, then it may be open to the contention that though there was no quorum for the meeting originally called by the Taluq Board President, the adjourned meeting was really a continuation of the same meeting and that, therefore, the election of the President was at such meeting. But the words of the rule are that the meeting shall be held on a day and at a time fixed by the President of the Taluq Board for the election of the President to the Union Board. Therefore, the power to elect a President is conferred only on a meeting called by the President on the date and at the time fixed by him. From the evidence it is clear that the meeting at which the election took place was not such a meeting.

The petition, therefore, fails on both the grounds. It is, therefore, unnecessary for me to consider the question whether if the decision of the lower Court on both these grounds was wrong, I have or have no jurisdiction to interfere with the order made by him.

The petition is dismissed with costs.

Petition dismissed.

V. N. V.

Z. K.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 311 OF 1923.

November 20, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Hallifax, A. J. C.

TIJAU—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GOPI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), ss. 12 (1) (ii), 13—Occupancy tenant—Transfer of holding—Ejectment suit—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Test.

Where the transfer of an occupancy tenant right would be valid between the parties thereto except for the prohibition contained in s. 12 of the C. P. Tenancy Act, 1920, it can only be avoided in the manner and to the extent provided by s. 13 thereof. No suit to avoid it can be maintained in the Civil Court. [p. 828, col. 1.]

In other words no landlord can sue in a Civil Court to evict a person to whom an occupancy tenant has made over his holding unless that person is one of those persons mentioned in s. 12 (1) (ii) of the C. P. Tenancy Act of 1920 or holds under a lease for not more than one agricultural year granted not more than two months before the beginning of that year, without any covenant to renew being attached to it; in all other cases he must apply to a Revenue Officer under s. 13 of the Act. [p. 829, col. 1.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal against a decree of the Additional District Judge, Raipur, dated the 13th April 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 24 of 1923.

Mr. J. C. Ghosh, for the Appellant.

Dr. H. S. Gour, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Stripped of irrelevancies the facts with which we are concerned are only that one Man Singh, an occupancy tenant of land belonging to the plaintiff Gopi, transferred his occupancy holding by sale to the defendant Tijau on the 17th of February 1922, executing a deed as evidence of the transfer, and that Tijau is not the landlord or even one of the landlords of the holding nor a person who, if he survived Man Singh without nearer heirs, would inherit his occupancy right, nor was he co-tenant of the holding. The landlord Gopi sued in the Court of the Subordinate Judge for the ejectment of Tijau as a trespasser and was given a decree for possession of the holding, which was confirmed on appeal.

On these facts, which are really all the facts with which we have concern, it seems clear enough that Man Singh transferred his right in his holding to Tijau in contravention of s. 12 of the Tenancy Act, 1920. Consequently the landlord Gopi could apply to a Revenue Officer under s. 13 of the Act, and by s. 14, the Revenue Officer is empowered to set aside the transfer and put him in possession of the holding on certain terms. Under s. 105 of the same Act, therefore, no Civil Court can entertain the present suit by Gopi to set aside the transfer or declare it void and put him in possession, and the suit ought to have been dismissed, or rather the plaint ought to have been rejected as disclosing no cause of action triable by a Civil Court.

To understand the decisions of the Courts below and the arguments put forward in support of them it is necessary to state a few other facts and pleadings. The defendant pleaded that he was a fractional landlord of the holding, but it is now admitted that he comes no nearer to that than being the owner of another patti in the same village as Gopi's patti in which the holding lies; that gives him no more rights in the holding than being owner of a neighbouring or even distant village would. The deed executed by Man Singh, however, untruly described Tijau as landlord of the holding and called itself a surrender, and by reason of these recitals it was admitted to registration. That was in direct contravention of s. 12 (4) of the Tenancy Act, and it has been correctly held that the document must be regarded as unregistered.

The learned Additional District Judge, as I understand his judgment, has held that a Civil Court has jurisdiction in the case because the transfer was void for want of registration of the document by which it was made and was, therefore, not a transfer in contravention of the provisions of s. 12 of the Tenancy Act. In this view he purports to follow the ruling of Stanyon, A. J. C., in Ganeshdas v. Shankar (1), and finds himself unable to follow that of the Hon'ble the Financial Commissioner in Moolchand v. Munney (2). It is very commonly supposed that there is a conflict between these two rulings and that the former supports the view here taken, following that set out by Ismay, J. C., in Chamru Sao v. Tulsidin Singh (3) and Daji Vithal v. Moreshwar (4) in which Sir Stanley Ismay dissented from that taken by Drake-Brockman, A. J. C., in Dayaram v. Shaligram (5). The fallacies in the reasoning seem to me almost too obvious to need refutation. It is, however, by no means uncommonly accepted, though it is certainly not supported by any of the judgments mentioned.

The latest published ruling on the point is that of Stanyon, A. J. C., in Ganeshdas v. Shankar (1). Where by mistake or otherwise divergent judgments of Single Judges have been included in the official publication of rulings of this Court, I am bound to follow the latest of them, unless I feel sufficient doubt of its correctness to refer the question to a Bench, which could overrule it. Here, however, am respectfully and entirely in agreement with the views expressed, and, therefore, far from being in agreement with the misinterpretation of those views which is so lamentably common and will be discussed later. Those views are clearly explained by the Hon'ble the Financial Commissioner. in Moolchand v. Munney (2), where the ruling is followed, though it is generally supposed, as it was by the learned Additional District Judge in this case, that the two rulings are directly contradictory.

It is advisable to examine the published rulings on this point in chronological order. The first is that of Drake-Brockman, A. J. C., in Dayaram v. Shaligram (5). About that there is no doubt; in circumstances exactly similar to those of the present case it was held that the landlord had a remedy by application to the Revenue Officer, which barred his suit in the Civil Court. In that case the fact that the deed of transfer was registered in 1899, when registration was forbidden by the Tenancy Act then in force just as it is now, is mentioned, but the nullity of that registration is not. The learned Judge doubtless regarded the matter as having no bearing whatever on the case, which certainly seems the correct view of it.

The second and third cases are those of Chamru Sao v. Tulsidin Singh (3) and Daji Vithal v. Moreshwar (4) in which Ismay, J. C., affirmed the view set out in Dayaram v. Shaligram (5), but distinguished the case in a way that I cannot but regard as fallacious. My respect for Sir Stanley Ismay is such that I have reached this conclusion with reluctance and even now express it with diffidence, but it seems to me inevitable. The first case is distinguished by the fact that the transfer deed in it was not registered though the consideration was more than Rs. 100, and the second by the fact that though the formalities of registration had been gone through, the deed must still be treated as unregistered, whereas that in Dayaram v. Shaligram (5) had to be treated as unregistered in the same way and for the same reasons as that in the second case and in the same way as that in the first case. Anyhow, even if both the rulings are correct, they cannot be any authority for the view in support of which they are so often quoted, that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is restored by the fact

(1) 13 Ind. Cas. 909; 8 N. L. R. 22.
(2) C. P. R. R. 24.
(3) 17 C. P. L. R 49.
(4) 1 N. L. R 112.
(5) 16 C. P. L. R. 135.

that the formalities of registration have been gone through, because they had not been gone through in the first and were held to be of no effect in the second.

The head-note in Ganeshdas v. Shankar (1), with which as I have said I am in entire and respectful agreement, altered in its references to the Statute to fit that now in force, would read as follows: "Where the transfer of an occupancy tenant right would be valid between the parties thereto except for the prohibition contained in s. 12 of the C. P. Tenancy Act, 1920, it can only be avoided in the manner and to the extent provided by s. 13 thereof. No suit to avoid it can be maintained in the Civil Court." This is often taken to mean, as has been done in this case, that where the document has been actually though wrongly and even fraudulently registered, the transfer would be valid between the parties in spite of the provisions of s. 12 of the Tenancy Act 1920, and would be invalidated only by the lack of proper registration. Again I have to say that the fallacies involved in this view of the matter appear to me so obvious that I find some difficulty in refuting them as I cannot discover on what they are based.

One not uncommon reason for this misreading of the judgment in Ganeshdas v. Shankar (1) is, as I have found, a misreading of the fourth of the five instances given at the very end of the judgment of cases in which a Revenue Officer would not have jurisdiction and a Civil Court, therefore, would. That is a case "where the transfer is made by an instrument compulsorily registrable but not registered." To hold that this refers to such a transfer as was made in the present case is to accuse the learned Judge of contradicting the whole of a long judgment by a casual explanatory remark at the end, and also of using the term "compulsorily registrable" of a document which is compulsorily non-registrable. The reference is obviously to a transfer to one of the persons to whom an occupancy tenant is allowed by the Tenancy Act to transfer his holding, that is to say a transfer which is not invalid because of the provisions of s. 46 or s. 70 of the C. P. Tenancy Act, 1898, as those provisions prohibit neither the making of such a transfer nor registration of the document by which it is made, and the necessity for registration of that document is, therefore, governed by the ordinary law.

I have never yet been able to see how the subsequent addition of one more void or fraudulent or meaningless formality in the making of the transfer of his holding by an occupancy tenant could make that transfer any less or any more void or voidable, or make it any less a transfer that is voidable by reason of being in contravention of the provisions of s. 12 of the Tenancy Act, if it was so before the document was registered. But even if the transfer were void or voidable only for want of registration of the deed of transfer, it is still so only because of one of the provisions of s. 12 of the Tenancy Act. If the document is in fact registered, that registration would be valid except for the provisions of s. 12, and it has to be treated as unregistered only because of the last of them. Similarly if it is not registered at all, that is only because of the same provision prohibiting registration. And anyhow there is an obvious and glaring inconsistency in saying both that the document was registered and, therefore, the Civil Court has jurisdiction and also that the document was not registered (though the forms of registration were carried out) and, therefore, the transfer is void.

Another almost equally impossible argument very frequently used in this connection and put forward in this appeal on behalf of the respondent, of which traces are visible in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, is this. Section 13 of the Tenancy Act says that the Revenue Officer can interfere only when "an occupancy tenant transfers his right in his holding or any portion thereof in contravention of the provisions of s. 12", which means only when he makes a valid transfer of his holding, and the Revenue Officer has no jurisdiction in respect of a void attempt to transfer. This was stated as follows by another learned Judge in a case recently before me: "There is no transfer of right in the holding where the deed is not validly registered, and s. 13 of the Tenancy Act requires as the preliminary to exercise of powers (by the Revenue Officer) that there must be a transfer of the right in the holding."

This, as far as I can understand it, is a repetition of the fallacies already mentioned, with the addition of others. As no deed transferring an occupancy right in contravention of the provisions of s. 12 of the Tenancy Act can be validly registered, the argument implies that we must insert the word validly before the word transfers in s. 13, thereby reducing the whole section to a meaningless nullity, as was explained in Moolchand v. Munney (2). There is no possible justification for accusing the Legislature of the perpetration of such an absurdity as "a valid transfer in contravention of the provisions of s. 12."

It is hard if not impossible to state the law more clearly than it is already stated in the Tenancy Act and explained in Ganeshdas v. Shankar (1) and Moolchand v. Munney (2). It may perhaps be better understood if I say that no landlord can sue in a Civil Court to evict a person to whom an occupancy tenant has made over his holding unless that person is one of those mentioned in s. 12 (1) (ii) of the Tenancy Act, 1920, or holds under a lease for not more than one agricultural year granted not more than two months before the beginning of that year, without any covenant to renew being attached to it; in all other cases he must apply to a Revenue Officer under s. 13 of the Act. The decree of the lower Appellate Court, being one that that Court had no jurisdiction to pass, will be set aside and the plaintiff's suit will be dismissed. Each party ought obviously to bear its own costs in all three Courts, and it will be so ordered.

G. R. D.
Z. K. Suit dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 72 OF 1923.
April 6, 1925.
Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C., and Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.
JAGANNATH SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus
JAG JIWAN DAS—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 89—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 72—Execution of decree—Sale of mortgaged property—Mortgagee, whether entitled to apply to set aside sale on deposit—Deposit, amount of, whether can be added to mortgage-money.

The question whether a person holds an interest in property sold in execution of a decree by virtue of a title acquired before such sale, within the meaning of r. 89 of O. XXI, of the C. P. C., is not one of pure law but must always be decided with reference to the particular circumstances of each case. [p. 831, col. 1.]

Where a mortgaged property is sold in execution of a decree against the mortgagor with merely a note at the foot of the proclamation that the property is incumbered with a charge up to a certain amount, the mortgagee is a person holding an interest in the property by virtue of a title acquired before the sale within the meaning of r. 89 of O. XXI of the C. P. C., and is entitled to make an application under that rule to set aside the sale, and by virtue of s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act is entitled to add the amount of the deposit to his mortgage-money with interest at the rate payable on the principal amount of the mortgage. [p. 831, cols. 1 2.]

Appeal against the judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 10th August 1923.

Messrs. Niamatullah and M. Wasim, for the Appellants.

Messrs. A. P. Sen and H. K. Ghosh, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the decree dated the 10th August 1923 of the Subordinate Judge of Fyzabad. The defendants to the suit, out of which this appeal arises, are the appellants. The plaintiff-respondent has also filed cross-objections in respect of the same decree.

A 12 annas $1\frac{1}{3}$ pies share in Mouza Nasrullahpur and the entire village Hashimpur situate in Pargana Tanda, District Fyzabad, are owned by the defendants. Their predecessors made several mortgages in respect of these villages in favour of the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest. All these mortgages were effected prior to the year 1917. The majority of them were mortgages simple in character and the rest were possessory mortgages. Under the mortgages of the latter description the mortgagee entered into possession of the villages mentioned above and has admittedly been in possession all along.

On the 30th May 1917 the defendants executed a mortgage in respect of the same property in favour of one Balramdas. This mortgage was a simple mortgage and was made in consideration of a loan of Rs.20,000. The ostensible object of this mortgage was to raise money to satisfy the mortgages, presumably simple, standing in favour of the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest (Ex. 15). It is admitted that this object recited in the deed of mortgage was not fulfilled. On the 7th January 1918 Balramdas instituted a suit against the defendants for the realization of the mortgage-money due to him under the deed of the 30th May 1917. The relief he asked for was the sale of the villages in question (Ex. 16). To this suit the plaintiff or his predecessor-in-interest was not made a party. The suit ended in a compromise between the parties (Ex. A-1) and a preliminary decree for sale was passed on the 8th April 1918 (Ex. A-2). The decree was made absolute on the 1st March 1919 (Ex. A-3). In pursuance of the last-mentioned decree proceedings were taken by Balramdas for the sale of the property mentioned above. The property being ancestral the sale was conducted by the Collector of the District. Finally the villages were sold by public-auction on the 20th August 1920 and purchased by one Abdul Wajid for a sum of Rs. 60,000 (Ex. A-6). On the 13th September 1920 the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest Thakur Ram Sahu, deposited in the Court of the sale officer the sum of Rs. 29,246-6-0. This sum represented the amount of Balramdas's decree, Rs. 26,122-6-0, for payment to the decree-holder and 5 per cent. of the purchase-money, Rs. 3,000, for payment to the purchaser and a further sum of Rs. 124 for the auction-sale charges (Ex. 11). Along with this deposit he presented an application to the sale officer, asking for an order setting aside the sale in terms of O. XXI, r. 89, of the C. P. C. In this application Thakur Ram Sahu stated that he had been in possession of the property for about 27 years under a usufructuary mortgage and held several other mortgages in respect of the same. It was further stated that the sale proclamation omitted to mention the fact of the applicant's possession (Ex. 21). The sale officer accepted the deposit and directed notices to issue both to the judgment-debtors and the auction-purchaser (Ex. 19). On the 9th October 1920 protests were lodged by the judgment-debtors and also by Abdul Wajid, the purchaser, by separate applications (Exs. A-9 and A-10). The judgment-debtors said that Thakur Ram Sahu had no right to make the deposit under O. XXI, r. 89, of the C. P. C., and that the sale be confirmed. The purchaser Abdul Wajid, stated that according to the allegation of Thakur Ram Sahu himself the latter's possession had been under a usufructuary mortgage for a long time and that in the circumstances the former had purchased only the right of redemption. He asked that Thakur Ram Sahu's application under O. XXI, r. 89, of the C. P. C., be dismissed. On the 13th October 1920 the sale officer considered Thakur Ram Sahu's application and the two objections relating thereto and came to the conclusion that the applicant "held an interest" in the property sold in execution of Balramdas's decree and was consequently entitled to make the deposit which he had made and to have the sale set aside under r. 89 of O. XXI, of the C. P. C. He accordingly made a recommendation for an order to set aside the sale (Ex. A-11). His recommendation was accepted by the Collector of the District in a well-considered judgment, dated the 26th October 1920 and accordingly the order of the sale officer setting aside the sale was confirmed (Ex. A-12). The judgment-debtors preferred an appeal from the Collector's order to the Commissioner of the Division. The appeal was dismissed on the 1st August 1921 (Ex. A-13). From a perusal of the Commissioner's judgment it appears that the argument advanced before him on behalf of the appellants was that inasmuch as only the equity of redemption was sold and in that equity the applicant Thakur Ram Sahu, being a prior mortgagee, had no interest, he had no locus standi to apply for setting aside the sale under O. XXI, r. 89, of the C. P. C. To this argument the learned Commissioner gives the following answer in his judgment:—

"I consider that in this case the decision must turn upon the sale notification. Here the whole property was put to sale with the remark that it was subject to a mortgage. It is difficult, therefore, to say that only the equity of redemption was put up to sale."

On the 25th September 1922 the suit out of which this appeal arises was instituted by the plaintiff-respondent for the recovery of the money which he had deposited on the 13th September 1920 in the circumstances already mentioned together with interest thereon at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum. The first relief for which he asks is the sale of the 12 annas $1\frac{1}{3}$ pies share in Mouza Nasrullahpur and the entire village Hashimpur including Manjha Hashimpur. In the alternative he asks for a money-decree against the defendants. To this suit several defences were raised and in view of those defences the learned Subordinate Judge framed four issues for decision. These issues will be found stated in his judgment and it is not necessary to repeat them here.

The learned Subordinate Judge refused to give either a decree for sale or a simple money-decree. He, however, granted a declaration in favour of the plaintiff to the effect that he was "entitled to add on to his own mortgage-money Rs. 29,246 and to recover it along with his own mortgage-money with interest as above stated (that is at the rate provided in his own mortgage." He refused to award any costs to the plaintiff on the ground that according to him his conduct had not been fair.

Taking the appeal and the cross-objections together, we have to decide only two points in the case. Is the plaintiff entitled to the declaration which has been granted to him by the lower Court and in the alternative, is he entitled to a money-decree as against the defendants? We have come to the conclusion that, in the circumstances of this particular case, the decree passed by the lower Court should be maintained as it is.

The argument in the appeal is exactly the same as was advanced before the Commissioner and to which we have already made a reference in a preceding portion of this judgment. It is argued that the plaintiff-respondent had no 'interest' within the meaning of r. 89 of O. XXI of the C. P. C., to make the deposit which he did and that consequently the deposit was altogether an officious act. We are unable to accept this argument. Having regard to the entries in the sale proclamation (Ex. 23) it is impossible to say that the plaintiff was not a "person.....holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale." In our opinion the question is not of pure law but it must always be decided with reference to the particular circumstances of each case. The sale proclamation nowhere mentioned that the bare right to redeem was the subject-matter of the contemplated sale. In that proclamation the property to be sold was stated to be the 12-annas $1\frac{1}{3}$-pies share of Mouza Nasrulahpur and the 16-annas share of Mouza Hashimpur. At the foot of the proclamation a note was made that "the property sought to be sold is encumbered with the mortgage charge of Rs. 68,195-11-6." Neither the dates of the mortgages nor the names of the mortgagees were mentioned anywhere in the proclamation. The fact that on an inquiry being held as to the dates of the mortgages it would appear that they had all priority over the mortgage in respect of which the decree in execution of which the sale was to take place was passed and the further fact that by applying the law the result would have been reached that only the right to redeem could have been sold are, in our judgment, no relevant consideration for determining the question as to what, as a matter of fact, was intended to be and was sold.

It is obvious that the decree which the learned Subordinate Judge has granted to the plaintiff is founded upon the provisions of s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. It is argued on behalf of the appellants that that section is not applicable to the case before us. The relevant portion of s. 72 is cl. (b) and when that section is read only in relation to that clause it will stand as follows:—"When, during the continuance of the mortgage, the mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property, he may spend such money as is necessary for its preservation from destruction, forfeiture or sale." The argument is that the sale contemplated by the section is only such a sale as would imperil the mortgagee's security and in the present case the sale being in respect of the equity of redemption alone there was no question of imperilling the security of the plaintiff's mortgage. Broadly speaking, the argument may be correct but here again we think that it is always a question of fact or at least a mixed question of fact and law as to what is 'necessary' and what in fact was to be sold. These questions must be decided with reference to the particular circumstances of each case. What those circumstances are in the case before us we have already stated. We, therefore, think that the plaintiff acted within his rights as provided by s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 in obtaining the order setting aside the sale by making the deposit under r. 89 of O. XXI of the C. P. C. According to the same section there being no contract to the contrary he is entitled to add the amount of the deposit to his own mortgage-money with interest at the rate payable on the principal amount of his mortgage. The learned Subordinate Judge has done no more than merely granting a declaration as to such rights of the plaintiff as he is entitled to in law.

The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

In the appeal we have held that the relief to which the plaintiff is entitled in the circumstances of this case is provided by s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, it follows that he is not entitled to a simple money-decree. The cross-objections are also dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 111 OF 1924.

November 24, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

MOTIRAM—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

GAMBHIR PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—NON-APPLICANT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 85—Employee engaged on annual salary—Advances taken from time to time—Suit for recovery of excess drawings—Limitation applicable.

A suit for the recovery of excess drawings by an employee who was engaged on an annual salary and used to draw advances against such salary is governed by Art. 85 of Sch. I, to the Limitation Act, and limitation begins to run from the end of the year in which the last item is entered in the accounts.

Pandurang v. Kalludas, 65 Ind. Cas. 881, relied on.

Lakshmayya v. Jagannatham, 10 M. 199; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 891, referred to.

It is not necessary for the applicability of Art. 85 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act that the accounts should give rise to independent obligations or mutual demands or that the balance should shift from one side to the other, it is sufficient if the amount to the credit of the plaintiff varies from day to day and might exceed the amount due by him.

Madhav v. Jairam, 63 Ind. Cas. 950; 23 Bom. L. R. 540 and Satappa v. Annapa, 76 Ind. Cas. 115; 47 B. 128; 24 Bom. L. R. 1284; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 82, relied on.

Application for revision of the decree of the Small Cause Court Judge, Nagpur, dated the 31st January 1924, in C. S. No. 1357 of 1923.

Mr. R. N. Padhye, for the Applicant.

Mr. M. R. Bobde, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—The only question in this application is whether the suit falls under Art. 85 of the Limitation Act or not. The defendant was in the employment of plaintiff and drew advances against his salary from time to time. The plaintiff sued to recover the excess drawn by the defendant over the salary due to him. The defendant left the plaintiff's service on 10th May 1920 and the suit was brought on 15th May 1923. The defendant contended that the claim was barred by limitation. The Judge of the Small Cause Court, Nagpur, held that Art. 85 applied and limition began to run from 11th November 1920 the end of the year in which the last item is entered in the accounts. Defendant applies in revision.

The case of master and servant is covered by authority. No doubt Lakshmayya v. Jagannatham (1) is a case of principal and agent but in Pandurang v. Kalludas (2) (Civil Revision No. 271 of 1921, decided on 9th March 1922), Art. 85 has been applied to an exactly similar case on the point and in a recent case of Nanaji v. Rajaram Sao (Civil Revision No. 204 of 1924, decided on 3rd October 1924), I summarily dismissed an application in which the lower Court had applied Art. 85 in the similar circumstances.

In the present case the defendant's salary was fixed by the year and the amount to his credit varied from day to day and might exceed the amount of the advances taken by him. It is not even necessary that the accounts should give rise to independent obligations or mutual demands, or that the balance should shift from one side to the other: Cf., Madhav v. Jairam (3) and Satappa v. Annappa (4).

The present case is not like that of a creditor advancing money to a debtor who makes payments at instalments. In that case there could be no question of overpayment by the debtor. In the present case it is possible that the balance might be in favour of the defendant. I agree with the view taken by the Court below.

The application is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Application dismissed.

(1) 10 M. 199; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 891.
(2) 65 Ind. Cas. 881.
(3) 63 Ind. Cas. 950; 23 Bom. L. R. 540.
(4) 76 Ind. Cas. 115; 47 B. 128; 24 Bom. L. R. 1284; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 82.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 276 OF 1924.

January 8, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Babington Newbould, KT., and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

JESSARAT AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 297, 298—Sessions trial—Mixed Jury on communal basis, whether can be allowed—Vague allegation against Juror—Discharge of Jury Charge to Jury, essentials of—Material omission Misdirection.

The law does not provide for a mixed Jury on a communal basis and an accused person is not entitled to ask for such a Jury. [p. 834, col. 1.]

The Court has inherent jurisdiction to discharge a Jury on the ground of misconduct or necessity which must be established in fact; but a vague allegation unsupported by any affidavit alleging that a Juror has told an outsider that he has already formed an opinion regarding the case, without giving any details, is not such on which the Court ought to act. [p. 834, col. 2.]

The failure of the Judge in a Sessions trial to present in his summing up to the Jury the First Information Report in its true perspective, which affects the complicity of the different accused persons in the offence, as also the credibility of the evidence given by some of the important witnesses in the case, constitutes a serious misdirection sufficient to vitiate the verdict of the Jury. [p. 836, cols. 1 & 2.]

The summing up contemplated by law is a fairly full and distinct statement of the evidence with such advice as to the legal bearing of that evidence and the weight which properly attaches to the several parts of it, as a sound judicial discretion would suggest. The Judge must formulate and specify simple issues for the consideration of the Jury, and collate the evidence pro and con bearing upon the issues in order to assist the Jury to arrive at a correct decision thereon. Merely summarising the evidence, examination-in-chief, cross-examination and re-examination of the different witnesses who have deposed at the trial and putting before the Jury all that has been said by the witnesses or by the lawyers appearing on the two sides, and huddling together important facts as well as trivial points without any attempt at discrimination, instead of aiding the Jury only confuses them and does not comply with the object which the law has in view. Where there are several accused persons in a case the strength or weakness of the evidence of the witnesses as against each accused individually should be pointed out to the Jury. [p. 837, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against an order of the Sessions Judge, Rangpur, dated the 8th March 1924.

Mr. M. Wahed Hossein, Babus Promotho Lal Dutt and Sishir Kumar Banerjee, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. R. Das, Advocate-General, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Mukerji, J.—This appeal has been preferred by nine persons, Chota Jessarat, Baro Jessarat, Tazer, Gendla, Mazarulla Mistri, Kasim, Genda Fakir, Mohorulla and Amanulla Gachua, who were tried by the Sessions Judge of Rangpur with the aid of a Jury. The Jury brought in a unanimous verdict of guilty against all the accused under ss. 147 and 366, Indian Penal Code and against Chota Jesarat, Tazer, Gendla, Kasim, Genda Fakir and Mohorulla under s. 457, Indian Penal Code and against Baro Jessarat, Mazarulla Mistri and Amanulla Gachua under ss. 457/149, Indian Penal Code. The learned Judge agreeing with and accepting the said verdict convicted the accused in respect of the offences of which they were found guilty by the Jury, and sentenced them only under s. 366, Indian Penal Code; the accused Chota Jessarat, Tazer and Gendla being each sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for seven years, and the accused Baro Jessarat, Mazarulla Mistri, Kasim, Genda Fakir, Mohorulla and Amanulla Gachua being each sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for six years.

The appellant Kasim died in jail during the pendency of the appeal, and his case is not before us now.

Of the grounds urged in support of the appeal it is necessary to notice only a few, inasmuch as the others either relate to the sufficiency or insufficiency of evidence as supporting a particular finding on a question of fact, or to omissions on the part of the learned Judge to deal specifically with some conflicts or discrepancies in the evidence,—grounds which, even, if made out, could not entitle us to interfere with the verdict of the Jury.

One of the objections, worth noticing, relates to the constitution of the Jury who sat at the trial. What happened with regard to this matter was this. A Jury consisting of five persons was chosen by lot. Of these one was objected to on behalf of the defence; he was eliminated and another gentleman was chosen by lot from amongst the persons present. The Jurors so chosen then elected their foreman and were sworn. Thereafter two petitions were filed on behalf of the accused, one praying for a trial by a mixed Jury of Hindus and Muhammadans based upon the ground that as the case was one relating to the alleged abduction of a Hindu girl by the accused who are all Muhammadans and as the Hindus "bear a sort of instinctive hatred or prejudice against the accused in a case of this nature the accused would not get a fair trial before a Jury composed entirely of Hindus," and the other, objecting to one of the Jurors Babu Nalini Kumar Chakravarti, said to be "the Head Master of the Ulipur School of the Maharajah Bahadur", and "an acquaintance of the Public Prosecutor who is a retained Pleader and Am-mukhtear of the estate of the said Maharajah Bahadur." The learned Judge rejected both the petitions and proceeded with the trial. I may say at once that so far as the second of the aforesaid two petitions is concerned the ground on which it is based is frivolous. As for the first one, it is sufficient to say that the law does not provide for a mixed Jury of this character, and the accused were not entitled to get what they asked for. The reason on which this petition was based, however, has some force; and if the matter had been properly represented to the learned Judge before the Jurors were summoned, it would perhaps have been considered by him and arrangements made to secure a mixed panel. Having regard, however, to the stage at which the application was made no grievance can legitimately be made of its rejection. All this took place on the 6th February 1924, and the trial then commenced. On the next day Baroda Sundari was examined-in-chief and partly cross-examined and on the day after, that is to say, on the 8th February, 1924, an application was filed on behalf of the defence, the order passed on which forms the subject-matter of the next ground of objection. It was alleged in that petition that one of the Jurors Babu Basanta Kumar Singh Roy had stated to a Pleader Babu Jatindra Nath Sen that he had already formed his opinion regarding the case and it was prayed that evidence might be taken on the point and the Jury discharged and the trial recommenced with a fresh Jury. The learned Judge heard the Pleader who filed the application and recorded the following order on the order-sheet:—

"This is an application for changing one of the Jurors and calling another Juror in his place. I heard the Pleader who filed this application. The complainant has not been cross-examined as yet and the whole of the evidence is not before this Court now. Under such circumstances I do not think that the Juror has formed any opinion. The Juror named in the petition is a highly educated man and is the Professor of the Carmichael College, Rangpur. I have no doubt that he will give his opinion after hearing both parties and the charge of the Court. The petition of the accused is rejected."

It is contended on behalf of the appellants that the rejection of the aforesaid petition was improper, and reliance is placed on their behalf on the cases of Ramadge v. Ryan (1) and Allum v. Boultbee (2). Reference has also been made to the cases of In the matter of Bonomally Gupta (3) and Benimadhab Kundu v. Emperor (4). It is urged that the verdict is fit to be set aside as the Juror aforesaid formed his opinion and expressed it in the midst of the case and before hearing all the evidence. The learned Advocate-General appearing on behalf of the Crown contends that the statement contained in the aforesaid petition is too vague to deserve an enquiry that it is at variance with what is to be found in the affidavit filed in support of it in this Court and that the mere expression of opinion by a Juror in the middle of a case is no ground for ordering a re-tiral. He seeks to distinguish the cases relied upon by the learned Vakil for the appellants and refers to the case of Campbell v. Hackney Furnishing Co., Ltd. (5)

In my opinion the learned Judge was right in rejecting the petition. It was not supported by any affidavit. It only alleged that the Juror told the Pleader that he had already formed his opinion regarding the case without mentioning any details. The details such as they are, are to be found in the affidavit which has been filed in this Court and that only a few days before the hearing of the appeal. The contents of the affidavit are said to be true to the information and belief of the deponent who happens to be a relation of one of the accused, and no disclosure has been made as to the source of the information. What is stated is that one morning before the Juror took his seat the said Juror and the said Pleader were standing in the verandah attached to the Court room, and while they were

(1) (1832) 9 Bing. 33; 2 Moo. & Sc. 421; 2 L. J. C. P 7; 131 E. R. 610; 35 R. R. 540.

(2) (1854) 9 Ex. 738; 2 Com. L. R. 1072; 23 L. J. Ex. 208; 18 Jur. 406; 2 W.R. 459; 156 E. R. 316; 96 R.R. 947.

(3) 38 Ind. Cas. 423; 44 C. 723; 21 C. W. N. 167 18; Cr. L. J. 311.

(4) 46 Ind. Cas. 513; 46 C. 207; 27 C. L. J. 553; 22 C. W. N. 740; 19 Cr. L. J. 737.

(5) (1906) 22 T. L. R. 318.

talking the Juror told the Pleader, "I have already formed my opinion regardings the case." No details are given, nor any circumstances mentioned as to why the Juror felt it necessary to communicate the matter to the Pleader, and the statement is singularly devoid of all features that might guarantee its truth. If this was the way in which it was put before the learned Judge and I have no reason to think that it was put before him in any other form, the learned Judge was perfectly right in not believing that the Juror had actually formed any opinion and in refusing to take any notice of such a casual remark as the Juror may have happened to make, assuming that he did make it. As for the cases cited at the bar, it is sufficient to say that they are all distinguishable. An inherent power in a Court to discharge a Jury on the ground of misconduct or necessity has been recognized in the cases of Emperor v. Nazir Ali Beg (6) and Mamfru Chowdhury v. Emperor (7), but no facts have been established in this case as would have justified such a course. This objection, therefore, fails.

The next ground of objection relates to the non-compliance with the provisions of s. 360, Cr. P. C. In support of this ground an affidavit was filed on behalf of the appellants, paras. 2, 3 and 4 of which run as follows:—

Para. 2.—"That I was present in the Sessions Court when the following witnesses deposed at the trial, viz., P. W. No. 25, Babu Baroda Govinda Chaki, Pleader, and Court witnesses Nos. 1 and 2, Babu Hem Chandra Sen Gupta, Inspector and Rukunuddin Ahmed, Sub-Inspector."

Para. 3.—"That after recording the evidence of the above witnesses the record of their depositions were handed over to them and the said witnesses seemed to have read their deposition themselves."

Para 4.—"That the learned Sessions Judge did not read over their depositions to the said witnesses in the presence of the accused or their Pleaders."

On behalf of the Crown has been filed an affidavit sworn to by one Akshay Kumar Pal, who was the Sessions Clerk at Rangpur during the trial of the present case. While not denying the statements contained in the affidavit filed on behalf of the appellants the deponent states in paras. 3 and 4 of his affidavit as follows:

Para. 3.—"That in the presence of the accused I read over and explained in Bengali the depositions of the prosecution witness Babu Baroda Govinda Chaki and Court witnesses Babu Hem Chandra Sen and Moulvi Rukunuddin Thakur."

Para. 4.—"That the depositions as recorded by the Judge were admitted correct by the witnesses and none of the accused raised any objection as to the correctness of the record."

On a perusal of the two affidavits it is rather difficult to make out what exactly happened. It will be observed that in the first affidavit it is stated only that the witnesses in question seemed to have read their depositions themselves and that the learned Judge did not read over the depositions to them in the presence of the accused or their Pleaders, and that while in the second affidavit all that is not denied, it is asserted that the deponent read over and explained the depositions of the said witnesses in the presence of the accused, but it is not stated that their depositions were read over and explained to the witnesses themselves. Under the circumstances we are entitled, I think, to assume that both the affidavits are true; and if that is so, then what happened was this. The records of the depositions were made over to the witnesses who seemed to read them and the Sessions Clerk also read over and explained the depositions in the presence of the accused, though not in the presence of the witnesses. If this was what was done it was only a colourable compliance with the provisions of the law. I am, however, by no means sure that this double procedure was adopted. The learned Advocate-General assures us that the omission to deny the allegations contained in the first petition was due to the fact that a copy of it was not before the deponent Akshoy Kumar Pal when he swore to his affidavit, and the omission to state that the depositions were read over and explained to the witnesses was purely accidental. He says that if we are not satisfied on this point we should give the Crown a further opportunity to put in a further affidavit on fuller materials. In view of the opinion which I have formed on some of the other points urged on behalf of the appellants, I do not think it necessary to adopt that course.

(6) 62 Ind. Cas. 334; 25 C. W. N. 240; 33 C. L. J. 122; 22 Cr. L. J. 510.

(7) 81 Ind. Cas. 264; 51 C. 418; 38 C. L. J. 397; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 323; 25 Cr. L. J. 776.

An objection of a far more serious nature has been taken, and that relates to the omission on the part of the learned Judge to present in his summing up to the Jury the First Information in the case in its true perspective. This omission affects at once the complicity of the different accused persons as also the credibility of the evidence given by such of the witnesses examined in the case as profess to have seen a part of the occurrence and recognized the culprits. The occurrence is alleged to have taken place at about one and a half prahar of the night of the 20th March 1923 and the First Information was lodged at the Thana, 5 miles distant by Keshab Chandra Bairagi—the husband of Baroda Sundari at 10 A. M. the next day. In this information Keshab Chandra Bairagi named five accused persons and alleged that there were some 20 or 25 others unknown. This is what appears in the column provided for recording the names of the accused persons. He arrived at the Thana accompanied by Chaukidar Maharaj Tatwa and Duffadar Elahi Bux Sheikh. He stated in the information that when he was assaulted and wounded in the course of the occurrence he cried very loud and on hearing his cries the neighbours came but he did not see that then. He stated that he heard afterwards that Kalia Bairagi Barkandaz, and a master who lives in a Thakurbari and an Amla named Nitya Malakar came at the time of the occurrence and witnessed the occurrence, and that he did not ascertain whether any one else came or not. He also stated that after the occurrence, and after the accused had left, Pran Bandhu Deb Doctor, Natobar Doctor, Bepin Sonar and many other persons came and to them he narrated the occurrence in detail. From the information, therefore, it would appear that he classified the persons whom he named as having come to his place into two groups: the first group consisting of Kaliadas Bairagi, the master, and Nitya Malakar who came and saw a part of the occurrence, and the second group consisting of Pranbandhu Deb, Natabar Doctor, Bepin Sonar and others who came after the occurrence was over.

As already stated Keshab in his First Information named only five persons as accused, viz. Chota Jessarat, Kasim, Tozer, Genda Fakir and Mohorulla. Almost all the witnesses who have been examined as eye-witnesses deposed to having gone to Keshabs house during or shortly after the occurrence and not only heard from Keshab about the persons whom he had recognized but also gave out to the people assembled there the names of the accused persons whom they themselves had been able to recognize, and in point of fact some of the accused persons whom they profess to have recognized are persons other than the five mentioned by Keshab in his First Information. Then there is the fact that several witnesses have been examined as eye-witnesses who alleged to have seen some part or other of the occurrence and came to Keshab's house and gave out that they had done so, and yet their names are not to be found in the First Information. Nextly there is the fact that inspite of the clear distinction made by Keshab in his First Information as between the two classes of witnesses, Bepin Sonar who is classed there in the same category as Pranbandhu Deb, claims to have seen a part of the occurrence and recognized some of the accused persons while Pran Bandhu Deb speaks only to have come to the place after the occurrence was over and does not profess to have seen any part of it. These are matters of considerable importance and their bearing on the question of the credibility of the witnesses and the complicity of the accused cannot be over estimated. Omission to place such important matters having a material bearing on the case constitutes serious misdirection sufficient to vitiate the verdict of the Jury.

The next objection of importance relates to the evidence which was adduced in the case for the purpose of impugning the conduct of the investigating Police Officers and thereby discrediting the record of the Police investigation as also the record of the statements alleged to have been made by the witnesses in the course of the said investigation. It is not necessary to set out what the charges against the Police are that the prosecution prefer against them; they are set out at length and in sufficient detail in the learned Judge's elaborate summing up. There are two points, however, in connection with this matter which deserved specific mention and the omission to refer to which must necessarily have prejudiced the appellants. In the first place the evidence that has been adduced with regard to this matter, although relevant for the particular purpose of showing how the Police dealt with the case and thereby impugning the correctness of the Police records, inevitably carries with it a certain amount of prejudice against the accused persons in whose interest the Police are charged with behaving in the way they are said to have done. In fact in one of the petitions filed on behalf of the Crown and which is to be found in the record there is reference to s. 10 of the Indian Evidence Act as justifying the reception of that evidence. It is hardly necessary to point out that the Police Officers were not parties to the conspiracy which the accused persons might have been members of and the object of which was to commit the offences for which they were tried and so s. 10 of the Indian Evidence Act can possibly have no application in the matter. It is gratifying to note that the learned Judge did not ask the Jury to use the evidence in that way. It is, however, to be noticed that no directions were given by the learned Judge as to how that evidence was to be treated, and nothing was said by him to remove from the minds of the Jury the prejudice which the admission of that evidence must necessarily have caused, and no warning administered to them to use the evidence for the limited purpose for which it can legitimately be taken into consideration. There is also a very important matter in this connection which should have been prominently brought to the notice of the Jury. Even if all that were urged against the Police were found to be true that would not touch the First Information lodged by Keshab, and the contents of the said document were still to be regarded as the statement of Keshab truly and correctly recorded by the Police, whatever might be the subsequent conduct of the investigating Police Officers. It is to be noticed also that under the guise of evidence adduced on this head, a mass of matter wholy inadmissible and of purely hearsay character has also been let in, the effect of which could not but have been highly prejudicial to the accused persons.

The charge of the learned Judge though a very lengthy one is far from satisfactory and is defective in more respects than one. The summing up contemplated by law is a fairly full and distinct statements of the evidence with such advice as to the legal bearing of that evidence, and the weight which properly attaches to the several parts of it, as a sound judicial discretion would suggest. The Judge in a proper summing up must formulate and specify simple issues for consideration, and collate the evidence pro and con bearing upon the issues in order to assist the Jury to arrive at a correct decision thereon. Merely summarising the evidence, examination-in-chief cross-examination and re-examination of the different witnesses who have deposed at the trial, and putting before the Jury all that has been said by the witnesses or by the lawyers appearing on the two sides and huddling together important facts as well as trivial points without any attempt at discrimination, instead of aiding the Jury, only confuses them.

It is unnecessary to go further into detail in this matter in order to examine some of the inaccuracies that have been pointed out to us, for, in my opinion, the Jury upon such a charge as was delivered to them in the present case had no assistance rendered to them in order to find out what were the questions of fact which they had to determine and what was the evidence that bore upon those questions. The effect left upon their minds must have been that if they found the Police papers to be unworthy of reliance they were to find the case against the accused, all of them proved. It was scarcely desirable to tell the Jury as the learned Judge did that he had set aside the order of discharge passed in favour of three of the accused persons. Nor was the learned Judge right in telling the Jury that the way in which the girl pointed out the various houses and described the contents of the same, or in other words the verification, was a substantial corroboration of her story, without at the same time warning them that inspite of all that the Jury were not relieved from the task of weighing the evidence of the girl as to identification with every care and scrutiny. There has been no real attempt made by the learned Judge to deal with the evidence pointing to the complicities of the different accused persons, except by merely differentiating the cases against them by reference to the number of witnesses who spoke about the different accused persons in other words, the strength or weakness of the evidence of the witnesses as against each accused individually does not appear to have been pointed out to the Jury. It cannot be disputed that the evidence as against some of the accused persons is not quite so strong as against the others. The defences of the different accused persons and the statements made by them were, no doubt, placed before the Jury; but the evidence, such as it is on the record supporting the said defences or portions of them were not brought to their notice. Facts and circumstances have been elicited in the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses which do assist some of the accused persons to a certain extent. In short the learned Judge's charge to the Jury is not that intelligent summing up which the law requires and aims at.

The verdict of the Jury in the present case, therefore, cannot be upheld. Consequently the appeal must be allowed and the said verdict set aside.

I have carefully considered the question as to whether the order for re-trial which will have to be made should be made in respect of all or only some of the accused persons. The evidence against some of the accused persons is, no doubt, distinctly weak and not absolutely free from infirmities; but in the case of none of them can it be said that it is of such a character as would justify us in withholding the case from a Jury. I am, therefore, of opinion that all the appellants with the exception, of course, of Kasim who is dead, should be re-tried in accordance with law.

The appellants will be released on bail to the satisfaction of the District Magistrate pending the re-trial ordered

Let the order with the records be sent down at once.

Newbould, J.—I agree.

Z. K. Order accordingly.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 369 OF 1924.

January 28, 1925.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coyajee.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

KRISHTAPPA KHANDAPPA AND OTHERS —ACCUSED—RESPONDENTS.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 29, 464, 473—Reserved forest—Letters imprinted on trees, whether "document"—Counterfeit stamp for the purpose of imprinting letters on trees in reserved forest, possession of —Offence.

Letters imprinted on a tree which are intended to be evidence of the fact that the tree has been passed by a Forest Officer and so can be removed from the place where it lies in the forest, constitute a "document" within the meaning of s. 29 of the Penal Code. [p. 839, col. 2.]

The possession of a counterfeit stamp, which is intended to be used for imprinting letters upon trees in a reserved forest so as to cause it to appear that those trees have been passed by a Forest Official for removal from the forest, is an offence under s. 473 of the Penal Code. [ibid.]

Criminal appeal by the Government of Bombay from an order of acquittal passed by the Assistant Sessions Judge, Dharwar.

Mr. S. S. Patkar (Government Pleader), for the Crown.

Messrs. V. V. Bhadkamkar and H. B. Gumaste, for the Accused.

JUDGMENT.—Six persons were charged before the Sessions Judge of Dharwar with having conspired and abetted each other in the felling and removal of twenty sandalwood trees from a Government reserved forest, and further with intending to commit forgery in respect of the trees by impressing thereon certain marks. Accused No. 4 was charged with possession of a counterfeit stamp for the purpose of impressing those marks. All the accused were acquitted. The Government have appealed with regard to the order of acquittal in favour of accused Nos. 1 to 4. We think that the record shows conclusively that accused Nos 1 to 3 were concerned in the removal of sandalwood trees from Coupes Nos. 2 to 4 of Block No. 15 in the reserved forest of Shirgod, and removing them to the adjoining Malki No. 41. We do not understand on what material the Assistant Sessions Judge came to the conclusion that the evidence against those accused failed to prove their guilt. Admittedly accused Nos. 1 to 3 having cut down the trees without permission, we fail to see who else would go to remove the logs except these accused. On the night of September 12, from the noise that was heard, Ismail, the Beat Guard, and his party, who were lying in ambush to catch the thieves, felt sure that logs were being removed from the reserved forest, and when the removal was complete they came out from their ambush and discovered accused Nos. 1 to 3. The Judge says: "I cannot believe that part of the prosecution story which relates to the rounding up of accused Nos. 1 to 3. The story is grotesque in its details, very improbable and the witnesses contradict each other in material particulars." There can be no doubt that these three persons were caught in the forest coupe, from which the logs were removed, and there can be no justification for suggesting that the logs had been carried off by some other persons. These three accused, however, were only poor persons who had been employed by others who had purchased the right to cut trees from Government. Accused Nos. 5 and 6 who had purchased the trees in the Malki No. 41, on September 9, reported to the Forest Officer that they had sold their right to accused No. 4. Accused Nos. 1 to 3 told the Forest Officer that they had instructions from accused Nos. 5 and 6 to cut down trees and remove them and they expected accused Nos. 5 and 6 to arrive on the scene shortly. Accused Nos. 1 and 2 volunteered to go and fetch them with the stamp. About 2 P. M. on September 13, accused No. 1 came back with accused No. 4. The Forest party was again lying in ambush. Accused No. 1 pointed the logs to accused No. 4 saying that they were ready for stamping. Accused No. 4 replied that the stamp belonged to accused No. 5 who was soon coming and he would then stamp the logs. Accused No. 4 then, as he was walking about, saw Ismail and Ramchandra (also called havaldar), and cried out their names. The hiding party then emerged and caught accused No. 4. He was questioned by the havaldar, told that he must have the stamp, and threatened with a search of his person Accused No. 4 then of his own accord produced the stamp from a cloth round his waist. The Judge has believed that accused No. 4 produced the stamp but considered that he was not guilty of any offence under the Indian Penal Code. We are fully satisfied that accused Nos. 5 and 6 had originally employed accused Nos. 1 to 3 to cut down trees from the Government portion of the forest, and that the intention was to carry the wood into Malki No. 41, where accused Nos. 5 and 6 had got the right to cut. Application would then have been made to remove these trees, as if they had been cut in Malki No. 41.

The only question is whether possession of the counterfeit seal, plate or other instrument for making an impression, renders accused No. 4, liable as having committed an offence under s. 473, Indian Penal Code, in that he had made or counterfeited a seal, plate or other instrument for making an impression intending that the same should be used for the purpose of committing any forgery, which would be punishable under any section of Ch. XVIII other than s. 467, or with such intent had in his possession any seal, plate or other instrument, knowing the same to be counterfeit. It has been contended that as forgery implies the making of a false document, a person counterfeiting marks on a tree would not be making a false document within the meaning of s. 464, and this contention found favour with the Assistant Sessions Judge who relied upon the decision in Empress v. Riasat Ali (1). It seems to us that the learned Chief Justice for the purposes of that particular decision did not consider the provisions of s. 29, Indian Penal Code. The question here is whether a document must necessarily be something which is signed, sealed or executed. Section 29 says "the word 'document' denotes any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of these means, intended to be used,...as evidence of that matter." Explanation 2 says: "Whatever is expressed by means of letters, figures or marks as explained by mercantile or other usage, shall be deemed to be expressed by such letters, figures or marks within the meaning of this section, although the same may not be actually expressed."

Now these letters when imprinted on the trees were intended to be evidence that the trees had been passed by the Ranger, and so could be removed from the place where they were lying in the forest. The letters therefore, imprinted on the trees would be a document within the meaning of s. 29 of the Indian Penal Code.

Then it is suggested that accused No. 4 could not have had the intention of making the imprint intending to use the same for the purpose of forgery. But on the evidence it seems perfectly clear to us that when accused No. 4 came where the trees were lying with this particular counterfeit mark in his possession, he must be taken to have had the intention of using it for the purpose of imprinting the trees with false marks.

It seems to us, therefore, that the order of acquittal in respect of accused Nos. 1 to 4 was wrong. Accused Nos. 1 to 3 must be convicted under s. 379 and accused No. 4 under s. 473, Indian Penal Code. We do not think that any exemplary punisment is called for against accused Nos. 1 to 3. They were only persons who were employed as labourers to cut and remove the wood. We, therefore, discharge them under s. 562, Cr. P. C. The case against accused No. 4 is more serious. We think that a sentence of six months' rigorous imprisonment should be passed on accused No. 4.

(1) 7 C. 352 at p. 354; 4 Shome L. R. 155; 8 C. L. R. 572; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 776.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 526 OF 1924.

January 19, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Babington Newbould, KT., and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

ADILADDI AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 360—Deposition of witnesses read over by clerk, validity of—Failure to comply with provisions of section, effect of.

The depositions of the witnesses in a criminal trial, as soon as they were completed, were read over to the witnesses by the clerk and their signatures were taken, while the Court was recording the statements of other witnesses in the case:

Held, that the procedure was not warranted by law and did not amount to a compliance with the provisions of s. 360 of the Cr. P. C.

The omission to comply with the provisions of s. 360 of the Cr. P. C., vitiates a trial.

Mr. B. M. Sen, Babus Manindra Kumar Bose and Anil Ch. Roy Chowdhury, for the Appellants.

Mr. Khandkar (Deputy Legal Remembrancer), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the appellants take objection to the conviction and sentence on the ground that the depositions of some witnesses were not read over to them in the presence of the accused or their Pleader as provided for in s. 360, Cr. P. C. A further objection has been taken that the depositions of some of the witnesses before the Committing Magistrate as soon as they were completed were read over to the witnesses by the Bench Clerk and their signature taken while the Court was recording the examination of other witnesses in the case. This procedure is not warranted by the law, and it is not a compliance with the provisions of s. 360, Cr. P. C. A point might be raised whether under such circumstances the commitment should be quashed or not. It is not necessary for us to decide the question in this particular case, as we find that the conviction and sentence cannot stand on the ground that in the Court of Sessions the provisions of s. 360, Cr. P. C., had not been complied with.

We must under the circumstances send the case back for re-trial. Having regard to the sentence that the Additional Sessions Judge considered sufficient in the case of the accused and also having regard to the fact that the charge under s. 304-149 failed before the Sessions Court, we consider that the case should be tried by a Magistrate of the First Class and it is not necessary that it should be tried by the Court of Session.

We, therefore, set aside the conviction and sentence on the appellants and send the case back for trial according to law by the District Magistrate or some other Magistrate having First Class powers as the District Magistrate may appoint in this behalf.

Z. K. Conviction set aside; Re-trial ordered.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 14 of 1925.

March 24, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Pratt and Mr. Justice Crump.

SUPADI—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 300 (4), 302, 304 A, 309—Mother jumping into well and causing death of her child tied to her back—Attempt to commit suicide—Murder—Death caused by negligent act.

Accused who was harassed and ill-treated by her husband, in a fit of disappointment and annoyance jumped into a well with the object of drowning herself. At the time when she jumped into the well she had her child tied at her back, but she was not conscious of the fact and the result was that although the accused escaped the child died:

Held, (1) that the accused was guilty of attempting to commit suicide.

(2) that it could not be said that her act came within the purview of cl. (4) of s. 300 of the Penal Code and that, therefore, she was not guilty of the offence of murder with regard to the death of her child;

(3) that she was guilty of a negligent omission, that is the omission to put the child down before jumping into the well and that the death of the child having been caused by such negligence, the accused was guilty of an offence under s. 301A of the Penal Code.

Criminal appeal from conviction and sentence passed by the Additional Sessions Judge, Khandesh.

Mr. S. S. Patkar (Government Pleader), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Pratt, J.—This appeal has been admitted though time-barred and I would deal with it in our revisional jurisdiction.

The accused has been convicted of an attempt to commit suicide and of the murder of her infant daughter.

The accused Supadi is a girl of seventeen years of age unhappily married to a man called Lukadu. Her mind was distracted by the illness of her infant daughter and she was anxious to go back to her father's house where she would get rest after the drudgery of her unhappy home, and time to attend to her ailing infant. Her father and sister came to see her home but the husband refused because he wanted her to stay at home and do the household work. Supadi was much disappointed and the next morning her father tried to take her back when the husband was absent. But the husband intercepted the cart and forced Supadi to return. This fresh disappointment was too much for Supadi who was already sorely tried by her husband's ill-treatment and the illness of her infant. She did go back, but instead of going to her husband's house she jumped into a well in order to drown herself. At the time she jumped in, her infant was tied on her back. She was found in the well the next day but the infant was drowned. When she was taken out she burst into tears and clasped the dead body of her child.

She has been rightly convicted of attempt to commit suicide but I cannot bring myself to believe that she is guilty of murder of the infant.

The Sessions Judge does not believe that she had any intention of causing the death of the child. He applies s. 300 (4) on the ground that she must have known that jumping into the well with the child was so imminently dangerous that the act would in all probability cause the child's death. That would be true if the accused at the time she jumped into the well were conscious of the presence of the child on her back. But her mind was in so abnormal a condition that she was at the moment attempting to commit suicide. I believe, therefore, that she was not thinking at that time of the child and that she was not conscious of the child's presence. As she was not conscious of the child there was not such knowledge as to make s. 300 (4) applicable. But that lack of consciousness implies negligence for, as said by Holloway, J. in Reg. v. Nidamarti Nagabhushanam (1) "culpable negligence is acting without the consciousness that the illegal and mischievous effect will follow, but in circumstances which show that the actor has not exercised the caution incumbent upon him, and that, if he had, he would have had the consciousness."

The offence which accused has committed is, in my opinion, not murder, but causing death by a negligent omission, i.e., the omission to put the child down before jumping into the well.

I would alter the conviction under s. 302 to one under s. 304A and reduce the sentence to six months' simple imprisonment to run concurrently with the sentence under s. 309.

Crump, J.—It is a matter of some difficulty to determine what was the precise intention or knowledge of the accused at the moment when she threw herself into the well, and though it might be argued that she must have known that her child was with her, and that even if she did not intend its death, she knew that her act was so imminently dangerous that death was the most probable result, still the conclusion which commends itself to my learned brother is equally one which can be drawn from the proved facts. Where the balance is so equal I prefer to lean in favour of the accused. Therefore, I agree with the order proposed.

Z. K. Conviction and sentence altered.

(1) 7 M. H. C. R. 119 at p. 120.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 880 OF 1924.
November 25, 1924.
Present:—Justice Sir Babington Newbould, KT., and Mr. Justice Mukerji.
RAKHAL CHANDRA BISWAS—PETITIONER
versus JAMINI KANTA BANERJEE—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 423—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 147, 323—Charge and conviction under s. 147—Appeal—Conviction, whether can be altered to one under s. 323.

In the absence of a charge under s. 323 of the Penal Code framed against an accused person during the trial, a conviction under s. 147 of the Penal Code cannot be altered in appeal to one under s. 323 of the Code.

Genu Majhi v. King-Emperor, 26 Ind. Cas. 152; 18 C. W. N. 1276; 15 Cr. L. J. 704 and Yakub Ali v. Lethu Thakur, 30 C. 288, followed.

Babu Radhikaranjan Guha, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—Three persons, of whom the petitioner is one were sent up for trial for an offence under s. 147, Indian Penal Code. The petitioner and one of the other persons were tried and convicted under that section and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 25 each. On an appeal preferred by the petitioner and the co-accused who had been convicted the learned District Magistrate acquitted the co-accused of the petitioner and altered the conviction of the petitioner from that under s. 147, Indian Penal Code to one under s. 323, Indian Penal Code maintaining the sentence passed upon him.

The petitioner has obtained a Rule to show cause why his conviction and sentence should not be set aside on the ground amongst others that such an alteration of the conviction is not permissible as the petitioner had not been tried on a charge under s. 323, Indian Penal Code. The contention seems to be supported by the decision of this Court in the case of Genu Majhi v. King-Emperor (1) where following the decision in the case of Yakub Ali v. Lethu Thakur (2), it was held by this Court that in the absence of a charge under s. 323, Indian Penal Code, framed during trial, the conviction under s. 147, Indian Penal Code, cannot be altered to one under s. 323, Indian Penal Code.

The Rule is accordingly made absolute. The conviction and sentence passed on the petitioner are set aside and the fine, if paid will be refunded.

Rule made absolute;
Z. K. Conviction and sentence set aside.

(1) 26 Ind. Cas. 152; 18 C. W. N. 1276; 15 Cr. L.J. 704.
(2) 30 C. 288.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 711 OF 1924.
January 6, 1925.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mukerji.
BAHORU AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS
versus
EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal trial—Defence witness, evidence of, whether can be treated as evidence in support of prosecution.

The evidence of a defence witness cited by a co-accused cannot be treated as prosecution evidence against the other accused in the case.

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Meerut, dated the 14th November 1924.

Mr. G. W. Dillon, for the Applicants.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Three persons Bahoru, Naharya, and Kehri have applied in revision against their conviction and sentence under s. 363 of the Indian Penal Code which conviction was had in the Court of a Magistrate of the First Class and was upheld by the learned Sessions Judge on appeal.

The story for the prosecution briefly is this:—A minor girl of 12 was living with her father-in-law and was removed from her home at the instance of one Musammat Khizani. The appellants and one Sis Ram were waiting for the appearance of the girl and Musammat Khizani and joined their company when they came out. The evidence, if believed, would, no doubt, be sufficient for conviction. But the learned Sessions Judge has found that there were two witnesses on the point, and they were Dhara Singh and Tikam Singh. The learned Judge was not disposed to believe these witnesses because he found that they were relations of Sis Ram and were inclined to shield him. But what to the mind of the Judge clinched the matter was the fact that a witness for the defence produced by Sis Ram swore that he saw all the three petitioners with Sis Ram and the kidnapped girl in a cart. It is contended and I think rightly that the evidence of the defence witness could not be treated as prosecution evidence against the petitioners. If we discard this evidence there is no reliable evidence to connect the petitioners with the kidnapping.

I accept the petition, set aside the conviction and sentence and order that the petitioners be released forthwith.

Z. K. Conviction set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REFERENCE No. 8 OF 1924.

November 27, 1924.

Present:—Justice Sir Ewart Greaves, KT., and Mr. Justice Chakravarti.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—PETITIONER

versus

Muktear JOGENDRA CHANDRA DAS —OPPOSITE PARTY.

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), s 14—Petition filed by legal practitioner, alteration of, without leave of Court—Unprofessional conduct—Punishment.

A legal practitioner instituted certain proceedings under s. 144 of the Cr. P. C. with respect to a certain plot of land which belonged to him. In his petition the number of the plot was, owing to inadvertance, wrongly described. Instead of presenting to the Court a further petition for amendment of the first petition, he proceeded to effect an alteration in the petition which had been filed in Court and corrected the description of the number of the plot. On the alteration being discovered by the Court he was prosecuted for an offence under s. 466 of the Penal Code but was discharged. Thereafter proceedings were taken against him under s. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act:

Held, that his conduct fell within the purview of s. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act, but that inasmuch as there was no question of any dishonesty and he was guilty merely of a foolish act, the period of suspension already undergone by him was sufficient punishment for his conduct.

Reference made by the Sessions Judge, Bakargunj.

Babu Surendra Nath Guha, for the Government.

Babus Gunoda Charan Sen and Radhika Ranjan Guha, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.

Greaves, J.—This is a Reference under s. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act made to us by the Sessions Judge of Bakargunj. The facts are as follows: A certain Muktear, Jogendra Chandra Das by name, instituted certain proceedings under s. 144 of the Cr. P. C., and instituted such proceedings by a petition. The proceedings related to a certain plot of land which belonged to him which he described in the petition as Dag No. 1441. He sought by the petition an injunction restraining the opposite party from doing certain acts with regard to the land. After the petition had been filed in Court the muktear discovered that he had made a mistake in his description of the dag in his petition and that it should have been described not merely as Dag No. 1441 but as Dag No. 1441/1659. Instead of presenting to the Court a further petition for amendment of the first petition he very foolishly proceeded to effect an alteration in the petition which had been filed in Court.....and he added to the dag of his petition—"1659" which made the description of the dag correct. A certified copy of the petition had been issued to the opposite party before the alteration was made. An injunction was granted and in the injunction the dag was correctly described as Dag No. 1441/1659. The fact that the certified copy of the petition served on the opposite party contained a reference to the dag which did not correspond with the description of the dag in the injunction caused the discovery of what had happened. The Deputy Magistrate in whose Court the alteration had been made lodged a complaint under s. 476 and sanction was granted and a prosecution was directed under the provisions of s 466 of the Indian Penal Code. The Additional District Magistrate found that there was no fraudulent motive in making the alteration and his finding was in these terms: "The substitution was not made to defraud the second party or to cause wrongful loss to any person or wrongful gain to any person except in so far as Government was defrauded of eight-annas Court-fee." In the result he came to the conclusion that the charge under s. 466 would not lie and he discharged the accused. But being impressed by what he considered the flagrant impropriety and professional dishonour and contempt of Court involved in the muktear's act he sent the record of the case to the District Judge with the recommendation that the High Court should be moved to cancel the muktear's license and to have him debarred from further practice. As a result, this Reference is made to us by the learned Sessions Judge of Bakargunj. In the Letter of Reference he expressed his opinion that the recommendation of the Additional District Magistrate that the muktear may be permanently debarred from future practice is unnecessarily severe and in this comment I agree with him. Undoubtedly the muktear did act in a foolish and reprehensible manner but it seems to us that save and except this act of foolishness he did nothing else and we think having regard to the fact that the muktear has suffered the harassment of criminal proceedings under s. 466 that the justice of the case will be met by our saying that the suspension of practice which he has undergone since the 9th of August last will be sufficient punishment for the act he has committed. He will be entitled to recommence his practice from this date.

Chakravarti, J.—I agree.

Z. K. Order accordingly.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE LAHORE HIGH COURT.

November 17, 1924.

Present:—Lord Dunedin, Lord Atkinson, Lord Sumner and Sir John Edge.

UMRA—PETITIONER

versus.

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Practice—Departure from rules of procedure - Privy Council, whether will interfere- Interpretation of Act —Special leave, whether will be granted.

The Privy Council will interfere if there has been any departure from the ordinary rules of procedure such as to amount to a denial of ordinary justice but where the matter depends upon the particular view taken of sections of an Indian Act, it cannot be said that grave and substantial injustice has been done and special leave to appeal to the Privy Council will not be granted. [p. 845, col. 1.]

Vaithinatha Pillai v. Emperor, 21 Ind. Cas. 369; 36 M. 501; 40 I. A. 193; 17 C. W. N. 110; 14 M. L. T. 263; 25 M. L. J. 518; 11 A. L. J. 881; 18 C. L. J. 365; (1913) M. W. N. 806; 14 Cr. L. J. 577; 15 Bom. L. R. 910 (P. C.), referred to.

Appeal from a judgment of the Lahore High Court, affirming that of the Sessions Judge, Shahpur, dated the 31st August 1923.

Mr. W. Wallach, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. A. M. Dume, K. C., and K. Brown, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Dunedin.—This is a petition for special leave to appeal against a sentence of death pronounced on the petitioner by the Sessions Judge of Shahpur and confirmed by the High Court at Lahore.

The petitioner, with others, organized a robbery in the house of a money-lender. They broke into the house at night and took ornaments, money and other things from the wife who was in the house (the money-lender himself being absent). Other persons arriving on the scene, two of the gang stationed on the roof fired shots and killed two persons. The conviction pronounced against the petitioner and four others was for the murder of these persons.

One Misri, one of the party, made a statement to the Police, in which he detailed the incidents of the robbery and incriminated the various accused, including the petitioner. The admission of this statement was objected to by the Vakil for the petitioner, but it was admitted by the Sessions Judge, and this admission was confirmed by the High Court. The ground for the present application is that the admission of the statement was clearly wrong and that the improper admission of this evidence amounted to a grave injustice and a violation of the principles of natural justice, and especial reference was made to the case of Vaithinatha Pillai v. Emperor (1).

Their Lordships find that in the judgment of the High Court one of the learned Judges, while dealing with the point as to the admission of the evidence, expressed himself thus :—

"I do not suggest that in the present case, the statement of Misri is essential to the conviction, as I am satisfied that the rest of the evidence on the record establishes the guilt beyond any reasonable doubt."

And the other learned Judge agreed with these remarks. In view of this it seems to their Lordships out of the question that leave to appeal should be granted, as to do so would be to turn this Board into a Court of Criminal Appeal, a position which it has been again and again explained, the Board will not assume. But, in view of the judgments given and the argument raised thereon, their Lordships feel constrained to add something more. The question of the admissibility of the evidence turned entirely on the interpretation of certain sections of the Cr. P. C., and the Evidence Act. According to the view taken of these sections the evidence was or was not admissible. Now, although if there has been any departure from the ordinary rules of procedure such as to amount to a denial of ordinary justice, of which an illustration is given in Pallai's case (1), their Lordships will interfere; yet where the matter depends upon the particular view taken of sections of an Indian Act, their Lordships could not say that to assert that upon those sections the Judges had come to a wrong conclusion is tantamount to saying that there has been substantial and grave injustice done. Even, therefore, if there had not been the expression of opinion above quoted that the other evidence was sufficient, their Lordships would not have held that the so-called miscarriage of justice in respect of a wrong interpretation of the sections—as to the proper interpretation, their Lordships have not formed and expressed no opinion—is such as to bring the case within the rules laid down in In re Dilet (2) and insisted upon in subsequent cases.

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 369; 36 M. 501; 40 I. A. 193; 17 C. W. N. 110; 14 M. L. T. 263; 25 M. L. J. 518; 11 A. L. J. 881; 18 C. L. J. 365; (1913) M. W. N. 806; 14 Cr. L. J. 577; 15 Bom. L. R. 910 (P. C.).

Their Lordships are, therefore, unable to advise the Sovereign to grant special leave to appeal.

K. S. D. Application rejected.

Solicitors for the Petitioner—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitors for the Crown—Solicitor India Office.

(2) (1887) 12 App. Cas. 459; 56 L. T. 615; 36 W. R. 81; 16 Cox. C. C. 241.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 398 OF 1924.

November 4, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Suhrawardy and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

GADADHAR SARKAR—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 297. Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 368—Charge to Jury—Knowledge and suspicion of accused, distinction between—Misdirection.

Section 368 of the Penal Code requires "Knowledge" on the part of the accused and not merely suspicion or belief. [p. 846, col. 2.]

The proper way to charge a Jury in a case under s. 368 of the Penal Code is to place before the Jury the direct evidence of the knowledge of the accused as to the abduction, to point out the strength and weakness of that evidence, to tell the Jury that this is the only evidence relating to knowledge, and then to place before them the circumstances, if any, which might raise an inference of knowledge on the part of the accused of the abduction and lastly to ask the Jury to draw their own conclusion on the question. [ibid.]

A charge which places before the Jury indiscriminately direct evidence as to the knowledge of the accused, the evidence as to suspicion having been aroused in the mind of the accused and evidence which shows that a suspicion should have arisen in the mind of the accused, without making any distinction, is defective on a crucial point and is likely to vitiate the verdict. [ibid.]

Babus Narendra Kumar Bose and Radhikaranjan Guha, for Babu Benoy Kumar Ghose, for the Appellant.

Babu Mrityunjoy Chatterjee, for the Crown.

Babu Biraj Mohan Roy, for the Complainant.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant has been convicted under s. 368, Indian Penal Code and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year, on a second trial held by the Additional Sessions Judge and a Jury, the Jury having on this occasion brought in a unanimous verdict of guilty on the said charge.

The point that has been urged in support of this appeal is that the directions of the learned Judge on the question of 'knowledge'—knowledge on the part of the appellant that the girl was abducted—are defective.

The learned Judge's charge is an elaborate one, very fully dealing with the evidence and circumstances of the case, and he set out the details of the ingredients necessary to constitute an offence punishable under s. 368, Indian Penal Code with punctilious care. There is, however, an unfortunate defect, and that, in our opinion, a serious one, as regards his presentation of the facts and circumstances relating to 'knowledge.'

He first of all told the Jury that one of the essential ingredients of an offence punishable under s. 368, Indian Penal Code was knowledge on the part of the accused person that the girl was abducted, and that it was not necessary to prove who abducted the girl but that it was sufficient that the woman was abducted and that the accused had knowledge of the abduction. He next placed before the Jury the evidence as to abduction, and then asked them to "consider the evidence and conclude whether the girl was abducted or not." He then observed as follows:—"It is an admitted fact that she (meaning the girl) was kept in the house of the accused and Kuti was with her. Both of them were kept there. The explanation is that Kuti was a prostitute, the girl looked to be a female of a cultivator, so to ascertain her whereabouts and to send her to her husband's house she had been kept in the house. It is for you to consider whether this suspicion indicates that the accused knew her to be an abducted girl." Then he proceeded to place before the Jury the evidence of the girl, which, if believed, would afford a piece of direct evidence as to knowledge on the part of the appellant. Lastly he again referred to the circumstances that the girl did not look to be a prostitute but the wife of a Grihastya and observed thus: "The latter (meaning Kuti) was a prostitute, which seems to have been known to the accused; the young girl was with her; naturally a suspicion should have arisen about abduction. The evidence of these two defence witnesses (meaning D. Ws. Nos. 1 and 2) also seem to give support to this inference. You are the best and sole judges of fact, it is for you to conclude whether the accused knew the girl's abduction when he retained her in his house."

This is how the learned Judge has dealt with the matter. It will appear then, that the learned Judge placed before the Jury three things for their consideration in order to determine the question as to whether the appellant had knowledge that the girl was an abducted girl: Firstly, suspicion which arose in the mind of the appellant that the girl might have been abducted and in consequence of which he desired to ascertain her whereabouts; secondly, direct evidence of the girl to the effect that she told the appellant that she had a husband and that she had been abducted, which she says, she did after having been ravished by the accused; and thirdly, a suspicion which should have naturally arisen in the mind of the appellant that the girl had been abducted. Each one of these has been placed before the Jury as evidence or circumstances, independently of the others, from which appellant's knowledge might be inferred. This, in our opinion, was wrong and had the effect of obliterating from the mind of the Jury any distinction that they might have entertained between knowledge and suspicion on the part of the appellant with regard to this matter. The importance of this distinction cannot be overstated for the section says "knowing" and not "suspecting" or "having reason to believe."

The proper way to charge the Jury in this matter would have been to place before the Jury the evidence,—the direct evidence of knowledge as given of the abduction of the girl, to point out the strength and weakness of that evidence to tell them that this was the only evidence relating to knowledge, and then to place before them the circumstances, if any, which might raise an inference of knowledge on the part of the accused that the girl was an abducted girl; and lastly to have asked the Jury to draw their own conclusion on that question.

A defect of this nature on a curcial point is likely to vitiate the verdict; at any rate on a careful consideration of the facts and circumstances of the case we are unable to say that it did not so vitiate it. Having regard to the erroneous delay in implicating the appellant on the charge and the very poor explanation that has been offered in order to account for it, the fact that the mukhtear who drew the original petition of complaint was not examined as a witness for the prosecution, and lastly the extremely unsatisfactory nature of the evidence of the girl herself. We decline to prolong the harassment of the appellant which he has already suffered in the course of two trials by directing a third one.

The appeal is allowed, the conviction and sentence passed on the appellant are set aside and he is directed to be discharged from his bail-bond.

Z. K. Appeal allowed; Conviction set aside.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 582 of 1924.
January 7, 1925.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mukerji.
RAM AUTAR—APPLICANT
versus
EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 411—Possession of stolen goods—Goods found in room belonging to joint family.

Where stolen goods were found in a room which had no shutters and which was accessible to all the members of a joint family of whom the accused was one:

Held, that it could not be held that the accused was in possession of the goods within the meaning of s. 411 of the Penal Code.

Queen-Empress v. Sangam Lal, 15 A. 129; A. W. N. (1893) 48; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 800 and Queen-Empress v. Nirmal Das, 22 A. 445; A. W. N. (1900) 169; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1334, followed.

Criminal revision from an order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Benares at Jaunpur, dated the 16th September 1924.

Mr A. Sanyal, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The applicant has been convicted of the offence under s. 411 of the Indian Penal Code and the allegation against him is that he was in possession of a stolen lota and a stolen thali.

This application in revision, in my opinion, should succeed on two grounds: First, the whole case is a very suspicious one and secondly, even if all the facts found by the learned Sessions Judge in appeal be accepted it has not been established that the appellant was in possession of the stolen articles.

On the first point. The judgment of the learned Sessions Judge leaves an impression on the mind that the accusation was more or less reckless and that the appellant was charged with having stolen more things than have been established to have been stolen property.

Coming to the second point. It appears that the goods were found in a room which had no shutters and which was accessible to all the members of a joint family. Here we have at least the appellant, and his father Ganga Din living in the house. The principle laid down in the cases of Queen-Empress v. Sangam Lal (1) and Queen-Empress v. Nirmal Dass (2) applies.

I accept the application in revision and acquitting the applicant of the offence of which he has been convicted, set aside the sentence and order his release. The fine, if paid, will be refunded.

Z. K.

Application accepted.

(1) 15 A. 129; A. W. N. (1893) 48; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 800.

(2) 22 A. 445; A. W. N. (1900) 169; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1334.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 736 OF 192

November 7, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Suhrawardy, and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

CHERAGALI BEPARI AND ANOTHER —PETITIONERS

versus

SATISH CHANDRA GHOSE— OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 403—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 120-B, 193, 467, 471—Trial for offence under s. 193—Acquittal—Charge under ss. 467, 471 on identical facts, whether can be proceeded with.

Accused was charged with an offence under s. 193 of the Penal Code and was acquitted after a careful trial. He was subsequently charged under ss. 467 and 471 read with s. 120-B of the Penal Code upon facts which were wholly inseparable from the facts upon which the previous case against him had proceeded:

Held, that the present charge could not be proceeded with in view of the previous trial.

Babus Devendra Narayan Bhattacharji and Benoyendra Prasad Bagchi, for the Petitioners.

Babus Narendra Kumar Basu and Radhikaranjan Guha for Babu Prokash Chandra Pakrashi, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—As to the two grounds upon which this Rule was issued, we are of opinion that they are not well-founded. The grounds are to the effect that the present proceedings are barred by the provisions of s. 403, Cr. P. C., and that the facts alleged in the petition of complaint and examination of the complainant under s. 200, Cr. P. C., do not constitute in law the offence of forgery within the meaning of that word as used in the Indian Penal Code. But on a reference to the judgment of the learned Deputy Magistrate who dealt with the case against the accused that is referred to in the petition we find that the present proceedings should not have been allowed to be instituted. The learned Magistrate went very carefully into the cases set up on behalf of the parties, dealt exhaustively with the evidence that was adduced in the case, considered the probabilities thereof and came to the conclusion that the culpability of the accused had not been established beyond reasonable doubt. Although the accused were tried in that case only on a charge under s. 193, Indian Penal Code, the facts upon which the complainant founded the present case with regard to offences under ss. 467, 471 read with s. 120-B, Indian Penal Code are [redacted]nseparable from the facts upon the previous case was proceeded We, therefore, think that the petitioner was entitled to a Rule upon the third ground stated in his petition. We have asked the learned Vakil appearing on behalf of the opposite party to show cause with regard to that ground. Having heard both parties we have come to the conclusion that the present proceedings should be quashed on the said ground.

We accordingly quash the said proceedings and make the Rule absolute.

Z. K. Rule made abslute.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 322 OF 1925.

May 9, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

BANWARI—CONVICT—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 401—Habitually associating for the purpose of committing theft—Gang, existence of, not proved, effect of.

Ten persons were put on their trial for an offence under s. 401 of the Penal Code as being members of a gang associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft. Nine out of the ten were acquitted and the appellant alone was convicted. In addition to the evidence of the approver against the appellant there was the evidence that several thefts and several articles stolen from different houses were discovered on the information supplied by him and that he had made promises to restore certain stolen property:

Held, that the story of the approver having been disbelieved with regard to the remaining nine accused the inference was that his testimony that they were members of an alleged gang was not true and that the mere fact that certain stolen property had been discovered as the result of information given by the accused and that he had promised to restore other stolen property was not enough to prove that he was the member of a gang of habitual thieves whose existence had not been established.

Appeal from an order of the Assistant Sessions Judge, Rohtak, dated the 10th January 1925.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. C. Ralli, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Banwari appellant has been found by the Assistant Sessions Judge of Rohtak to be a member of a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing thefts and sentenced under s. 401 of the Indian Penal Code to rigorous imprisonment for seven years and a fine of Rs. 200.

The principal witness for the prosecution was Faqira approver according to whose testimony the gang consisted of twelve men including himself. Ten of the remaining eleven were tried together with the result that nine were acquitted and only one, i. e., Banwari appellant, was convicted. That being the result of the trial the question that naturally presents itself is where was the gang of which Banwari was found to be a member. The approver's testimony was of very doubtful value because he made alterations in his story from time to time as found by the learned Assistant Sessions Judge. As nine out of the ten accused were acquitted the inference is that his testimony that they were members of the alleged gang was not true. The rest of the evidence against Banwari was that several thefts and several articles which had been stolen from different houses were discovered on the information supplied by him, that he was suspected in one of those theft cases and that he made promises to restore certain stolen cattle. Such evidence does not prove that he was a member of the gang the very existence of which is not proved. He might himself have committed all those thefts or might have come to know of them in some way, but it cannot be inferred from this evidence that he was a member of a gang of habitual thieves.

In the circumstances stated above the conviction under s. 401 of the Indian Penal Code cannot be upheld. I, therefore, accept the appeal and setting aside the conviction and sentence direct his release forthwith. The fine, if already realized, will be refunded.

Z. K. Conviction set aside.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 206 OF 1924.

December 19, 1924.

Present:—Sir Dawson Miller, KT., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Das and Mr. Justice Foster.

Babu HITENDRA SINGH AND OTHERS —PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Maharajadhiraj SIR RAMESWAR SINGH BAHADUR AND OTHERS— DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Mithila School—Mitakshara, authority of—Gift by husband to wife—Estate taken by wife—Alienation, power of—Consent of husband, effect of—Construction of deed –Benami—Burden of proof · Grant of property ba farzandan naslan bad naslan, effect of- Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 2, 8, applicability of -Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XXI, r. 90—Mortgage-decree—Sale—Objection by judgment-debtor, dismissal of—Legal representatives, whether can maintain suit to recover property—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 41, 42, 43—Judgment not inter partes, admissibility of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 95, 142—Suit for possession—Plaintiff not bound by decree -Decree, whether must be set aside—Limitation—Muhammadan Law—Heba-bil-ewaz, whether gift or sale.

Plaintiffs' father executed a document described as a heba-bil-ewaz in favour of his wife transferring the property in dispute to her in consideration of a certain sum of money which he received from her and with which he paid off a decree which had been obtained against him and in execution of which the property in dispute was about to be sold. The document contained the following recital:—"Although I, the executant, tried to procure money from creditors, etc., for payment of the decretal amount to the said decree-holder, I could not get it and I see no means to safeguard my milkiat properties from sale as mentioned in the inventory. As the sale will entail loss of the said two milkiat properties on sale, belonging to me, the executant, my share of 7 annas 8$\frac{3}{4}$ gandas situate in Taluka Laheri asli with dakhli, Pergana Jabdi, T. N. 1522 appertaining to Registration Office, District Darbhanga and Sub-District Madhubani and Thana Lockhe, with trees fruit-bearing and non-fruit-bearing and ahar, and pokhar and reservoir and tank and cucha and pucca wells, and sair, and salt sair and houses occupied by tenants, and all my zemindari rights which up to now have been in my possession without the co-partnership of any one to my wife Musammat Anuragin Bahuasin, having taken Rs. 41,532-6-8-16 cr. 16 ms. in cash, I have made of my free-will and accord, heba-bil-ewaz, and having with the said amount paid up the amount of the decree of the aforesaid decree-holder and got the property released from sale have put the aforesaid Musammat in possession of the subject of the heba. The aforesaid Musammat should by becoming possessed of the subject of the heba spend the produce of the property with sons generation after generation (ba farzandan naslan bad naslan). I, the declarant, or my heirs and representatives (quaim moqaimain) shall have no right or concern in demanding the subject of the heba or the consideration money from the aforesaid Musammat or her heirs and representatives. Should I, the executant, my heirs and representatives make any claim or put forward any demand in respect of the gift-properties or the consideration thereof the same will be deemed null and void. I have, therefore, given in writing these few words in the shape of a heba-bil-ewaz so that it may be of use when required." The donee obtained possession of the property under the deed of gift. Some years afterwards the donor and the donee together mortgaged the disputed property to the defendant to secure the re-payment of a certain sum of money which was then due by the donor to the defendant. The defendant obtained an ex parte decree against the donor and the donee upon his mortgage took out execution and purchased the property in execution of the decree. The judgment-debtors applied for setting aside the sale but the donee died during the pendency of the application and the plaintiffs were substituted in the record as her representatives. Eventually the application was refused and the sale was confirmed. On the death of their mother the plaintiffs entered upon possession of the disputed property and in 1906, they instituted a suit for confirmation of their possession on the ground that the mortgage-bond had been obtained from their mother without her knowledge and that the mortgage-decree was fraudulent. Their father was a pro forma defendant in the case. The cause of action was stated as having arisen a few months before the institution of the suit when the frauds therein stated had been discovered. That suit was withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit. The plaintiffs' father died shortly after. On the 24th July 1918 the plaintiffs instituted the present suit for recovery of possession of the disputed property from the defendant and for mesne profits on the allegation that the property belonged to their mother and that their father had no right to execute a mortgage-bond in respect of it and that the rights of their mother and of themselves were not affected by the mortgage-suit, the decree, the sale and the delivery of possession. The cause of action was stated to have arisen on the 10th of December 1906, when possession had been obtained by the defendant as auction-purchaser. It was admitted that the plaintiffs and their father and mother were governed by the Mithila School of Hindu Law:

Held, per Das, J. (1) that it was not open to the plaintiffs, who had been substituted as the legal representatives of their mother in the application to set aside the auction-sale, to re-agitate the questions which could have been raised in that application in a regularly constituted suit between the parties; [p. 853, col. 2.]

(2) that inasmuch as the plaintiffs' mother in spite of the dismissal of her application to set aside the auction sale might still have maintained a suit for setting aside all the proceedings as a fraud upon her from start to finish, it was open to the plaintiffs to maintain such a suit, but that such a suit would be barred by time under Art. 95 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act; [ibid.]

(3) that it was not open to the plaintiffs' mother to object to the validity of the mortgage on the ground that the property was inalienable inasmuch as she could not claim adversely to her own deed, and that her failure to set up the inalienability of the property as an answer to the mortgage-suit did not operate as constructive res judicata so as to preclude the plaintiffs from setting up the inalienability of the property as a ground for the declaration that the mortgage and the decree and sale following upon it were not binding upon them, and that consequently the plaintiffs

were entitled to maintain the suit and to show that the property in dispute was inalienable in the hands of their mother; [p. 855, cols. 1 & 2.]

(4) that if the property in dispute was inalienable the plaintiffs were not bound by the decree and the sale and could treat those proceedings as a nullity without the intervention of any Court and that the suit was governed by Art. 142 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act and having been brought within twelve years of the date of the plaintiffs' dispossession was within limitation; [p. 856, col.1.]

(5) that the application made by the plaintiffs' mother to set aside the auction-sale was one under O. XXI, r. 90 of the C. P. C., and not under s. 47 of the Code and that the latter section was not, therefore, a bar to the maintenance of the present suit; [p. 867, col. 2.]

(6) that the transaction of heba-bil-ewaz was a genuine transaction and operated as a transfer of the property to the plaintiffs' mother; [p. 865, col. 2.]

(7) that the transaction was one of gift and not of sale; [p. 870, col. 2.]

(8) that under the Mithila School of Hindu Law the gift being one by the husband to the wife subsequent to marriage must be regarded as the stridhan of the wife and was a saudayica gift of the husband to the wife; [p. 871, col. 1.]

(9) that the plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled to succeed to the property after the death of their mother as her heirs and not as the heirs of her husband; [p. 871, col. 2.]

(10) that the property in dispute being immoveable property taken as a gift by the wife from her husband was heritable but was not alienable by the wife except for legal necessity and that there being no such necessity in the present case the donee had no power to alienate it; [p. 875, col. 1.]

(11) that the donee having acted in passive obedience to her husband's direction in joining in the execution of the mortgage-deed, the deed was not obtained with her consent and was not binding upon the plaintiffs; [p. 878, col. 1.]

(12) that under the deed of gift the plaintiffs' mother was not given any power of alienation which she did not possess under the Mithila School of Hindu Law;

(13) that the property in dispute in the hands of the plaintiffs' mother was inalienable even with the consent of her husband, and that consequently the mortgage-bond, the decree and the sale were not binding upon the plaintiffs and that plaintiffs' suit must be decreed;

Per Foster, J. (1) that the heba-bil-ewaz was not a benami transaction and operated to transfer the property to the plaintiffs' mother; [p. 887, col. 1.]

(2) that the transfer was in substance a gift and conferred an absolute estate upon the donee; [p. 888, col. 1.]

(3) that the plaintiffs were the heirs and legal representatives of their mother and inasmuch as they claimed under her they were bound by the mortgage-decree and the sale which took place thereunder and they could not sue for possession unless they had cleared the way for such a suit by securing the annulment of the mortgage-decree and the sale; [p. 889, col. 2; p. 890, col. 1.]

(4) that a suit to set aside the decree being now barred by time the present suit was not maintainable. [p. 890, col. 1.]

Per Das, J.—An Appellate Court should allow a question of law to be argued before it which fairly arises on the allegations made in the plaint though it is not stated in that form in the plaint. [p. 854, col. 1.]

It is not necessary to set out an inference of law in the pleadings. [p. 855, col. 1.]

A grantor cannot dispute with his grantee his right to alienate the land to him. [ibid.]

Where a person is prima facie bound by a decree he cannot by suing ostensibly for possession ignore the decree and evade the operation of law; and where such a decree is an impediment in the plaintiffs' way in obtaining relief inconsistent with it, he must bring the suit within the period prescribed by law for setting aside a decree. Where, however, a person is not bound by a decree he can treat the decree as a nullity and can sue to recover the property affected by the decree without taking proceedings to set aside the decree. [p. 855, col. 2.]

An apparent transaction must be assumed to be real until the contrary is shown, and the onus is on the person who alleges that a transaction is not what it purports to be. [p. 857, col. 2.]

Judgments qua judgments or adjudications upon questions in issue and proofs of particular points therein decided are only admissible either as res judicata under s. 40 or as being in rem under s. 41 or as relating to matters of a public nature under s. 42 of the Evidence Act. Judgments, orders and decrees other than those admissible under ss. 40, 41 and 42 of the Evidence Act may be relevant under s. 43 of the Act. The cases contemplated by s. 43 are such as the section itself illustrates, namely; where the fact of any particular judgment having been given is a matter to be proved in the case. [p. 861, col. 2.]

A former judgment which is not a judgment in rem nor one relating to matters of a public nature is not admissible in a subsequent suit either as res judicata or as a proof of the particular point which it decided unless between the same parties or those claiming under them. [p. 862, col. 1.]

The decision of a Court should not rest upon suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. [p. 864, col. 1.]

Benami transactions are very familiar in Indian practice and even a slight quantity of evidence to show that a transaction was a sham transaction may suffice for the purpose. A person, however, who impugns the apparent character of a transaction must not rely solely on probabilities; he must show something definite to establish that it is a sham transaction on the principle that the burden of proof lies upon a person who claims contrary to the tenor of a deed and alleges that the apparent is not the real state of things. [p. 864, col. 2.]

The most important test to be applied in such cases is the source whence the consideration came. [ibid.]

Where, however, from the lapse of time direct evidence of a conclusive or reliable character is not forthcoming as to the payment of the consideration, the case must be dealt with on reasonable probabilities and legal inferences arising from proved or admitted facts. [p. 865, col. 1.]

Where a decree directs the sale of specific property, the Court executing the decree has no power to go behind the decree and to refuse to sell the property because the interest of the judgment-debtor in the property has come to an end. [p. 866, col. 2.]

A heba-bil-ewaz is a transaction made by mutual or reciprocal gifts between two persons each of whom is alternately the donor of one gift and the donee of the other. [p. 869, col. 1.]

In determining the real nature of a transaction it is influence over his wife preferred to mortgage the disputed property in the said mortgage-bond, and she was induced to become a party thereto upon a misrepresentation that the debts of the husband were binding on the wife and the said Maharaja with the knowledge that the property in suit belonged to the Bahuasin and with the further knowledge that it had been wrongly represented to her that the debts of the husband were binding on the wife, accepted the mortgage in his favour." It appears, however, that plaintiff No. 2 actually signed the mortgage-bond on behalf of his mother and that plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 3 were the attesting witnesses. In order to meet this difficulty the plaintiffs say that "they were not at all aware of the contents of the bond and as they were fully under the control of their father they had only to act according to his dictation and on the pressure of the men of the Maharaja." The plaintiffs further say that the Bahuasin was a purdanashin lady and had no independent advice in the matter of the execution of the mortgage-bond and that she did not execute it "knowing and understanding its contents or the importance thereof, or realizing the consequences of her act." In regard to the ex parte decree obtained against Durga Dutt and the Bahuasin, the plaintiffs allege that summons was not served on the Bahuasin according to law and that "as a matter of fact she was purposely kept from all knowledge of the said suits or of the decrees obtained therein and that in the circumstances of the case she was neither in law nor in equity bound by the proceedings taken in the above suits, the decrees passed therein or by subsequent proceedings in execution of which also she had absolutely no knowledge." In regard to the execution proceedings, they say that they were taken without the knowledge of the Bahuasin and that the Maharaja purchased the property "for an inadequate price of 3 lacs of rupees though its actual price then was not less than 6 lacs of rupees." They allege that as the heirs of the Bahuasin they succeeded to the disputed property and came into possession thereof; but that they were dispossessed on the 16th December 1906, and they say that their cause of action arose on the 16th December 1906, "the date of their wrongful dispossession."

It will be noticed that two important questions of fact are pleaded; first, that there was a complete defence to the mortgage action and that the decree obtained against the Bahuasin was a fraudulent decree which does not affect the rights of the plaintiffs as the heirs of the Bahuasin; and secondly, that the execution proceedings were fraudulent and that the property was purchased by the defendant for the very inadequate price of 3 lacs of rupees and that all the proceedings from start to finish ought to be set aside. But it is obvious that these questions were not available to the plaintiffs. The Bahuasin applied for setting aside the ex parte decree and failed. That question could not be raised by the Bahuasin except on the ground that the decree against her was obtained by fraud. So far as the execution sale is concerned she again applied for setting it aside under s. 311 and s. 244 of the C. P. C. Pending the disposal of that application the Bahuasin died and the plaintiffs were substituted in the record of that application as the heirs of the Bahuasin. That application again failed and it is not open to the plaintiffs to re-agitate the same question in a regularly constituted suit between the parties. It is quite true that although the Bahuasin might have failed first in her application for setting aside the ex parte decree, secondly, in her application for setting aside the sale, she might still have maintained a suit for setting aside all the proceedings as a fraud upon her from start to finish. But to such a suit, Art. 95 of the Limitation Act affords a complete reply. It is not open to doubt that the Bahuasin did sometime or other become aware of the fraud practiced on her. Article 95 of the Limitation Act provides "that a suit to set aside a decree obtained by fraud or for other relief on the ground of fraud" must be instituted within three years from the time "when the fraud became known to the party wronged." If seems to me, therefore, that it is not open to us to consider the main questions of fact raised by the plaintiffs in this case; and if there were no other questions which could legitimately be raised by the plaintiffs on the plaint as presented by them there is no option but to dismiss the suit.

But a very important question was raised by the plaintiffs in the Court below, the adjudication of which does not depend on any question of fact. It was insisted on behalf of the plaintiffs that both under the Hindu Law as also under the heba-bil-ewaz of the 17th April, 1876, the Bahuasin took a heritable but inalienable interest, and that consequently the plaintiffs are not embarrassed by the decree or the execution proceedings against the Bahuasin and that it is not necessary for them to ask the Court to set aside the proceedings in connection with the mortgage-suit as a condition precedent to this action. The question is a pure question of law, and, arises on the Mithila School of Hindu Law by which the parties are governed and on the construction of the heba-bil-ewaz. It was directly raised by the plaintiffs in the Court below and the learned District Judge has given his decision on the point. The plaintiffs assert that they are entitled to raise this point on their allegations in the plaint that there was a conveyance of the property by Durga Dutt Singh in favour of the Bahuasin and that upon the death of the Bahuasin they became entitled to succeed to the property as her heirs. It is quite true that they do not allege in the plaint that in the hands of the Bahuasin the property was inalienable, but they contend that, if they can satisfy the Court on Hindu Law and on the construction of the heba-bil-ewaz of the 17th April 1876, that in her hands the property was inalienable, the Courts cannot refuse to consider the point merely because they have not put their case in that form in the plaint. In my opinion, it would be wrong on our part not to allow a question of law to be argued before us which fairly arises on the allegations made in the plaint, though it is not stated in that form in the plaint.

It is not necessary for me in the view which I take to refer to those allegations in the written statement which expressly deny that there was any undue influence exerted over the Bahuasin either by Babu Durga Dutt or by the Maharaja of Darbhanga or to those which deny that there was any fraud either in connection with the ex parte decree obtained in the mortgage-suit or in the course of the execution proceedings which followed the decree. The main question of fact raised by the defendant in this case is that the heba-bil-ewaz dated the 17th April 1876 was a farzi document not intended to be acted upon. The defendant asserts that the heba-bil-ewaz was "merely a nominal and colourable transaction without consideration" and that Babu Durga Dutt Singh "was very much indebted and he took the opportunity of and taking advantage of the payment by him out of the joint family funds of the decretal dues of Rai Banwari Lal Sahu, he (the said Babu Durga Dutt Singh) brought into existence the heba-bil-ewaz in favour of his wife, the said Musammat Anuragin Bahuasin, as a subterfuge and means for protection of the property from his creditors, that the said heba-bil-ewaz does not evidence a real or bona fide transaction, that no consideration passed thereunder and neither the said Bahuasin paid the money recited therein nor had she means of her own to make such payment" and he alleges that the property was throughout in the possession of Durga Dutt Singh. The reference in the written statement to Rai Banwari Lal Sahu should be explained. The heba-bil-ewaz shows that there was a sum of Rs. 41,532-6-8 due by Babu Durga Dutt Singh to Banwari Lal Sahu on a decree obtained by Banwari Lal Sahu against him, that the disputed property and another property were advertised for sale to recover the sum of Rs. 41,532-5-8 and that Babu Durga Dutt Singh failed to procure the money in order to pay off Banwari Lal Sahu and that the Bahuasin gave him the money to enable him to save the property. The suggestion of the defendant is that taking advantage of the proceedings in connection with the suit of Banwari Lal Sahu against him, Babu Durga Dutt Singh put this property in the name of his wife so as to defeat his creditors. This is the main question of fact raised by the defendant; and on this issue the decision of the learned District Judge is in favour of the plaintiffs. The other question raised by the defendant is that the suit is not maintainable and that it is barred by limitation. It is obvious that if these questions be decided in favour of the defendant, the plaintiffs' suit must fail, and it will be necessary for us to discuss these questions before proceeding to deal with the more serious questions raised before us.

I will first deal with the question of the maintainability of the suit and whether the plaintiffs' suit is barred by limitation. Now I quite agree that it is not open to the plaintiffs to maintain the suit on any of the grounds which were available to the Bahuasin. I have dealt with the point, and I do not desire to repeat myself. But the plaintiffs contend that the property was inalienable in the hands of the Bahuasin and that, as her heirs, they are entitled to recover possession of the property from any one into whose hands the property may have passed by an act of the Bahuasin. Three considered; first, whe- ent allegations in the plaintiffs to raise such ther it is open to them to ask the Court to consider such a case; and thirdly, whether the consideration of such a case is not barred by lapse of time.

I am of opinion that all the material facts are stated which entitle the plaintiffs to contend that the property was inalienable in the hands of the Bahuasin. They allege that Durga Dutt executed a deed of gift in favour of his wife and put her in possession of the property. They also allege that upon the death of the Bahuasin, they succeeded to the property as her heirs. On these facts, "the material facts" in the words of the Code—they contend that they are entitled to ask the Court to hold that the property was inalienable in the hands of the Bahuasin. Now whether the property was or was not inalienable is not a question of fact, it is an inference of law; and it is not necessary to set out an inference of law in the pleading. There is no question of surprise in this case, for the point was stated to us before we remanded the case for trial of all the issues raised in the case. The question was argued at great length before the District Judge; and, in my opinion, it would be wrong on our part to refuse to hear the plaintiffs on this point on a needlessly technical view of the plaint.

The second question must also be answered in favour of the plaintiffs. If the property was in fact inalienable, then the plaintiffs must have the right to claim the property if it had been alienated, unless the Bahuasin could herself set up the inalienability of the property as a defence to the mortgage action. But it is well-established that "the grantor cannot dispute with his grantee his right to alienate the land to him." That being so, the Bahuasin could not claim adversely to her own deed, and her failure to set up the inalienability of the property in the mortgage action cannot operate as constructive res judicata in this case. It was contended that the mortgage-decree binds the heirs and that the property having passed away in execution sale, the present suit is not maintainable. I am unable to assent to this proposition. It is true that the plaintiffs are heirs; but the property being inalienable, they are wholly unaffected by the mortgage decree. To hold otherwise is to say that property which is inalienable may become alienable by the act of alienation. In my opinion, the plaintiffs are entitled to maintain this suit and to show that the property was inalienable in the hands of their mother.

On the question of limitation, it is material to remember that, on the plaintiffs' case, they entered upon possession of the property on the death of their mother and that they were dispossessed on the 16th December 1906. It is the common case that on the death of the Bahuasin, the plaintiffs were substituted in the record of the proceeding under s. 311 of the Code which was then pending in the place of the Bahuasin. It is admitted by the defendant that he obtained delivery of possession on the 16th December 1906. That being so, the suit is governed by Art. 142 of the Limitation Act and is within time.

But it was contended that the plaintiffs cannot sue for possession until they had cleared the way for such a suit by securing the annulment of the mortgage-decree and the sale thereunder; and that, in that view, the suit is barred by the provision of Art. 95 of the Limitation Act. Now I quite agree that where a person is prima facie bound by a decree, he cannot, by suing ostensibly for possession, ignore the decree and evade the operation of law; and where such a decree is an impediment to the plaintiffs' way in obtaining relief inconsistent with it, he must bring his suit within the period prescribed by law for setting aside a decree. But the argument assumes that the plaintiffs are bound by the decree obtained against the Bahuasin. If I may say so with respect, the confusion in the argument is due to the fact that the plaintiffs claim as the heirs of the Bahuasin. Ordinarily a decree obtained against a person binds the heirs; and, if the decree was obtained by fraud, the heirs must sue within the period prescribed by Art. 95 of the Limitation Act. But the argument overlooks two important points; first, that the plaintiffs are not bound by the alienation, and, therefore, by the mortgage-decree; and secondly, it was not open to the Bahuasin at any time to claim adversely to her own deed. The Bahuasin could not claim to have the decree set aside on the ground that she was not competent to mortgage the property. That being so, the plaintiffs could not bring a suit to have the decree set aside on that ground. But although they were not entitled to bring a suit to have the decree set aside, they were entitled to bring a suit for possession if being in possession they were dispossessed from it; but to such a suit Art. 142 clearly applies. The whole question is, are the plaintiffs entitled to recover possession without having the mortgage-decree and the sale thereunder set aside? In my opinion, since they were not bound by the decree and the sale thereunder, they could treat those proceedings as a nullity without the intervention of any Court, and they showed their election to do so by commencing an action to recover possession of the property. In my opinion, the suit is governed by Art. 142 of the Limitation Act and is consequently within time.

I now come to the question of benami. Now in dealing with this question, it is to be remembered that the case is not one that Babu Durga Dutt Singh purchased the property in the name of his wife. The property stood in his name and undoubtedly belonged to him, and he conveyed it to his wife by a document which is described as a heba-bil-ewaz. Cases are to be found in the books which lay down that where a person purchases a property in the name of his relative, the important point to be considered is, who paid the purchase-money. But here the purchase-money was undoubtedly paid by Babu Durga Dutt Singh and he transferred it to his wife on the 17th April, 1876. The case of the defendant is that the transfer was wholly fictitious; but before deciding this question in favour of the defendant, we must ask ourselves the question—what was the motive for this fictitious transfer? The case of the defendant on this point is contained in the 14th paragraph of his written statement which runs as follows:—

That the alleged deed of gift to Musammat Anuragin Bahuasin was merely a nominal and colourable transaction without consideration, that Babu Durga Dutt Singh was very much indebted and he took the opportunity of and taking advantage of the payment by him out of the joint family funds of the decretal dues of Rai Banwari Lal Sahu he (the said Babu Durga Dutt Singh) brought into existence the heba-bil-ewaz in favour of his wife the said Musammat Anuragin Bahuasin as a subterfuge and means for protection of the property from his creditors, that the said heba-bil-ewaz does not evidence a real or bona fide transaction that no consideration passed thereunder and neither the said Bahuasin paid the money recited therein nor had she means of her own to make such payment, and this defendant submits that upon execution of the said deed or at any time thereafter the possession of the share in question of Taluka Laheri aforesaid did not pass to the alleged donee but, on the other hand, the said share of the property remained as before in the possession of the said Babu Durga Dutt Singh until possession thereof was delivered to this defendant under the process of the Court after this defendant's purchase thereof and after disallowance by the Courts of the plaintiffs' and their father's objection to the sale as set forth above. This defendant further submits that the said deed is otherwise invalid and inoperative and that there was no transfer of any beneficial interest thereunder.

The suggestion of the defendant accordingly is that the object of Durga Dutt in entering into the transaction of the 17th April 1876 was to defeat his creditors. In view of the case made, it is important for us to consider whether at the date of the execution of the heba-bil-ewaz Babu Durga Dutt Singh was in such embarrassed condition as would induce him to enter into a fictitious transaction for the protection of his property.

In dealing with this question it must be remembered that Babu Durga Dutt was a wealthy man and was in possession of babuana properties which even now yield an income of a lac and a half of rupees. In 1873 Durga Dutt and his brother Girdhari sold certain valuable properties belonging to them for six lacs of rupees by which they paid off all their debts then existing. At the date of the heba-bil-ewaz Durga Dutt owed Rs. 41,532-6-8 to Rai Banwari Lal Sahu Bahadur on a decree which had been obtained by the latter against the former. The heba-bil-ewaz shows that he raised this sum from his wife and satisfied the decree of Rai Banwari Lal Sahu. The positive evidence in the case is that at the date of the transaction in question there were no other debts due by Babu Durga Dutt Singh. The case put to Amarendra Singh, one of the plaintiffs, by the defendant was that Durga Dutt was indebted to various persons including Ram Narain Thakur, Musammat Fulbati Kumari, Tulsi Sahu, Mr. Henry Gyll, Jhumak Purbey, Subans Sahu and Jailal Sahu. But no attempt has been made by the defendant to establish the case put to Amarendra Singh. In my opinion the evidence establishes that by the transaction of the 17th April 1876, Durga Dutt satisfied his debt and that at the date of the transaction there were no other debts due by him. That being so, the positive case made by, the defendant on this point fails. The defendant sought to supplement the weakness of his evidence on this point by attempting to prove an admission on the part of Babu Durga Dutt Singh. The evidence adduced on behalf of the defendant on this point is to the effect that when it was proposed that Babu Durga Dutt should in some way secure the debt which was due by him to the Maharajah of Darbhanga in 1890, and Durga Dutt offered to execute a mortgage in respect of Taluka Laheri, a question arose whether the heba-bil-ewaz which had been executed by him in favour of his wife was a genuine transaction or a fictitious transaction and that Babu Durga Dutt admitted to the Maharaja of Darbhanga in the presence of various persons that he had entered into that transaction to save his properties as he was heavily indebted at that time. The evidence is furnished by Bhikhai Lal Missir, and Lalji Singh, both called on behalf of the defendant. In his evidence in examination-in-chief Bhikhai narrated the incident which took place in Maharaja's Durbar in 1890. His account is as follows:—Durga Dutt came to the Maharaja and offered to execute a document to secure the debt which was due by him to the Maharajah. Upon that the Maharaja asked him 'what kind of document he would execute.' Durga Dutt said that he would execute a mortgage document. Maharaja thereupon asked him what properties he would mortgage. Durga Dutt answered that he would mortgage Laheri. Thereupon Balbhadar Missir who was a mushahib in the Durbar pointed out that that property stood in the name of the Bahuasin. Durga Dutt thereupon said 'the property is really mine but I have kept it in her name and that if asked we both would execute the document'. In cross-examination the witness stated that Durga Dutt admitted that there were debts due by him and so he entered into a fictitious transaction in regard to the property. (See Parts I and II after remand, page 123). This is in substance the evidence of Lalji Singh. The learned District Judge has not accepted this evidence, and I entirely agree with his judgment on this point. It is improbable that, if Durga Dutt had entered into a fictitious transaction in order to save this property from his creditors, he should have made a solemn admission before the full Durbar; and it is unlikely that these witnesses should remember the details of a conversation which took place 33 years ago. The story is inherently improbable since there is no evidence to establish that at the date of the heba-bil-ewaz Durga Dutt had any debts to pay other than that which was satisfied by the execution of the heba-bil-ewaz.

The suggestion of Mr. Hasan Imam is that although Durga Dutt was not indebted to any one at the date of the heba-bil-ewaz, he knew that, being a man of extravagant habits, he would sooner or later be involved in debts and that the heba-bil-ewaz was executed, not with a view to defeat any existing creditors, but with a view to save the property from future creditors. It is quite true that the affairs of Babu Durga Dutt became involved later on in his life, but it is impossible to indulge in a speculation of the kind suggested by Mr. Hasan Imam especially as the positive case made by the defendant has failed.

It is well-established that an apparent transaction must be assumed to be real until the contrary is shown. The onus is accordingly on the defendant to show that the transaction of 1876 was a fictitious transaction. I have already shown that the definite case made by the defendant as to the motive which induced Durga Dutt to put the property in the name of his wife has failed. The only other questions are; first, whether the Bahuasin in fact paid Rs. 41,532-6-8 to Durga Dutt as alleged in the heba-bil-ewaz; secondly, whether Durga Dutt continued to be in possession of the property although he had executed a document in favour of his wife; and thirdly, whether the surrounding circumstances throw any light on the question. It is not possible to get any direct evidence at this distance of time as to a transaction which took place in 1876. It is true that there is some evidence on each side bearing directly on the character of the transaction; but this evidence has not been believed by the learned District Judge. It is, therefore, useless for me to go through that oral evidence as I see no reason for differing from the conclusion of the learned Judge on this point. In regard to the first question, namely, whether consideration was paid by the Bahuasin, the view of the learned District Judge is on the whole in favour of the defendant. But in arriving at this conclusion the learned District Judge assumed that the onus was entirely on the plaintiffs. The learned District Judge was impressed by the fact that, undoubtedly, Banwari Lal Sahu had obtained a decree for Rs. 41,532 against Babu Durga Dutt and had attached Taluka Laheri in the execution proceedings in connection with that decree and that, undoubtedly, the decree was satisfied and the property released from attachment. The inquiry being thus limited, the learned District Judge rightly thought that the only question for determination was whether payment was made out of the husband's or the lady's money. He considered the evidence of the three witnesses examined on behalf of the plaintiffs on the question of the payment of the consideration by the lady. He conceded that the witnesses, on this point, were all competent witnesses, but he thought that their evidence was not wholly acceptable. Conceding that the money may have come from the lady he held that "there was no sufficient evidence to show if it was her own money or her husband's" and the conclusion at which he arrived may be stated in his own words: "that being the case, I am of opinion that it has not been proved that the money was her own money. Therefore, I find that plaintiffs have failed to prove that the lady had paid the money out of her private funds."

The conclusion of the learned District Judge is somewhat halting. It is not quite clear whether he rejected the case of the plaintiffs that the money was actually paid by the Bahuasin (whether it belonged to herself or to her husband) or whether he rejected the case of the plaintiffs that the money which was, in fact, paid by the Bahuasin belonged to her and not to her husband. If I had to come to a conclusion on this point, on the actual evidence of the three witnesses to which the learned District Judge refers, I would unhesitatingly agree with the conclusion at which the District Judge has arrived. They are speaking of an incident which took place in 1876 and, in my opinion, it is impossible for this Court to rely on that evidence.

But as I have said before, the onus is on the defendant and not on the plaintiffs and, in my opinion, the defendant has not shown that the money was not, in fact, paid by the Bahuasin in regard to the transaction of 1876. It is quite true that the account-books which would show the payment of the money by the Bahuasin to Durga Dutt have not been produced by the plaintiffs; and I am not prepared to assent to the argument that the onus being on the defendant it was not necessary for the plaintiffs to produce the best evidence on the point. But there is one circumstance in connection with this point which should not be ignored by us; and it is this, that it is somewhat difficult for the plaintiffs to produce the account-books of 1876. The account-books actually produced in the case are in such decayed condition that I cannot altogether reject the plaintiffs' story that the account-books other than those produced cannot be traced.

There being no reliable direct evidence on this point, we are bound to consider the surrounding circumstances. These surrounding circumstances are, first, that Taluka Laheri was attached in execution of a decree obtained by Banwari Lal Sahu against Durga Dutt, and secondly, that the property was released from attachment after payment by Durga Dutt of the decretal amount due to Banwari Lal Sahu. The heba-bil-ewaz recites that Babu Durga Dutt tried to procure the money from the market but failed and that, as a last resort, he took the money from his wife. I can find no sufficient reason for holding that the recitals in the heba-bil-ewaz are deliberately false. A lady of the rank and position of the Bahuasin might well have Rs. 41,000 in her hand, though it may be that, in point of law, the money belonged, not to herself, but to her husband; and it is not improbable that she should make over the money to her husband to save her husband's property from sale. The conclusion at which I arrive on this point is that it has not been shown by the defendant that the money was not actually paid by the Bahuasin to her husband, and that there is no reason why we should not rely upon the recitals in the document.

On the question of actual possession, the evidence adduced on behalf of the plaintiffs is, in my opinion, conclusive. The Bahuasin was recorded in the Land Registration Department as the owner of the property and the public demands were admittedly paid in her name. Mr. Hasan Imam contends that if the original transaction was fictitious all public transactions must of necessity be in the name of the fictitious owner. I entirely agree with this argument; but it is for the defendant to show that the original transaction was fictitious. It is not disputed by Mr. Hasan Imam that since September 1882, all the accounts stand in the name of the Bahuasin; but he contends that there is no evidence to show that the income of the property was appropriated by the Bahuasin between 1876 and 1882. In 1881 the Bahuasin instituted an account suit against her agent Turant Lal; and in that suit Turant Lal raised the defence that the Bahuasin was a farzidar on behalf of her husband. The defence succeeded, and it is Mr. Hasan Imam's case that since 1882 false account-books were prepared by Durga Dutt in order to make it appear that the Bahuasin was the owner of the property.

We have, however, in the record of the case jamabandis of 1878, 1879, 1880 and 1881 which show that collection was made on behalf of the Bahuasin. I am not referring to the jamabandis of the subsequent years, for it is not disputed by Mr. Hasan Imam that those jamabandis do show that the property belonged to the Bahuasin. Now the jamabandis of 1878, 1879, 1880 and 1881 strongly corroborate the evidence adduced on behalf of the plaintiffs that the Bahuasin was in possession of the property. The only criticism directed against these jamabandis is that they were not produced in Turant Lal's case and that, therefore, we should reject them as having been fabricated for the purpose of this case. I am unable to accept this argument, I have examined these books for myself and they are in such a decayed state that it is impossible to take the view that they have been got up for the purpose of this case. These jamabandis have been accepted by the learned District Judge as genuine and I can see no reason for coming to the opposite conclusion. The basis of Mr. Hasan Imam's argument that these jamabandis were not produced in Turant Lal's case is that they do not bear any exhibit mark of the Court. It is not possible to get a witness now to speak of what happened in Turant Lal's case. The judgment in Turant Lal's case, Ex. F (1) (Part II after remand, page 16) shows that jamabandis were produced in that case which, however, were not accepted by the Court as genuine. The conclusion of the learned District Judge in that case on the evidence adduced before him is, of course, entirely irrelevant; but the fact remains that jamabandis were produced on behalf of the Bahuasin in that case.

I now come to the deori account-books kept by Raghunandan Jha, brother of the Bahuasin. These books show that the income of the property was appropriated by the Bahuasin. Deori account-books are private account-books, not of the entire income of the property but of such part of the income as was actually spent by the Bahuasin through her private servants. Mr. Hasan Imam does not accept these books as genuine; but he has an alternative argument, namely, that these books if genuine; show that approximately 90 per cent. of the money that actually came into the hands of the Bahuasin was paid to her husband. Counsel on behalf of the plaintiffs has analysed the accounts for six years, 1290, 1292, 1307 to 1310. These are the only accounts which have been printed in the paper-book. The account-book of 1290 shows that Rs. 10,950 was advanced as loans to Durga Dutt and that Rs. 3,700 was re-paid by him. The account-book of 1299 shows that Rs. 23,257 was advanced as loans to Durga Dutt and that Rs. 10,456 was re-paid by him. The account-books of 1307 to 1310 show that Rs. 1,876 was advanced as loans to Durga Dutt and that Rs. 12,537 was in those years re-paid by Durga Dutt. Mr. Hasan Imam concedes that the income of the property was anything between Rs. 30,000 and Rs. 40,000 a year. The result of a careful examination of those account-books, which have been printed in the paper-book, that is to say, the account-books for six years, is that out of Rs. 1,50,000 that must have come into the hands of the Bahuasin, Durga Dutt was indebted to her in the sum of Rs. 9,381. This does not support the argument of Mr. Hasan Imam that 90 per cent. of the income actually went into the pocket of Durga Dutt. The rest of the accounts have not been translated and we are not in a position to say what the actual state of affairs as between Durga Dutt and the Bahuasin may be on an examination of these accounts. I hold that these account-books are genuine and they show the enjoyment of the property by the Bahuasin.

Mr. Hasan Imam has strongly relied upon the evidence of Mr. Onraet and Mr. King in support of his case that the Bahuasin was a benamdar for her husband. Mr. Onraet was in the service of Durga Dutt from 1896 to 1901. His evidence is that he was in charge both of the babuana properties and of Taluka Laheri and that in regard to the management of Taluka Laheri he used to get instructions from Durga Dutt and in his absence from Amarendra Singh, plaintiff No. 2. He denies that he ever received any instructions from the Bahuasin or from Raghunandan Jha. He says that he used to keep the collections of babuana properties, sikamat properties and Taluka Laheri in one safe mixed together and that he used to remit the collections of Taluka Laheri in the name of the Bahuasin and those of the babuana properties in the name of Durga Dutt Singh, but that he actually sent all the remittances to Durga Dutt. His evidence is that Durga Dutt was the proprietor of Taluka Laheri. Asked for the reasons for his opinion he said as follows:—

"When I was appointed by Babu Durga Dutt Singh he told me that he was the proprietor but as his wife's name was registered in Register D as the proprietress, everything in connection with Taluka Laheri would be done in her name and for that reason he would have to give me power-of-attorney in her name also; I also used to receive my instructions and order concerning Taluka Laheri direct from him; when he wanted money for pujas and festivals he used to order me to send money indiscriminately from Taluka Laheri and the babuana properties; Babu Jawahir Saheb was supposed to be the karpardaz of his mother, but even in his presence Babu Durga Dutt Singh used to give me order and instructions concerning Taluka Laheri without consulting him. On one occasion two villages Khojpur and Barail belonging to babuana properties were up for sale at Muzafferpur. Babu Durga Dutt Singh asked me to go and get in any way an adjournment for the same; I replied that this would not be possible without paying some money and as I had just before that sent him money from Taluka Laheri I asked him to let me have that money to go and pay into Court and get the sale adjourned. These are the things besides what I was told by him when he appointed me, showed that he was the proprietor of Taluka Laheri."

It will be noticed that the value of Mr. Onraet's evidence lies in the admission alleged to have been made to him by Babu Durga Dutt Singh and on the alleged appropriation of the income of the property by Durga Dutt. He admits that all the account-books stood in the name of the Bahuasin and that the collections of Taluka Laheri were remitted in the name of the Bahuasin. He admits that he got a power-of-attorney from the Bahuasin and that the orders in connection with Taluka Laheri were sent to him in the name of the Bahuasin. The question is whether we ought to accept the oral testimony of Mr. Onraet unsupported as it is by the documentary evidence in the case. At the time when he was giving his evidence Mr. Onraet was a manager of Raj Darbhanga and, therefore, a servant of the defendant. Now I can understand public transactions being carried on in the name of a fictitious owner; but what was the necessity of resorting to a fiction as between the owner of the property and his manager? If Durga Dutt admitted to Mr. Onraet that he was the proprietor of the property, I can see no reason why the orders in connection with the property should be sent to him in the name of the Bahuasin. The alleged admission by Durga Dutt must have been made in 1896, when Mr. Onraet entered the service of Durga Dutt. The Maharaja of Darbhanga had already in 1892, brought a suit as against Durga Dutt and the Bahuasin for recovery of interest due upon the mortgage in 1890. There was a second suit in 1895, for recovery of interest upon the same mortgage. Is it likely that with those two decrees standing as against Durga Dutt he would make a solemn admission to Mr. Onraet, if it was his object to defeat his creditors by putting the property in the name of his wife.

But the most serious criticism against the evidence of Mr. Onraet is that he is contradicted by his previous deposition in another suit—Suit No. 455 of 1906. That deposition is Ex. 37 and is printed at page 244 in Part III after remand. The whole of that deposition shows that the Bahuasin was the owner and proprietress of Taluka Laheri. He stated definitely in the course of his evidence in that case that "Babu Amarendra Singh's mother" (that is to say, the Bahuasin) "had Taluka Laheri and some kamats." It is not surprising that having regard to all the circumstances the learned District Judge has refused to accept the evidence as reliable. For myself I am unable to accept Mr. Onraet as a truthful witness.

Mr. King's evidence stands on a different footing. He is a man of undoubted position and respectability, and anything spoken to by him must carry great weight with us. But, in my opinion, his evidence does not touch the point. His evidence is as follows: "I was for some time manager of Taluka Laheri from about the end of 1904, or beginning of 1905 upto the beginning of 1906. I am speaking from re-collection after 16 years. Babu Durga Dutt Singh appointed me manager of Taluka Laheri. During my tenure of management I received instructions from Babu Durga Dutt through his son plaintiff No. 2 and from no one else so far as I recollect. During my management I received the collections and I sent it to Babu Durga Dutt Singh. I had no Assistant Manager under me at any time." He admitted that during the same period he was also a Sub-Manager of Raj Darbhanga and that he had a power-of-attorney from the Bahuasin. In cross-examination he said as follows: "My recollection is that I used to send all the collections including those from Taluka Laheri to Babu Durga Dutt Singh in one lump and did not make any distinction as to the collection of Laheri Taluka. I used to send the money by peons with chalans. I do not say or cannot say that Laheri Taluka money used to be kept separately. It is true that in regard to estate matters I used to keep Amarendra Babu informed of what was going on." Now it is impossible to take the view that because Babu Durga Dutt used to give instructions to Mr. King in regard to the management of the property that, therefore, he and not his wife was the owner of the property and this is not the position which has been taken up by Mr. Hasan Imam. As a matter of fact the instructions to Mr. King came direct from Amarendra Babu. As the witness himself says, he was giving the evidence from re-collection after 16 years, and, in my opinion, his evidence is valueless on this point.

It is necessary now to notice some of the arguments which have been advanced by Mr. Hasan Imam on behalf of the defendant. Mr. Hasan Imam strongly relies upon the decision in Suit No. 6 of 1881 which was a suit by the Bahuasin against Turant Lal for account in regard to his management of Taluka Laheri. Turant Lal admittedly accepted the appointment from the Bahuasin; and when the suit for account was brought against him he raised the plea that the Bahusain was a benamdar for her husband. How this plea was allowed to be raised in view of the admitted fact that he was appointed by the Bahuasin as her agent is a matter of considerable surprise to me; but allowed to be raised it was, and the learned Judge who tried that case solemnly examined the evidence to find out whether the plea of Turant Lal was sustainable and he came to the conclusion that the Bahuasin was in fact the benamdar for her husband.

In my opinion the judgment in Suit No. 6 of 1881, is inadmissible in evidence as against the plaintiffs. Sections 40-43 of the Evidence Act deal with the subject of relevancy of judgments, orders or decrees of Court. Judgments, qua judgments or adjudications upon questions in issue and proofs of the particular points they decide are only admissible either as res judicata under s. 40 or as being 'in rem' under s. 41, or as relating to matters of a public nature under s. 42 of the Evidence Act. The judgments, orders and decrees other than those admissible by ss. 40, 41 and 42 may be relevant under s. 43, if their existence is a fact in issue or is relevant under other provision of the Act. It is obvious that the judgment in question is not relevant either under s. 40 or under s. 41 or under s. 42 of the Evidence Act. The question which we have to decide is whether it is relevant under s. 43. As has been pointed out by the learned authors of Woodroffe and Ameer Ali on Evidence Act, the cases contemplated by s. 43 are such as the section itself illustrates, namely, where the fact of any particular judgment having been given is a matter to be proved in the case. Under that section a judgment may be admissible as relevant under some other provisions of the Act.

The question was debated in the leading case of Gujja Lal v. Fatteh Lall (1, decided by the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court. That was a suit between A and B in which the question was whether C or D was the heir of H. If C was the heir of H then A was entitled to succeed; otherwise not. The same question had been raised in a former suit brought by X against A and was decided against A and the question arose whether the former judgment in the suit brought by X and A was admissible in evidence in the suit between A and B. It was held by the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court (Mitter, J., dissenting) that a former judgment which was not a judgment in rem nor one relating to matters of a public nature was not admissible in a subsequent suit either as res judicata or as a proof of the particular point which it decided unless between the same parties or those claiming under them. In the view of the learned authors of Woodroffe and Ameer Ali on Evidence Act, the decision of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Gujja Lal v. Fatteh Lall (1) has not been touched by the decisions of the Judicial Committee, and it is somewhat remarkable that that case has been followed by the Bombay High Court, by the Madras High Court and by the Allahabad High Court.

(1) 6 C. 171; 6 C. L. R. 439; 3 Shome L. R. 132; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 112.

I propose to refer to three cases upon which the plaintiffs relied, and which seem to me to be directly in point. In Basi Nath Pal v. Jagat Kisore Acharjee (2), it was held by Mukerji and Roe, JJ. that although a judgment not inter partes. may be used in evidence in certain circumstances, as a fact in issue, or as a relevant fact or possibly as a transaction, the recitals in the judgment cannot be used as evidence in a litigation between the parties. In Debendra Nath Haldar v. Bireshwar Haldar (3), the plaintiff sued for recovery of his share in the land in suit. The Subordinate Judge in appeal admitted a judgment in a previous suit brought by another person against the defendants and mainly relying on a certain passage therein as proving an admission by the defendant decided in favour of the plaintiff. It was held by Richardson and Mullick, JJ., that the judgment was inadmissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the alleged admission and that the error committed by the Subordinate Judge in using the judgment for a purpose for which it could not be legitimately used vitiated the decree.

(2) 35 Ind. Cas. 298; 20 C. W. N. 643; 23 C. L. J. 583.

(3) 30 Ind. Cas. 821; 20 C. W. N. 648; 20 C. L. J. 270.

In Abdul Latif v. Abdul Huq (4) which was a case of benami, it was held by Mukerji and Rankin, JJ., that the fact that a judgment was admitted in evidence in order to prove that there was a litigation which terminated in a certain way, did not make all the recitals in that judgment part of the evidence of the subsequent action. It is not necessary for me to deal with the numerous cases on the point it is sufficient for me to say that I entirely agree with the view expressed by the learned authors of Woodroffe on Evidence that a judgment or decree is not admissible in evidence under s. 43, of the Evidence Act unless as a fact in issue or as a relevant fact under other sections of the Act. Thus if A has obtained a decree for the possession of land against B and C, B's son murders A in consequence, the existence of the judgment is relevant as showing motive for the crime. So again in a suit for malicious prosecution the judgment in the criminal proceeding is evidence to establish the fact of acquittal, the fact, namely, that the criminal proceedings terminated in favour of the plaintiff. Again a reference to the finding of a judgment may explain the character of the party's possession and the nature of the enjoyment had in the property in suit and so the finding of a judgment may be referred to in all other cases where the record is matter of inducement or merely introductory to other evidence. Other instances may be cited where a judgment is admissible in evidence in a subsequent litigation ; but it must be shown that the existence of the judgment is a fact in issue, or that it is relevant under the other sections of the Evidence Act. This has not been shown in this case; and I must hold that the judgment in Turant Lal's case is not relevant in this case.

The next circumstance upon which Mr. Hasan Imam relies is the institution of a suit by Tara Dutt and Sashi Sekhar sons of Amarendra Singh plaintiff No. 2 in which they alleged that the transaction of 1876 was a benami transaction, that the property belonged to the joint family and that, being babauna property, it was inalienable. The evidence of Amarendra in this suit is that he knew nothing about that suit. The evidence is worthless, and I have no doubt whatever that the plaintiffs were well aware of that suit. But then the question arises, what weight we should attach to the incident? I have already stated that the Maharaja of Darbhanga sued upon the mortgage executed by the Bahuasin and her husband and obtained an ex parte decree on the 3rd June, 1897. The property was sold on the 21st May 1902. There was then an application for setting aside the sale under ss. 311 and 244, C. P. C. That application failed and the sale was confirmed. On the 23rd February 1906 a suit, being Suit No. 19 of 1906, was instituted by the present plaintiffs for confirmation of their possession. In that suit they alleged that the transaction of 1876 was a perfectly genuine one and they set out various circumstances in support of their case that the sale of the 21st May 1902 did not affect their interest. They also applied for an injunction restraining the defendant from taking possession of the property until the determination of their suit. That application failed, and the plaintiffs thereupon presented an appeal to the Calcutta High Court against the order of the learned Subordinate Judge, dated the 30th June, 1906, refusing to grant a temporary injunction: On the 15th August 1906 the High Court dismissed the appeal. Thereupon Tara Dutt and Sashi Sekhar filed a suit on the 4th of September 1902 in which they claimed that the property belonged to the joint family and that, being babuana property, it was inalienable. They also applied for an injunction restraining the defendant from taking possession of the property until the determination of the suit. This application was dismissed on the 10th December 1906, and the defendant recovered possession of the property on the 14th December 1906.

(4) 81 Ind. Cas. 667; 28 C. W. N. 62; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 523.

In my opinion, no weight ought to attach to the circumstance connected with Suit No. 410 of 1906. It is obvious that the family was making frantic efforts to save the property. First the plaintiffs filed a suit on the allegation that the property belonged to their mother and that the sale did not affect their interest. They failed in inducing the Court to give them a temporary injunction restraining the Maharaja of Darbhanga from taking possession of the property. Thereupon they caused Tara Dutt and Sashi Sekhar to institute a suit on different allegations altogether with a view to induce the Court to issue an injunction. I am, therefore, not prepared to attach any weight to the admission made by the plaintiffs in Suit No. 410 of 1906. It may be mentioned that Suit No. 19 of 1906, and Suit No. 410 of 1906, were both withdrawn soon after the Maharaja of Darbhanga got possession of the property. Mr. Hasam Iman also relies upon the judgment in Suit No. 29 of 1900 between the Bahuasin and the present defendant. The Maharaja in execution of a decree against Durga Dutt had attached certain properties as being in the possession of Durga Dutt. The Bahuasin preferred a claim to those properties alleging that at the date of the attachment those properties were in her possession and not in the possession of her husband. The Court rejected her claim, whereupon a suit was instituted by her for declaration of her title to the properties which were the subject-matter of her claim. Now it is important to remember that the property which is in dispute in this suit was not involved in the litigation of 1900; but a question arose as to the means at the disposal of the Bahuasin to enable her to acquire those properties. The Bahuasin alleged that, at the time of her marriage, her father-in-law made a gift to her of 5 gold mohurs and certain kamat lands in 12 mouzahs and a mouza named Sonepatha. She also alleged that she was in possession of Mouza Laheri, and the Court had to consider whether Mouza Laheri, in fact, belonged to her. It is obvious that the question as to her title to Mouza Laheri arose very incidently and was not a matter in issue in that case. The learned Judge in dealing with the case said as follows :—"The second source of plaintiff's income is said to be the Mouza Laheri. This property is said to have been purchased by her in 1284, from her husband. But it appears that for the debts of her husband alone amounting to one lakh eighty-eight thousand rupees and odd this property was mortgaged on the 15th December 1890 by a deed executed by the plaintiff and her husband in favour of defendant No. 1's precedessor-in-title. This is quite clear that because the plaintiff became the apparent owner by the execution in her favour of a deed of sale by her husband, the mortgage-deed was taken from her husband as well as from her. Of course in the body of the deed, the plural number is used both in respect of the debt and the ownership of the property; but that is merely a matter of form. The list given in that deed clearly shows that the debts for which the mortgage-deed was executed, were of the husband's alone. If the mortgaged property had really been sold to her by her husband, why should she mortgage her property for her husband's debt or why should she allow her husband to allege himself as co-owner of the property? I make these observations simply with a view to show that the alleged second source of income is also a myth and a non-entity." Any attempt to come to a conclusion on this point on the judgment in Suit No. 29 of 1900, (Ex. F-5, printed at page 78 of Part III after remand) would operate as a gross injustice in this case; but it is not open to me to criticise the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge in that case. It is sufficient for me to state that for the reasons which I have already given this judgment is not admissible in evidence against the plaintiffs.

I think I have dealt with all the arguments bearing on this point; it is not necessary to deal with the numerous cases on the question of benami. These cases are quoted in the judgment of Mukerji, J., in Promode Kumar Roy v. Kali Mohan Shah Pramanick (5). I would respectfully appropriate the following passage appearing in that judgment as part of my judgment:—"It is important to bear in mind in this class of cases that, as pointed out by Lord Phillimore in Maniklal Mansukhbhai v. Bijoy Singh (6), the decision of the Court should rest not upon suspicion, but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. This re-calls the earlier pronouncements to the same effect by Lord Westbury in Sreemanchunder Dey v. Gopalchunder Chakrabutty (7) and by Sir Lawrence Jenkins in Mina Kumari Bibi v. Bijoy Singh (8). But we are not unmindful that in the words of Lord Hobhouse in Uman Parshad v. Gandharp Singh (9) and of Lord Shaw in Muhammad Mahbub Ali Khan v. Bharat Indu (10) as benami transactions are very familiar in Indian practice, even a slight quantity of evidence to show that it was a sham transaction may suffice for the purpose. The person who impugns its apparent character must not rely, however, solely on probabilities as Lord Buckmaster observed in Irshad Ali v. Kariman (11). He must show something definite to establish that it is a sham transaction, on the principle that the burden of proof lies upon the person, who claims contrary to the tenor of a deed and alleges that the apparent is not the real state of things:—Nawab Azimut Ali Khan v. Hardwaree Mull (12), Faez Buksh Chowdhury v. Fakeeroodeen Mahomed (13), Sulaiman Kader Bahadur v. Mehndi Begam (14), Nirmal Chunder Banerjee v. Mahomed Siddik (15), and Moti Lal v. Kundan Lal (16). The most important test to be applied in these cases is, as observed by Mr. Ameer Ali in Nrityamoni Dassi v. Lakhan Chunder Sen (17), the source whence the consideration came. Sir George Farwell formulated the same test in different language, when he observed in Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh (18), that where it is asserted that an assignment in the name of one person is really for the benefit of another person, the principle applies that the trust of the legal estate results to the man who pays the purchase-money. To the same effect is the decision of the Judicial Committee in Parbati Dasi

(5) 70 Ind. Cas. 555; 36 C. L J. 396; 27 C. W. N. 305; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 228.

(6) 62 Ind. Cas. 356; 25 C. W. N. 409; (1921) M. W. N. 80 (P. C.).

(7) 11 M. I. A. 28; 7 W. R. 10 (P. C.); 2 Sar. P. C. J. 215; 1 Suth. P. C. J. 651; 20 E. R. 11.

(8) 40 Ind. Cas. 242; 44 I. A. 72; 1 P. L. W. 425; 5 L. W. 711; 32 M. L. J. 425; 21 C. W. N. 585; 21 M. L. T. 344; 15 A. L. J. 382; 25 C. L. J. 508; 19 Bom. L. R. 424; (1917) M. W. N. 473; 44 C. 662 (P. C.).

(9) 14 I. A. 127; 15 C. 20; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 71. Refique & Jackson's P. C. No. 98; 11 Ind. Jur. 474; 7 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 599 (P. C.).

(10) 53 Ind. Cas. 54; 23 C. W. N. 321; (1919) M. W. N. 507 (P. C.).

(11) 46 Ind. Cas. 217; 22 C. W. N. 530; (1918) M. W. N. 394; 21 O. C. 86; 5 O. L. J. 197; 28 C. L. J. 173; 20 Bom. L. R. 790; 24 M. L. T. 86 (P. C.).

(12) 13 M. I. A. 395; 14 W. R. (P. C.) 14; 5 B. L. R. (P. C.) 578; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 343; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 571; 20 E. R. 599.

(13) 14 M. I. A. 234; 9 B. L. R. 456; 2 Suth P. C. J. 490; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 733; 20 E. R. 775.

(14) 25 I. A. 15; 25 C. 473; 2 C. W. N. 186; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 254; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 313 (P. C.).

(15) 25 I. A. 225; 26 C. 11; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 383; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 611 (P. C.).

(16) 39 Ind. Cas. 964; 25 C. L. J. 581; 32 M. L. J. 468; 15 A. L. J. 329; 1 P. L. W. 490; 19 Bom. L. R. 471; 21 C. W. N. 929; 22 M. L. T. 10; (1917) M. W. N. 464; 6 L. W. 92 (P. C.).

(17) 33 Ind. Cas. 452; 43 C. 660; 20 C. W. N. 522; 30 M. L. J. 529; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 332; 3 L. W. 471; 18 Bom. L. R. 418; 24 C. L. J. 1; 20 M. L. T. 10 (P. C.).

(18) 30 Ind. Cas. 299; 42 I. A. 202; 19 C. W. N. 1207; 29 M. L. J. 335; 2 L. W. 830; 18 M. L. T. 248; 13 A. L. J. 991; 17 Bom. L. R. 1006; 37 A. 557; 22 C. L. J. 516; (1915) M. W. N. 757 (P. C.).

v. Baikuntha Nath Das (19) which re-calls the earlier pronouncements by Lord Campbell in Dhurm Das Pandey v. Shama Soondari Dibiah (20) and by Knight Bruce, L. J., in Gopeekrist Gosain v. Gungapersaud Gosain (21). Where, however, from the lapse of time direct evidence of a conclusive or reliable character is not forthcoming, as to the payment of consideration the case must be dealt with on reasonable probabilities and legal inferences arising from proved or admitted facts. Sir Arthur Wilson emphasised this when he observed in Dalip Singh v. Chaudhrain Nawal Kunwar (22) that if the evidence on neither side is wholly convincing as to the fundamental criterion, namely, the source of the purchase-money, if the evidence given and withheld is open to adverse criticism, the Court must rely on the surrounding circumstances, the position of the parties and their relation to one another, the motives which could govern their actions and their subsequent conduct, including their dealings with or enjoyment of the disputed property: see Upendra Nath Nag v. Bhupendra Nath Nag (23). We must further look to the substance of the transaction as evidence in the deeds of the parties, not permitting the real question to be obscured by what Knight Bruce, L. J., calls, in Hunoomanpersaud Pandey v. Babooee Munraj Kunweree (24), the form of expression the literal sense, nor by what Lord Macnaghten describes, in Lal Achal Ram v. Raja Kazim Hussain Khan (25) as exhibitions of the art of the conveyancer in the shape of recitals of obviously untrue statements introduced to impart some additional solemnity to an instrument." Applying these tests to the present case, I have no doubt whatever that the defendant has failed to establish that the transaction of 1876 was a fictitious transaction. The actual oral evidence produced is not convincing and there is no option but to found our conclusion mainly on the surrounding circumstances. I have no doubt whatever that the Bahuasin has been in possession of the property ever since the heba-bil-ewaz of 1876. I can see no motive which would lead Durga Dutt to put the property in the name of his wife; and even if I were to hold that no consideration was, in fact, paid by the Bahuasin my conclusion on this point would be the same. In Ismail Mussajee Mookerdam v. Hafiz Boo (26), the defendant relied upon a document, which, on the face of it, purported to be a deed of sale in her favour. The plaintiff contended that the transaction was a benami one and that it did not operate to confer any title on the defendant. It was found as a fact that no consideration was in fact paid by the defendant; but notwithstanding this, the Judicial Committee came to the conclusion that the transaction was one of gift. The decision destroys one part of the argument of Mr. Hasan Imam where he contended that if we found on the evidence that no consideration was paid, we must hold that the transaction was a fictitious one, there being no reason for putting a false recital in the document if the document was intended to have operation. I have anxiously considered all the evidence in this case and I entirely agree with the conclusion at which the learned District Judge has arrived on this point. I hold that the transaction of the 17th April 1876 was a genuine transaction and operated as a transfer of the property to the Bahuasin.

Before coming to the points which have been decided by the learned District Judge in favour of the respondent it will be convenient to dispose of a short question which was answered by the learned District Judge in favour of the appellants. Mr. Hasan Imam contends that s. 244 of the Code of 1882 operates as a bar to this suit. In order to deal with the question it is necessary to remember that the sale took place on the 21st May 1902 and that the Bahuasin and her husband applied for setting aside the sale on the 10th June 1902. The Bahuasin died in February 1904. Thereupon the present plaintiffs were substituted in the record of the application in the place of the Bahuasin on the application.

(19) 22 Ind. Cas. 51; 19 C. L. J. 129; 15 M. L. T. 66; (1914) M. W. N. 42; 12 A. L. J. 79; 18 C. W. N. 428; 16 Bom. L. R. 101; 26 M. L. J. 248 (P. C.).

(20) 3 M. I. A. 229; 6 W. R. P. C. 43; 1 Suth. P. C. J. 147; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 271; 18 E. R. 484.

(21) 6 M. I. A. 53; 4 W. R. P. C. 46; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 493; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 13; 19 E. R. 20.

(22) 35 I. A. 104; 30 A. 258; 10 Bom. L. R. 600; 12 C. W. N. 609; 14 Bur. L. R. 151; 4 M. L. T. 141 (P. C.).

(23) 32 Ind. Cas. 267; 21 C. W. N. 280.

(24) 6 M. I. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81n; Sevestre 253n; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 552; 19 E. R. 147.

(25) 32 I. A. 113; 9 C. W. N. 477; 8 C. C. 155; 27 A. 271; 15 M. L. J. 197; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 772 (P. C.).

(26) 33 C. 773; 10 C. W. N. 570; 3 A. L. J. 353; 3 C. L. J. 484; 8 Bom. L. R. 379; 16 M. L. J. 166; 1 M. L. T. 137; 33 I. A. 86 (P. C.).

of Durga Dutt. The substitution was effected on the 31st May 1904 and the application was dismissed on the 2nd June 1904. The contention of Mr. Hasan Imam is that the plaintiffs on being substituted should have raised the question whether the sale of the property affected their interest; and Mr. Hasan Imam relied upon various cases which are all (with one exception) cases of money decrees.

Now, in my opinion, it is impossible to regard the application of the 10th June 1902 as an application under s. 244 of the Code. No doubt the applicants described the application as one under s. 311 and s. 244 of the Code; but it is not very material how an application is headed if we know what questions are substantially raised by the application. It must be remembered that an order under s. 244 of the Code of 1882 operated as a decree whereas an order under s. 311 did not operate as a decree. It used to be the constant endeavour of the litigants to bring their application for setting aside a sale within the terms of s. 244 in order to get a second appeal to the High Court. It is for this reason that applications for setting aside a sale used to be invariably made both under ss. 311 and 244 just as they are now made under O. XXI, r. 90 and s. 47 of the present Code. It may be conceded that an application for setting aside a sale could be brought within the terms of s. 244 if there were sufficient allegations to support such a case. For instance an application for setting aside a sale on the ground of fraud could be made under the provisions of s. 244 of the Code. It is, therefore, necessary to examine the allegations made by Durga Dutt and the Bahuasin in their application dated the 10th June 1902 in order to determine whether their application was one under s. 311 or one under s. 311 and s. 244 of the Code. That application is Ex. M-3 and has been printed at page 104 of the paper-book, Part III after remand. Now it will be noticed that the allegations are all allegations necessary to enable a party to succeed in an application under s. 311 of the Code. There is not a single allegation made in the petition which would enable the Court to try the case under s. 244 of the Code. I am of opinion, therefore, that the application of the 10th June 1902 though described as one under s. 311 and s. 244 of the Code of 1882 could only be investigated under the provisions of s. 311 of the Code. That being so, s. 244 cannot operate as a bar to the present suit.

But there is a more serious objection to the argument. It will be remembered that the decree was a mortgage-decree and there is abundant authority for the view that where a decree directs the sale of specific property, the Court executing the decree has no power to go behind the decree and say "I will not sell the property because the interest of the judgment-debtor has come to an end." The exact point has been decided in cases far too numerous to mention. In Liladhar v. Chaturbhuj (27), there was a decree for sale of certain mortgaged properties against Musammat Jhuna. Musammat Jhuna died on the 29th October 1895 and on the 13th June 1896, an application was made for execution of the decree which was dated the 28th June 1893. The plaintiffs who were entitled on their case to succeed to the property on the death of Musammat Jhuno were made parties to the execution proceedings as the legal representatives of Musammat Jhuno. They raised several objections in regard to the application for execution, the first of which was to the effect that the decree was a decree for the sale of the life-interest of Musammat Jhuno and that the estate having determined on her death the decree was no longer capable of execution. They also contended that Musammat Jhuno was not competent to effect a mortgage of the property to enure beyond her lifetime and that there was no justifying necessity for such a mortgage. The Court executing the decree overruled the objections and directed the sale of the mortgaged properties. Thereupon a suit was instituted by the plaintiffs and they sought a declaration that the decree of the 28th June 1893 which was obtained by the defendants against Musammat Jhuno became void and inoperative at her death and that the property mentioned in the plaint which was in the possession of the plaintiffs and which the defendants caused to be advertised for sale was not liable to be sold in the events which had happened. It was contended on behalf of the defendants that s. 244 operated as a bar to the suit. The learned Judges deciding the case conceded that if the matter in controversy between the parties in the suit could be decided under s. 244 then there could be no doubt that the suit was not maintainable. But they came to the conclusion that the Court executing the decree could not consider the question of the validity of the decree. In delivering the judgment, the learned Judges said as follows: "A Court executing a decree is bound to give effect to it as it finds it, and it is not in the province of that Court to consider whether the decree was or was not rightly passed. The decree in this case was a decree for the sale of the property; the plaintiffs, who were parties to the execution proceedings in the character of legal representatives of Musammat Jhubo Kunwar, could only raise objections relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, or to the stay of execution thereof, starting with the assumption that the decree was a valid one. That a judgment debtor cannot dispute the validity of a decree, is a proposition for which we have abundant authority. We may refer to the recent case of Maluji v. Fakirchand. (28). It is clear that a person claiming title through the original judgment-debtor cannot dispute the validity of the decree, and where a decree directs the sale of particluar property, a person who does not claim through the mortgagor cannot in execution contend that the mortgagor was not competent to make the mortgage, and that the decree was one which ought not to have been passed. Such questions would, in our opinion, be outside the province of the Court executing the decree; for instance in the present case, if we assume that the present plaintiffs could properly raise the objection upon which they mainly rely, the Court executing the decree would have to determine, after taking evidence, whether the mortgage was effected by Jhuna Kunwar, that is whether the mortgage bond was executed by her, whether there was consideration for the mortgage, and whether there was valid necessity for it. Such an inquiry is certainly not contemplated by s. 244 of the C. P. C." With reference to the cases which were cited before the learned Judges relating to decrees for money where there was no direction in the decree for sale of specific property, the learned Judges said as follows:—"The case of a decree for money in which after the death of the debtor, property is attached as the assets of the debtor, and in which the legal representatives of the deceased debtor object to the attachment on the ground that the property attached is no part of the assets of the deceased debtor, is different from the case of a decree which orders sale of specific property, a case of the former class is contemplated by the ruling of the Full Bench in Seth Chand Mal v. Durga Dei (29)" and then the learned Judges proceeded to say as follows: "But when a decree specifically orders the sale of particular property no question of assets can arise and the Court executing the decree is bound to execute it as it stands. Any question relating to the validity of that decree must, in our opinion, be decided in a separate suit." This is the view which has been accepted by both the Madras High Court and by the Calcutta High Court: see Kumaretta Servaigaran v. Sabapathy Chettiar (30) and Khetrapal Singh Roy v. Shyama Prosad Barman (31). Mr. Hasan Imam relies upon Rajbansi Roy v. Mahabir Roy (32), where the learned Judges appear to have held that when a judgment-debtor does not challenge the validity of a mortgage-decree but contends that in execution thereof certain property should not be attached and sold in consequence of circumstances arising subsequent to the decree such contention ought to be dealt with under s. 244 of the Code, and not by a separate suit. With all respect, I am unable to agree with that decision and prefer to follow the decision of the Allahabad High Court in the case to which I have already referred. I have no doubt whatever that the decision of the District Judge on this point is right, and I must hold that s. 244 of the Code does not operate as a bar to this suit.

(27) 21 A. 277; A. W. N. (1899) 64; 9 Ind. Dec (N. S.) 885.

I now come to the real point in controversy between the parties, namely, what was the effect of the transaction of 1876 on the power of the Bahuasin to mortgage the property? The plaintiffs contend that the gift in favour of the Bahuasin was a Saudyaica gift and that the Bahuasin by virtue of that gift took a heritable but inalienable interest in (28) 22 B. 225; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 732.

(29) 12 A. 313; A. W. N. (1890) 137; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 946 (F. B.).

(30) 30 M. 26; 16 M. L. J. 545.

(31) 32 C. 265.

(32) 4 Ind. Cas. 121; 9 C. L. J. 358.

the property and that accordingly it was not in the power of the Bahuasin to enter into a mortgage transaction with reference to the property so as to bind the interest of the plaintiffs who claim through the Bahuasin and not through their father. Mr. Hasan Imam on behalf of the defendant contends, first, that the transaction of 1876 was a transaction of sale and not a transaction of gift and that accordingly the Bahusain took an absolute interest in the property, secondly, that if the transaction was one of gift the Bahuasin took an absolute interest in the property under the Hindu Law and that in any event the consent of her hushand as evidenced by the fact that he joined in the mortgage validated the mortgage if it were otherwise invalid, and that, thirdly, whatever may be the position under the Hindu Law, the Bahuasin took an absolute heritable and transferable interest under the terms of the heba-bil-ewaz. The questions raised in the arguments before us are not easy of solution, and it is necessary to proceed with care.

The first question which must be considered is whether the transaction of 1876 was one of sale or one of gift. The document is described as a heba-bil-ewaz; and Mr. Hasan Imam contends that the parties having elected to use a term which is well-known in Muhammadan Law must, in this instance, be deemed to be governad by the Muhammadan Law in regard to the effect of the transaction. As authorities in support of his proposition Mr. Hasan Imam relied upon Abdul Aziz Khan v. Appayasami Naicker (33) and Ram Narain Singh v. Chota Nagpur Banking Association (34). These cases establish that the rights of the parties to a contract are to be judged of by that law by which they may justly be presumed to have bound themselves. In the case of Abdul Aziz Khan v. Appayasami Naicker (33), the questirn arose whether a purchaser at an execution sale of an impartible zemindari could be allowed to put forward the case that he had purchased an absolute interest in it. In order to understand the decision it is well to point out that it was understood in India up to the decision of the Judicial Committee in Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari (35), that an holder of an impartible zemindari had only a limited interest and that, except for special justifiable causes, he had no power of alienation beyond his lifetime. While this was the view of the law, the plaintiffs purchased the right, title and interest of the holder of an impartible zemindari at a sale held in execution of a decree against such holder. Subsequently this interpretation of the law was reversed, as I have said, by the Judicial Committee in Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari (35) and in the Pithapur case, [Rama Krishna Rao v. Court of Wards (36)] which decided that the holder of an impartible estate had an absolute and alienable interest in it unless a custom against alienation was proved. The plaintiff who was the purchaser of the right, title and interest of the holder of the impartible estate brought a suit against the successor by survivorship for possession of the subject of sale on the ground that the plaintiff had purchased an absolute interest in it. It was held that the reversal of the previously accepted interpretation of the law did not displace its application to the contract contained in the certificate of sale of 1876, the parties to which were bound by the law as then understood and that only the life-interest of the then holder passed by the sale. In Ram Narain Singh v. Chota Nagpur Banking Association (34), the question arose as to the meaning of the expression "istemrari mokarrari" in a lease granted by the Raja of Ramgarh. The learned Judges pointed out that at the time when the leases were granted the idea was universally held that the holder of an impartible zemindari like the Ramgarh Raj could not encumber the corpus of the estate so as to bind the co-parceners except for justifiable special causes and that it was not till the decision in Sartaj Kuari's case (35) that the contrary view was authoritatively formulated. Mukerji, J., referred to the words of Willes, J., in Ltyod v. Guibert (37) and said that the rights of the parties to a contract are to be judged of by that law by which they may justly be presumed to have bound themselves. But it will be noticed that the law by which they were held to be bound was their personal law, a law which (33) 27 M. 131; 31 I. A. 1; 8 C. W. N. 186; 6 Bom. L. R. 7; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 568 (P. C.).

(34) 36 Ind. Cas. 321; 43 C. 332.
(35) 15 I. A. 51; 10 A. 272; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 139; 12 Ind. Jur. 213; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 182.
(36) 26 I. A. 83; 22 M. 383; 1 Bom. L. R. 277; 3 C. W. N. 415; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 481; 9 M. L. J. Sup. 1; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 276 (P. C.).
(37) (1895) 1 Q. B. 115; 6 B. & S. 100; 122 E. R. 1134; 35 L. J. Q. B. 74; 13 L. T. 602.

was applicable to them, and that there was no difficulty in applying that law to them although the previously accepted interpretation of that personal law was subsequently reversed by an authoritative decision of the Judicial Committee. No authority has been cited to us to the effect that a Hindu may by adopting a term well-known to Muhammadan Law, make himself bound by the Muhammadan Law. Indeed it is impossible, in my opinion, to maintain that view. It is not necessary to discuss the various cases which have been cited to us by Mr. Hasan Imam to the effect that a heba-bil-ewaz is looked upon in Muhammadan Law as a sale, but I may usefully refer to the following observations of Mahmood, J., in Rahim Baksh v. Mohammad Hasan (38): "Heba-bil ewaz is a transaction made up of mutual or reciprocal gift between two persons each of whom is alternatively the donor of one gift and the donee of the other."

After all it is not very material to consider how the parties describe a transaction, if we know what the transaction is, for it is the substance of the transaction and not the form of it, to which we must have regard. I must accordingly consider the terms of the document itself to see whether the transaction was one of sale or one of gift. In considering the terms it is only necessary to remember, as Mr. Hasan Imam has admitted before us, that the income of the property at the time of the transaction in question was anything between Rs. 30,000 and Rs. 40,000 per year. The document itself will be found at page 7 Part III of the paper-book after remand, but I have adopted the translation of Mr. Hasan Imam which has been accepted by the plaintiffs. The document runs as follows:—"The decree of Rai Banwari Lal Sahu against me for Rs. 41,532-6-8-16 cr, 16 ms. is under execution in the Court of the District Judge at Muzaffarpur and the shares of me, the executant in Taluka Laheri, Pergana Jabdi, T. N. No. 1522 and in Mouzah Pandaul, Pergana Hati, T. N. No. 54167 have as per inventory filed by the said decree-holder, been advertised for sale on the 17th April 1876. Although I, the executant tried to procure money from creditors, etc., for payment of the decretal amount to the said decree-holder, I could not get it and I see no means to safeguard my milkiat properties from sale as mentioned in the inventory. As the sale will entail loss of the said two milkiat properties on sale, belonging to me, the executant my share of 7 annas $8\frac{3}{4}$ gandas situate in Taluka Laheri asli with dakhli, Pergana Jabdi, T. N. No. 1522 appertaining to Registration Office, District Darbhanga and Sub-District Madhubani and Thana Lockhe, with trees fruit bearing and non-fruit bearing and ahar, and pokhar and reservoir and tank and cucha and pucca wells, and sair, and salt sair and houses occupied by tenants, and all my zemindari rights which up to now have been in my possession without the co-partnership of any one to my wife Musammat Anuragin Bahuasin, having taken Rs. 41,532-6-8-16 cr. 16 ms. in cash, I have made of my free-will and accord heba-bil-ewaz, and having with the said amount paid up the amount of the decree of the aforesaid decree-holder and got the property released from sale have put the aforesaid Musammat in possession of the subject of the heba. The aforesaid Musammat should by becoming possessed of the subject of the heba spend the produce of the property with sons generation after generation (ba farzandan naslan bad naslan.) I, the declarant, or my heirs and representatives (quam moqaimain) shall have no right or concern in demanding the subject of the heba or the consideration money from the aforesaid Musammat or her heirs and representatives. Should I, the executant, my heirs and representatives make any claim or put forward any demand in respect of the gift properties or the consideration thereof the same will be deemed null and void. I have, therefore, given in writing these few words in the shape of a heba-bil-ewaz so that it may be of use when required."

No doubt the payment of a consideration of Rs. 41,532 is mentioned, but the question is whether the transaction was substantially one of gift or one of sale. If Mahmood, J., is right in his view that a heba-bil-ewaz is a transaction made up of mutual or reciprocal gifts between two persons, then it would appear that there was a gift by the Bahuasin of Rs. 41,532 to her husband and a gift of Taluka Laheri by her husband to her. The income of the property was anything between Rs. 30,000 and Rs. 40,000 a year, and, in my opinion, it is impossible to regard the transaction as a sale when all that was paid by the Bahuasin was Rs. 41,532. I have no difficulty whatever in understanding the transaction Durga Dutt was in need of Rs. 41,532 to save the property from the sale. He had tried to procure the money from the market and had failed. The Bahuasin had Rs. 41,532. In order to save the property she handed it over to her husband. The husband in return made a gift of the property to his wife. In my opinion the transaction was substantially one of gift although Durga Dutt received Rs. 41,532 as a gift from his wife.

(38) 11 A. 1; A. W. N. (1888) 266; 13 Ind. Jur. 152; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 429.

Mr. Hasan Imam has drawn our attention to certain statements alleged to have been made by the Bahusain, suggesting an inference that the transaction in her favour was one of sale. In Suit No. 6 of 1881 which was the suit instituted by her against Turant Lal Choudhury she is alleged to have put forward the claim that she was the purchaser of the property in question. The plaint filed by her in that case is, however, not in the record. But Mr. Hasan Imam relies upon the recitals in the judgment itself; but, as I have said before the recitals in the judgment are not admissible in evidence against the plaintiffs in this suit. The next admission upon which Mr. Hasan Imam relies is that alleged to have been made by her in Suit No. 29 of 1900. That was a suit by her as against the Maharaja of Darbhanga under the provisions of s. 283 of the Code of 1882 to establish her right to certain properties which did not include the property now in suit. The Maharaja had obtained a decree against Babu Durga Dutt and in question of that decree had attached certain properties alleged to belong to him. The Bahuasin laid a claim to those properties and was defeated in the claim case. Thereupon a title suit was instituted by her. Neither the plaint filed in that suit nor her deposition is in the record. It appears that the question arose as to the source of the Bahuasin's income which enabled her to acquire the properties in dispute in that suit, and in dealing with this point the learned Subordinate Judge says as follows:—"The second source of plaintiffs' income is said to be the Mouza Laheri. This property is said to have been purchased by her in 1284 from her husband." As I have said before the recital in the judgment is not admissible in evidence against the plaintiffs and assuming that the admission as alleged was made by Bahuasin, I cannot attach any importance to it, since on the construction of the document itself we are in a position to say what the transaction was. I come to the conclusion that the transaction of 1876 in favour of the Bahuasin was one of gift.

The next question is, what is the effect of that gift. The plaintiffs contend that by virtue of the Mithila Law by which the parties are admittedly governed, the Bahuasin took a heritable but inalienable interest in the property and that the terms of the gift did not confer on her a larger interest. I will first consider the case under the Hindu Law. The question must be determined in accordance with the doctrine to be found in the Vivada Chintamani. Bachaspati Misra, the author of Vivada Chitamani, adopts the enumeration of women's peculiar property which is to be found in Manu and Katyayana, but says that the "six kinds of property" which is to be found in Manu "means that there cannot be a less number." In fact Bachaspati Misra gives other kinds of stridhan which are not to be found in Manu. It is not necessary for our present purpose to go through Bachaspati Misra's list, which appears to be exhaustive. The plaintiffs contend that the gift in this case is what is known as a gift subsequent and constituted the Saudayica of the Bahuasin. The original text upon which the claim is founded is that of Vishnu which is referred to by Bachaspati Misra and which runs as follows in the translation of Vivada Chintamani by Mr. Tagore:—"The property of a female is what her father, mother, son, or brother has given her, what she received before the nuptial fire; or at the bridal procession, or when her husband took a second wife, what her husband agrees should be regarded as her perquisites; what is received from his or her kinsmen as a gift subsequent to the marriage." The gloss of Bachaspati Misra on the text of Bishnu as translated by Mr. Tagore is as follows:—"What is received by a woman after marriage from the kinsmen of her lord or those of her parents is called a gift subsequent" (Mr. Tagore's Edition, page 259). Mr. Hasan Imam contends that a gift from husband is not within the text; for the husband cannot be referred to as "the kinsman of her lord," but there is no doubt whatever that the translation of Mr. Tagore is not very accurate. The word used in the original is bhartrikul which means the kul or the family of her husband and includes the husband. The correct translation of the passage is as follows:—"That which is received by a woman from the family of her husband subsequent to marriage is called anvadheya or gift subsequent, so also that which is similarly received from the family of her father." A reference to Vivada Ratnakar, Ch. 12, verse 10, which is also of authority in Mithila will show that this translation is correct. The passage is translated as follows by Mr. Shastri: "Whatever is received by a woman after marriage from the husband's family or from her own family is called gift subsequent." I am of opinion, therefore, that the gift in the present case being a gift by the husband to the wife subsequent to marriage must be regardad as the stridhan of the wife. According to Bachaspati (see Mr. Tagore's Edition, page 259) "Saudayica is the name by which the different kinds of the peculiar property of women are known." That being so, the gift in the present case was a Saudayica gift of the husband to the wife.

This was not seriously disputed before us, but it was contended that such a gift is neither heritable nor inalienable. That such a gift is heritable admits of no doubt whatever. Bachaspati Misra refers to the text of Manu on this point which is as follows:—"On the death of the mother, let all the uterine brothers (and if unmarried) the uterine sisters divide the maternal estate in equal shares. It is fit even to the daughters of those daughters something should be given from the estate of their maternal grandmother on the ground of natural affection." The words "uterine brothers" obviously do not mean the brothers of the donee, as is shown by the text of Brihaspati to which Bachaspati Misra next refers in these words "Brihaspati confirms this" namely, the text of Manu, by declaring that "a woman's property goes to her children, and the daughter is a sharer with them provided she be unaffianced; but if she be married, she shall not receive the maternal wealth. Something should be given to her that her feeling may not be wounded." Bachaspati Misra makes the position perfectly clear by interpreting the words "to her children" in the text of Brihaspati as meaning "to her sons." The other text to which he refers on this point is that of Gautama which lays down that a woman's separate property goes to her daughters unmarried and unprovided for. In this case at the date of the transaction, namely, the 17th April 1876, the Bahuasin had a daughter Aparajita and five sons who are the plaintiffs in this action. Aparajita was married in 1869 and was cited as defendant third party in the action. It is nobody's case that Aparajita was unmarried and unprovided for at the time when the succession opened out. That being so, the plaintiffs as the sons of the Bahuasin were entitled to succeed to the property after her death as her heirs and not as the heirs of her husband.

I now come to the question whether, in her hands, the property was inalienable. I propose to consider the point first on the Hindu Law itself apart from the terms of the heba-bil-ewaz Bachaspati Misra refers to the following text of Narada:—"Property given to her by her husband through pure affection, she may enjoy at her pleasure after his death or give away, with the exception of lands or houses" and draws the following conclusion from that text:—"Consequently a woman can dispose of moveable property which has been given to her by her husband, but she can never dispose of immoveable property. The same rule holds good in the case of Saudayaica or the gifts of affectionate kindred." see Tagore's Edition, page 261. It would appear from this passage that it was the view of Bachaspati Misra, who is of paramount authority in Mithial, that a woman can under no circumstances dispose of immoveable property given to her by her husband. Bachaspati Misra then refers to the text of Katayayana which provides that a woman on the death of her husband may enjoy his estate according to her pleasure; but that in his lifetime she should carefully preserve it. He concedes that the text admits of two meanings: "The one is that, on the death of the husband, his property devolves on his wife and becomes her own in default of other heirs; the other is, that the property, she enjoys with the consent of her husband in the lifetime is to be regarded as her peculiar property." It will be noticed that the text of Katyayana is open to two interpretations and this has given rise to a difference of opinion amongst the commentators. The word used in Katyayana is 'daya'. Now the dictionary meaning of 'daya' is both heritage and gift and this is the sense in which Bachaspati Misra understands the term 'daya' as used in Katyayana. On the other hand, the author of Smriti Chandrika, which is of paramount authority in Madras, interprets the term 'daya' as meaning a "donation". According to Bachaspati Misra the words "let a woman on the death of her husband enjoy her husband's property at her discretion" refer to a heritage, that is to say, to the property which devolves on the widow in default of other heirs, and the words "while he lives she should carefully preserve it" refer to a donation, that is to say, to what is received by the wife in the lifetime of her husband, and the conclusion at which Bachaspati Misra arrives is as follows:—"As a woman cannot make a present of or at pleasure dispose of immoveable property, given to her by her husband in his lifetime, so she cannot dispose of any immoveable property which she inherits on his death," and he says that the same opinion is maintained in Ratnakara and the Prakashakara which are of authority in Mithila. In my opinion, a reference to the scheme set out by Bachaspati Misra makes it abundantly clear that a wife receiving a gift from her husband is incapable of alienating it except under circumstances which would enable a widow taking the property of her husband by inheritance to alienate it. He is at some pains to show that a wife taking a gift from her husband is exactly in the same position as a widow succeeding to the property of her husband by inheritance. If that be so, it follows that in the absence of legal necessity or the consent of those persons who are entitled to succeed to the property on her death, there is no power of alienation in a woman taking a property by gift from her husband.

The next question is whether the consent of her husband has the effect of validating the transaction, and, if so, whether there was "consent" in this case, within the meaning of that term as used in the Hindu texts. It is contended on behalf of the plaintiffs that Bachaspati Misra is perfectly clear on this point and reference is made to the following passage in Vivada Chintamani as translated by Mr. Setlur:—"Just as in the case of immoveable property given by the husband the widow has no power of gift, etc., even with the permission of the husband so also in the case of immoveable property of the husband which is descended to the widow. The Prakashakara and the Ratnakara are to the same effect"—(Part II, page 257). If Mr. Setlur's translation be correct, then the point is concluded by the authority of Bachaspati Misra; but the original passage in Vivada Chintamani has been translated by Mr. Tagore. By Mr. Ghose and by Golap Chandra Sarkar. The translation of Mr. Tagore is as follows:—

"As a woman cannot make a present of or at pleasure dispose of immoveable property, given to her by her husband in his lifetime, so she cannot dispose of any immoveable property which she inherits on his death. The same opinion is maintained in the Ratnakara and the Prakashakara" (Mr. Tagore's translation, 263). Mr. Ghose adopts the translation of Mr. Tagore. Mr. Shastri translates the text as follows:—"Just as in immoveable property given by the husband there is incompetency of women in making gift and the like by reason of this text, so also in the husband's immoveable property devolving by inheritance on the wife." The text referred to in Shastri is the text of Katyayana referred to above.

It would appear then that Mr. Setlur stands alone in his translation that there is prohibition on the wife to dispose of immoveable property taken by her under a gift from her husband even with the consent of the husband. The critical words in the original are "etat bachanat." It is contended on behalf of the plaintiffs that there are two readings of this passage and that in one of these readings the word 'etat' is omitted. The contention is that if the word 'etat' be omitted, the word 'bachanat' is capable of being rendered as "by the command or order" and the disputed passage is capable of being rendered as follows:—"As by virtue of the order or permission (of the husband) a woman cannot make a present of or at pleasure dispose of immoveable property, given to her by her husband in his lifetime, so she cannot dispose of any immoveable property which she inherits on his death" but that if the word 'etat' be taken into consideration, the passage would mean that as by virtue of the text a woman cannot make a present of, etc. It is contended that the word 'bachanat' may mean either a text or order, command, permission, etc., but it appears that in the text as quoted in Shastri the word 'etat' is omitted and still he renders the word 'bachanat' as text.

In view of the authority of Tagore and Shastri, I am unable to come to the conclusion that there is direct prohibition in Vivada Chintamani on the power of a woman to deal with immoveable property even with the consent of her husband.

But I am of opinion that Mr. Setlur has rendered the spirit of Bachaspati Misra. The whole idea running through the mind of Bachaspati Misra is that the property taken by a woman by a gift from her husband, must be protected during her lifetime and that she is in the same position in regard to that property as a widow taking the property of her husband by inheritance after his death. Now a widow can alienate such property only for legal necessity or with the consent of these who are entitled to succeed to the property on her death. So also it would seem that in the view of Bachaspati Misra a woman taking the property by gift from her husband can only alienate the property in case of necessity or with the consent of those who are entitled to succeed to the property on her death.

It has been urged before us that if there is no express text on this point in Vivada Chintamani we must decide the point on the interpretation of the texts of Mitakshara with such assistance as may be afforded by other commentaries (though not recognized as authorities in Mithila) and by modern text books. It is conceded that there is no express text on this point in the Mitakshara; but it is contended that both in the Mayukha and Smriti Chandrika it is expressly provided that the prohibition on the right of a woman to alienate property taken by her as a gift from her husband is not absolute, but that she may alienate such property with the consent of her husband; and a decision of the Bombay High Court in Bhan v. Raghunath (39) has been cited before us.

I will consider the case first under the Mitakshara; for Mitakshara is of authority in Mithila except in regard to those matters where there is a difference of opinion between Vignanesvara and the Mithila commentators. Now it is conceded that there is no text in the Mitakshara dealing with the question whether a woman taking a property by gift from her husband can alienate such property with the consent of her husband.

But Mitra Misra, who is of very high authority in the Benares School is of opinion that "in the disposal of woman's property, females have not independence without the permission of their husband" (See Sircar's Edition of Viramitrodya, page 224). At first sight, the text of Mitra Misra would appear to be conclusive in this case, but on further investigation it will be noticed that the opinion of Mitra Misra is based on a text of Manu which has been interpreted in a different sense in the Mithila School. The text of Manu (Ch. IX, verse 109) upon which reliance is placed in all the schools has been translated as follows in the Sacred Books of the East:—"Women should never make a hoard from (the property of) their families which is common to many, nor from their own (husband's particular) property without permission"—(Vol. 25, page 372). It is obvious that there is wide scope for different interpretations, since the critical words "husband's particular" are missing in the text, and are left to be inferred from the context. Now Mitra Misra (and, as I shall presently show, the authors of Smriti Chandrika and Mayukha) declined to read these words in the text, with the result that he rendered the text as follows:—"Women shall not make any disbursement out of family property which is common to many, or even out of their own property, without the permission of their husbands. The conclusion at which Mitra Misra arrived followed directly from the text of Manu, as he read it, which he accepted as of undoubted authority. Now this text of Manu is not referred to in Vivada Chintamani; but Chandreswar, who is of equal authority in Mithila, refers to it only to show that he has read the text differently. The passage occurs in Ch. VII, para. 2, and is rendered as follows by Sircar, "Manu says, 'woman shall not make abstractions from family (property) common to many, nor even from her husband's own property, without permission.'" And then follows the commentory of Chandreswar in these words: "Here by the word 'family' is intended family property by reason of contextual association; hence, out of joint property, 'abstraction;'

(39) 30 B. 229; 7 Bom. L. R. 936.

i. e., secret appropriation of property, should not be made by women without the permission of the owners. Likewise from even husband's own property, i e., from husband's property, held not in common with other members of the family, secret appropriation should not be made, without the permission of the owner of the property. This is the meaning." It is obvious that there is a difference, and a serious difference between Mitra Misra and Chandreswar on the critical text of Manu, and that the view of Mitra Misra based as it is on his interpretation of the text of Manu, can be of no authority in Mithila.

The view of Mitra Misra as to the text of Manu was shared by Nilkantha, the author of the Mayukha. In the Mayukha (Ch. IV, s. 10, page 93 of Mr. Mandlik's Edition), the text of Manu is rendered as follows :—"Hence, says Manu (Ch. IX, verse 199) : 'A woman should never make (any) expenditure out of the family (property) belonging to several or even (out of) her own wealth without the assent of her husband.'" This passage is prominently referred to in the judgment of Jenkins, C. J., in Bhan v. Raghunath (39) in support of the proposition that a woman's power of disposal over her stridhan is during coverture subject to her husband's consent.

The author of the Smriti Chandrika also adopts the interpretation placed upon the text of Manu by Mitra Misra and Nilkantha. That text is rendered as follows in Smriti Chandrika:—"Manu, therefore, says, "woman should never make expenditure from the wealth of the family common to many, inclusive of themselves, or even from their separate property without the permission of their respective lords." And the comment of the author on the text is as follows : "The meaning is that women who are naturally wanting in independence cannot, of their own choice, make disbursements, use, or the like of the property belonging in common to themselves and their husbands, or of property belonging to them exclusively:" (Ch. IX, ss. 14 and 15, Setlur's Collection of Hindu Law Books on Inheritance, Part I, page 259).

Now I quite agree that, in dealing with this point, we may take such assistance as may be afforded by other commentaries though not recognized as authorities in Mithila, but I think that I have shown with sufficient clearness that the view presented in the Viramitrodya, the Mayukha and the Smriti Chandrika on this point cannot be regarded as of authority in Mithila. The foundation of the rules enunciated in those schools is the text of Manu; and, when that text is interpreted in a different light in the Mithila School, it follows that the rule based on a particular interpretation of the text, not accepted in Mithila, cannot have any operation in Mithila.

And a careful examination of Vivada Chintamani will lead to the conclusion that there is no question of the control of the husband in property given by him to his wife. Bachaspati Misra refers to the text of Katyayana, only to put it aside. He then quotes the text of Narada, and draws the conclusion, binding in Mithila, that a wife can never dispose of immoveable property given to her by her husband (Mr. Tagore's Edition, page 261). Later in the Chapter he says that "the immoveable property which a woman gets after the death of her husband, cannot be disposed of at her pleasure" and that "the meaning of this is consonant with that of the husband's donation which can only be enjoyed but not spent" and lastly he points out that "as a woman cannot make a present of, or at pleasure dispose of immoveable property, given to her by her husband in his lifetime, so she cannot dispose of any immoveable property which she inherits on his death." It will be noticed that, in the scheme of Bachaspati Misra, the gift and the heritage stand on the same footing and that he deduces the rule that the widow cannot dispose of any immoveable property which she inherits on the death of her husband as a logical consequence of the rule that the wife cannot make a present, or at pleasure dispose of immoveable property.

Now if the gift and the heritage stand on the same footing then it follows that the subject-matter of the gift, if immoveable property cannot be dealt with by the wife except for purposes which may be denominated "necessary purposes." The consent of the husband, who has parted with his proprietary interest in the property, will not validate the transaction, though the consent of the next heirs may raise a presumption of the existence of necessity. In this case the transaction did not rest on any necessity nor is it pretended that it did. Babu Durga Dutt, it is true, owed a sum of money to the Maharajah, but he had valuable properties of his own which could be offered as a security for the debt. It is urged that Durga Dutt and his sons were under the impression that bäbuana properties were inalienable; but the Maharajah was not of that opinion, and the impression of Babu Durga Dutt and his sons cannot decide the question of necessity to the prejudice of the Bahuasin. It is for the party founding title on an alienation by a limited owner to show necessity in respect of the alienation and the Maharajah obviously cannot establish necessity, since he never assented to the doctrine that babuana properties were inalienable. I have no doubt whatever that under the Mithila Law, immoveable property taken as a gift by a wife from her husband is heritable but inalienable except for purposes which may be denominated necessary purposes, and that in this case there was no legal necessity to support the transaction.

Assuming that I am wrong in my view that the consent of the husband will not validate the alienation, I have still to enquire into the question whether there was in this case "the consent" of her husband to the mortgage. Now the case cannot be put on a higher footing than this that, while the husband is living, his consent will raise the presumption that there was necessity to support the transaction. But presumption is a rule of evidence, not a rule of law; and we have all the facts to enable us to decide the point on evidence. Those facts are not in dispute; and I am unable to assent to the proposition that the act of the husband in consenting to a transaction for his benefit is to be regarded as a consent which will validate the transaction. The control exercisable by the husband in regard to the dealings of the wife with property given to her by him is in no sense proprietary. It may be incident to his status as the guardian of his wife; but if his control is to be put on that footing, he is bound to exercise it for the protection of his wife and the preservation of the property. It cannot be suggested that it is in the power of a guardian to give validity to a transaction by the ward by consenting to it, when the transaction is wholly for the benefit of the guardian; and in this case, the Maharajah must be regarded as a party to the breach of trust, since he knew that the debt was of Durga Dutt Singh, in no way binding on the Bahuasin.

It was next contended on behalf of the respondent that the Hindu Law allows the husband, under certain circumstances to deal with the property of his wife for his benefit, and that the transaction ought to be supported on this ground. The texts of Devala, Yajanavalkya and Katyayana have been adopted by all the schools as the law on the subject, but we are concerned with the interpretation put on these texts in the Mithila School. Devala gives a complete enumeration of the peculiar property of woman. According to him, it consists of "food and vesture, ornaments, perquisites and wealth received by a woman from a kinsman" (Vivada Chintamani, Tagore's Edition, page 263). According to him, the husband has no right to it except in extreme distress. He provides however, "If he (the husband) give it away on a false consideration, or consume it, he must make good the value to the woman with interest; but he may use the property of his wife to relieve a distressed son." Bachaspati Misra's gloss on this text is important, and I give it in full as Mr. Imam strongly relies on it in support of his case. The gloss is as follows: "The property of a woman should not be improperly given away or consumed without her consent, but it may be used for the relief of a distressed son. It is declared by the same writer that the husband has power to use it with or without the consent of his wife. If the husband having obtained her consent use the property amicably, he shall be required to pay the principal when he becomes rich. If the wife give her peculiar property through affection, when her husband is ill, or in danger, or has been confined by a creditor, he may give her the value of it when he pleases. The meaning of the above is that if the wife, observing her husband's illness and the like, give her wealth, it may be re-paid by him at his pleasure."

Mr. Hasan Imam contends that the text gives the husband the power "to use the property amicably having obtained her consent"; but it is obvious that the rule is confined to such properties as are enumerated by Devala which, according to him, constitute "the several kinds of the peculiar property of women." They are (1) food and vesture, (2) ornaments, (3) perquisites, that is, wealth given to a damsel on demanding her in marriage, and (4) wealth received from a kinsman. We are not concerned in this suit with the first three classes of stridhan, for property given by a husband to a wife does not fall within these classes. Does it fall within the words "wealth received from kinsman?" The word in the original for kinsman is "bandhus" which word is also used in Yajnavalkya and which is rendered in the Mitakshara as matri-bandhus and pitri-bandhus, that is to say, persons related to mother and father (see Colebrook 2-XI-6, Ghorpure's Edition of the Mitakshara, page 273 and Banarji's stridhan, page 299). It is obvious that the husband is not comprehended within the term, and that the text of Devala cannot be cited as authority for the proposition that the husband may deal with the property given by him to his wife with her consent.

In the next place it seems to me that neither in form nor in substance was the transaction one in which the husband, "having obtained her consent, used the property amicably." Now what was the transaction? In point of form the mortgage was by Durga Dutt and the Bahuasin on the footing that the property belonged to them, and that the debt, to secure which the mortgage was executed, was binding on both. If, however, the substance is to be regarded, then obviously the Maharajah secured the execution of the mortgage by both of them for his own safety, because there was a hebanama in favour of the Bahuasin, and it might be urged, if he took the mortgage from the Bahuasin, that the heba did not operate to convey any title to the Bahuasin. The transaction was not a transaction of the husband with the consent of the wife, but a transaction of the husband and wife on the footing that the title was in both of them, so that the Maharajah would have a claim good on the mortgage, if the title was in either.

Lastly, I am of opinion that it has not been established that the Bahuasin consented to her husband mortgaging the property for his personal benefit. Now I am quite aware that the plaintiffs cannot, in this action, raise the question whether there was not undue influence exerted on the Bahuasin in regard to the execution of the mortgage by her. On the hypothesis that the property was alienable by her, no question of undue influence can now arise, since the Bahuasin had the right and the opportunity to establish a case of undue influence in the mortgage action against her. But if I am right in holding that the property was not alienable by her, then the question of "consent" becomes material in discussing whether there is an answer to the plaintiffs' suit. The plaintiffs say that the property was inalienable and that accordingly they became entitled to recover the property on the death of the Bahuasin. To that, the defendant replies that under the Hindu Law, Durga Dutt had complete power to mortgage the property with the consent of the Bahuasin. Thereupon the plaintiffs retort, "prove that the Bahuasin consented to her husband mortgaging the property for his personal benefit." Now this question was not in issue in the mortgage action, either directly or constructively, for it was a simple suit to enforce a mortgage executed by Durga Dutt and the Bahuasin, on the footing that the property belonged to both of them. The only defence that could be put forward by the Bahuasin in that litigation would be that there was undue influence exerted on her in the matter of the execution of the bond. That issue cannot be raised by the plaintiffs in this Court. But at the same time it must be remembered that the question as to the inalienability of the property could not be put in issue in that litigation; for, as I have said before, the Bahuasin could not claim adversely to her own deed. The plaintiffs raise the question of inalienability in this action, and, in answer to the defendant's case that, though the Bahuasin could not mortgage the property, her husband could mortgage it with the consent of the Bahuasin, they are entitled to ask the defendant to prove that the Bahuasin, did consent to her husband mortgaging the property for his personal benefit.

It is, therefore, necessary to examine the circumstances connected with the execution of the mortgage-bond. In dealing with the point, it is to be remembered that the Bahuasin was an illiterate purdanashin woman living with her husband at the date of the transaction. The evidence of Amarendra Singh, one of the plaintiffs in this action, is as follows:—The Maharajah had several decrees against Durga Dutt which were under execution. Mr. Duff, sub-manager of the Darbhanga Raj brought an account of the money due to the Raj and informed Durga Dutt that the Maharajah wanted a mortgage document to secure the debt. After some conversation, Mr. Duff left but came back again after a few days and said that the Maharajah wanted the Laheri property to be mortgaged. Durga Dutt said, "the property is not mine. I have given a heba of it to my wife." Mr. Duff went away, but came back again and said: "Maharajah has ordered me to get the mortgage-deed executed by both of you as the property is in the name of your wife." Durga Dutt thereupon directed the maternal uncle of the witness to ask the Bahuasin, and said:—"Whatever decrees there are on me, she also ought to pay." The person so directed went to the Bahuasin, and related every thing to her. The Bahuasin said, "I know nothing. What is proper may be done." Durga Dutt, on hearing this, informed Mr. Duff that the deed would be executed by both of them. The witness denied that the Bahuasin had any independent legal advice.

This is substantially the evidence of Amarendra Singh; and whatever difficulty there may be in accepting the whole of that evidence, this at least is clear that the lady did not have any independent advice and that she executed the document because she was asked to do so by her husband, or this part of the evidence of Amarendra Singh remains unchallenged and uncontradicted.

The defendant's version of what took place in connection with the transaction is as follows:—Durga Dutt Singh accompanied by his son Amarendra Singh came and saw the Maharajah and said, "I owe you money, but I am unable to pay it now. So I want to execute a mortgage-bond for the whole amount." The Maharajah asked him what property he wanted to mortgage. He said that he would mortgage Laheri. Balbhadra Misser, a senior mosahib of the Maharajah, thereupon said that Durga Dutt had already executed a farzi deed in respect of that property in favour of his wife. To this Durga Dutt said: "This is true. But the property is mine, but I have actually executed the farzi deed. This should not stand in the way as I and my wife would jointly execute the mortgage." The Maharajah thought over the matter and said that he was agreeable if there was a joint execution of the document by Durga Dutt and his wife.

It is not necessary for me to say which of the two versions is true. It is sufficient for me to point out that, whether the suggestion that a mortgage-bond should be executed to cover the debt proceeded from the Maharajah or from Durga Dutt, the parties are agreed that the whole of the negotiation was conducted by Durga Dutt without any reference to his wife, and that her consent was assumed rather than taken, and that, if her consent was at all taken, it was taken as a matter of form, and that no opportunity was given to her to consult her interest in the matter. It is, in my opinion, not open to doubt, that her consent was obtained by pressure through her husband, and without independent advice.

In these circumstances the question arises, whether a Court of Equity will give effect to the argument advanced on behalf of the Maharajah that the Bahuasin consented to her husband mortgaging her property for his personal benefit. In Turnbull & Co. v. Duval (40), Lord Lindley said as follows:—"Whether the security could be upheld if the only ground for impeaching it was that Mrs. Duval had no independent advice has not really to be determined. Their Lordships are not prepared to say it could not. But there is an additional and even stronger ground for impeaching it. It is in their Lordships' opinion quite clear that Mrs. Duval was pressed by her husband to sign and did sign, the document, which was very different from what she supposed it to be, and a document of the true nature of which she had no conception. It is impossible to hold that Campbell or Turnbull & Co., are unaffected by such pressure and ignorance." In Bank of Montreal v. Stuart (41), the evidence was summed up in these words by Lord Macnaghten: "The evidence is clear that in all these transactions Mrs. Stuart, who was a confirmed invalid, acted in passive obedience to her husband's directions. She had no will of her own. Nor had she any means of forming an independent judgment even if she had desired to do so." Upon this evidence the House of Lords had no hesitation in refusing to support the transaction by which Mrs. Stuart gave her own properties as securities for advance made by the Bank to her husband. Other cases may be cited; but it is not necessary to pursue the subject. In my opinion, "consent" has not been proved as a fact. If, however, it is to be inferred from the circumstances thas she was a party to the mortgage-bond, I have no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that a Court of Equity will disregard that consent, having regard to the fact that the Bahuasin, an illiterate pirdánashin lady, acted in passive obedience to her husband's direction, not having a will of her own, nor having any means of forming an independent judgment, even if she had desired to do so.

(40) (1902) A. C. 429; 71 L. J. P. C. 84; 87 L. T. 154; 18 T. L. R. 521.

(41) (1911) A. C. 120; 80 L. J. P. C. 75; 103 L. T. 641; 27 T. L. R. 117.

I now come to the text of Yajnavalkya, which, in my opinion, creates no difficulty whatever. The text is as follows:—"A husband is not liable to make good the property of his wife, taken by him in a famine, or for the performance of a duty, or during illness or while under restraint." The conditions which would enable Durga Dutt to deal with the property of his wife, were not present and the Maharajah was aware that those conditions were not present.

The only other text on this point is that of Katyayana who declares that "money taken by a man from his wife, for performing some imperative duty when he has no means of doing so, shall not be re-paid." The text has no application, and it is not necessary to pursue the point.

In my opinion, the subject-matter of the gift was under the Hindu Law heritable but inalienable except under circumstances which were not present and if the terms of the gift did not confer on the Bahuasin the right to alienate the property, the plaintiffs as the heirs of the Bahuasin, are entitled to succeed in the action. This brings me to the question whether the Bahuasin took an alienable interest under the terms of the gift.

Now in construing the heba-bil-ewaz executed by Durga Dutt in favour of his wife, we are bound to proceed on the assumption that a Hindu knows that, as a general rule, women do not take absolute estates of inheritance which they are enabled to alienate. This was laid down by the Judicial Committee in Moulvie Mohamed Shumsool Hooda v. Shewukram (42) and repeated by their Lordships in Radha Prasad Mullick v. Ranee Mani Dassee (43). This does not mean that where there are words of sufficient amplitude conveying in the terms of the gift itself the fullest rights of ownership, including the power to alienate, the Court will refuse to construe the deed of gift so as to deny to the donee the reght to alienate. But I think that in construing a deed of gift executed by a Hindu husband in favour of his wife, the Court would be right in leaning towards a construction which is in consonance with the ordinary notions and wishes of the Hindus with respect to devolution of property and in harmony with the law by which the parties are governed. The ordinary notions and wishes of Hindus are well-known and have been recoganized by the Judicial Committee in the cases to which I have referred. In regard to the law by which the parties are governed, I have already expressed my opinion that the Mithila Law recognizes that immoveable property taken as a gift by a wife from her husband is inalienable except for purposes which may be denominated "necessary purposes."

The question, then is, to quote the language of Lord Buckmaster in Ramachandra Rao v. Ramachandra Rao. (44) has the donor made use of words of sufficient amplitude to convey in the terms of the gift itself the fullest rights of ownership, including the power to alienate? It is not necessary that there should be an express declaration to that effect, but it must follow, as a matter of construction, that something more has been granted than what the law would give, —that in fact the fullest rights of ownership, including the power to alienate, have been conveyed.

I have set out the document at page 42 of the judgment and it is not necessary to set it out again. It is conceded that there is no express declaration to the effect that the Bahuasin would have the power to alienate; but it is contended that there are various expressions in the grant itself which suggest the inference that the fullest rights of ownership were conveyed to the Bahuasin.

(42) 22 W. R 409; 14 B. L. R. 226; 2 I. A. 7; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 405 (P. C.).

(43) 35 C. 896; 10 Bom. L. R. 604; 12 C. W. N. 729; 18 M. L. J. 287; 5 A. L. J. 460; 8 C. L. J. 48 (P. C.).

(44) 67 Ind. Cas. 408; 45 M. 320 at p. 328; 30 M. L. T. 154; 26 C. W. N. 713; 35 C. L. J. 545; 16 L. W. 1; (1922) M. W. N. 359; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 80; 20 A. L. J. 684; 43 M. L J. 78; 24 Bom. L. R. 963; 49 I. A. 129 (P. C.).

It was argued that the donor, having described himself as a malik and having conferred all his zemindari rights upon his wife, has said as plainly as he could that she should have the power to exercise the fullest rights of ownership. The argument is an attractive one, but it is necessary to consider the passage upon which the argument is founded. That passage is as follows:—"Having taken Rs. 41,532, I have made heba-bil-ewaz to my wife of my share of 7 annas $8\frac{3}{4}$ gandas situate in Taluka Laheri .....with trees, fruit bearing and non-fruit bearing and ahar and pokur and reservoirs and tank and cutcha and pucca wells and sair and salt sair and houses occupied by tenants and all may zemindari rights which up to now have been in my possession without the co-partnership of any one in possession." Mr. Hasan Imam's argument is that the words, "zemindari rights" mean rights over the zemindari and that as the rights of the donor over the zemindari were absolute, nothing short of an absolute estate were by these words granted to the Bahuasin. With great respect, I am unable to assent to the argument. Here general words — "zemindari rights" — follow an enumeration of specific things—"trees, fruit bearing and non-fruit bearing, and ahar and pokur, and reservoirs and tanks and cutcha and pucca wells and sair and salt sair and houses occupied by tenants"—which undoubtedly have some common characteristic which constitutes them a genus, and the general words can be properly regarded as in the nature of a sweeping clause designed to guard against accidental omissions. That being so, the rule of ejusdem generis will apply and the general words will be restricted to things of the same nature as those which have been already mentioned. The expression "zemindari rights", in my opinion, means rights to specific properties of the same nature as those specified and not rights of a zemindar in the properties specified. If there was any doubt as to this interpretation, the words which precede and the words which follow remove that doubt. The document says: "I am making a heba-bil-ewaz." Now in respect of what properties? The grantor enumerates the specific properties and ends with the sweeping clause, "all my zemindari rights" and he puts the matter beyond doubt by adding the words, "which up to now have been in my possession without the co-partnership of any one." Now I can undestand a heba-bil-ewaz of specific properties; but I do not understand a heba-bil-ewaz of an abstract right, the right of a proprietor to alienate the properties. Nor is it possible to speak of an abstract right as being in the possession of the donor without the co-partnership of any one. In my opinion, the full description of what was intended to be conveyed shows conclusively that the expression "zemindari rights" means rights or title to properties constituting the zemindari, those properties being of the same nature as those already specified.

It was next contended that a gift by a husband to his wife generation after generation,—ba farzandan, naslan bad naslan—carries with it the right to alienate. Now I entirely agree that these words in the absence of anything showing a contrary intention pass a general estate of inheritance according to Hindu Law. This is the primary significance of these words, which denote heritability and connote an estate of unlimited duration. I also agree that the right of alienation, speaking broadly is a necessary part of the ownership of an estate of inheritance. Hence there is a secondary significance of those words, which denote an absolute estate and connote alienability. A grant of an estate to a person "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan" is a grant of an estate of inheritance. An estate of inheritance is a heritable estate. Therefore an estate granted to a person "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan" is an absolute and alienable estate. If I am right in this view, then the words "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan" are apt for conferring an estate of inheritance and, therefore, an absolute and alienable estate, not an estate of inheritance and an absolute and alienable estate.

Now it is quite true that, both in this country and in England, the right of free disposition is generally inherent in an estate of inheritance but the holder of such an estate might be prevented by personal incapacity from exercising the right of alienation; and a restraint on alienation might be imposed by family custom or local law. For instance, an infant, though holding an estate of inheritance, is not permitted to exercise the right of alienation. So, in England, wives married before 1883, could not dispose of any property to which their title accrued before that year. So also, where the personal enjoyment of the property is essential to the performance of certain public duties, no alienation of such property can be made. So also as I have already said, a restraint on alienation might be imposed by family custom or local law. If I am right in this view, then an estate of inheritance would not carry with it the right of alienation, when such an estate is conveyed to a person suffering under a personal incapacity or subject to a family or local custom prohibiting alienation. If this be so, then clearly a right of alienation is not necessarily inherent in an estate of inheritance, and a grant of property to a person "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan" would not necessarily give that person the right to alienate the property, though these words would confer on him an estate of inheritance. For instance, a grant of property to a ghatwal "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan" to enable him to perform certain public duties would not confer on him the right to alienate the property. I arrive at the conclusion that these words "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan"—are generally sufficient to confer an estate of inheritance; that a right of alienation is generally inherent in an estate of inheritance; but that, as the incidents of every estate in land may be affected by the personal incapacity of the holder for the time being, or, by the existence of the personal law by which the holder may be governed, it may be shown in any particular instance that the grant of an estate of inheritance did not carry with it the right of alienation.

Now the personal law by which the Bahuasin was governed prohibited her from alienating the immoveable property which she took as a gift from her husband. Bachaspati Misra has laid down in distinct terms that though a woman can dispose of moveable property which has been given to her by her husband, she can never dispose of immoveable property. In my opinion, the ordinary incident of an estate of inheritance was so affected by the personal law by which the Bahuasin was governed that in this case the grant of such an estate as evidence by the words "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan" did not carry with it the right of alienation.

I will now consider some of the cases on the subject; but I may begin by giving the opinion of Mr. Mayne on the point. "Gifts by a husband to his wife of immoveable property" says Mr. Mayne in his Hindu Law "even though accompanied by express words of inheritance, are not alienable unless distinctly declared to be so. It is a quality of such gifts that though they descend to wife's heirs, she cannot alien them" (8th Edition, para. 397, page 542).

I am informed that this passage is omitted in the latest edition of the book; but the latest edition is not by Mr. Mayne. The only criticism that can legitimately be directed against this passage is that there is a suggestion in it that there is no power of alienation unless that power is expressly conferred. This would not be correct; nor do I think that Mr. Mayne has so stated the proposition. But the passage is valuable as indicating that an estate of inheritance granted by a husband to his wife does not carry with it the right of alienation.

In Bhujanga Rau v. Ramayamma (45), the Madras High Court held that "Where property is given to a Hindu lady by her husband, and the gift is expressed only in such terms as create a heritable estate, it must be taken that it was the intention of the donor that she should acquire such an interest as the personal law of the parties recognizes to be created by the transaction." The gift in that case was by a Hindu to his wife "putra poutra paryantan", which expression has the same significance as that conveyed by the expression "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan." The decision was followed in Nunnu Meah v. Krishnasami (46), but was disapproved of in Muthuvenkatanarayanan Chetti v. Athipanduranga Naidu (47). In the latter case, however, the question did not fall to be considered as a power of alienation was expressly conferred on the wife. It was also disapproved of in Ramachandra Rao v. Ramachanhra Rao (48), where Sheshagiri Ayyar, J., considered that it was inconsistent with the conclusions of the Judicial Committee in Surajmoni v. Rabi Nath Ojha (49). In delivering his judgment that learned Judge referred to the terms of s. 8 of the Transfer of Property Act and held that, unless, a different intention is expressed or neces-

(45) 7 M. 387; 8 Ind. Jur. 238; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 853.
(46) 14 M. 274; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 192.
(47) 51 Ind. Cas. 217; (1919) M. W. N. 103.
(48) 52 Ind. Cas. 94; 42 M. 283; 36 M. L. J. 306.
(49) 30 A. 84; 5 A. L. J. 67; 12 C. W. N. 231; 18 M. L. J. 7; 10 Bom. L. R. 59; 7 C. L. J. 131; 3 M. L. T. 144; 35 I. A. 17 (P. C.).

sarily implied, a transfer of property by a husband to his wife passes forthwith to the wife all the interest which the husband is capable of passing in the property or in the legal incidents thereof; and the learned Judge said: "This is what was laid down in Surajmani v. Rabi Nath Ojha (49)."

Now if this is what was laid down in Surajmani's case (49), then it is obvious that Bhujanga Rau v. Ramayamma (45) can no longer be followed. The decision of the High Court in Ramchandra Rao v. Ramchandra Rao (48) was, however, reversed by the Judicial Committee on another point [see Ramachandra Rao v. Ramachandra Rao (44)]; but their Lordships thought it their duty to state in clear terms what was actually decided by them in Surajmani's case (49), as there was some misapprehension as to the effect of that decision: "In the case referred to," said their Lordships "when originally heard before the High Court, Surajmani v. Rabi Nath (50), it had been stated that under the Hindu Law in the case of a gift of immoveable property to a Hindu widow, she had no power to alienate unless such power was expressly conferred. The decision of this Board did no more than establish that that proposition was not accurate, and that it was possible by the use of words of sufficient amplitude to convey in the terms of the gift itself the fullest rights of ownership, including, of course, the power to alienate, which the High Court had thought required to be added by express declaration. In that case, it is true that there is some comparison drawn between the gift to a widow and a gift to a person not under disability, but that was not the foundation of the decision which depended entirely upon the wide meaning attributed to the words in which the gift to the widow was clothed. More recent decisions of this Board in Sasiman Chowdhurain v. Shib Narayan Chowdhury (51), and Bhaidas Shivdas v. Bai Golab (52) do nothing but repeat this same proposition in other words." I think that it is perfectly clear that their Lordships did not decide in Surajmani's case (49) that, to quote the words of Sheshagiri Ayyar, J., "unless there is an expressed or implied qualification to the contrary, the donor must be deemed to have conveyed all that he was possessed of in the property granted."

The decisions of the Indian Courts on this point afford an interesting study. Moulvi Mohamed Shumsool Hooda v. Shewukram (42) was decided by the Judicial Committee in 1874. The rule of construction formulated in that decision gradually came to be treated as a rule of law, and a tendency appeared in the decisions to treat gifts by Hindu husbands to their wives as conveying only a limited estate, unless a power of alienation was conferred by express declaration. This tendency found its fullest expression in Surajmani's case (50) which was decided by the Allahabad High Court in 1903. An appeal was taken to the Judicial Committee which decided in 1907 that the expression "malik wa khud ikhtiyar" imported full proprietary rights, and that, in order to cut down the full proprietary rights that the word imported, something must be found in the context to qualify it. Now this was all that was decided by the Judicial Committee in Surajmani's case (49); but it was thought that the decision came to this that a gift by a Hindu husband to his wife should be construed as conveying an absolute estate, unless there was something in the context to qualify it. But, as the Judicial Committee has now plainly intimated to the Indian Courts, it decided nothing of the kind. Their Lordships found an expression in the grant malik wa khud ikhtiyar—which they construed as importing full proprietary rights. The decision, therefore, rested on the view that the grantor had used words of sufficient amplitude to convey in the terms of the gift itself the fullest rights of ownership. It is obvious that there is no conflict between the decision in Surajmani's case (49) and the decision in Bhujanga Rau v. Ramayamma (45). In my opinion, the latter case was correctly decided, and there is no reason why we should not follow it.

I should like to say a word about s. 8 of the Transfer of Property Act on which Sheshagiri Ayyar, J. strongly relied in Ramachandra Rao v. Ramachandra Rao (48). That section provides that unless a different intention is expressly or necessarily implied, a transfer of property passes forthwith to the transferee all the interest which the transferor is then capable of passing in the property, and in the legal incidents thereof. But s. 8, which is in the Second Chapter of the Act, must be read subject to the provision in s. 2 which provides that nothing in the Second Chapter of the Act shall be deemed to affect any rule of Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist Law. Now it is a rule of Hindu Law as it is understood in Mithila that a gift by a Hindu to his wife does not carry with it the right to alienate. In my opinion, therefore, we cannot have recourse to s. 8 in construing the gift in this case.

(50) 25 A. 351; A. W. N. (1903) 66.

(51) 66 Ind. Cas. 193; 49 I. A. 25; 26 C. W. N. 425; 15 L. W. 434; 42 M. L. J. 492; 30 M. L. T. 242; 20 A. L. J. 362; 35 C. L. J. 427; 24 Bom. L. R. 576; (1922) M. W. N. 368; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 63; 1 Pat. 305; 3 P. L. T. 133 (P. C.).

(52) 65 Ind. Cas. 974; 49 I. A. 1; 26 C. W. N. 129; 15 L. W. 412; 20 A. L. J. 289; 42 M. L. J. 385; 35 C. L. J. 314; 24 Bom. L. R. 551; 46 B. 153; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 193 (P. C.).

In the Tagore case [Ganendra Mohan Tagore v. Upendra Mohan Tagore (53)], Sir Barnes Peacock said as follows:—"It is certainly true, as stated by the learned Judge, that a gift to a man and his sons and grandsons, or to a man and sons and sons' sons, would, in the absence of anything showing a contrary intention, pass a general estate of inheritance according to Hindu Law. I believe the words usually used in Bengal are putra poutradikrama and in the Upper Provinces naslan bad naslan, the literal meaning of the former being to sons and grandsons, etc., in due succession, and of the latter in regular descent or succession." If I may say so with the utmost respect this is a very accurate statement of what those expressions import. The opinion of Sir Barnes Peacock was accepted by the Judicial Committee as the basis of their decision in Ramlal Mookerji v. Secretary of State for India (54). A Hindu died leaving a widow, a daughter's daughter and a brother. By his Will, he left his properties to his daughter's daughter in these terms:—"If no daughter or daughter's son of mine should be living at the time of the death of my wife then my grand-daughter (daughter's daughter) shall become the proprietress of my property and shall remain in undisputed possession thereof putra poutradikrame". The question raised in the appeal turned upon the construction of the terms of the gift to the daughter's daughter. Their Lordships quoted with approval the passage from the judgment of Sir Barnes Peacock in the Tagore case (53) and proceeded to say as follows:—"The correctness of these observations was not questioned in the judgment on appeal. It was not denied at the Bar that these words, though undoubtedly importing the male sex in their primary signification, would, in the case of a gift to a male, be read as words of general inheritance, and would include female as well as male heirs, where by the law, his estate would descend to females." Stopping here for a moment, it is to be noted that the force of these words may be profoundly affected by the law by which the grantee may be governed, and that this is what their Lordships expressly decided. This is exactly what was decided by the Madras High Court in Bhujanga Rau v. Ramayamma (45). Their Lordships continued as follows:—"Their Lordships feel no greater difficulty in applying them to the female heirs of a female, where, by law, the estate would descend to such heirs, and see no sufficient reason for narrowing the construction of words which have been often recognized in India as apt for conferring an estate of inheritance." If there was nothing else in the judgment of their Lordships, it could not be contended that there is anything in the decision to encourage the argument that these words are regarded as apt for conferring an absolute estate. Mr. Hasan Imam, however, strongly, relies upon the next passage in the judgment which is as follows:—"They are of opinion that cl. (7), if it stood alone, would confer an absolute estate on Hari Dasi (the grand-daughter) upon the death of the widow."

Now, in my opinion, the decision of the Judicial Committee cannot be regarded as an authority for the proposition that the words, putra poutradikrame or naslan bad naslan, import, of their own force, an absolute estate. Their Lordships have already said that the force of these words may be qualified by the personal law of the grantee. Now, what is the actual decision? The exact signification of these words has already been considered; and their Lordships have said very definitely that these words are recognized "as apt for conferring an estate of inheritance." But then, in the passage which followed, their Lordships said that the terms of the gift conferred an absolute estate on Haridasi. And so they did, unless there was something in the personal law by which Haridasi was governed (which there was not) which prevented her from alienating the property which she got from her grandfather. As I have said before, an estate of inheritance is prima facie an absolute estate; and Haridasi took an absolute estate, unless she suffered from a personal incapacity or was subject to a personal law which imposed a restriction on her right to alienate the property. Obviously there was no personal incapacity which affected her in any way; and the personal law by which she was governed imposed no restriction on her right to alienate: (see Dayabhaga 4-1-23, Setlur, Part 2, page 32).

(53) 4 B. L. R. O. C. 103 at p. 182.
(54) 7 C. 304; 8 I. A. 46; 10 C. L. R. 349; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 225; 5 Ind. Jur. 327; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 744 (P. C.).

The case of Lalit Mohun Singh Roy v. Chukkun Lal Roy (55) does not carry us any further. A Hindu testator who had no children devised his estate to his nephew in these terms:—"If no children are born to me...then the eldest son born of the womb of my third sister Srimati Kshiroda, my nephew Sriman Lalit Mohon Roy..... becoming, on my death, my sthulabhishikto and becoming owner (malik) of all my estate and properties, etc., shall, remaining my sthulabhishikto, obtaining the management of the Iswarshibas.....keeping the estate intact, enjoy with son, grandson and so on in succession, the proceeds of my estate." The question raised in the appeal was whether Lalit Mohan took an absolute heritable and alienable estate, or whether there was an attempt by the testator to tie up the estate for ever, in which case the gift would fail, subject to a life-estate in favour of Lalit Mohan. Their Lordships said as follows:—"The words 'become owner (malik) of all my estates and properties' would, unless the context indicated a different meaning, be sufficient for that purpose even without the words 'enjoy with son, grandson and so on in succession' which latter words are frequently used in Hindu Wills and have acquired the force of technical words conveying a heritable and alienable estate." Their Lordships further said:—"Their Lordships do not find, any express prohibition in this Will against alienation of the estates, the beneficial enjoyment of which is given to the devisees, as there is of the estates appropriated to religious and charitable purposes. If there were such a clause added to a gift of a heritable estate, it would be repugnant and void."

I have no doubt whatever that their Lordships were dealing with the particular case before them, and not laying down a rule applicable to all cases. As I have said before, a heritable estate is prima facie alienable, and a clause prohibiting alienation added to a gift of a heritable estate would be prima facie void. In the case before their Lordships, the grantee took a heritable estate and, therefore, an alienable estate, because he was not affected by any personal incapacity nor subject to a personal law which imposed a restriction on his power of alienation. But supposing a gift was made to a person naslan bad nalsan on condition of rendering services of a public nature? If the wide interpretation sought to be placed on the decision of the Judicial Committee were to be accepted as correct, then obviously the grantee would have the right to alienate the lands. But exactly the opposite was held by the Judicial Committee in Nilmoni Singh Deo v. Bakranath Singh (56). Although the point is not made clear in the decision of their Lordships, there is no doubt that the grant was "naslan bad naslan". I may usefully refer to the argument of Counsel on this point. The argument was put as follows:—"Again it was to be noticed that it did not follow that, because the Government might disallow the succession of an unfit person, the jagir could not be hereditary. It was hereditary and because it was hereditary, it was alienable. Grants held 'naslan bad naslan' butnan bad butnan', as this jagir was, were transferable by gift, sale, or otherwise, by the terms of Regulations XXXVII of 1793 and XII of 1805" (see page 13*). Their Lordships found that the jagir was hereditary, but came to the conclusion that it was inalienable. I take the basis of the decision to be that where the personal enjoyment of the property is essential to the performance of certain public duties, no alienation of such property can be made, although the grant may be hereditary. This is one instance where the words 'naslan bad naslan' did not convey an alienable estate, though they did convey an heritable estate. Other instances may be cited; for instance in Raj Ramgarh, there is a well-understood custom that jagirs are resumable on failure of heirs male in the male line, though the grant may be to a person and his putra poutradic:

(55) 24 C. 834; 24 I. A. 76; 1 C. W. N. 387; 7 Sar.P. C. J. 155; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1224 (P. C.).

(56) 9 C. 187; 9 I. A. 104; 5 Shome L. R. 68; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 335; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 777 (P. C.).

*Page of 9 C.—[Ed.]

see Ram Narayan Singh v. Ram Saran Lal (57). The Calcutta High Court, relying upon the decision of the Judicial Committee in Ramlal Mookerjee v. Secretary of State for India (54) and in Lalit Mohan Singh Roy v. Chukkun Lal Roy (55) had come to the conclusion that those words imported an estate of inheritance. The decision of the High Court was, however, reversed by the Judicial Committee, so also the force of the words, "putra poutradic" may give way to a family custom. This was held by the Judicial Committee in Ekradeshwar Singh v. Janeshwari Bahuasin (58). The grant in that case was to a lady and in these terms:—"You and your sons and grandsons, etc., (putra poutradic) shall cultivate or get cultivated the mouzah aforesaid, and enjoy the usufruct thereof yourself." Their Lordships held that these words as used in the sanad must be regarded as words of limitation, consistent with the custom, and not as words of general inheritance.

I have laboured this point at unnecessary length because it was contended at the Bar that the decision of their Lordships in the two cases to which I have referred conclude the matter, and that the words, 'naslan bad naslan' or words having the same signification, wherever used, must be regarded as conferring an estate of inheritance with power of alienation. In those cases, these words undoubtedly did confer estates of inheritance with power of alienation; but I am unable to read those decisions as establishing a fixed and unalterable rule applicable in every case, although the grantee may be prevented by personal incapacity from exercising the right of alienation, and although the personal law governing the grantee may impose a restriction, In Ekradeshwar Singh v. Janeshwari Bahuasin (58), their Lordships held that those words must be read as consistent with the custom and not as words of general inheritance. I am of opinion that, in this case, those words must be read as consistent with the personal law by which the Bahuasin was governed. That law imposed a restriction on her right to alienate the lands, and reading the words, "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan," as consistent with the Mithila Law, I must hold that these words, although they conveyed to her an estate of inheritance, did not confer on her the right to alienate the property.

It was lastly contended that it ought to be held, on a construction of the covenant for title, that an alienable interest was conveyed to the Bahuasin. The covenant is in these terms: "I, the declarant or my heirs and representatives (quam moquaiman) shall have no right or concern in demanding the subject of the heba or the consideration money from the aforesaid Musammat or her heirs and representatives. Should I, the executant my heirs and representatives make any claim or put forward any demand in respect of the gift properties or the consideration thereof, the same will be deemed null and void." It was contended that by the use of the words "heirs and representatives," the grantor clearly intimated that he had conferred the fullest proprietary rights on the grantee including the right to alienate the property. In my opinion the argument is without substance. I have expressed my opinion that in the actual dispositive words used by the grantor there is nothing to indicate that an alienable interest was conveyed to the grantee. That being so, can a covenant of this nature be construed as in any way enlarging the grant? In my opinion, the covenant secured the grantee in the possession of that which was previously granted, and gave an additional remedy, namely, an action for damages, if the grantee was deprived of that which was previously professed to be granted, but did not enlarge that which was previously granted: see Leech v. Schweder (59), and Davis v. Town Properties Investment Corporation (60). In Nottidge v. Dering (61), Cozens Hardy, M. R. said as follows:—"Covenants for title are really ancillary to the assurance of the property, and ought not, in the absence of clear words, to be extended so as to confer a larger estate than is expressly assured." This is a sufficient answer to the argument; but I think the argument must fail on

(57) 50 Ind. Cas. 1; 29 C. L. J. 332; 36 M. L. J. 344; 17 A. L. J. 398; 21 Bom. L. R. 597; 23 C. W. N. 866; 46 C. 683; (1919) M. W. N. 518; 26 M. L. T. 207 (P. C.).

(58) 29 Ind. Cas. 417; 42 C. 582; 18 C. W. N. 1249; 27 M. L. J. 373; 16 M. L. T. 382; 1 L. W. 863; (1914) M. W. N. 807; 12 A. L. J. 1217; 21 C. L. J. 9; 17 Bom. L. R. 18; 41 I. A. 275 (P. C.).

(59) (1874) 9 Ch. 463; 43 L. J. Ch. 487; 30 L. T. 586; 22 W. R. 633.

(60) (1903) 1 Ch. 797; 72 L. J. Ch. 389; 51 W. R. 417; 88 L. T. 665.

(61) (1910) 1 Ch. 297; 79 L. J. Ch. 439; 102 L. T. 145.

broader grounds. The estate which was expressly granted to the Bahuasin, was an estate of inheritance, that is to say, an estate of unlimited duration. Now whether a power of alienation is incident to such an estate must depend in my view, upon the personal law of the person who happens, for the time being, to be the holder of the estate. If the holder happened to be a person who is not subject to a law prohibiting him from alienating the land, clearly he could exercise the power of alienation, and the covenant would operate so as to prevent the grantor, his heirs and representatives from "demanding the subject of the heba" from the alienee. This is how I construe the covenant in question.

Mr. Hasan Imam referred to Ram Narain Singh v. Peary Bhugut (62) in support of his argument on this point. That was a case of a gift of immoveable property by a husband to his wife. The grantor stated in distinct terms that he was conveying all his rights to his wife without exception and that neither he nor his heirs shall at any time have any claim either to the property or to the price or value of it. The Calcutta High Court held that, looking at the fact that the husband divested himself of all his rights, and that he prohibited his descendants from claiming the property or its price, the gift was a gift "out and out." I do not see how the decision throws any light on the subject. The decision proceeded on the terms of the dispositive words used in the gift, and no other conclusion could be reached on the terms of the grant.

I have anxiously considered the terms of the hebanama and I am of opinion that the grantor has not, to quote the words of Lord Buckmaster, "made use of words of sufficient amplitude conveying in the terms of the gift itself the fullest rights of ownership, including the power to alienate." It must be remembered that the language used by Hindus in instruments relating to grants of immoveable property is very often merely descriptive of the course of legal succession. A grant of immoveable property by a Hindu husband to his wife is heritable under the Mithila Law. The words used by Durga Dutt do no more than describe the course of succession under the law by which he was governed. Such a grant is inalienable except under circumstances which are not present here. Durga Dutt was presumably aware of the restriction placed by law on the right of the wife to alienate immoveable property received by her as a gift from her husband. It is not disputed that Durga Dutt could, by use of apt words, convey the fullest rights of proprietorship in the property to his wife. The question is, has he done so? I have come to the conclusion that, reading the whole hebanama consistently with the law by which the parties were governed there is no indication in the terms of the gift that the fullest rights of proprietorship, including the right to alienate the property, were conferred on the Bahuasin. That being so, the plaintiffs are entitled to succeed in the action.

My learned brother and I wish to acknowledge the assistance we have received in this case from Counsel and Vakils on both sides. We in this Court are accustomed to get every assistance from the leading Counsel engaged in the case; and that assistance was ungrudgingly given. But we would especially like to express our appreciation of the industry and learning shown by Mr. Lachmi Kanta Jha himself a Mithila Brahman in his wide survey of the Hindu Law texts.

I would allow the appeal, set aside the judgment and the decree of the Court below, and give the plaintiffs a decree for possession with mesne profits which must now be assessed in the usual way. The plaintiffs are also entitled to their costs both in this Court and in the Court below.

As my learned brother and I differ in opinion on two points, both being points of law, namely, first, whether the present suit is maintainable by the plaintiffs, and whether it is barred by limitation and, secondly, whether on the interpretation of the hiba-bil-ewaz the fullest rights of ownership including the power to alienate the property were conveyed by Babu Durga Dutt Singh to his wife, this appeal must be heard, in accordance with s. 98 of the Code, on these points only, by one or more of the other Judges of this Court. The papers must be laid before the Chief Justice for the necessary orders.

Foster, J.—The following pedigree and statements appended thereto which I gather from the plaint will explain some of the facts of this case.

(62) 9 C. 830; 13 C. L. R. 109; 8 Ind. Jur. 33; 4 Ind. Dec, (N. S.) 1202.

1. MAHARAJA MADHAB SINGH BAHADUR.

2. Maharaja Chattu Singh Bahadur.	3. Kirat Singh (had babuana properties Pargana Jabdi and purchased other properties including 16-annas Laheri)
4. Girdhari Singh.	5. Durga Dutt Singh, married to 6. Anuragin Kuer Bahuasin, plaintiffs.

I. No. 3 received from the Maharajah settlement of babuana properties in Parganah Jabdi and purchased (? inter alia) 16-annas Taluqa Laheri.

II. Nos. 4 and 5 partitioned Laheri, No. 5 getting as his separated share 7 annas 8 gandas 3 kauris share.

III. No. 5 made a gift of this Laheri share to No. 6 (1876).

IV. Nos. 5 and 6 executed a mortgage of the Laheri property in favour of No. 5's creditor to satisfy No. 5's debts (1890).

The plaintiffs, the eldest of whom was born about the year 1860, belong to a junior branch of the Darbhanga Raj family and are Mithila Brahmins. Their father Durga Dutt Singh after partition of babuana and other properties (which included Taluqa Laheri) in 1876 conveyed to his wife Musammat Anuragin Kuer, whom I shall call the Bahuasin, his share in Taluqa Laheri by way of heba-bil-ewaz. Whether this transaction was benami or genuine is an issue in this case. Plaintiffs say there was a complete change and transfer of ownership and possession, defendants say it was merely nominal. In 1890 Durga Dutt Singh, being in debt to the Maharaja to the extent of about Rs. 1,89,000 at the Maharaja's instance executed along with his wife a mortgage of the Laheri property aforementioned in favour of his creditor. The Maharaja had always been paying the land revenue of the babuana properties, and so a debt had accumulated. Whether this mortgage could affect the present plaintiffs' interest as heirs of the property is the main question in this case That the plaintiffs claim as heirs of their mother is stated in the plaint. In 1897 this mortgage was decreed, the Maharaja being plaintiff and Durga Dutt Singh and his wife defendants. In 1902 the whole interest in the Laheri property was sold in execution of the mortgage-decree and purchased by the Maharaja who is now defendant. In February 1904, the Bahuasin died, at a time when an application to set aside the sale made by her and her husband was pending; and her sons were at Durga Dutt's instance substituted as her heirs who had inherited the Laheri property. Two months or so later this application was rejected and the sale confirmed on the 2nd June 1904. In February 1906, the plaintiffs instituted Suit No. 19 of 1906, for a declaration of their title and confirmation of possession in Laheri, on the ground that the mortgage-bond was got by fraud without the knowledge of their mother the owner, and that the mortgage-decree was fraudulent. Durga Dutt Singh was pro forma defendant in this case; he died in July 1907. In June 1907 the plaintiffs withdrew the suit with permission to bring a fresh suit. On the 24th July 1918, the plaintiffs instituted the present suit. The cause of action in the previous plaint had been stated as having arisen in February 1906, when the frauds therein stated had been discovered. The cause of action in the present plaint is dated 16th December 1906, the delivery of possession to the Maharaja as auction-purchaser. The declarations sought in the plaint are that the property belonged to the plaintiffs' mother, and that Durga Dutt Singh had no right to execute the mortgage-bond: So the rights of the Bahuasin and the plaintiffs were not affected by the mortgage-suit, the decree, the sale and the delivery of possession. The plaintiffs pray for recovery of possession and mesne profits. It is important to note that there is no prayer for setting aside the mortgage-decree—seemingly because of limitation—and the word "fraud" does not occur in the statement of reliefs sought. It is also important to note that the plaintiffs sue not as reversionary heirs of their father, but as heirs of their mother, the position which in fact they had occupied in the execution proceedings. The present suit having been dismissed the plaintiffs are appealing and there is a cross-objection: all the important issues are thus re-opened.

It is obvious that the mortgage-decree obtained against Durga Dutt Singh and his wife must stand in this case as a fundamental fact. So long as the decree stands it must bind the heirs. The decree and the execution directed the sale of the whole interest—not of a life-estate or any restricted interest in the Laheri property—and the decree has been accordingly enforced in the sale. But the plaintiffs' case which does not deny these facts, is that the decree and the sale could pass only the Bahuasin's estate: It is urged that she had a heritable but not an alienable estate and she had no power to mortgage the whole estate so as to disinherit her heirs. The contention purports to be based upon the Mithila Law.

Before proceeding to consider the main issue I wish for convenience sake to take up the issue raised by the Maharaja defendant whether the heba-bil-ewaz of 1876, was benami. I have had the advantage of reading my learned brother's judgment on this point and I need not repeat his arguments, with every one of which I am in agreement. I find that the heba-bil-ewaz was not a benami transaction and that the issue has been correctly decided by the learned District Judge.

It yet remains to see what was the legal result of this heba-bil-ewaz of 1876. It appears to be that if Durga Dutt Singh wanted to grant an estate with restrictions on alienation, he need merely have executed a heba or a simple gift. By making a transfer in the form of a heba-bil-ewaz, which ordinarily carries the incidents of a sale, he must be taken to have intended the usual legal consequences of such a common form of transfer. I admit that in this argument I am paying more attention to form than substance; but so, I think did Babu Durga Dutt, whose intentions I am attempting to discover. He, a Mithila Brahmin of wealth, having some knowledge himself and no doubt numerous advisers within reach, must have known the difference between a heba and a heba-bil-ewaz. Why did he choose the latter expression instead of heba or the corresponding term in Hindi danpatra especially if he intended that his wife should take the property as a Mithila Hindu wife? Are we justified in thinking that so much of the document was a pure mistake? After a careful examination of all the expressions of the document, I can find none which clearly indicate a limited estate. It is noticeable that the document mentions that the property transferred is to pass into the possession of the Musammat and the produce thereof is to be enjoyed generation after generation: "And I, the executant, and my heirs and representatives neither have nor shall have any demand or dispute with respect to the gift properties or consideration thereof as against the said Musammat, her heirs and representatives." The adjectival word "gift" is in the original "Mahuba", a term which is used to describe properties transferred by either a heba or (as in this case) a heba-bil-ewaz. Now, the noticeable points are firstly that no mention is made of any specified heir such as a daughter or son, though such existed: the expressions of the document in this respect are such as might be used in a transfer to an utter stranger; secondly, as the learned Judge remarks "the use of words" warisan wa kaem mokamian, in respect of both the donor and the donee shows that the donor contemplated that the donee may have "kaem mokamian, i. e., representatives other than her heirs:" in the third place the passage quoted re-calls the case of Ram Narain Singh v. Peary Bhugut (62) and certainly supports the contention that this was an absolute transfer. No doubt the facts are not set out in this reported case, and at first sight the only question appears to have been whether the wife the donee took an estate of inheritance or for her lifetime. But the issue must have been also as to whether the gift conveyed an absolute estate ('a gift out and out'). For that is the conclusion arrived at, and the two Calcutta cases quoted dealt with what purported to be absolute alienations by a wife (devisee in one case, donee in the other). The issues governing those cases were whether she, the wife or widow, took an absolute and, therefore, freely alienable estate. The cases are Koonjbehari Dhur v. Premchand Dutt (63) and Srimati Pabitra Dasi v. Damudar Jana (64).

As I read the Privy Council decisions, they lay down uniformly the rule that the Courts should examine the documents of transfer with an eye to the ordinary Hindu's inclinations, he does not usually intend to make a wife absolute owner by a deed of transfer. In the earlier interpretations of this rule of the Privy Council the Courts went almost so far as to import a strong presumption that the grantee was to receive a limited estate, and it was held that something express is necessary to exclude what is tacitly implied. Expressum facit cessare tacitum. But I conceive that the rule adopted in modern times is that if by a construction of the document the grant of an absolute estate can reasonably be extracted there is no need to insist on an express and distinct grant of an absolute estate. Expressio eorum quæ tacite insunt nihil operatur. Express words are not essential; the fact that the donee is a mithila wife is not fundamental; it is to be seen if the words are of sufficient amplitude to convey an absolute estate: Ramachandra Rao v. Ramachandra Rao (44).

(63) 5 C. 681; 5 C. L. R. 561; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1043.

(64) 7 B. L. R. 697; 2 W. R. 397 note.

It appears from the pedigree and the statements given above quoted from the plaint that Mauza Laheri was (in spite of the recital in the heba-bil-ewaz) ancestral property held in co-parcenership by Durga Dutt and his sons. The gift of 1876, was made in the lifetime of some of the sons, but in the circumstances it must, I think, be held that the transfer, though effected by the father, was made by him as agent of the joint family who ratified and affirmed the transaction.

After a prolonged consideration of the document, I am disposed to think that this was the transfer of an absolute estate.

The heba-bil-ewaz was evidently, we see from its recital, rather an act of gratitude than a sale for value. In spite of its form, it seems to me to be reasonable to regard this transfer of the Laheri property as in substance a gift (dattam) within the meaning of the Hindu texts unless, of course, it be an absolute grant.

The learned Vakil for the appellants urges, that on the Mithila text, whatever immoveable property the husband grants to the wife, unless distinctly stated to be alienable, even though accompanied by express words of inheritance, cannot be alienated even with the consent of the husband. As he forcibly put it in his argument, so far as such property is concerned the husband is "as a dead man." The proposition is, of course, surprising, and it is unfortunate that it was not put forward in the plaint, for in a case like this evidence of local usage in Mithila tracts would have been of great value. My learned brother's discussion of the texts has entirely unsettled, my original impression that the Mithila Law had no divergence from the law of the other schools in regard to the alienation by a wife with her husband's consent of immoveable property granted to her by him in his lifetime. At the same time I am still impressed with some difficulties which do not amount to substantial doubts. As I have said, we have no evidence of local usage, a matter which is important when there is no authoritative text expressly and positively supporting the alleged Mithila rule. The rule is gathered by inference and is nowhere explicitly stated.

The ruling of the Madras Court, Bhujanga Rau v. Ramayamma (45) has been declared to be inconsistent with later Privy Council decisions and to be no longer law by the Editor of the 9th Edition of Mr. Mayne's Hindu Law (para. 397); but this statement is a marked departure from the 8th Edition. The case refers to alienations by the widow, not by a wife with her husband's consent. The form of alternative proposition in the Mitakshara School would I conceive be different from the form of alternative proposition in the Mithila School though both might be expressed loosely as "if not an absolute estate, inalienable." But it would have to be understood that in the Mitakshara Law the word "inalienable," in such a context would mean "inalienable without the husband's consent" and in Mithila Law "inalienable without legal necessity." That is how I understand the Smriti Chandrika (Ch. IX, s. 1, verses 13 and 14 and s. 2, verse 4 et passim) in regard to Mitakshara Law as applied in Madras. But on the whole I arrive at the conclusion that the rule that the wife must preserve the corpus of the property while her husband lives, spending only the income subject to his permission, and after his death must preserve it for her heirs, is fairly deducible from the Mithila texts; and I defer in this matter to my learned brother's arguments.

Reverting to the question whether the gift was absolute, as I understand Bhaujanga Rao's case (45), it laid down that gifts by a husband to his wife of immoveable property even though accompanied by express words of inheritance are not alienable by her unless distinctly stated to be so, though they descend to the wife's heirs. I think this is put forward as a rule of Mitakshara Law and I take the meaning to be that such a gift even though it creates an estate of inheritance does not free the wife in respect of alienation from her husband's tutelage, or after his death from the limitations of a widow's estate, unless the matter is made distinctly clear. I am not convinced that such a demand for a distinct statement in the document could be applied in Mithila Law where the husband's tutelage can never exist in such circumstances and the grantor would (on one of the alternative constructions) be rendering his property absolutely inalienable. In Mithila Law the alternative is ordinarily between absolute alienability, and absolute inalienability where there are no special limitations reserving control by some one. So, I am not disposed to import the rule of Bhujanga Rao's case (45), as I construe it, into the present case. A husband, karta and father under Mithila Law would be taking a very serious step in making such a gift to his wife as is suggested on the plaintiffs' side: he would be surrendering his authority and control, and tying up the property for an indefinite period. In my opinion the hebabil-ewaz of 1876, was an absolute transfer, and I find that the intention, deducible from its expressions, was an absolute transfer. The finding is pertinent at this point because it shows why I think that the special rules of Mithila Law as to absolute inalienability remain outside the facts of the present case.

I now come to the questions that have arisen in connection with the execution of the mortgage-bond. In the first suit, it was the plaintiffs' case that the mortgage was fraudulently executed and that the Bahuasin never gave her consent at all. The discovery of this fraud was stated to have occurred in February 1906, (though the documentary and oral evidence show that three of the plaintiffs had a close connection with the document evidencing the transaction). The only evidence to suggest undue influence—which is all that is now asserted—is the statement that Babu Durga Dutt Singh when he was being pressed by the Maharaja sent a message to the Bahuasin through her own relative Raghunandan Jha (a very important fact in itself) that she ought to meet the decrees against her husband. On this point as to undue influence I entirely agree with the learned District Judge who finds that there was no undue influence and that the lady had her uncle's independent advice. The matter is not in fact within the legal scope of the present case.

The position of the plaintiffs is anomalous. From the facts set out in paras. 1 to 3 of the plaint (the details of which I have quoted at the commencement of this judgment), I gather that Taluqa Laheri was ancestral property. In para. 17 of the plaint the relief (E) is stated: "that should the Court for any reason hold that the said deed of gift was only a colourable transaction, the Court may be pleased to hold that the said mortgage-bond, the decree passed thereon in the absence of the plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 4 and the proceeding in execution thereof affected if at all, only the right, title and interest of the said Babu Durga Dutt Singh and not that of the said plaintiffs; and the said plaintiffs are entitled to recover possession of their legitimate share in the disputed property and with this declaration the Court may be pleased to pass in favour of the said plaintiffs a decree for possession of their legitimate share and for mesne profits with regard to that share from the date of this suit until the date of recovery of possession." Now the property being co-parcenary and having been, on the facts which are assumed in this relief and asserted in the plaint, mortgaged by the father for his previous debts which were neither immoral nor illegal, and the whole property having been sold in enforcement of the mortgage-decree, it is difficult to see what the plaintiffs expect to get under this prayer; but, as I have found that the property was sold in execution of a mortgage executed by their mother who was the absolute owner thereof, and as that mortgage was decreed against her and the whole property sold in execution, this relief need not be considered.

The next fact to note is that the mother was not a co-parcener or a manager or anything but absolute owner, and the sons, the present plaintiffs, were not co-parceners or reversionary heirs, but direct heirs who would have succeeded to the property, after the death of their mother, by simple inheritance; they derive title from their mother and are her heirs and legal representatives, they are, therefore, claiming under their mother. The mortgage-decree still stands good, therefore, the sale thereunder. In the previous suit, which was on a different cause of action from that of the present suit, as I have mentioned already, there was an express prayer for a declaration that the mortgage-bond and the decree were vitiated by fraud and there was an express prayer for setting aside that decree. That suit was withdrawn and has never again been instituted. The opportunity passed away, and was lost. The present suit is quite different. I do not see how the question of undue influence can be raised in the present suit so as to have the effect of annulling the mortgage-decree and the sale thereunder. As I have said before, the plaintiffs have no title independent of their mother.

I agree with the learned District Judge that the plaintiffs could not sue for possession until they had cleared the way for such a suit by securing the annulment of the mortgage-decree and the sale thereunder. The point is raised in the written statement para. 3, in the Issues Nos. 2 and 4, and has found a place in the arguments in this Court. The policy of restraining multiplicity of suits is not merely a matter for parties to invoke in their own interest, but it is a matter of public concern, and, therefore, I have no hesitation in giving it importance. The contention of the plaintiffs is that they can ignore the decree and sale:—As they put it, "we are not bound by them." In my opinion, the property Laheri has passed away in the execution sale and it is now too late to set that sale aside, and so the suit is not maintainable. No doubt there are cases where a person's interests are not affected by Court sales; the commonest example is where the decree and sale were without jurisdiction, as when the property of a stranger to the suit is sold in execution, that property being outside the property ordered to be sold under the decree. Kadar Hussain v. Hussain Saheb (65). Another instance is, of course, where the sale has not passed any property; as in Moti Lal v. Karrab-ul-din (66). In that case there were two sales of the same property, and it was found that in the second sale there was no right, title or interest of the judgment-debtor left to be sold, so the first purchaser was secure. I do not find that the present case falls within this class. There is a second class of cases in which the Court sale is valid to the extent of the judgment-debtor's life-interest, but the reversioners can elect to avoid the sale and indicate their election by bringing a suit for possession. Bejoy Gopal Mukerji v. Krishnamahishi Debi (67).

But this latter rule must be subjected to weighty reservations. I venture to put forward in a lengthy sentence what I conceive to be an enunciation of the law governing this case: (Later I shall refer to this as my main proposition). I am assuming of course that the case falls under Hindu Law.

If the Bahuasin, as mortgagor-defendant, represented the whole estate in the mortgage-suit; if the trial of that suit has not been shown to have been unfair; and even if the Bahusain was personally estopped from raising certain pleas, for instance, the absolute inalienability of the Laheri property, still if the evidence before us shows that the debt was in fact due and if we find nothing to show collusion or fraud in the obtaining from the Court of the decree in that suit; then the plaintiffs are bound by it, unless and untill they get that decree set aside.

In order to be quite fair to the plaintiffs, I am assuming that they are in the favourable position in view of the peculiar provisions of Mithila Law accepted in this judgment—of reversioners, and, therefore, not "claiming under" the Bahuasin in the sense of s. 11 of C. P. C.

I have premised in my main proposition that there must be nothing to show collusion or fraud. We have before us the following facts: (a) intelligent adult members of the family, the father and three sons, either joined or took some part in the execution of the mortgage; (b) the father took a noticeable part in the litigation, and so did the son, after the sale in execution; (c) the oral evidence before us consists in mere negations: attesting witnesses know nothing of the contents of the mortgage-bond, processes were not served in the mortgage-suit, and so forth: there is no positive evidence of fraud having the effect of misleading the Court; (d) the suit to annul the mortgage decree was withdrawn by the present plaintiffs and never revived.

So, to come back to my main proposition. What weight are we to give to the fact that the Bahuasin was subject to a personal estoppel, when, so far as we can see in this suit, the mortgage debt was in fact due and there was no proved fraud or collusion in the mortgage-suit? For the sake of brevity, I do not propose to go at length in the authorities. My findings of fact and law are that the Bahuasin in the mortgage-suit was the one person in the world capable of defending the property; that she was under a duty to protect it; and that she did not, because, so far as we know, she could not, contest the suit; and that her personal estoppel did not detract, so far as we know, from the fairness of the trial of the suit. I agree with the learned Judge's discussion of Issue No. 14. He might have quoted Ex. G-3. I find that the Bahuasin had due notice in the suit. These being my findings, I invite attention to Mayne's Hindu Law (9th Edition), s. 664 read with ss. 641 to 643, and Mulla's Commentary on the C. P. C., (7th Edition), pages 50 and 51. But I quote as authorities specially pertinent: Subbammal v. Avudiyammal (68) and Gur Nanak v. Jai Narain Lal (69).

(65) 20 M. 118; 7 M. L. J. 52; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 82.
(66) 25 C. 179; 24 I. A. 170; 1 C. W. N. 639; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 222; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 121 (P. C.).
(67) 11 C. W. N. 424; 34 C. 329; 5 C. L. J. 334; 9 Bom. L. R. 602; 17 M. L. J. 154; 2 M. L. T. 133; 4 A. L. J. 329; 34 I. A. 87 (P. C.).

I also quote the case of Parekh Ranchor v. Bai Vakhat (70), as I think it is useful to indicate my point of view. A widow, in spite of her duty to protect the estate, suffered a collusive decree and sale, and the nearest heir of the widow's husband brought a suit for a declaration that the sale was inoperative as against him. His suit was out of time under Art. 12, but timely under Art. 95 of the Limitation Act. It was held that Art. 12 did not apply to the case and he was entitled to a decree. Now, in the present case the plaintiffs do not allege that the mortgage-decree was collusive, and they are out of time under both Articles. In the previous plaint the fraud there alleged was stated to have been discovered in February 1906, and the present suit was instituted on the 24th July 1918.

If the plaintiffs assert, as they do in the plaint, that they are the heirs of the Bahuasin it is clear that the decree must bind them as her heirs and legal representatives. If they attempt to assert that, having regard to the special conditions of the Mithila Law, they are very much in the same position as reversioners, because it is the duty of the wife, to preserve the property for the heirs, I would refer to my previous discussion of the legal position of reversioners. As to their claim to ignore the decree and the sale, I refer to the Privy Council decision in Malkarjun v. Narhari (71). In that case, notice of execution of a money decree was issued upon the nephew of the deceased judgment-debtor as his heir and legal representative, when, in fact, the judgment-debtor had left his properties by Will to his two daughters. The daughters had no notice. It so happened that a mortgagee of the property sold had purchased the property in this execution. The daughters sued the mortgagee for redemption and possession. It was held that the plaintiffs must clear the ground for redemption by a suit to set aside the sale. The omission to serve notice on the two legal representatives, though a serious irregularity, did not operate to divest the Execution Court of jurisdiction. In such circumstances the plaintiff could not ignore the sale. The jurisdiction being there, the Court was empowered to decide wrongly as well as rightly. The case was barred under Art. 12 of the Limitation Act. There was a similar case in Raghavendra Ayyar v. Karuppa (72), a suit to recover land, with no prayer to set aside a sale effected under a Rent Recovery Act. The suit failed, being barred by Art. 12.

It is also to be remembered that the plaintiffs were present in Court as heirs and respresentatives of their mother and prosecuted her application to set aside the sale early in 1904. In their presence that application was rejected and the sale confirmed by the Subordinate Judge on the 2nd June 1904, and an appeal from that order was dismissed in the High Court in January 1906. The order of the 2nd June 1904, was an order "against" the present plaintiffs, in the sense of s. 312 of the old C. P. C. So the plaintiffs were by that enactment debarred from bringing a suit to set aside the sale on grounds which would re-open the questions decided in the proceedings under s. 311. It is clear that any suit to cancel the mortgage-bond would be barred under Art. 91 or Art. 125 of the Limitation Act and any suit to have the decree set aside on the ground of fraud would be barred under Art. 95. Article 141 is inapplicable, for at the death of the Bahuasin, the plaintiffs being equally-bound with her to submit to the mortgage-decree and sale, were not entitled to the property, in the sense of the Article. How could they

(63) 30 M. 3.
(69) 14 Ind. Cas. 814; 34 A. 335; 9 A. L. J. 375.
(70) 11 B. 119; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 79.
(71) 25 B. 337; 27 I. A. 216; 5 C. W. N. 10; 10 M. L. J. 353; 2 Bom. L. R. 927; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 739 (P. C.).
(72) 20 M. 33; 6 M. L. J. 278; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 23, be when that sale was subsequently confirmed and certified? Article 142 cannot refer to mere possessory title (as it is called); there is a special provision for that in Art. 3. At the time of delivery of possession the plaintiffs were divested of all title. No other Articles of the Indian Limitation Act appear to me to be apposite.

In my opinion, with great respect to my learned brother, whose judgment I have had the advantage of reading, this appeal should fail on the two grounds that the mortgage of 1890, was a valid transfer made by the plaintiffs' mother, and that the present suit, which could not lie as long as the mortgage-decree and the sale thereunder remain in force, is now barred and not maintainable.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 172 OF 1923.

December 23, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C., and Mr. Ashworth, A. J. C.

Musammat KANIZ ABBAS alias KAISAR BEGAM AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Lala BALADIN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 2 (11), O. XXII, r. 4, O. XXXIV, r. 3—Foreclosure suit—Preliminary decree—Death of judgment-debtor—Legal representatives, one of several, brought on record—Decree absolute, whether binding on other legal representatives.

Where a Court issues a notice to a person supposed to be the only legal representative of a deceased defendant or judgment-debtor who alone is in possession of the estate of the deceased, and holds that the service of notice was sufficient, any decree passed in the suit or proceedings taken in execution, will be considered sufficient to cover the entire estate of the deceased, including the shares of those heirs of the deceased who were not brought on the record and who had not received any notice. In this respect no distinction can be made between the estate of a deceased Hindu and that of a deceased Muhammadan inasmuch as under the Muhammadan Law suits and claims can be effectively brought by a creditor against those legal representatives of the deceased who are in actual possession of his assets so as to make the decrees in such suits binding on all the legal representatives including those who are not made parties to the suits. [p. 896, col. 2; p. 898, col. 2.]

In a suit for foreclosure a preliminary decree was passed but the judgment-debtor died before the decree could be made absolute. At the instance of the decree-holder a notice was served on the widow of the deceased who was in sole possession of the entire estate of the deceased and the decree was made absolute and the decree-holder obtained possession of the property:

Held, that the widow of the deceased effectively represented the estate of the deceased in the suit for foreclosure subsequent to the preliminary decree so as to make the absolute decree binding on all the legal representatives of the deceased. [p. 898, col. 2.]

Case-law reviewed.

Per Dalal, J. C.—By the definition of "legal representative" given in the C. P. C., 1908, the Legislature possibly desired to bring the procedure in India in conformity with that prevailing in England. [p. 898, col. 2.]

Per Ashworth, A. J. C.—The alteration of the definition of "legal representative" in the Code of 1908 by the addition of the words "and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased" was merely designed to draw attention to the fact that in some cases a mere intermeddler may sufficiently represent the estate of the deceased person. [p. 899, col. 2.]

It cannot be laid down that one out of several heirs of a deceased defendant or judgment-debtor, although in sole possession of the entire estate of the deceased, can in no circumstances be deemed to have sufficiently represented the estate, so as to make a decree binding on other heirs of the deceased who are not parties to it. [p. 899, col. 2.]

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Rai Bareli, dated the 14th April 1923, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge, Rai Bareli, dated the 8th August 1922.

Mr. Niamat Ullah, for the Appellants.

Mr. Wasim holding brief of Mr. A. P. Sen, for Respondent No. 1.

ORDER.

Wazir Hassan, J. C., (July 28, 1924).—This appeal raises an important question of law which in my opinion should be decided by a Bench of two Judges. The facts of the case briefly stated are as follows:—

The plaintiff-respondent had brought a suit against one Muhammad Hasan Khan in the year 1919 for sale of a one anna share under a mortgage executed by Muhammad Hasan Khan. A preliminary decree was granted on the 2nd August 1919. In September 1919 Muhammad Hasan Khan died. The period for payment of the mortgage-money having expired the plaintiff applied on the 5th May 1920 for a decree absolute being made. To this application he impleaded Musammat Aziz-un-nisa, widow of Muhammad Hasan Khan, as the only legal representative of her deceased husband. Previous to the date of the application Musammat Aziz-un-nissa had obtained an order of mutation of names in her favour alone from the Revenue Court in place of her deceased husband. The foreclosure decree was made absolute against Musammat Aziz-un-nissa on the 29th May 1920 and the plaintiff obtained delivery of possession on July 3rd, 1920. The plaintiff then went to the Court of Revenue for mutation of names on the basis of the foreclosure decree but on the objection of the defendants Nos. 2 to 5 in the present suit succeeded in obtaining mutation in respect of 4 pies only, which represented the share of the widow, Musammat Aziz-un-nissa, in her husband's estate. The suit out of which this appeal arises was brought by the plaintiff to recover posssession of the rest of the property subject to the foreclosure decree from the hands of the defendants Nos. 2 to 5. These defendants are admittedly co-heirs under the Muhammadan Law in the estate of Muhammad Hasan Khan deceased.

The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the defendants being no party to the decree absolute were not bound by it. The lower Appellate Court has come to the conclusion that Musammat Aziz-un-nissa represented the entire estate of her husband both in law and in fact in the proceedings which terminated in the making of the decree absolute. In second appeal before me the view taken by the lower Appellate Court is challenged.

On behalf of the appellants reliance is placed on the decisions of the High Court at Allahabad in the case of Kundan Singh v. Surja Kuar. (1) and of this Court in the case of Jadu Nath Singh v. Afzal Khanam (2). The learned Judge in the Court below has distinguished the case last mentioned and I am disposed to think that there is a valid distinction. On behalf of the plaintiff-respondent the following cases are cited: Amir Dulhin v. Baij Nath Singh (3), Pathummabi v. Vittil Ummachabi (4) and Khiarajmal v. Daim (5). There is no reported decision of this Court on all fours with the facts of this case. It appears to me that the decision of the point under consideration may turn upon the definition of 'legal representative' given in the new C. P. C. I accordingly certify this case to be laid before a Bench of two Judges for decision.

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 100; 39 A. 67; 14 A. L. J. 989.
(2) 57 Ind. Cas. 526; 7 O. L. J. 362; 2 U. P. L. R. (O.) 118; 8 O. L. J. 191.
(3) 21 C. 311; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 839.
(4) 26 M. 734.
(5) 32 C. 296; 9 C. W. N. 201; 2 A. L. J. 71; 7 Bom. L. R. 1; 1 C. L. J. 584; 32 I. A. 23; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 734 (P. C.).

JUDGMENT.

Dalal, J. C.—This second appeal was heard by a Bench of two Judges on a reference being made by a learned Judge of this Court.

We shall decide this appeal strictly on the facts of the present case; so those facts may be given in some detail.

A 1-anna 4-pies share in mahal Mumtaz Ali Khan belonged to one Muhammad Hasan Khan. He mortgaged 1 anna share to the plaintiff Bala Din by a simple mortgage, dated 10th June 1916. There was a subsequent deed of further charge of the same year. Bala Din sued Muhammad Hasan Khan for foreclosure of the property on foot of the two-deeds and a preliminary decree was passed in his favour by the Subordinate Judge of Rae Bareli on 2nd August 1919. The date fixed for payment after the expiry of 6 months was 2nd February, 1920. Muhammad Hasan Khan died on 6th September 1919 and the claimants to his estate were his widow Musammat Aziz-un-nissa and his brother Khan Bahadur Mumtaz Ali Khan. According to the Muhammadan Law Musammat Aziz-un-nissa was entitled to $\frac{1}{4}$th share in her husband's property while Mumtaz Ali Khan, brother of the deceased was entitled to inherit the rest of the $\frac{3}{4}$ths share. The widow claimed mutation in the Revenue Court with respect to the entire share of her deceased husband and her application was granted by the Assistant Collector on 16th March 1920, on the basis of possession.

On 5th May 1920, Bala Din applied for a final decree to be passed under O. XXXIV, r. 3 of the C. P. C., with an application that the widow Musammat Aziz-un-nissa was the legal representative of the deceased defendant mortgagor of the suit. Notices were issued to the lady both with respect to the application to bring her on the record and to show cause why a final decree should not be passed against her. The notices were served on her Mukhtar and the Court made a note that the service was sufficient. She did not make an appearance, nor was any payment of the preliminary decree made. A final decree was, therefore, passed ex parte by the Subordinate Judge on 29th May 1920. Bala Din took out execution of this decree under O. XXI, r. 35 of the Code and he was put in possession of the entire property by the Civil Court after proclamation on the spot on 3rd July 1920. Subsequently when Bala Din applied to the Revenue Court for mutation of names in his favour over the entire 1 anna share of Muhammad Hasan Khan that Court ordered mutation in his favour over 4 pies share only holding that the balance of 8 pies belonged to Mumtaz Ali Khan brother of the deceased. Mumtaz Ali Khan had appealed from the order of the Assistant Collector of 16th March 1920, and his appeal was allowed by the Deputy Commissioner on 15th May 1920. The order of the Appellate Court was that the widow should be recorded as owner of ¼th and Mumtaz Ali Khan as owner of the rest of the property of the deceased.

The plaintiff applied to the Subordinate Judge for a review of his decree of 29th May 1920, but that application was dismissed on 9th July, 1921. He thereupon brought the present suit for recovery of 8 pies share from the legal representatives of Mumtaz Ali Khan who died in the interval.

In our opinion the question at issue in this appeal is whether the widow effectively represented or not the estate of the deceased in the suit for foreclosure subsequent to the preliminary decree so as to make the decree binding on all the legal representatives of the deceased defendant. We think that the plaintiff's claim that she did is supported by pronouncements of their Lordships of the Privy Council.

The first case is that of General Manager of the Raj Durbhunga v. Maharajah Coomar Ramaput Singh (6) in which their Lordships made the now famous observation that the difficulties of a litigant in India begin when he has obtained a decree. The defendant in that suit had obtained a decree for arrears of rent against the estate of a deceased person Gur Prasad. He had sued both Chooharoo Kooer widow of Gur Prasad and his infant son Har Prasad under his mother's guardianship. It was a suit brought against those who were supposed to be the representatives of the debtor Gur Prasad. For some reason, the son was exempted and the decree was passed against the widow in her capacity as representative and sole heiress of her husband. The decree pointed to the realization of the demand out of the estate of the deceased Gur Prasad and showed that the decree was made against the person supposed to be the heir and representative of Gur Prasad. The defendant then purchased Gur Prasad's property in execution of the decree. The plaintiff subsequently took proceedings in execution of his own decree against Har Prasad and claimed Har Prasad's share of the property in the defendant's possession on the ground that the decree under which the defendant had purchased Gur Prasad's property was not passed against Har Prasad. The plaintiff succeeded in the High Court of Bengal but on appeal by the defendant that decree was set aside. Their Lordships observed at page 615 of the report:—"From the above statement it is clear, that unless there be some fatal irregularity in the mode in which the decree of the appellant was obtained or drawn up, or some fatal irregularity in the mode in which that decree has been prosecuted, the estates have been regularly sold and that the suit of the respondent seeking to set aside the order for sale and to get the benefit of his own execution as against Har Prasad as the heir of his father must fail." In giving their reasons that the suit must fail their Lordships observed at page 616:—"The whole proceeding (of sale), if fairly looked at, amounts to this,—that the estate of Gur Prasad was sold under that decree in execution for his debt, and that the interest of his widow, the registered proprietor and ostensible owner of the estate, and also the interest of his son, if he had any interest, was bound by that decree."

In this ruling their Lordships added that they were unable to see any substantial distinction between the case before them and that of Ishan Chunder Mitter v. Buksh Ali Soudagur (7) and that they entirely agreed in the principles expressed by Chief Justice Peacock in that case. The judgment referred to by their Lordships is of considerable interest in the present case. The suit there was brought by the plaintiff to recover property which he stated had descended to him from his father Jagmohan. The defendant defended the suit upon the ground that Ram Chandra Day had sued Shoobatra, widow of Jagmohan and mother of the plaintiff, that he had obtained a decree in that suit for the amount of a bond which had been given to him by Jagmohan with interest amounting altogether to Rs. 4,802 and that the estate of Jagmohan was sold under that decree. The answer of the plaintiff to that defence was that although the property was sold under that decree against the widow, the advertisement of sale merely declared that the rights and interest of the widow were to be sold. The question before the Bench was whether the widow's interest was all that was sold. Chief Justice Peacock held that the entire interest of Jagmohan including the plaintiff's share was sold because the execution was levied upon the property of the deceased. He referred to the case of an executor and said: "supposing in an ordinary case a suit is brought against an executor and judgment is given against him as an executor, the purchaser under an execution buys not the personal estate of the defendant, but the property of the defendant in his representative character, for a debt which was due from him in that capacity. Looking, therefore, to the advertisement of sale which referred to the decree, we think it was perfectly clear that it was intended to sell the rights and interest of Jagmohan's representatives and the defendant had accordingly purchased that interest under the decree."

(6) 14 M. I. A. 605; 17 W. R. 459; 10 B. L. R. P. C. 294; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 575; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 117; 20 E. R. 912.

(7) Marsh. 614.

In the present case the proceedings in suit leading to the final decree and the execution proceedings clearly indicate that the widow was treated as the only legal representative of the deceased defendant against whose property the preliminary decree was passed.

The same reasoning was adopted by their Lordships of the Privy Council in a Bombay case: Malkarjun v. Narhari (8). The plaintiffs to the suit were the daughters of one Nagappa who mortgaged the property in question in that suit to the defendant's father in 1877. Subsequently one Vithal obtained a money decree against Nagappa but before it was executed Nagappa died having by his Will bequeathed all his property to the plaintiffs. After Nagappa's death Vithal applied for execution of the decree against defendant Nagappa deceased by his heir and nephew Ramalinga. The notice was issued to Ramalinga and not to the plaintiffs. He appeared and informed the Court that he was separated from the deceased and was not his heir, and that the plaintiffs were the heirs of Nagappa and also that he was not in possession of the estate. He was informed by the Court that the application was not against his property, but against the estate of the deceased Nagappa and that if his property should be attached he would have his remedy after attachment. The mortgagee of 1877 purchased the property (the equity of redemption) at sale and was put in formal possession. In 1889 the plaintiffs brought a suit as heirs of their father Nagappa for an account of the mortgage of 1877 and for redemption and the defendant relied upon the title which he had acquired by his purchase at the judicial sale in 1880. This defence was not sustained by the High Court of Bombay but on appeal their Lordships of the Privy Council accepted it. It was held by their Lordships that the judicial sale was not a nullity and could not be treated as invalid, notwithstanding this irregularity, even though a material one, for the jurisdiction of the Court to execute had been complete throughout. It had not been lost by reason of the above error and had empowered the Court to decide wrongly as well as rightly. They further held that on an irregularity such as this the aggrieved party had his remedy by taking within due time the course prescribed in s. 311 of the C. P. C. (corresponding O. XXI, r. 90) suing for getting the order set aside.

The later case of the Privy Council Khiarajmal v. Daim (5) was cited by the appellant as favouring the view that all the legal representatives of a deceased defendant or judgment-debtor should be brought on the record to make the execution of a decree effective. We do not think that this view can be supported. The cases of different parties were separately considered by their Lordships who decided in favour of or against the effective representation according to the circumstances of each case. Their Lordships pointed out that the question whether an estate is or is not properly represented in a suit is not a mere question of form but of substance. Two mortgages were executed by Nabi Bakhsh (for himself and his brother Ali Bakhsh) and by Nauroz, Bugro, Sanwan and Khan Mohammad in favour of Wali

(8) 25 B. 337; 27 I. A. 216; 5 C. W. N. 10; 10 M. L. J. 368; 2 Bom. L. R. 927; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 739 (P. C.).

Ram, Tek Chand and Kodumal, both usufructuary mortgagees and the mortgagors owned the property in certain shares. There was a subsequent mortgage in 1878 in favour of Kodumal and Tek Chand alone.

Tek Chand and Kodumal sued on the mortgage of 1878 and obtained a money decree. The property was sold in execution of the decree.

In 1879 Wali Ram sued on his mortgage of 1874. To this suit Nabi Bakhsh, Bugro, Sanwan, Kadurbakhsh son of Khan Mohammad and Amir Bakhsh, minor son of Nauroz by his guardian Alahnawaz, were parties. A decree was obtained and the property sold in execution of the decree.

In 1894 Ali Bakhsh and the heirs of Bugro, Nabi Bakhsh, Sanwan and Khan Mohammad sued for redemption. The previous decrees and sales were then pleaded as a bar.

This contention was permitted in the case of the property of Nabi Bakhsh who was represented during execution proceedings by his two widows and a son Mohammad Hasan though his infant daughter was not brought as a party on the record. Their Lordships observed: "Nabi Bakhsh was a defendant to the suit No. 372 of 1879 and signed the agreement of reference. On his death very shortly afterwards his two widows and his son Mohammad Hasan, aged about 6 years, by his mother, one of the widows, were named as his legal representatives on the record. The Judge was satisfied by evidence that they were served with the summons to appear and that they were prepared to accept the award of the arbitrator, and they were also served with notice of the sale. Their Lordships think that Nabi Bakhsh's estate was sufficiently represented for the purpose of the suit although the name of his infant daughter was omitted, and that his share of the equity of redemption in the property sold in execution of the decree in No. 372 of 1879 is, therefore, bound by the sale and is irredeemable" (p. 313).

In the case of Ali Bakhsh their Lordships held that he was never represented in any of the former suits and as to Nauroz that there was no proper representation of his minor son Amir Bakhsh in the suit brought by Wali Ram. For these reasons their Lordships allowed redemption of the share of Ali Bakhsh and Nauroz.

We are of opinion that their Lordships observed the same principles in this decision as to effective representation as was done in the previous rulings quoted above. When a Court has issued notice to a person supposed to be the only legal representative of a deceased defendant or judgment-debtor and held that service is sufficient, the decree passed and the execution thereof will be considered sufficient to cover the entire estate including the shares of those heirs of the deceased defendant or judgment-debtor who were not brought on the record and who had not received notice. In the present case there was proper service on the person who was ostensible successor to the entire property and in sole possession on the date that the plaintiff applied to bring the legal representative of the deceased on the record. After his success it was the duty of the deceased by defendant's brother Mumtaz Ali Khan to appear in Court and offer to pay the amount due on the preliminary decree. He was one of the heirs of his brother and claimed a right to succeed to $\frac{3}{4}$ths of his brother's property. He could not have been unaware of the decree passed for foreclosure of the property which he desired to inherit. In our opinion the plaintiff acted with due care and caution in bringing on the record the one person who was held by the Revenue Court at the time to be the only person in possession of the property of the deceased which had been ordered to be foreclosed. The circumstances of the case, therefore, are such that in our opinion the widow effectively represented the entire estate of the deceased at the time of the final decree and its execution.

The argument of the appellant was that the opinion of the lower Appellate Court was in conflict with the decision of a single Judge of this Court in Jadu Nath Singh v. Afzal Khanam (2). We are not called upon in the present case to pronounce any opinion as to the correctness or otherwise of that ruling. The facts of that case were different in so far that the decree which was executed was a money-decree and the legal representative was not brought on the record in place of a defendant subsequent to a preliminary decree passed against specific property during the lifetime of the deceased Muhammadan. Different considerations as to effective representation will apply to the two cases.

We shall next consider the different cases of the different High Courts of India quoted by the appellant's learned Counsel in support of his contention that the final decree only bound the widow's share of the property and not the entire estate of the deceased. In the case of Jafri Begam v. Amir Muhammad Khan (9) the suit was not originally brought against the deceased Muhammadan but was brought against some of his heirs who were in possession of his property. In that case there was no preliminary decree binding the estate of the deceased. The case of Ghamandi Lal v. Amir Begam (10) was one of abatement wherein an appeal was held to have abated when one legal representative out of several of the deceased appellant was brought on the record. The case of Fazal Mohammad Khan v. Habibullah Khan (11) was similar, and so was the case of Haidar Husain v. Abdul Ahad (12). In our opinion these cases are not helpful in deciding the present appeal.

The case of Kundan Singh v. Surja Kuar (1) deals with facts which approximate more to the facts of the present case. They are, however, not identical. In that case the preliminary decree was not passed against the owner of the estate. The owner of the estate was not sued but the person sued was one of two legal representatives. There was no evidence in that case the widow was in possession of the entire estate for the time being.

We may point out that the ruling in the case of Ghamandi Lal v. Amir Begam (10) was distinguished by another Bench of that Court in a subsequent ruling in Ram Sewak v. Lambar Pande (13). It was held there that it was not necessary that all the legal representatives of an appellant should be brought on the record when an appellant dies after filing an appeal.

Coming to the decisions of the Madras High Court the appellants' learned Counsel quoted the case of Musala v. Ramayya (14). The facts there also were similar to those of the case in Ghamandi Lal v. Amir Begam (10). Another case of the Madras High Court Kadir Mohideen Marakkayar v. Muthukrishna Ayyar (15) supports the reasoning adopted by us above. Two Judges of the Court were of opinion that the cases reported in Ghamandi Lal v. Amir Begam (10), Mohan Manor v. Togu Uka (16) and Musala v. Ramayya (14) relate to the question of the abatement of an appeal when the appellant died pending the appeal and his legal representatives were not all brought on the record within the period of limitation and that those cases had no direct bearing upon the question under consideration before them. In that case the learned Judges held the share of the second son of a deceased person bound by the decree in the mortgage suit notwithstanding that the second son was not joined in that suit as one of the legal representatives of the deceased mortgagor. It was their opinion that where defendant in a suit dies and the plaintiff under s. 368 (O. XXII, r. 4) of the C. P. C., brings a person on the record whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant such a person sufficiently represents the estate of the deceased for the purposes of the suit and in the absence of fraud or collusion the decree passed in the suit will bind the estate. They relied, as we have done, on the Privy Council case reported as General Manager of the Raj Durbhunga v. Maharajah Coomar Ramaput Singh (6).

In the Bombay High Court the first case to be noticed is that of Mohan Manor v. Togu Uka (16). The report is not very clear but it appears that a suit for sale was brought against only some of the legal representatives of deceased mortgagor. There no preliminary decree for sale was obtained against the mortgagor during his life. This is the distinction and not the one pointed out by the learned Judges in Kadir Mohideen Marakkayar v. Muthukrishna Ayyar (15). The following cases of the Bombay High Court will support the view we have taken of effective representation:—

Jairam Bajabashet v. Joma Kondia (17), Khurshetbibi v. Keso Vinayek (18), Davalava v. Bhimaji Dhondo (19) and Devji v. Sambhu (20).

(9) 7 A. 822; A. W. N. (1885) 248; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 636.
(10) 16 A. 211; A. W. N. (1894) 22; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 136.
(11) 20 Ind. Cas. 366; 11 A. L. J. 719.
(12) 30 A 117; 5 A. L. J. 62; A. W. N. (1908) 41; 3 M. L. T. 207.
(13) 25 A. 27; A. W. N. (1902) 171.
(14) 23 M. 125; 9 M. L. J. 313; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 483.
(15) 26 M. 230; 12 M. L. J. 368.
(16) 10 B. 224; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 536.
(17) 11 B. 361; 11 Ind. Jur. 427; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 236.
(18) 12 B. 101; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 553.
(19) 20 B. 338; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 787.
(20) 24 B. 135; 1 Bom. L. R. 627; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 628.

No doubt later there has been an inclination in the Bombay High Court to dissent from the views expressed in the above cases and a Bench of that Court discussed the ruling of Davalava v. Bhimaji Dhondo (19) in Mirkha Imamkha v. Bhagirathi Mahadev Abhyankar (21). That case also was one where the suit was originally brought against some of the legal representatives of a deceased debtor, and there was no preliminary decree for foreclosure or sale against the estate of the deceased.

Turning to the Calcutta High Court there was a difference of opinion between the Judges in the Full Bench decision in the case of Assamathem Nessa Bibee v. Roy Lutchmeeput Singh (22). That case was similar to the one reported as Devji v. Sambhu (20) and the majority of the Bench held that the share of the legal representative of the deceased debtor was not affected by the sale in execution of the decree obtained against the other legal representatives. Markby, J., held a contrary opinion. In a subsequent case of Muttyjan v. Ahmed Ally (23) several of the creditors of a deceased Muhammadan sued his widow and daughter and obtained decrees against the assets of the deceased which had come into the possession of these defendants. The decrees were executed and the assets of the deceased sold. Thereupon two married sisters of the deceased sued as heirs of the deceased to recover their share of the property sold. A Bench of two learned Judges held that when a creditor of a deceased Muhammadan sues the heir in possession and obtains a decree against the assets of the deceased such a suit is to be looked upon as an administrative suit and those heirs of the deceased, who had not been made parties, cannot, in the absence of fraud, claim anything but what remains after the debts of the testator have been paid.

This view was followed in the case of Amir Dulhin v. Baij Nath Singh (3).

A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has held in Khitish Chandra Acharjya Chowdhry v. Radhika Mohan Roy (24) that under the Hindu Law as in English Law any one taking charge of property belonging to a deceased person renders himself liable for his debts. So an administrator pendente lite, who intermeddles with the estate of a deceased person after he ceases to be an administrator, can be sued as a quasi executor de son tort.

We have sufficiently indicated the ground for our decision and we do not feel justified in lengthening out this judgment by quoting various rulings reported in other than the authorised reports. Our examination of the case law of the different High Courts leads us to believe that our view is supported by decisions of the Calcutta High Court and by some of the decisions of the Bombay and Madras High Courts. The facts of the cases of this Court and of the Allahabad, Bombay and Madras High Courts quoted in support of the appellants' view are all in our opinion distinguishable from the facts of the case before us.

One main argument of the appellants' learned Counsel was that the cases which supported the view of the lower Appellate Court related to the estates of deceased Hindus to whom different considerations would apply from those applying to the case of a Muhammadan. We see no reason to make this distinction because under the Muhammadan Law suits and claims can be effectively brought by a creditor against those legal representatives of the deceased person who are in actual possession of the assets of the deceased so as to make the decrees in those suits binding on all the legal representatives including those who were not made parties to the suit. The Muhammadan Law on the subject is stated in the judgment of Abdur Rahim, J., in the case of Abdul Majeeth v. Krishnamachariar (25). We need not repeat here all the references given there to the Hedaya and the Fatawa Alamgiri.

As we think that we are supported in our opinion by the rulings of the Privy Council prior of 1908 we have not thought it necessary to consider the definition of "legal representation" given in the C. P. C., 1908 to which our learned brother has drawn the attention of the Bench in his referring order. Possibly the Legislature desired by this definition to bring the procedure in India in conformity with that prevailing in England. In Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 8, para. 992,

(21) 51 Ind. Cas. 18; 43 B. 412; 21 Bom. L. R. 329.
(22) 4 C. 142; 2 C. L. R. 223; 1 Shome L. R. 219; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 92.
(23) 8 C. 370; 10 C. L. R. 346; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 237.
(24) 35 C. 276; 3 M. L. T. 147; 12 C. W. N. 237.
(25) 40 Ind. Cas. 210; 40 M. 243; 32 M. L. J. 195; (1917) M. W. N. 346; 5 L. W. 767.

the procedure obtaining in England is stated as follows :—

"If in any action or matter it appears to the Judge that any deceased person who was interested in the matter in question has no legal personal representative, the Judge may proceed in the absence of any person representing the estate of the deceased person, or may appoint some proper person to represent his estate for all the purposes of the action or matter, on such notice to such persons, if any, as the Judge may think fit, either specially, or generally, by public advertisement, and the order so made and any order consequent thereon binds the estate of the decease person in the same manner in every respect as if a duly constituted legal personal representative of the deceased had been a party to the action or matter." We however, do not desire to give any opinion in the matter.

The grounds of appeal raise no other points for decision. I agree with the opinion of the lower Appellate Court and would dismiss this appeal with costs.

Ashworth, A. J. C.—I agree that the question is whether the widow sufficiently represented the estate of the deceased for the purposes of the proceedings ending in the final decree passed under O. XXXIV, r. 3 of the C. P. C., and that, in view of the exhaustive analysis of the rulings relevant to this question by the Judicial Commissioner it must be held that the finding of the lower Appellate Court, that the widow did do so, was correct. I hold, however, that there is nothing in O. XXII, or in the definition of "legal representative" as contained in s. 2 (11), of the C. P. C. to debar the appellant from maintaining the present suit. In a subsequent suit a party (in default of his, or his predecessor-in-interest, having been a party to a proceeding taken under O. XXII. r. 5) can maintain that a person brought on the record in a previous suit as the legal representative of a deceased party did not sufficiently represent the estate of that deceased party for the purposes of the previous suit. The Indian Legislature has not thought fit to incorporate in the C. P. C., the provision contained in O. III, r. 33 of the County Court Laws that an order of a Court appointing a proper person to represent the estate of a deceased litigant binds the estate of the deceased person to the same extent as if a duly constituted legal personal representative of the deceased had been a party. The alteration of the definition of "legal representative" by the addition of the words "and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased" was, in my opinion, merely designed to draw attention to the fact that in some cases a mere intermeddler may, for the purposes of a particular suit, sufficiently represent the estate of a deceased person. To this extent I concur with the ruling of a single Judge of this Court reported as Jadu Nath Singh v. Afzal Khanam (2), but I do not concur with that ruling, so far as it can be construed to mean that one out of several heirs, although in possession can in no circumstances be deemed to have sufficiently represented the estate; so as to make a decree binding on other heirs who were not parties to it. I do not consider that it makes any difference whether a person is brought on the record as legal representative of the estate of a deceased person by the plaintiff, or by the Court, or before or after the passing of a preliminary decree against the deceased person.

I concur in the order of the Judicial Commissioner dismissing this appeal with costs.

By the Court.—For reasons given in our judgments, we dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 480 OF 1923.
November 29, 1924.
Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

VENKATRAO—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
BAPU AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Easements Act (V of 1882), ss. 22, 27—Easement, exercise of—Dominant and servient owners, duties of.

Although under s. 22 of the Easements Act, the dominant owner must exercise his right of easement in the mode which is least onerous to the servient owner, the owner of the servient tenement must not, under s. 27 of the Act, so deal with the servient tenement as to render the easement incapable, or more difficult, of enjoyment by the owner of the dominant tenement. [p. 900, cols. 1 & 2.]

Clifford v. Hoare, (1874) 9 C. P. 362 at p. 364; 43 L. J. C. P. 225; 30 L. T. 465; 22 W. R. 828, Tcolseemony Debee v. Jogesh Chunder Shaha, 1 C. L. R. 425, relied on.

Raja of Venkatagiri v. Raja Muddukrishna, 28 M. 15, distinguished.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Bhandara, dated the 10th August 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 37 of 1923.

Messrs. D. T. Mangalmurti and V. D. Kolte, for the Appellant.

Dr. H. S. Gour and Mr. V. M. Jakatdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are fully set out in the judgments of the Courts below. It has been found that the plaintiffs have a right to have their land irrigated by the water which passes through their land from the sluices in question and that the flow of the water to their land is obstructed by the channel which the defendant has dug at right angles to the existing channel. The lower Courts have ordered this to be removed.

It is now contended that instead of removing the channel the defendant should be ordered to construct, and is willing to construct a trough or aqueduct, which will carry the water to the plaintiffs' fields over the nala in dispute, and reference is made to ss. 22 and 23 of the Easements Act. It has been stated by the lower Appellate Court that it is not possible to carry the water across the nala in dispute by an aqueduct.

I may mention that during the pendency of this appeal a stay of execution was granted to the appellant on his agreeing to put in a wooden pipe of trough to carry the water in the way which he now proposes to do, and there has been a continual dispute over it on the ground that the respondents were not getting water. I do not think that the placing of a trough at the place in dispute is likely to prove satisfactory as the plaintiffs would complain that all the water to which they are entitled does not flow through it, and it is practically certain that in heavy rain it will either overflow or will be washed away. I do not see any reason for differing from the view of the lower Appellate Court, and although under s. 22 of the Easements Act the dominant owner must exercise his right in the mode which is least onerous to the servient owner, this does not appear to be a case where exercise of an easement can without detriment to the dominant owner be confined to a determinate part of the servient heritage. Under s. 27 of the Act the servient owner must not do any act tending to restrict the easement or to render its exercise less convenient. The case quoted by the learned Pleader for the appellant Clifford v. Hoare (1) followed in Toolseemony Debee v. Jogesh Chunder Shaha (2) do not seem to me to apply. The owner of the servient tenement must not so deal with the servient tenement as to render the easement incapable, or more difficult, of enjoyment by the owner of the dominant tenement.

The Counsel for the respondents relies on Raja of Venkatagiri v. Raja Muddukrishna (3), but this case is one where the water did not flow through any definite channel on to the plaintiff's land.

In these circumstances I do not think the order of the lower Appellate Court should be disturbed as I have sufficient reason to believe that the erection of the trough will lead to fresh disputes.

The question of whether the plaintiffs will be entitled to the water from the weir distinct from the sluice is not of much importance as what they get is the overflow of the water from the defendant's land through the channel which is fed from the tank by the weir or the sluice according to the level of the water in the tank.

Lastly as regards the question of damages I do not see any reason to differ from the lower Appellate Court. Although no particular amount of damage has been proved the stoppage of the water to the plaintiffs' fields must have caused damage to them, which they are entitled to recover.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) (1874) 9 C. P. 362 at p. 364; 43 L. J.C. P. 225; 30 L. T. 465; 22 W. R. 828.
(2) 1 C. L. R. 425.
(3) 28 M. 15.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 273 OF 1923.

January 19, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.

SAT NARAIN—PLAINTIFF —APPELLANT

versus

KRISHNA DUTT AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Gift during illness, validity of—Marz-ul-maut, doctrine of, applicability of.

Under the Hindu Law, a deed of gift executed by a person during illness is not invalid. The principles of the Muhammadan Law of marz-ul-maut are not applicable to the Hindu Law.

(Mayne's Hindu Law, para. 376 (9th Ed.), referred to.)

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Sultanpur, in Appeal No. 188 of 1922, dated the 31st May 1923, confirming that of the Munsif, Musafirkhana, dated the 27th November 1922.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. N. Das, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff Sat Narain is entitled as reversioner to succeed to ¼th of the property left by one Sheo Narain, who died childless and without leaving a widow. The impediment in his way was a deed of gift executed by Sheo Narain on 25th July 1921 in favour of Krishna Dutt defendant No. 1. The reason given by the plaintiff in para. 2 at first why this deed of gift was not binding on him was that Krishna Dutt had an illicit connection with Musammat Joggi widow of Sheo Narain's nephew and that with her help Krishna Dutt got a deed of gift executed in his own favour at a time when Sheo Narain was seriously ill and incapable of understanding the transaction. Subsequently a plea of undue influence was raised and an addition made to the plaint that Krishna Dutt and Musammat Joggi having taken undue advantage of Sheo Narain's weak intellect and illness and having brought undue pressure to bear upon him got it executed. The new plea is on the face of it inconsistent with the earlier one because if Sheo Narain was incapable of understanding the nature of the transaction of gift he would be equally incapable of being influenced by what Musammat Joggi may have told him. The First Court framed the following issue No. 2:—

"Was Sheo Narain seriously ill and incapable of understanding his affairs at the time of the execution of the deed of gift as pleaded in the amended para. No. 2 of the plaint; if so, what was the effect thereof?" It is clear that the Munsif had notice of the amendment and desired to include the amended plea in this issue.

Both the Subordinate Courts held that Sheo Narain was not unduly influenced and that he was not incapable of understanding what he was doing when he executed the deed of gift. These are clear findings of fact.

It was argued in second appeal that the plaintiff was prejudiced by the want of a separate issue as to undue influence. There is, however, no affidavit either by the plaintiff or by his Pleader who appeared in the First Court that by reason of the want of any issue the plaintiff or the Pleader refrained from producing certain named witnesses before the Trial Court. In the Trial Court the plaintiff himself raised the question of undue influence and his Pleader well knew that the burden lay on him to prove it. In fact two witnesses of the plaintiff were questioned on the subject. To pretend later on that the Pleader was so incapable of knowing his business that the want of the issue put him off and prevented him from producing necessary evidence will not be accepted by Appellate Courts without proper affidavit of an admision of the Pleader of his gross ignorance and carelessness, if such really existed There is absolutely no substance in this plea of prejudice.

The argument that the burden of proof shifted to the defence may be answered by pointing out that the defence did produce evidence to support proper execution of the document with due understanding by Sheo Narain. This evidence was believed by the two Subordinate Courts and nothing further need be said on this point in second appeal.

Ground of appeal No. 3 was abandoned.

A new ground was argued that under the Hindu Law a deed of gift made by a person during disease is invalid. This is a strange doctrine. The principles of the Muhammadan Law of marz-ul-maut are not applicable to the Hindu Law. In Mayne's Hindu Law in para. 376 (9th Edition) a quotation is made from Vrihaspati in support of the proposition that under Hindu Law a gift is invalid without possession. In the present case there was possession and the question does not arise There is no argument advanced by the learned commentator that Vrihspati's statement that a gift by a person during disease is void is adopted in anglo-Hindu Law. No authority of any Court was quoted on the subject.

I dismiss this appeal with costs.

G H. Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2675 OF 1924.

March 25, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol.

PIRA—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MELA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 59 (2)—Punjab Courts Act (VI of 1918), s. 41 (3)—Occupancy tenancy—Succession — Collaterals — Custom—Appeal, second—Certificate, whether necessary.

Under s. 59 (2) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, the right of succession to an occupancy tenancy must, where the collaterals are governed by custom, be regulated by the rules of Customary Law, and a finding with regard to such custom is not open to challenge in second appeal in the absence of a certificate under s. 41 (3) of the Punjab Courts Act.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 31st July 1924, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Fourth Class, Hoshiarpur, dated the 2nd February 1924.

Sheikh Niaz Muhammad, for the Appellant.

Sayed Mohsin Shah, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The property involved in this case consists of 14 kanals, 1-5/6 marlas of occupancy land left by Allu who died without issue. In 1911, Allu executed a Will by which he demised all his property to Mela, respondent. In 1912 Mela attempted to secure mutation on the Will, but Allu refused, alleging that he was not yet dead and that his property should remain in his name till he died, when it should go to whosoever tended him.

On his death in 1923 his land was mutated in favour of parties in equal shares, whereupon plaintiff raised this action based on the Will.

The Court below has held that Allu did not revoke his Will, and further that the plaintiff tended Allu upto his death. He also holds that Allu by custom had power to dispose of his land by Will.

On the first two points I agree with the Court below and there are, further, points of fact.

On the finding of custom, there is no certificate and as the parties do not include the landlords, s. 59 (2) of the Tenancy Act lets in custom.

For these reasons I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEALS Nos. 59 AND 66 OF 1924.

March 2, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C., and Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

Nawab SARWAR-UL-MULK SARWARJANG BAHADUR—APPELLANT

versus

Mirza WAKAR ALI BEG AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), s. 17—Guardian, appointment of—Litigious disposition, whether disqualification.

The mere fact that a person who is otherwise a fit and proper person to be the guardian of a minor is of a litigious disposition is not a sufficient cause for refusing to appoint him guardian of the minor. [p. 903, col. 1.]

Appeal against an order of the District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 16th September 1924.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. K. Ghosh, for Respondent No 2.

JUDGMENT.—These appeals arise out of proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890. They related to the appointment of a guardian for the persons and property of four minors, Mirza Iqbal Ali Beg, Mirza Zulfiqar Ali Beg, Mirza Mahbub Husain Khan and Mirza Yusuf Husain Beg. These minors are the sons of Faiz Husain Beg, who died on the 28th January 1918. The mother of the minors survived her husband only a few years. After her death a dispute arose as to the guardianship of the minors mentioned above. The first man in the field was Nawab Sarwar-ul-Mulk Sarwar Jang Bahadur, the maternal grandfather of the minors. On the 9th November 1922 he made an application to the Court of the District Judge of Lucknow for his appointment as a guardian of the persons and the property of the minors. The second candidate for the same appointment was Rani Qamar Zamani Begam, aunt of the minors. The third applicant was the Deputy Commissioner of Sitapur, who held the superintendence of the estate of Mirza Waqar Ali Beg, the eldest son of Faiz Husain Beg, under the Court of Wards Act, 1912. Mirza Iqbal Ali Beg having attained majority during the pendency of the proceedings in the Court below also applied to be made a guardian of the persons and the property of the remaining three minors in case the application of Nawab Sarwar-ul-Mulk Sarwar Jang Bahadur was not granted.

Rani Qamar Zamani Begam subsequently retired from the contest. The learned District Judge has rejected all the applications and refused to appoint any guardian either of the persons or of the property of any of the minors.

After the institution of the appeal in this Court the Court of Wards released the estate of Mirza Waqar Ali Beg from its superintendence and the Government Pleader on behalf of the Deputy Commissioner of Sitapur stated before us on the 19th January 1925 that the name of the Deputy Commissioner be removed from the array of parties. We granted this request but directed notice to issue to Mirza Waqar Ali Beg. Mirza Waqar Ali Beg has not appeared at the hearing of these appeals.

One of the appeals is by Nawab Sarwar Jang Bahadur and the other is by Mirza Iqbal Ali Beg. On behalf of Mirza Iqbal Ali Beg his Counsel stated that his client was agreeable to the appointment of Nawab Sarwar Jang Bahadur as guardian of the persons and of property of the minors. Mirza Zulfiqar Ali Beg has also attained majority. The appeal of Nawab Sarwar Jang Bahadur is, therefore, directed with respect to his appintment as the guardian of the persons and the property of the remaining two minors, Mirza Mahbub Husain Khan and Mirza Yusuf Husain Beg only.

From the statement of events as they have happened since the date of the applications it would appear that there is really no contest now and the sole applicant in the field is Nawab Sarwar Jang Bahadur. The learned District Judge has found that the minors have all along lived with the Nawab and that "there is nothing whatever on the file to show that he is not extremely fond of the minors, or that he is not actuated by what he believes to be his concern for their interest." He, however, declines to accede to the prayer of the Nawab's application on the ground that he is of litigious disposition.

We do not think that this is a sufficient cause for throwing out the application of the Nawab. We think that he is a fit and proper person to be appointed the guardian of the persons and the property of the two minors, Mirza Mahbub Husain Khan and Mirza Yusuf Husain Khan. We accordingly allow Appeal No. 59, set aside the order of the lower Court and appoint Nawab Sarwar-ul-Mulk Sarwar Jang Bahadur guardian of the persons and the property of the two minors mentioned above. In the circumstances we dismiss the other Appeal No. 66. No order as to costs in either appeal.

Appeal No. 59 allowed.
Z. K. Appeal No. 66 dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 591, 592 AND 593 OF 1922.

January 14, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Suhrawardy and Mr. Justice Cuming.

NABIN CHANDRA CHAKRABARTI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS IN ALL.

versus

IN No. 591 OF 1922

RUSTOM ALI CHOWKIDAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

IN No. 592 OF 1922

WAJADDI MIJI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

IN No. 593 OF 1922

HARA KUMAR ACHARYA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

*Landlord and tenant—Construction of document—*Kabuliyat—Raiyati interest or tenure.

A kabuliyat which was headed as a raiyati kabuliyat provided that the tenant shall plant 1000 betel nut trees per kani of bhiti land belonging to the raiyati within five years and thereby reclaim the land. The total area of the land demised was a little over three kanis. The person who executed the kabuliyat did not belong to the cultivating class:

Held, that the kabuliyat read as a whole indicated that the tenancy was raiyati and not a tenure and that the mere fact that the person who executed the kabuliyat did not belong to the cultivating class was not enough to prove that he was a tenure-holder. [p. 905, col. 1.]

Appeals against the decrees of the Special Judge, Tippera, dated the 29th of November 1921, modifying the decrees of the Assistant Settlement Officer, Chandpur, dated the 31st of May 1920.

Babus Pyari Mohan Chatterji and Jatindra Mohun Ghose, for the Appellants.

Babus Nagendra Ch. Chowdhuri and Bepin Chandra Basu, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Suhrawardy, J.—These appeals arise out of applications made by the appellants under s. 105 of the Tenancy Act for enhancement of rents of the tenants under s. 30 of the Tenancy Act.

These appeals relate to several khatians but it is not necessary to refer to each one of them as we are of opinion that the findings of the Courts below with reference to these khatians except khatian No. 50 are based upon facts and cannot be disturbed in second appeals.

With reference to khatian No. 50 the lower Appellate Court has held that the tenant is a tenure-holder. He was also so described in the finally published Record of Rights. The learned Special Judge has come to this conclusion on a consideration of the fact that the present tenant does not belong to the agricultural class. The Assistant Settlement Officer did not come to any definite finding upon the status of this tenant. The plaintiffs rely upon a kabuliyat, dated the 10th Kartic 1298 B. S. in order to show that the defendant is not a tenure-holder, but an occupancy raiyat. The kabuliyat is headed as a raiyati kabuliyat. It recites that the jote was originally held by Alabardi Molla who may be presumed to be cultivators and there is a further stipulation that the tenant "shall plant 1,000 betel nut trees per kani of bhiti land appertaining to this raiyati within five years and thereby re-claim the lands." The kabuliyat read as a whole is a good evidence that the tenancy was a raiyati and not a tenure. The area of it was given as 3 kanis 1 gunda and 3 and odd karas. In our opinion this kabuliyat does not show that the tenant was a tenure-holder. On the contrary it supports the plaintiff's contention that he was an occupancy raiyat. The mere fact that the person who executed this kabuliyat did not belong to the cultivating class is not enough to prove that he was a tenure-holder, for it is common knowledge that the people who do not belong to this class sometimes take lands for the purpose of cultivation through the agency of hired labour.

We accordingly allow this appeal and set aside the decree of the lower Courts with regard to khatian No. 50 and direct that the rent of that khatian be increased at the rate of five annas in the rupees as has been done in the other cases. The result is, that the Appeals Nos. 591 and 592 are dismissed, and the Appeal No. 593 is partly allowed and is dismissed as regard khatian Nos. 35, 40 and 49. We assess the hearing-fee at one gold mohur in each case to be paid to the respondents who have appeared.

Cuming, J.—I agree.

Z. K. Appeal Nos. 591 and 592 dismissed. Appeal No. 593 allowed in part.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

RENT APPEAL No. 15 OF 1924.

December 8, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Ashworth, A. J. C.

PARMESHWAR DEEN—DEFENDANT No. 2—APPELLANT

versus

CHHAB NATH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 107 (2), O. I, r. 9—Appeal—Non-joinder of necessary party, effect of—Limitation, period of, expiry of, effect of.

Order I, r. 9 of the C. P. C., read with s. 107 (2) of the Code, does not permit the non-joinder of any party being condoned by an Appellate Court, when such non-joinder makes it impossible for the Court to deal equitably and sufficiently with the matter in controversy between the parties to the appeal. [p. 905, col. 1.]

Where a decree was granted against several defendants and one of the defendants preferred an appeal against the decree so far as it affected him, and took up a position which, if accepted, would enhance the liability of the other defendants, but they were not made parties to the appeal:

Held, (1) that the plea urged by the appellant could not be entertained as it could not be disposed of in the absence of the other defendants whose liability would be enhanced as a consequence and who had had no opportunity of contesting the appeal; [ibid.]

(2) that the period of limitation for the appeal having expired, the Court could not permit the other defendants to be made parties to the appeal at a late stage. [ibid.]

Appeal against the judgment and decree passed by the First Additional District Judge, Bara Banki, dated the 12th March 1924, upholding that of the Honorary Assistant Collector, First Class, Bara Banki, dated the 9th January 1924.

Mr. Gokul Prasad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Ram Bharose Lal and Raj Narain Shukla, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This second rent appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff respondent against the co-sharers of a certain mahal for a share in the profits on the basis of the plaintiff's 3-pies' share. The appellant-defendant maintained that he was in possession of two plots in respect of which the claim for a share of profits could not be maintained for a reason which it is not necessary to set out at present. The lower Courts have decreed the plaintiff's claim against such of the defendants as were found to have collected profits in excess of their share, including the appellant, and apportioned against these persons the amount payable respectively by them to the plaintiff. This appeal is brought by one of the judgment-debtors only. He says that he owns two plots in respect of which no share of profits should have been given to the plaintiff. The plaintiff, however, must get his share of profits from some one, and if collections in respect of these two plots are not to be reckoned in calculating the share of profits due to the plaintiff, it will be necessary for the plaintiff to get a larger amount from the other defendants, and indeed also from this defendant, so far as he owns a share apart from the plots. No variation by this Court of the original decree can be made in the absence of the other defendants, who should have been joined as respondents. It is true that they were not joined as respondents in the appeal to the lower Court and that no objection was taken to this before the lower Appellate Court. But nonetheless it is not possible for this Court to decide the appeal in the appellant's favour without an opportunity being given to the other defendants to contest the appeal. The appellant's Counsel asks for permission to join the other defendants now. I cannot, however, understand how the appellant could fail to see the necessity for joining the other defendants and his failure to do so cannot be construed as a mere oversight. In the circumstances, I see no reason at this stage, when the limitation for an appeal has expired, to allow the joinder of the other defendants as respondents. Under O. I, r. 9 it is provided that a suit shall not be defeated by reason of non-joinder of parties, and the Court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it. This rule, read with s. 107 (2) of the C. P. C. will not permit the non-joinder of any party being condoned by an Appellate Court when such non-joinder makes it impossible to deal equitably and sufficiently with the matter in controversy between the parties to the appeal.

The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 200 OF 1924.

July 2, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.

Pandit HARNAMDAS—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

FIRM OF MAYADAS LAKHMICHAND—DEFENDANTS—OPPONENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 245—Liability by "holding out," extent of—Joint Hindu family—Manager entering into partnership—Family, whether becomes partner—Insolvency proceedings against partner—Partnership, whether dissolved.

Where the managing member of a joint Hindu family enters into a partnership with strangers he does not thereby make other members of the family partners in the business so as to clothe them with all the rights and obligations of a partner as defined by the Indian Contract Act. In such a case the family as a unit does not become a partner but only such of its members as in fact enter into a contractual relation with the strangers, will be governed by the Act. [p. 907, col. 1.]

The rule of liability "by holding out" contained in s. 245 of the Indian Contract Act can be relied on only by the persons to whom the representation has been made and who have acted on the faith of its being true. [p. 907, col. 2.]

In re Fraser, Ex parte Central Bank of London, (1892) 2 Q. B. 633, 67 L. T. 401; 9 Morrell 256, relied upon.

Mere institution of insolvency proceedings against the partners of a firm, or even the adjudication of a partner as an insolvent, does not by itself effect a dissolution of a partnership. [p. 906, col. 2.]

Mr. Kimatrai Bhojraj, for the Applicant.

Mr. Ladharam Anand, for the Opponents.

ORDER.—This is an application under O. XXI, r. 50, C. P. C., for permission to execute the decree against Lalchand and Motiram sons of Ramdittamal as partners of the Firm of Mayadas Lakhmichand. Both Lalchand and Motiram are brothers of Mangalsen who is admittedly a partner of this firm and the ground alleged against them in this application is two-fold, (a) that they were partners or at any rate they held themselves out as partners to the plaintiff, and (b) that they formed members of a joint Hindu family with defendant Mangalsen, that the business of the firm was carried on by Mangalsen for the benefit of the joint family and the members of the joint family worked and took part in the business. This application was originally directed not only against Lalchand and Motiram but also against their brother Bodraj and their nephew Malikchand who were subsequently given up.

Lalchand and Motiram have denied their liability both as members of a joint family with Mangalsen and as partners. They have pleaded that the defendants' firm was started after the severance of the joint family tie between Mangalsen and his brothers and the partition of their property and have further pleaded that the defendants' firm was dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of this suit and as both of them were not joined as defendants in the suit, the present application is incompetent.

The following issues were raised by the Court :—

1. Did Lalchand Motiram and Bodraj separate from Mangalsen on the 7th January 1917, as alleged?

2. Are they liable for the account in suit either as partners in the Firm of Mayadas Lakhmichand or as members of a joint family carrying on joint family business?

3. Was the firm of Mayadas Lakhmichand dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit?

4. If so, are Lalchand Motiram and Bodraj personally liable for the decree?

The facts of the present litigation appear to be somewhat as follows :—

The plaintiff had a commission agency account with the defendants on which he claimed a large sum. The defendants suffered heavy losses in 1917 and the plaintiff getting nervous about the chances of recovering his dues from the defendants applied to have Mangalsen and his brothers and also certain other persons whom he alleged to be partners in the defendant firm declared insolvents and an interim Receiver was appointed by the Court. As, however, some of the partners of the defendants' firm made a provisional settlement with the plaintiff, no adjudication order was passed, the insolvency application was dismissed and the property restored by the Official Receiver to the representatives of the defendants' firm. According to this settlement Mangalsen paid Rs. 10,000 to the plaintiff in cash and executed a hundi in his favour for Rs. 2,000. Doulatram passed a hundi for Rs. 1,700 and Mayadas and Lakhmidas executed a mortgage-deed in favour of the plaintiff for Rs. 17,000. Mangalsen and Doulatram subsequently failed to honour the hundis while Mayadas and Lakhmidas disputed the mortgage, and refused to have it registered. The plaintiff thereupon instituted this suit on the original cause of action, giving credit for the amounts recovered by him. He served Mangalsen, Mr. Ladharam, Doultram and Prajram as managing partners of the defendants' firm. Mr. Ladharam is the brother of Mangalsen. He appeared as one of the persons served as an alleged partner of this firm and also as Counsel for the firm and on 29th November 1923 he submitted to a consent decree under which he himself was given up. The decree inter alia provides that the plaintiff was at liberty to proceed against the other partners of the defendants' firm in execution under O. XXI, r. 50, C. P. C.

Mr. Ladharam now appears as Counsel for Lalchand and Motiram and also for Mangalsen.

He has offered no evidence to show that the firm of Mayadas Lakhmidas was dissolved prior to the institution of the suit or that it was so dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff. Mangalsen who was examined as a witness in these proceedings was not even questioned by the learned Counsel on this point. Mr. Ladharam relies on the institution by the plaintiff of the insolvency proceedings against the partners of the defendants' firm as effecting dissolution of the firm. The mere institution of these proceedings which were opposed by the partners and were ultimately dismissed vide Ex. 58, cannot effect a dissolution of the partnership. Even the adjudication of a partner does not by itself dissolve the partnership though it affords a ground for the Court to decree dissolution. vide s. 254, cl. 2, Indian Contract Act. Moreover the firm appears to have carried on business after the dismissal of this application and to have been dissolved on 27th April 1923, vide proceedings in Suit No. Ex. 22.

The question whether Mangalsen and his brothers formed members of a joint Hindu family when the business of Mayadas Lakhmidas was being carried on, is in my opinion irrelevant to the present inquiry. Admittedly this firm was not a joint family trading firm confined to the members of the family. Mayadas and Lakhmidas in whose names the business was carried on were strangers to the family of Mangalsen. It must, therefore, be proved as a fact that Mangalsen and his brothers agreed to be partners in the business or held themselves out as such. Even if it be proved that Mangalsen and his brothers formed members of a joint Hindu family and that Mangalsen as manager of such joint family entered into this partnership on behalf of and for the benefit of the family, it would not help the plaintiff. Where the managing member of a joint family enters into a partnership with strangers he does not thereby make other members of the family partners in the business so as to clothe them with all the rights and obligations of a partner as defined by the Indian Contract Act. In such a case the family as a unit does not become a partner but only such of its members, as in fact, enter into a contractual relation with the strangers, will be governed by the Act. (Maynes Hindu Law, para. 300). This is not an application for execution of the decree against joint family property of Mangalsen and his brother on the ground that Mangalsen entered into the partnership on behalf of the joint family under such circumstances, as to render the joint family property liable for the debts of the partnership. The plaintiff seeks to hold the brothers personally liable as partners, under O. XXI, r. 50, C. P. C. Mr. Ladharam has relied on Ex. 35, a document written by him on Re. 1 stamped paper purporting to be executed on the 7th January, 1917, by Mangalsen and his brothers reciting that they had become separate on that date. The genuineness of this document has been challenged by Mr. Kimtarai. He contends that this document was forged on some date subsequent to January 1918 after the Firm of Mayadas Lakhmidas had sustained heavy losses and to protect the joint family property being attached by the creditors.

In the view I take of the case, it is not necessary to go into the question whether Mangalsen and his brothers became separate on 7th January 1917 or on a later date. There is much to be said in support of either theory. If Ex. 35 is a forgery, then Mr. Ladharam is a party to it. He is not only the writer but one of the executants. He has not been examined as a witness and it is not desirable that I should discuss the evidence on the point incomplete as it is, specially when in my opinion it is not necessary.

It is open to the plaintiff to prove affirmatively that Lalchand and Motiram were either partners in the defendants' firm or that they held themselves out to the plaintiff as such, vide Davis v. Hyman & Co. (1) and are, therefore, liable to him under s. 245, Indian Contract Act. The rule of liability by "holding out" is more fully stated in s. 14 of the English Partnership Act of 1890 which is as follows:—

"14. (1) Every one who by words spoken or written or by conduct represents himself or who knowingly suffers himself to be represented, as a partner in a particular firm, is liable as a partner to any one who has on the faith of any such representation given credit to the firm, whether the representation has or has not been made or communicated to the persons so giving credit by or with the knowledge of the apparent partner making the representation or suffering it to be made."

As pointed out by Mulla in his notes to s. 245, Indian Contract Act the omission in s. 245 of the Indian Contract Act providing that the other party must in fact have given credit to the firm in the belief induced by the express or tacit representation of the supposed partners that he is a member of the firm though inelegant is harmless. This doctrine is a branch of the Law of Estoppal and can be relied on only by the persons to whom the representation has been made and who have acted on the faith of its being true. Lord Esher, M. R. In re, Fraser, Ex parte, Centeral Bank of London (2).

Bodraj has been given up. The case of Motiram is simple. He admittedly worked at the shop at Karachi in 1917 for ten or eleven months when the defendants' firm dealt for the plaintiff and took an active part in the management of the business. The explanation offered by Motiram and by his brother Mangalsen is, that Motiram was employed as a servant of Mangalsen. Mangalsen states, that Motiram represented him in the firm, that he had authority to sign for the firm, as he had given him this authority, that he had given him authority to do the work in the same way as he (Mangalsen) could have done if present and that he had the same powers to work in the firm as the other partners Parjaram and Doulatram had (lines 40 to 50). It appears that Motiram managed the business of the firm in the same way as any other managing partner, and the plaintiff who saw him acting when he dealt through the defendant's firm was within his rights to treat him as a partner and to act on it. Whether Motiram was employed as a paid servant of Mangalsen, or looked after the interest of his brother because he was joint with him, or because the business was being carried on for the benefit of the joint family by Mangalsen or whether he was really a partner in this business or not, is not material. I may, however, remark that no documentary evidence has been produced to prove that Motiram was engaged on Rs. 70 per month as alleged and the oral evidence of Allahdad, Ex. 54, who was brought down by Motiram to depose to the salary being settled at Rs. 70 through his intercession is not worthy of any belief.

(1) (1903) 1 K. B. 854; 72 L. J. K. B. 426; 51 W. R. 598; 88 L. T. 284; 19 T. L. R. 348.

(2) (1892) 2 Q. B. 633; 67 L. T. 401; 9 Morrell 256.

In Suit No. 429 of 1918 filed by a creditor of the defendant's firm and referred to arbitration, Motiram has been held to be a partner.

I have no hesitation in holding that Motiram is liable as a partner, and I grant leave to the plaintiff to proceed against him.

The case of Lalchand is not so clear. There is no direct evidence to prove that either he or his brother Motiram were taken up as partners or what their shares were in the business. Nor is there any reliable evidence to show that Lalchand took part in the business or held himself out to the plaintiff as a partner in 1917-18 when the defendants' firm acted as the agents of the plaintiffs.

The plaintiff's own evidence is unsatisfactory. In his previous deposition recorded before the consent decree was passed, he did not allege that Lalchand was one of the persons who worked at the shop. Attarsing, Ex. No. 10, saw Lalchand in 1919. Vazirchand, Ex. 15, saw Lalchand sitting at the shop though he does not say that he saw him working there. He states that he made a settlement of his account with the defendants in 1918, but he is not certain of his dates. The insolvency application was withdrawn in November 1918, and the defendants appear to have made settlement with the Karachi merchants in 1919. It seems that he is mistaken about his settlement being made in 1918 very likely he saw Lalchand at the shop in 1919 about the time when Attarsing saw him.

The witnesses Desraj, Ex. 16, Takhtram Ex. 17, and Khanchand, Ex. 18, are petty brokers. Desraj is a debtor of the defendants and has a pending dispute with them. None of them say that they dealt with Lalchand. I am not prepared to accept their statement that in 1917-18 they saw Lalchand working at the shop when they visited the defendants' shop to secure work. It has not been seriously contested that Lalchand managed the business carried on at Bhaluval in the name of Mangalsen Lalchand. It is not, therefore, likely that Lalchand would work at Karachi during this period or be seen by the brokers. Lalchand and his brothers have sworn that Lalchand came to Karachi in 1919 for the first time. Though their demeanour in the witness-box was unsatisfactory, I am not prepared to disbelieve them on this point.

Mr. Kimatrai has contended with some considerable force that though the plaintiff's evidence is weak, it should be believed in preference to that of the other side as the account books of the defendants' firm which would have served as the best evidence, have been kept back. Mangalsen was served through his Counsel with a summons on 10th May 1924 to produce the books in Court at the date of hearing. He failed to produce them on the plea that he had filed the books in the Court of the Junior Sub-Judge, Rawalpindi. It is not certain when the books were filed in that Court or whether they have at all been filed there. According to Mangalsen he filed them one or two months before the 16th June. It was his duty to have got back the books in time or produced certified copies of the necessary documents to show that he could not get them back. I am of opinion that the books have been intentionally kept back by Mangalsen. He may, however, have reasons of his own for not producing them or may have been acting the fool, and though I am prepared to draw an adverse inference against him and his brother Lalchand I am not prepared to accept the evidence of the plaintiff and his witnesses as true, and to hold that Lalchand was at Karachi or that he represented himself to be a partner.

It appears from the evidence that in 1919 Lalchand helped his brother Mangalsen in settling claims against the defendants.

On 20th August 1919 the defendants settled their account with the firm of Dhanpatmal Diwanichand and paid them Rs. 8,250, vide Amirchand, Ex. 11 and the entry Ex. 12. On the same date Lalchand borrowed Rs. 8,300 from the Punjab National Bank on a hundi drawn by him at Karachi and payable by the firm of Mangalsen Lalchand at Sargoda, vide Tilokchand, Ex. 13 and the entry Ex. 14.

Lalchand admits that he borrowed Rs. 8,300 from the Bank, and spent Rs. 50 on his own account. He, however, denies that he paid this amount to Dhanpatmal Diwanichand and contends that on that date he started a new business at Karachi in the name of Lalchand Bodraj in partnership with one Bodraj Soori, and contributed Rs. 12,000 as his share of the capital made up of Rs. 4,250 brought by him from his native place and Rs. 8,250 borrowed from the Bank. The books of this firm of Lalchand Bodraj have not been produced nor Bodraj called as a witness. It has been asserted with some considerable force that the Firm of Lalchand Bodraj belonged to Lalchand and his brother Bodraj and this fictitious Bodraj Soori had no concern in it and no capital was advanced by Lalchand as alleged. I hold that Rs. 8,250 paid to Dhanpatmal Diwanichand were out of the Rs. 8,300 borrowed by Lalchand and that the denial of Lalchand is false. It does not, however, follow that Lalchand paid this sum as a partner. It may be that he and Mangalsen or all the brothers carried on business at Bhalwal in the name of Mangalsen Lalchand and that he borrowed this money to pay to Mangalsen. Nor can this payment be proof under s. 245, Indian Contract Act of any representation made to the plaintiff on which he acted, being long after the account had ended.

Lalchand has admitted in his evidence that the shop goods of the firm of Mangalsen Lalchand were attached in the execution of a decree against the defendants and that his attempt to raise the attachment failed. That again does not help the plaintiff's case. The goods were attached as the goods of Mangalsen and a suit challenging the validity of the order passed in execution proceedings is pending. The hundi drawn by Mangalsen on the Firm of Mangalsen Lalchand and handed over to the plaintiff which was subsequently dishonoured (Exs. 19 to 21) again cannot render Lalchand liable as a partner or as an ostensible partner.

Lalchand's case has to a great extent been prejudiced in the manner in which it has been handled and in attempting to deny facts which did not affect his case. After giving my careful consideration to the facts of the case, I have come to the conclusion that the evidence is not sufficient to hold him liable as a partner or as an ostensible partner.

My findings, therefore, are as follows:—

Issue No. 1: not necessary.

Issue No. 2 (1st part) Motiram is liable but not Lalchand or Bodraj who has been given up.

(2nd part.) The question cannot be gone into in this suit.

Issue No. 3: in the negative.

Issue No. 4: Motiram is personally liable.

I allow this application against Motiram with costs and dismiss it against Lalchand but in the circumstances of this case, I make no order as to costs in his favour.

P. B. A. Application allowed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 341 OF 1923.

December 11, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

MADHO SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS —APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat LACHHMIN—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 60—Mortgage—Redemption—Clog on equity of redemption—Long term, coupled with other conditions.

The ordinary rule relating to clogs on the equity of redemption is that wherever the bargain is unconscionable and makes redemption impossible the mortgagor is entitled to relief. [p. 910, col. 1.]

Kunj Behari Lal v. Pandit Prag Narayan, 68 Ind. Cas. 529; 9 O. L. J. 294; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 283, Parbati v. Muhammad Hadi, 68 Ind. Cas. 534; 9 O. L. J. 304; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 31 and Sohan Lal v. Kunwar, 61 Ind. Cas. 962; 8 O. L. J. 136, followed.

A long term is not by itself sufficient to constitute a clog on the equity of redemption but it is a factor to be considered in arriving at the conclusion where the terms of the mortgage amount to such clog. A term of seventy-five years by itself raises a strong ground for interference. [ibid.]

Under a deed of mortgage the mortgagee secured a profit at the rate of 25 per cent. and the period of redemption was fixed at seventy-five years. There was a further condition that if redemption was not effected in the 76th year, a further term of 75 years would be added:

Held, that the intention of the mortgagee was to make redemption impossible and that the mortgagor was, therefore, entitled to relief. [ibid.]

Second civil appeal against a decree of the Additional Sub-Judge, Lucknow, dated the 13th August 1923, preferred against that of the Munsif, North Lucknow, dated the 16th December 1922.

Mr. Makund Behari Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Haider Husain, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal by the defendant in a suit for redemption. As in the lower Courts, the plea here is that the suit was premature. The mortgage deed covenanted that no redemption shall be made before the expiry of 75 years from the date of the mortgage. The learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court has pointed out that the bargain was unconscionable in the sense that the profit secured was 25 per cent. and the period for redemption was so long as 75 years. There is a further stipulation which in the ordinary sense of the words would mean that if the mortgage is not redeemed in the 76th year it will enure for another term of 75 years. The learned Counsel for the appellant quoted rulings reported as Kunj Behari Lal v. Pandit Prag Narain (1) and Parbati v. Muhammad Hadi (2), and Sohan Lal v. Kunwar (3). They all lay down the ordinary well known rule that wherever the bargain is unconscionable and makes redemption impossible the mortgagor is entitled to relief. It is true that the long term by itself is not sufficient to constitute a clog on the equity of redemption, but a long term is also relative. I should say that a term of 75 years is so long that by itself it would raise strong ground for interference. When added to it the bargain is unconscionable and a further term of 75 years added if there should be failure of redemption in the 76th years, there can be no doubt that the intention of the mortgagee was to make redemption impossible. The opinion of the Subordinate Courts was perfectly correct and I dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 68 Ind. Cas. 529; 9 O. L. J. 294; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 283.
(2) 68 Ind. Cas. 534; 9 O. L. J. 304; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 31.
(3) 61 Ind. Cas. 962; 8 O. L. J 136.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CIVIL EXTRAORDINARY APPLICATION No. 51 OF 1923.

December 10, 1924.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

BHIKHALAL GIRDHARLAL—PETITIONER

versus

ACHARATLAL LALLUBHAI—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, Sch. II, para. 16—Award, decree on—Revision, whether lies—Interference by High Court—Discretion of Court.

It cannot be laid down that an application under s. 115 of the C. P. C. can under no circumstances be entertained against a decree passed in terms of an award. If the action of the lower Court can be brought within the purview of s. 115, an application for revision would be competent. [p. 910, col. 2; p. 911, col. 1.]

Ghulam Jilani v. Muhammad Hussan, 29 I. A. 51; 4 Bom. L. R. 161 at p. 166; 29 C. 167; 6 C. W. N. 226; 25 P. R. 1902; 12 M. L. J. 77; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 154 (P. C.), and Merali Visram v. Sheriff Devji, 12 Ind. Cas. 687; 36 B. 105; 13 Bom. L. R. 1017, relied on.

There is no obligation on the High Court to interfere with an application made under s. 115 of the C. P. C., even if facts are proved which bring the application within the section. It is purely a matter of discretion and no rules can be laid down as to how such discretion is to be exercised. Whether the Court will interfere or not is entirely for the Court which hears the application to decide on the particular circumstances of the case before it. [p. 911, col. 2.]

Civil Extraordinary Application against an order passed by the First Class Subordinate Judge, Nadiad, in Suit No. 333 of 1920.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. M. K. Thakor), for the Petitioner.

Mr. H. C. Coyajee (with him Mr. H. V. Divatia), for Respondent No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application by the petitioner asking this Court to interfere under its powers given by s. 115 of the C. P. C. with the order made by the First Class Subordinate Judge drawing up a decree in terms of the award, which was made in pursuance of an order of the Court, dated June 27, 1922, appointing the second opponent as arbitrator.

The first question is whether such an application is competent. We do not think that the authorities on the point go so far as to decide that no application can be entertained under s. 115 against a decree passed in terms of an award. It is true that the head-note in Ghulam Jilani v. Muhammad Hussan (1) is to this effect, but it is not warranted by the terms of their Lordships' judgment, as we read it. At page 60 the judgment says:—

(1) 29 I. A. 51; 4 Bom. L. R. 161 at p. 166; 29 C. 167; 6 C. W. N. 226; 25 P. R. 1902; 12 M. L. J. 77; 8 Sar P. C. J. 154 (P. C.).

"The award having been duly made and not having been corrected or modified, and the application to set it aside having been refused, the Subordinate Judge had no option but to pronounce a decree in accordance with it. The Subordinate Judge does not appear to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in him by law, or to have failed to exercise the jurisdiction so vested, or to have acted in the exercise of his jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. He appears to have followed strictly the course prescribed by the Code.

"Inasmuch as their Lordships hold that the application in revision was incompetent, it would be a work of supererogation to discuss the various objections raised by the appellants in the High Court."

The inference is clear, that if it had appeared that the Subordinate Judge had brought himself within the provisions of s. 115, the application for revision would have been competent. But none of the objections in that particular case were directed to those provisions. We cannot agree, therefore, with the expression of opinion of Mr. Mulla in his notes to paras. 15 and 16 of the Second Schedule to the, Code, that no application for revision should be admitted in the case of an award, and we agree with the decision of this Court in Merali Visram v. Sheriff Devji (2). In this case the petitioner raised certain objections to the award of the arbitrator, making various allegations against the arbitrator, which, it was contended, if proved, amounted to misconduct. It is true that the Judge, on the application to set aside the award, did not deal seriatim with all the allegations made by the petitioner against the arbitrator. He dealt with some of the objections, notably with regard to an item of Rs. 13,430, which the arbitrator, who had been a party to the partnership suit, had allowed himself, and an item of Rs. 14,862 which the arbitrator had allowed to another partner Pranjivan, and concluded by saying: "There is thus no misconduct proved and I hold the award cannot be set aside and should be filed and a decree drawn up in terms of the award."

It would have been better if the Judge had referred to all the objections in the petition, stating whether they had been relied upon or not when the matter was argued before him.

But we think the proper inference for this Court in revision to make is that the Judge acted properly in dealing with the objections, and that though he may not have made a reference to every one of them in his judgment, the omission points rather to the fact that those objections were not pressed before him. One of the allegations was that the arbitrator acted unfairly towards the petitioner in not hearing him or his evidence. Mr. Coyajee has pointed out to us that although a summons was issued to the arbitrator to be examined as a witness, yet no attempt was made to examine him, but that was not the fault of the respondent.

We think, therefore, that it is more probable that the petitioner felt that these objections could not be pressed, so that there are no grounds on which we should exercise our discretion by interfering under s. 115. In fact there are some reasons for believing that this application was simply made for delay.

It seems necessary to point out again, as has been done in many other cases, that there is no obligation on the High Court to interfere on an application made under s. 115, even if facts are proved which bring the application within the section. It is purely a matter of discretion, and we cannot lay down any rules how that discretion is to be exercised. Whether the Court will interfere or not is entirely for the Court which hears the application to decide on the particular circumstances of the case before it.

We would, therefore, discharge the Rule with costs.

Z. K. Rule discharged.

(2) 12 Ind. Cas. 687; 36 B. 105; 13 Bom. L. R. 1017.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 260 OF 1924.

December 9, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

GOVIND—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

Musammat VITHABAI—PLAINTIFF—NON-APPLICANT.

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), ss. 7 (1), (2), 12—Maintenance, arrears of, suit to recover—Court-fee payable—Decision of First Court, whether final—Appeal, whether lies.

Section 12 of the Court Fees Act only applies to a decision as to the valuation of a suit which falls within a particular class, and not to a decision as to the particular class in which a suit falls, that is to say, if there is no doubt as to the class in which a suit falls and the section of the Court Fees Act which applies to it, the decision of the First Court, as to valuation, which depends on the value of the property in suit, is final; but if there is a dispute as to the class in which the suit falls, that is to say, the section of the Court Fees Act, which applies to it, an appeal will lie from the decision of the First Court. Dada Bhau Kittur v. Nagesh Ramchandra, 23 B. 486; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 323, relied on.

A suit to recover arrears of maintenance, in which there is no prayer for declaration as to a right to future maintenance, falls within cl. (1) of s. 7 of the Court Fees Act.

Application for revision against the order of the District Judge, Nagpur, dated the 21st July 1924, in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 9 of 1924.

Mr. A. V. Wazalwar, for the Applicant.

Mr. M. R. Bobde, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—This is an application for revision of an order, passed in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 9 of 1924, by the District Judge, Nagpur, against the order of a Second Class Subordinate Judge, Nagpur.

The plaintiff (non-applicant) sued for arrears of maintenance under an agreement and valued her suit for the purpose of Court-fees and jurisdiction under s. 7, cl. (1), of the Court Fees Act. The First Court held that the suit should be valued under s. 7, cl. (2), as a suit for declaration, and returned the plaint for amendment of the valuation for the purpose of Court-fees and jurisdiction. The Subordinate Judge further stated that on representation of the amended plaint he would pass the necessary order for presentation to the proper Court as he had no jurisdiction to try the suit, it being above the pecuniary limit of suit triable by him.

On appeal this order was reversed by the District Judge, holding that the First Court was wrong in holding that the claim for maintenance should have been valued at Rs. 3,008 and that it had no jurisdiction to try the suit. The lower Court was directed to take the plaint on its file and to dispose of it according to law. The defendant makes this application for revision.

Two points are raised. The first is that under s. 12 of the Indian Court Fees Act, 1870, there was no appeal against the decision of the First Court on the question of valuation; and the second point is that the suit should be valued both under s. 7 (1) and s. 7 (2) of the Court Fees Act, being a suit both for arrears of maintenance under cl. (1) and also for a declaration of the right to maintenance under cl. (2) of s. 7.

So far as the first of these contentions is concerned, the law is quite clear. Section 12 of the Court Fees Act only applies to a decision as to the valuation of a suit, which falls within a particular class, and not to a decision as to the particular class in which a suit falls, that is to say, if there is no doubt as to the class, in which the suit falls, and the section of the Court Fees Act, which applies to it, the decision of the First Court as to the valuation, which depends on the value of the property in suit, is final; but if, as in the present case, there is a dispute as to the class in which the suit falls, that is to say, the section of the Court Fees Act which applies to it, an appeal will lie. This has frequently been held by the High Courts, and I need only refer to one authority Dada Bhau Kittur v. Nagesh Ramchandra (1). The question in the present case is whether the suit should be valued under s. 7, cl. (1), or s. 7, cl. (2), or both, and an appeal will lie against the order.

I entirely agree with the reasons given by the learned District Judge for holding that the suit falls under s. 7, cl. (1). There is no prayer for a declaration in the plaint. The plaintiff sues for arrears of maintenance only. The effect of any decree she obtains in the suit, will only be to give her the arrears claimed and cannot by itself give her a right to future maintenance, for which she will have to bring a separate suit if the defendant does not pay her in future. It may be that the effect of the decree in this case would be to make the question of the agreement and the liability under it res judicata as between the parties, but that would not effect future proceedings, as this decree could only be executed in respect of the amounts claimed in this suit for the past and it would not operate with respect to the sums for the future, for which the plaintiff would have to bring a separate suit. Section 7, cl. (2) of the Court Fees Act, therefore, has no application. The suit is governed by s. 7, cl. (1), and the order of the lower Appellate Court, holding that the suit is properly valued and is within the jurisdiction of the First Court, is correct.

The application is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Application dismissed.

(1) 23 B. 486; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 323.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 301 OF 1924.
January 30, 1925.
Present:—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.
Musammat INDRANI BAHU—APPLICANT
versus Musammat RANI BADI DULAIYA—NON-APPLICANT.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 82, 83—Prosecution for offence under s. 82—Sanction of Registering Officer, whether necessary.

The permission of the Registering Officer under s. 83 of the Registration Act is not a necessary condition precedent to the initiation of a prosecution by a private individual against a person for an offence under s. 82 of the Act.

Hussain Khan v. Emperor, 36 Ind. Cas. 145; 38 A. 354; 14 A. L. J. 412; 17 Cr. L. J. 465, Queen-Empress v. Batesar Mandal, 10 C. 604; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 405, Emperor v. Jiwan, 27 Ind. Cas. 208; 37 A. 107; 13 A. L. J. 4; 16 Cr. L. J. 144 and Husain Khan v. Emperor, 39 Ind. Cas. 690; 39 A. 293; 15 A. L. J. 136; 18 Cr. L. J. 546, referred to.

Gopinath v. Kuldip Singh, 11 C. 566; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1136, and In re Piramu Nadathi, 38 Ind. Cas. 976; 40 M. 880; 21 M. L. T. 118; 5 L. W. 414; 18 Cr. L. J. 416, relied on.

Application for revision against the judgment of the Sessions Judge, Saugor, dated the 28th August 1924, in Criminal Revision No. 8 of 1924.

Mr. G. L. Subhedar, for the Applicant.

Mr. G. P. Dick, for the Crown.

ORDER.—In this case the complainant Musammat Rani Badi Dulaiya brought a complaint under s. 82 of the Registration Act stating that the accused Musammat Indrani Bahu of Barodia executed a sale-deed in her favour in respect of a third patti of Mouza Samaspur, on 19th July 1923, receiving Rs. 500 as earnest money, but that as she subsequently wished to sell the same patti to another, she denied the execution of the deed and the receipt of payment before the Sub-Registrar. An application was made to the Sub-Registrar for sanction to prosecute the accused but the Sub-Registrar refused to sanction the prosecution. The Trial Court, i.e., the Tahsildar and Magistrate, First Class, Saugor, relying on the case of Hussain Khan v. Emperor (1) held that the permission referred to in s. 83 of the Registration Act, 1908, is a necessary condition precedent to the prosecution of any person for an offence mentioned in s. 82 of the Act. He, therefore, discharged the accused.

(1) 36 Ind. Cas. 145; 38 A. 354; 14 A. L. J. 412; 17 Cr. L. J. 465.

The Sessions Judge in revision holds a contrary opinion and has directed a further enquiry into the case. Hence the present application by the accused.

The question is a somewhat disputed one. The decision of two Judges of the Calcutta High Court in Queen-Empress v. Batesar Mandal (2) is in favour of the applicant; and that view is upheld in Emperor v. Jiwan (3). A single Judge of the same Court in Hussain Khan v. Emperor (4) finds that what is required for the initiation of a prosecution under the Registration Act is the permission of the Registration Officer.

I can find no published or other rulings of this Court on the point, but it seems to me that the decision in Gopinath v. Kuldip Singh (5) a Full Bench ruling, and In re Piramu Nadathi (6) correctly express the law on this subject. It has been held that permission under s. 83 of the Registration Act is not a preliminary requisite for the institution by a private person of proceedings for an offence under s. 82 of the Act.

It has to be noted that s. 83 of the Registration Act merely states that a prosecution for any offence under this Act may be commenced by the permission of certain officials named under the section. It does not say "must be." For these reasons I agree with the Sessions Judge in thinking that the previous sanction of the Sub-Registrar or any officer of the Registration Department is not necessary in the present case, and that the case has been rightly ordered to proceed.

I dismiss this application.

G. R. D. Application dismissed.
Z. K.

(2) 10 C. 604; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 405.
(3) 27 Ind. Cas. 208; 37 A. 107; 13 A. L. J. 4; 16 Cr. L. J. 144.
(4) 39 Ind. Cas. 690; 39 A. 293; 15 A. L. J. 136; 18 Cr. L. J. 546.
(5) 11 C. 566; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1136.
(6) 38 Ind. Cas. 976; 40 M. 880; 21 M. L. T. 118; 5 L. W. 414; 18 Cr. L. J. 416.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATION No. 49 OF 1924.

June 30, 1924.

Present:—Mr Kennedy, J. C., and Mr. Lobo, A. J. C.

RAHIMTULLAH IBRAHIM—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 264 — Summary trial —Notes of evidence, whether part of the record—Important matter—Magistrate, duty of—Proper procedure—Ports Act (XV of 1908), s. 54—"Disobedience", meaning of.

Under s. 264 of the Cr. P. C. the judgment is the one and the only record in cases which are tried summarily and in which appeal lies and the rough and incomplete notes of evidence taken by the Magistrate cannot and should not be transcribed and attached to the record. [p. 914, col. 2.]

Where owing to the bulk of evidence or the complication of the matters or owing to the difficult nature of points at issue, it is not possible for the Magistrate to keep in his mind without making exhaustive notes the evidence of important facts, then, even though the offence may be technical and be punishable only with a slight sentence, the Magistrate is not acting properly if he applies the summary procedure to such a trial and should he in so important a case apply the summary procedure, then, no doubt, the appellate or revisional Court will re-direct the re-trial of the case in a more appropriate form. [p. 914, col 2; p. 915, col. 1.]

The word "disobey" in s. 54 of the Indian Ports Act does not mean "intentional disobedience." [p. 915, col. 1.]

Revision against the order of the City Magistrate, Karachi, dated the 17th January 1924.

Mr. Tahilram Maniram, for the Applicant.

Mr. T. G. Elphinston, Public Prosecutor, for Sind, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the accused Rahimtullah who is a Tindal of the country craft called 'Haripassa' has been convicted of various offences in respect of his navigation of the said vessel and sentenced to the total fine of Rs. 60. He comes here in revision.

'Haripassa' was a vessel of carrying capacity of about 170 tons which was berthed in the Napier Mole Boat Wharf, in the Port of Karachi. She was fully loaded with rice consigned to Maldev Islands and left the Wharf intending to proceed to Kiamari also within the limits of the Karachi Port for the purpose of taking on water. The nevigable channel near the Napier Mole Boat Wharf is narrow and apparently owing to very inexpert navigation the vessel grounded on a sand bank about 400 feet from the Wharf. The boat was seriously damaged and the cargo (much of it) was spoiled.

The specific offences which the accused is said to have committed are these:—

1. Infraction of Port Rule No. 8 inasmuch as he failed to give 24 hours notice of his intention to vacate his berth.
2. Infraction of s. 31 (1) of Act XV of 1908, in moving without a pilot, and
3. Committing an offence under s. 280, Indian Penal Code, for rash and negligent navigation.

Before going into the merits of this case, it is right that we should express our opinion as to the point raised and urged with considerable emphasis by the Pleader of the applicant and that is as to the form of the record. The trial was a summary trial and the complaint of the applicant's Pleader is that although the Magistrate had made some rough notes of the evidence, yet those notes have not been transcribed and are not attached to the record. Now, there is indubitably a considerable amount of judicial authority in support of the proposition that where a Magistrate tries a case summarily and does as a matter of fact take rough notes, those rough notes should be transcribed and attached to the record. But we are of opinion that that course is not one contemplated by the law and it is otherwise inconvenient. Section 264 of the Cr. P. C. says distinctly that the judgment in a summary case shall be the one and only record in cases coming within the section, that is to say, in cases in which an appeal lies. It, therefore, appears to us that an attempt to increase the record will be illegal. Moreover it seems to us clear that to attach to the record fragmentary and incomplete notes which are intended not to form the full record of evidence but merely to supplement the defective memory of the trying Magistrate will certainly embarass an Appellate Court. And it will be inconvenient because it is found by experience that the admission of such evidence which may be likened to the adminicles of evidence familar to certain judicial systems does in the long run cause harm to accused persons. Having said so much, it is necessary, on the other hand to express strongly our opinion that a summary trial is meant to be a summary trial and that where owing to the bulk of the evidence or the complication of the matters or owing to the difficult nature of points of issue, it is not possible for the Magistrate to keep in his mind without making exhaustive notes the evidence of important facts, then even though the offence may be technical and be punishable only with a slight sentence, the Magistrate is not acting properly if he applies the summary procedure to such a trial and should he in so important a case apply the summary procedure, then no doubt the appellate or revisional Court will direct the re-trial of the case in more appropriate form. In the present case, we do not find that there is any valid objection to be taken to the procedure of the learned Magistrate. The judgment is very full, contains all salient facts. The question now is whether on the facts so given, the offences charged against the accused have been committed.

As regards the third charge, that is to say, in respect of rash and negligent navigation, it does not appear to us that on the facts given in the judgment, the conviction can be sustained. No doubt the accused navigated the ship in an extremely slovenly manner but it is necessary to prove that he navigated it so as to endanger human life or in a manner which was likely to cause hurt or injury to other persons, or property. And this does not appear from the finding of the Magistrate on this point of the case. We, therefore, set aside his conviction under s. 280, Indian Penal Code, and direct the fine of Rs. 50, if paid, to be refunded.

As regards the first charge, that is to say as regards the 24 hours notice of vacation of the berth, it seems quite clear, he has committed this offence. It was urged that this was a mere fiscal regulation. It is clearly nothing of that sort. Section 8 of the Port Rules of the 16th September 1915 makes it quite clear that the object of the Rule is to enable the Port Authorities to inform the Master as to whether the state of the tide is such that it is safe for him to navigate or move about the harbour, for the benefit not only of the Master but also for that of persons in other ships who do not wish to be exposed to the risk of colliding with derelicts. He is, therefore, rightly convicted as to this. It is preposterous to argue that the word "disobey" in s. 54 connotes intentional disobedience for it is obviously the duty of persons navigating in Ports to acquaint themselves with the Rules of the Port and to comply with them.

As regards s. 31 (1) the rule appears to have not been rigidly in force and apparently since three or four years it has been the habit of tindals of all country crafts to move in the harbour without any permission of the Port Trust or with the Pilot or Harbour Master. It is strongly urged that this rule is a very unreasonable rule which throws heavy expense on the owners of small country crafts. With the policy of the rule we have nothing to do. We have no doubt that the Port Trust are the best judges of the advantage of any particular policy. All we are concerned with is to see whether s. 31 (1) is in force or not...The question is whether Karachi is a notified Port under s. 31 of the Act. Section 31 reproduces with a certain modification the provision of a parallel section in Act XII of 1875. Karachi is a notified Port for the purposes of that Act by virtue of Government Resolution of 16th of October 1877. The previous proclamations are kept in force not only by the General Clauses Act but also by s. 2, cl. 2 of the Indian Ports Act, X of 1889. It is true that in the present section there is a limitation not only on moving the ship within the limits of the Port but also with respect to entering and leaving it, which latter conditions did not exist in the previous sections. And it might be urged that as regards entering and leaving there has been no effectual notification of this Port under s. 31 (1). But that cannot be said to apply in the present case when the Master was, neither leaving nor entering the Port but merely moving within it. The accused was, therefore, bound unless he had any written permission of the Superintendent not to move without a pilot or similar officer on board. The rule is a salutary one and desuetude cannot be treated as an equivalent to repeal. Of course a prosecution for infraction of a rule which has fallen into desuetude might work hardship and it is for that reason the Magistrate has very wisely inflicted merely a nominal fine. That fine is sufficient to indicate to people that they must acquaint themselves with the law and obey it.

We think, therefore, that there is no ground shown to interfere in revision in regard to offences committed by the accused under ss. 54 and 31 (1) of Act XV of 1908.

K. S. D. Order accordingly.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 270 OF 1924.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 226 OF 1924.)
December 18, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.

In re SONAIMUTHU AMBALAM—ACCUSED—PETITIONER.

Arms Act (XI of 1878), s. 19 (e)—"Going armed," meaning of—Intention to use weapon.

The expression "going armed" within the meaning of cl. (e) of s. 19 of the Arms Act indicates, first, an intention to use the weapon as a fire-arm, and secondly, the possibility of using it. For the purpose of a conviction under cl. (e), there must be some clear evidence of intention on the part of the accused to use the weapon.

Where in a prosecution under the section, it was found that the accused had only one empty cartridge in his fire-arm and no cartridges at all were found on the person of the accused and there was no proof of the accused having ever previously used the fire-arm:

Held, that the accused could not be convicted of an offence under s. 19 (e) of the Arms Act.

Petition, under ss. 435 and 439 of Cr. P. C., 1898, praying the High Court to revise the conviction and sentence of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Ramnad, in C. C. No. 8 of 1924.

Messrs. C. Narasimhachariar and V. Raghavachariar, for the Petitioner.

The Public Prosecutor, on behalf of the Crown.

ORDER.—The question in this case is whether the accused was properly convicted of the offence of "going armed" within the meaning of cl. (e) of s. 19 of the Indian Arms Act (Act XI of 1878). It would appear that he has been discharged under cl. (f) of the same section of being in possession of arms in contravention of the provisions of s. 14 or 15. I should have thought that the offence of going armed with fire-arm was considerably more narrow than the offence of being in possession merely of fire-arms. The expression "going armed" clearly indicates two things, namely, firstly, of an intention to use it as a fire-arm, and secondly, the possibility of using it. In this case there was only one empty cartridge in the weapon and no cartridges at all have been found on the person of the accused. This alone would show that, in the circumstances under which he was found to be in possession of the fire-arm, it would not be possible for him to use the weapon as a fire-arm. Further, in my judgment, for the purpose of conviction under cl. (e) of that section, there must be some clear evidence of intention on the part of the accused to use the weapon. That element is absolutely lacking in the present case. If there had been some evidence of his having at least previously used it, there would have been proof of an intention at the time when the accused was charged with having committed the offence. But in the absence of any evidence whatever bearing on the intention of the accused to use it as a fire-arm, I think it is clear that the conviction of the accused under that clause was wrong. The conviction and sentence are, therefore, set aside and the fine, if already paid, will be refunded to the accused. The order of confiscation, dated the 29th February 1924, will be set aside and the fire-arm will be restored to its owner if he has still got a license.

V. N. V.
Z. K.

Conviction set aside.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ACQUITTAL APPEAL No. 88 OF 1924.
August 28, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kennedy, J. C. and Mr. Aston, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—APPELLANT
versus
SUNDERDAS AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED.

Accomplice, evidence of—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 216A, applicability of.

The evidence of an approver, who owns himself to be a scoundrel and is also a traitor must be received with caution but not rejected totally. It is enough if after considering such evidence and the general corroborative evidence the Court is of opinion that the whole body of evidence put together proves the guilt of the accused person. [p. 917, col. 2.]

To attract the penalty of section under s. 216A, Penal Code, it is not enough that a person should be harbouring dacoits in general but the section renders it penal to harbour persons who intend to commit a particular dacoity. [p. 918, col. 1.]

Appeal against an order of the Sessions Judge, Sukkur, dated the 27th February 1924.

Mr. T. G. Elphinston, Public Prosecutor for Sind, for the Crown.

Mr. Jhamatmal Valiram, for Accused No. 1.

Mr. Hassamal M. Gurbuxani, for Accused No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by Local Government against the order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Judge of Sukkur in the case of two persons Sunderdas and his brother Nandlal who were charged with having committed offences under ss. 118 and 216 A of the Indian Penal Code.

We are very reluctant to interfere with an order of an acquittal and we do not do so unless necessity is clearly made out. In the present case, however, it appears to us that the learned Sessions Judge has approached this case from a wrong angle and the consequence has been that he has come to a decision to which as it would appear from his judgment he certainly would not have come, had he not approached the case in the manner as stated.

A serious dacoity took place in a village called Maruwala about 40 miles from Sukkur where the accused reside. This dacoity was indubitably committed by a band of Punjabi dacoits. It is clear that both the accused were old friends and intimates of this band of dacoits in their native habitat, that the dacoits' band in coming to Sukkur required the aid of the accused, that the dacoits' band sold at the kothi of these accused persons considerable quantity of gold and pearls and stones which they had recently acquired by dacoity committed on tour and that at the commission of this Maruwala dacoity the servant-employee of the accused persons took part. Now, this evidence without more seems to make a case of circumstantial evidence so strong that on that alone, it would be possible to find that the accused were all aware of the intention of the dacoits to commit the Maruwala dacoity and I think it is quite likely on their evidence alone, the Court would be justified in finding that the accused were well aware of the intention of the dacoits to commit a dacoity. If that was so, it was their duty under the Cr. P. C. to give information to the Police. They did not do so. If they were in no way connected with the dacoits and this duty lay upon them, yet they both have failed to give that information, it might well have been found on that evidence alone they were guilty of an offence under s. 118. But in the present case the circumstantial evidence is very much strengthend by the evidence of Habib. Habib of course is a person whose evidence must be accepted with care. It is not necessary to go deeply into the law of approvers and of accomplices because common sense at the first glance shows that a person who owns himself to be a scoundrel and in addition to that is also a traitor is a person whose evidence must be received with caution. Nevertheless it is not our opinion that the Statute Law requires the total rejection of accomplice's evidence except in such particulars, as there is such evidence in support of it as to make the evidence of one informer unnecessary but it is enough if after considering the evidence given and the general corroborative evidence the Court is of the opinion that the whole body of evidence put together proves the guilt of the accused person. The learned Sessions Judge appears first to have considered the evidence of the approver as he may be called and then to have sought the corroboration of each individual statement in the circumstantial evidence. Whereas the correct way of dealing with the questions in the present case is to consider the circumstantial evidence first, then see whether the approver's evidence fits in with that. It seems clear to us that the learned Sessions Judge did himself actually believe the approver but thought he was forbidden by some rule of law from acting on his belief. It is this procedure which seems to us to have vitiated the arguments of the learned Sessions Judge in favour of the acquittal of the accused.

Taking the evidence of Habib along with that circumstantial evidence. it appears perfectly certain, as before without that evidence, it would appear highly probable that the accused Sunderdas, at any rate, was well aware of the intention, of these people to commit this dacoity inasmuch as he was present at a meeting held to settle precisely what dacoity should be committed. That being so, it seems to us clear as regards Sunderdas he should have been convicted of an offence under s. 118.

And as regards the younger brother Nandlal, in the first place the question of his knowledge about the intention of the dacoits is not so clear and in the next place it can hardly be expected that the younger brother would interfere in the arrangement of his elder brother and it is on the elder brother as the manager of the house that the burden in the first place lay to give information of the intended plan of the crime known both to the brothers. We are of opinion, on the whole, therefore, that the case under s. 118 is not made out against Nandlal. We do not say that a younger brother is excused from his duty, but it is certain that it may well be that a younger brother may be in perfect innocence less vigilant than the brother on whom the primary responsibility rests.

As regards the charge under s. 216A, the drafting of the section is such that it appears to us in the present case the offence under section is not made out in the case of either of the accused. The section requires that no one should harbour any persons who are about to commit a dacoity with the intention of facilitating the commission of such dacoity. It would appear, therefore, it is not enough to attract the penalty of the section that a person should be harbouring dacoits in general but the section renders it penal to harbour persons who intend to commit a particular dacoity. I at least interpret the section in this way. Now, in the present case although it is quite likely there may have been a general talk as to the commission of some dacoity while these people were staying in the house of the accused yet it appears that the dacoits never returned to this house after the final meeting at which the commission of this particular dacoity was settled. This meeting was held in the bed of a river and the dacoits along with Doulat went off at once to commit it. If that be the case, it would appear that strictly speaking no offence under s. 216A is committed.

The result of all this is, that we think that the appeal should be admitted as regards Sunderdas in respect of the charge under s. 118 and should be dismissed against Nandlal altogether.

We have considered what punishment should be inflicted on Sunderdas. The offence was actually committed so that the case falls under first part of s. 118. We are by no means inclined to encourage persons who have abetted serious dacoities even though while sharing in the profits with the dacoits they may not share with them the dangers. On the other hand, the accused was under detention for over ten months as appears from the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge. We think, therefore, that a sentence of three years rigorous imprisonment would be sufficient.

We set aside the order of acquittal in respect of Sunderdas and direct that he should undergo rigorous imprisonment for three years under s. 118, Indian Penal Code.

S. D. Order set aside.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 127-B OF 1924.

January 23, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

FAKIRA SAMBHAJI—ACCUSED—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Forest Act (VII of 1878), s. 25 (d)—Berar Grazing Rules- Grazing license—Cattle belonging to licensee trespassing into reserve forest— Licensee, whether criminally liable—Master and servant—Master, criminal liability of, for acts of servant.

A master is not criminally responsible for the acts of his servant unless he expressly commands or personally co-operates in them or such responsibility is expressly imposed on him by Statute or contract. [p. 920, col. 1.]

There is nothing in the Grazing Rules for Berar framed under the Forest Act, that imposes criminal liability on a licensee for grazing for the acts of his servant. [p. 919, col. 2.]

A person who has obtained a grazing license under the Forest Act cannot be convicted of an offence under s. 25 (d) of the Act in the absence of evidence that he pastured the cattle in the reserve forest himself or permitted them by some overt act or negligent omission to trespass in the reserve forest. [p. 919, col. 1.]

Criminal revision against an order of the District Magistrate, Yeotmal, dated the 26th June 1924, in Criminal Case No. 1846 of 1924.

Mr. A. C. Roy, for the Applicant.

Mr. G. P. Dick, for the Crown.

ORDER.—This application raises an important point of law. The applicant in this case has been convicted under s. 25 (d) of the Indian Forest Act of 1878, of allowing his cattle to trespass in a reserved forest and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 150 by the Second Class Magistrate, Kelapur. The conviction and sentence were upheld on appeal by the District Magistrate, Yeotmal.

The applicant applies in revision.

It is not disputed that the cattle were found grazing in the reserved forest, but the defence was that they were frightened by a bear and ran away from the grazier who was in charge of them. This story has been disbelieved by the Courts below and the finding of the First Court is that the cattle strayed into the reserved forest through the negligence of the accused's grazier, for which he is criminally responsible.

It is admitted that the accused was not personally present, the cattle being sent out to graze in charge of the grazier. The accused holds a license for grazing cattle in the forest in the form given at page 300 of the Central Provinces Forest Manual. 4th edition. I had adjourned the hearing of the case in order that the license might be produced.

The applicant relies on the case of Saiyyad Rahim v. Emperor (1), in which it was held that "a master is not criminally responsible for the acts of his servant unless, (1) he expressly commands or personally co-operates in them; and (2) such responsibility is expressly imposed on him by Statute, or contract. The owner of cattle found grazing in a Government Forest Reserve cannot be convicted under s. 25 (d), Indian Forest Act (VII of 1878) in the absence of evidence that he pastured the cattle, or permitted them by some overt act or negligent omission to trespass in the reserve."

The learned District Magistrate in showing cause has distinguished the case, quoted above, on the ground that in it the cattle were in charge of an adult herdsman, whereas in the present case "the cattle were not found in the custody of anybody. Secondly, in Saiyyad Rahim v. Emperor (1) the owner had not obtained a grazing license or in the words of Sir Henry Stanyon 'had not bound himself by any contractual obligation to use or abstain from using the reserved forests in a particular way'. In this case the applicant had taken out a grazing license, and even admitting that the act of trespass is by the grazier the master is liable." The District Magistrate relies on the observations in Saiyyad Rahim v. Emperor (1) at page 81*, where Sir Henry Stanyon said: "I am perfectly clear that a licensee under the Indian Forest Act would be liable criminaliter for every act of his agent, done in carrying on the business delegated to him which amounts to a breach of the conditions of the license made criminally punishable by the Act or any rule thereunder."

It is contended on behalf of the applicant that the word "licensee" in this passage means a forest contractor or something of the kind. At page 82* of the judgment it is stated that "The words of s. 25 (d) of the Indian Forest Act clearly apply only to the person who does any of the acts mentioned therein. Supposing the language to be ambiguous, it must be construed in the manner most favourable to the liberties of subjects: Reg. v. Bhista Bin Madanna (2)." I am led to think that the expression "license" used at page 81 of this judgment refers to other than the grazing license, for the cases referred to at page 80 are all cases of licenses to sell arms, liquor drugs and the like, and in view of the clear statement referred to above that s. 25 (d) of the Indian Forest Act refers only to the person who does any of the acts mentioned therein, I do not think the learned Judge intended to include a person holding a license for grazing in his remarks at page 81 referring to a licensee under the Indian Forest Act. At page 82* of this judgment it is stated "that if the Legislature had intended to fasten upon owners such responsibility as has been laid upon the applicant in this case—forming as it does an exception to the general rule of law that a person's criminal responsibility is confined to his own acts—it would not have left its intention to be gathered by mere doubtful inference, or have conveyed it in 'cloudy and dark words' only, but would have made it manifest with reasonable clearness. The liability is expressly declared in the rules under which grazing licenses are issued by the Forest Department, and the tendency is to make clear by express words or necessary implication the exceptional cases where a principal is criminal responsible for offences committed by his agent without his knowledge and connivance."

I have been unable to find anything in the grazing rules for Berar, given in Appendix XV of the Central Provinces Forest Manual which impose any liability such as is referred to in this judgment, that is to say the liability imposed for the acts of his servants, nor has the learned Counsel for the Crown been able to point to any such rule.

The form of pass, which is Appendix C to Appendix XV, at page 300 of the Forest Manual, contains only the following conditions: "(1) All cattle taken into or allowed to stay in the forest shall be accompanied by a herdsman in charge of them. (2) The herdsman will take this license with him whenever he takes the cattle into the forests and will then produce it on the demand of any forest official." There is no clause that the owner is liable when his herdsman grazes cattle in a Government Reserved Forest. In the circumstances, I am of opinion that this license does not impose any liability on the owner for the acts of his herdsman unless it is proved that he expressly commanded or personally co-operated in them.

(1) 29 Ind. Cas. 325; 11 N. L. R. 76; 16 Cr. L. J. 485.

(2) 1 B. 308 at p. 311; 1 Ind. Jur. 245; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 205.

*Pages of 11 N. L. R.—[Ed.]

I am of opinion, therefore, that the accused is not criminally responsible for the acts of his servant. It has been found by the First Court that there was a criminal negligence on the part of the grazier, and there is evidence that the cattle were sent out in charge of a grazier, nor is it likely that any man would send his cattle out to graze in the forest alone. In these circumstances I am of opinion that the case is governed by the general rule that the master is not criminally responsible for the acts of his servant and that no responsibility is expressly imposed by the Statute itself or the license on the owner of the cattle.

I, therefore, set aside the conviction and sentence and direct that the fine if paid be returned to the applicant.

Z. K. Conviction set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 522 OF 1924.

January 16, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Newbould and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

MESER BEPARI AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 342, 364—Examination of accused—Statement made by Pleader, whether compliance with section—Omission to comply with provisions of s. 364, effect of.

One of the essential points for which s. 342 of the Cr. P. C. provides is that the accused himself should have an opportunity of making his statement directly to the Court and not through the intervention of a Pleader. A statement made by the Pleader on behalf of an accused person does not constitute compliance with the provisions of that section. [p. 920, col. 2.]

The provisions of s. 364 of the Cr. P. C., are mandatory and an omission to comply with those provisions vitiates a trial. [p. 921, col. 1.]

Mr. B. M. Sen and Babu Monmotha Nath Ray, for the Appellants.

Mr. Khundkar, Deputy Legal Remembrancer, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this appeal the learned Counsel appearing for the appellants has succeeded on preliminary point and it is not necessary to deal with the facts. It is contended that the trial was vitiated owing to the failure of the learned Sessions Judge to comply with the provisions of s. 342 and s. 364, Cr. P. C. As regards non-compliance with s. 342 the affidavit filed on behalf of the appellants is in a form which this Court has more than once taken serious objection. The statement in the affidavit is as follows:—"That during the trial before the Court of Session at the close of the prosecution case and before the accused were called on to enter upon their defence the accused were not examined under s. 342, Cr. P. C." This statement leaves in doubt whether the accused were examined at all or whether they were examined but not at the right stage of the trial, or whether they were examined at the right stage of the trial, and it is contended that that examination was not in compliance with the provisions of s. 342, Cr. P. C. In argument we are told that what happened was that at the close of the prosecution case the accused's Pleader and not the accused themselves were asked if they wished to make any statement and the accused's Pleader stated that they would not do so. If that is what happened it was certainly not compliance with s. 342, since one of the essential points for which that section provides is that the accused themselves should have an opportunity of making their statements directly to the Court and not through the intervention of a Pleader. On behalf of the Crown it is stated that information has been received that the accused themselves were questioned. Had the appeal depended solely on this point we should have thought it our duty to enable the Crown to give evidence in the form of an affidavit on this point and should have adjourned the appeal for this purpose. But it appears that the objection as to the procedure under s. 364, Cr. P. C., is sound. All that appears on the record as regards the examination of the accused is contained in the order sheet, the relevant portion being as follows:—"Trial resumed to-day. The statements of the accused recorded in the Committing Magistrate's Court are put in by the Public Prosecutor. The accused do not make any further statement in this Court and decline to examine any witness". No record of the accuseds' examination was recorded and the provisions of s. 364, Cr. P. C., on this point are mandatory, and in two recent unreported cases it has been held that similar omission to comply with the provisions of this section vitiated the trial. These unreported cases are Criminal Reference under s. 307, Cr. P. C., Emperor v. Nani Mandal (1) and Criminal Appeal No. 348 of 1924 decided on the 3rd November 1924. Following these decisions we must hold that the trial of the appellants was not in accordance with law.

We accordingly allow this appeal. We set aside the convictions and the sentence passed on the appellants and direct that the case be re-heard according to law.

Z. K. Conviction and sentence set aside: Re-trial ordered.

(1) 86 Ind. Cas. 345; 41 C. L. J. 50; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 575; 26 Cr. L. J. 761.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 119-B OF 1924.

November 4, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

BHAU—COMPLAINANT—APPLICANT

versus

SYED CHAND AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED —NON-APPLICANTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 250—Compensation, order directing payment of, when to be made—Vexatious charge—Falsity of charge, whether must be established.

In order to justify an order for payment of compensation to the accused person under s. 250 of the Cr. P. C. there must be a finding that the charge against the accused is false, besides being frivolous or vexatious. A vexatious charge may be partly true and the idea conveyed by the word is that the object of the person making the accusation should be primarily to harass the accused person. [p. 922, cols. 1 & 2.]

Case-law referred to.

Criminal revision against an order of the District Magistrate, Buldana, in Criminal Appeal No. 7 of 1924, dated the 20th March 1924.

Mr. N. G. Sarkar, R. B., for the Applicant.

Mr. Atmaram Bhagwant, for the Non-Applicants.

ORDER.—This petition is made for revision of an order under s. 250, Cr. P. C., directing the payment of Rs. 30 as compensation to the two accused.

The facts as found by the District Magistrate are that the complainant is a leader of the Hindu section of the community and the accused of the Muhammadan community of Sindkhed. That the first incident which took place between the complainant and Syed Chand on 13th March 1923, was some altercation between the two rival leaders. The District Magistrate finds that there is nothing improbable in the story told by the prosecution witnesses, so far as the incident which occurred at the Parappa's shop in the morning on 13th March 1923.

As regards the second incident which took place in the galli, shortly afterwards, the District Magistrate thought it to be of a more doubtful character and "the prosecution version" * * * * * did not appear to him to "read convincingly".

He further observes:—"The evidence also reads as if it was manufactured". His conclusions are thus expressed:—

"The conclusion which I have come to after studying the evidence is that though the assault may have occurred as stated it cannot be held to be proved that it did occur and that all the probabilities are that the only scene that did occur occurred at the Parappa's shop and that this is the nucleus on which the exaggerated complaint has been lodged. The prosecution, therefore, has failed to prove the case."

As to the merits of the defence he remarks:—

"I am not quite convinced how far this alibi has been established. * * * * If the alibi be held to be established I agree with the lower Court that it is most improbable that the accused Syed Chand could possibly have been in Sindkhed on the morning of the next day. The lower Court has held this alibi to be proved and though I have still some doubt in the matter, I am not prepared to hold that it has been disproved".

These findings and observations were quite sufficient for dismissing the complaint and acquitting the accused. I do not find fault with it.

It is, however, complained before me that the District Magistrate has gone wrong in confirming the order of the Trying Magistrate under s. 250, Cr. P. C.

The District Magistrate has rightly pointed out that the "the judgment of the Magistrate offends against every accepted principle on what a judgment should be based. * * * in any case a judgment ought not to consist of inferences, but of a statement of the proved facts and the findings of the Court on what those proved facts constitute."

The District Magistrate has not, in my opinion, given sufficient attention to the provisions of s. 250, Cr. P. C., as amended by the Amendment Act of 1923; otherwise he would have come to definite findings on the points which are required to be established as a basis for an order for compensation under that section. His finding is thus expressed:—

"Taking all the facts of the case into consideration I have come to the conclusion that the incident so far as the Bhoy galli affair is concerned did not occur and that complaint in any case was a purely vexatious one lodged in order to further the enmity which has for long admittedly existed between the two parties, and in these circumstances I am not prepared to modify the order passed by the lower Court".

It is contended before me on behalf of the applicant and I think rightly, that these findings were not sufficient to dispose of the question raised in appeal regarding compensation. The District Magistrate's order so far as it holds that the complaint in any case was a purely vexatious one ignores the further element that the complaint must be found to be 'false'. Under the old law if the charge was frivolous or vexatious, this was sufficient to entitle the accused to compensation and if over and above, the charge was false as well, the accused was equally entitled to compensation.

Beni Madhub Kurmi v. Kumud Kumar Biswas (1), Adikkan v. Alagan (2), In re Gopala Bhau Changula (3), Emperor v. Bindesri Prasad (4). Under the present law the charge must be false, besides being frivolous or vexatious.

The Select Committee's report contains the following important remark:—

"We do not think that the procedure of s. 250 should be used in every false case unless the case is also either frivolous or vexatious." The words 'purely vexatious' used by the District Magistrate clearly show that in his opinion the complaint indicates an accusation merely for the purpose of annoyance.

A vexatious charge may be partly true and the idea conveyed by the word is that the object of the person making the accusation should be primarily to harass the persons accused: per Drake-Brockman, J.C., in Bakaji v. Mukundsingh (5) decided on 28th November 1919.

The wording of old section 250 was:—

"* * * and is satisfied that the accusation * * * was frivolous or vexatious the Magistrate may * * direct the person * * * to pay * * such compensation etc."

The newly amended section runs as under:—

"And is of opinion that the accusation * * * was false and either frivolous or vexatious the Magistrate may * * call upon him forthwith to show cause why he should not pay compensation."

This clearly lays down two elements: one of falsity and the other of either frivoluosness or vexatiousness, as being essentially necessary to base an order for compensation.

The District Magistrate has thought fit to find only one element to be existing in the case, but he has not affirmatively found as a fact that the other element also is present namely that the accusation was false besides being vexatious.

For these reasons I think the order sought to be revised is bad in law and must be set aside. I accordingly allow the petition and set it aside and direct that the compensation if any realized must be refunded to the complainant.

I think in view of this illegality I should not hesitate to interfere although the revision petition was lodged rather very late. The delay has been sufficiently explained.

Z. K. Application allowed.

(1) 30 C. 123; 6 C. W. N. 799.
(2) 21 M. 237; 2 Weir 312; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 523.
(3) 18 Ind. Cas. 411; 37 B. 376; 15 Bom. L. R. 49; 14 Cr. L. J. 75.
(4) 26 A. 512; 1 A. L. J. 234; A. W. N. (1901) 116; 1 Cr. L. J. 433.
(5) 55 Ind. Cas. 8; 3 N. L. J. 106; 21 Cr. L. J. 226.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 229 OF 1925.

April 17, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway.

SHUGAN CHAND AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 537, 540—Criminal trial—Additional evidence called by Court after close of defence case—Opportunity of rebuttal, absence of—Procedure.

After the close of the defence evidence in a criminal case the Magistrate called the Sub-Inspector of Police as a Court witness as he considered him a material witness to help him in the elucidation of the case. After recording the evidence of this witness in the absence of the Counsel of the accused, who were not asked as to whether they wished to rebut this additional evidence, the Magistrate proceeded to deliver judgment on the same day without hearing any further arguments:

Held, that the omission of the Magistrate to give an opportunity to the accused to call evidence in rebuttal of the additional evidence and to hear arguments thereon, was an illegality which was not curable under s. 537 of the Cr. P. C., and which vitiated the trial.

Case reported by the Sessions Judge, Ambala, with his No. 184 of 31st January 1925.

FACTS.—Appeal rejected by the District Magistrate, Simla, on 25th November 1924.

Sant Lal brought a complaint under s. 448, Indian Penal Code, for house trespass against Shugan Chand and Suraj Bhan. It was alleged that Shugan Chand accused was employed by Sant Lal complainant in shops Nos. 23 and 24 in Sabathu up till Daserah 1923. That Sant Lal then got rid of Shugan Chand, took over the goods in part payment of a debt and sold the goods to one Chattar Bhuj who then rented shop No. 23 from about the end of October 1923. That shop No. 24 was locked up till early April 1924 and that on 4th April 1924 while repairs and white washing were being carried out Shugan Chand, Suraj Bhan and one Kishori Lal (originally an accused but afterwards struck out of the case) entered the shop forcibly and took possession thereof.

GROUNDS.—After the close of the defence evidence arguments were heard on 27th September 1924 by the Honorary Magistrate, Second Class, Simla, (Major Wallis). But on the 16th October 1924, he called the Sub-Inspector of Police as a Court witness as he considered him a material witness to help in the elucidation of this case. His evidence was recorded on that date in the absence of the Counsel for the accused who were not asked as to whether they wished to rebut this additional evidence. The Magistrate then proceeded to judgment on the same date without hearing any further arguments. In his order convicting the present petitioners the Magistrate has laid great stress on the evidence of this additional witness. The petitioners have been very much prejudiced in the Trial Magistrate's Court by the additional evidence called at the instance of the Court after hearing arguments on a date when their Counsel was absent and which had been tacitly reserved for pronouncing judgment. The omission of the Honorary Magistrate to give an opportunity to the petitioners to call evidence in rebuttal of the additional evidence and to hear arguments thereon is an illegality which is not curable under s. 537, Cr. P. C. [Allu v. Emperor (1).]

The proceedings are submitted to the High Court with a recommendation that the conviction and sentence be set aside and the case be sent back to enable the defence to produce rebuttal evidence and to address arguments on the whole case. Fines have been paid.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Petitioners.

Mr. G. S. Salarya, for the Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—The procedure adopted by the Trial Magistrate was certainly against law. For the reasons given in the referring order I set aside the conviction and sentence and return the case to the Magistrate concerned who will give the petitioners an opportunity of producing such evidence in rebuttal as they may think necessary.

Z. K. Case returned; Conviction set aside.

(1) 75 Ind. Cas. 980; 4 L. 376, (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 104; 6 L. L. J. 103; 25 Cr. L. J. 63.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISIONS NOS. 199-B, 210-B AND 211-B OF 1924.

January 27, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

RAMCHANDRA AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

GANPAT—NON-APPLICANT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145—Order, whether binding on persons not parties—Remedy—Breach of peace, likelihood of, grounds for.

An order under s. 145 of the Cr. P. C. is not binding against persons who are not parties to the proceedings under the section and their remedy is not by an application for revision against the order.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction under s. 145 of the Cr. P. C. to make any enquiry as to possession still less any final order, unless and until he is satisfied of the likelihood of a breach of the peace and it is absolutely essential that the facts and the grounds of his being so satisfied should appear in his first order directing issue of notice and the ground must be such as to satisfy a Court of Revision.

Applications for revision of an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Yeotmal, dated the 10th November 1924.

Mr. R. R. Jayavant, for the Applicants.

Mr. W. R. Pendharkar, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—These three applications are closely connected and may be disposed of in one order. They arise out of an application under s. 145, Cr. P. C., made by Ganpat complaining that he had been forcibly dispossessed of his tenancy land by the Izardar Ramchandra and that there was danger of a breach of the peace. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate passed an order under s. 145, Cr. P. C, that Ganpat was entitled to possession of the fields in dispute and ordered that his possession should not be disturbed until he was evicted therefrom in due course of law.

The Izardar pleaded that he was not in possession of the land which was in possession of his tenants Lachhma and Kanchetti, who are the applicants in the other two revision applications. The Magistrate, however, found that Ganpat had been evicted wrongfully by the Izardar and the possession should be restored to him.

The applicants in the other two cases, who claimed to be in possession of the land in dispute, were tenants of the Izardar and were examined as witnesses in the case, and they now apply that the proceedings should be set aside and they should be put in possession of the fields in dispute and the standing crops. Their allegation was, and that is also the allegation of the Izardar, that Ganpat who had been in possession of the fields in dispute for a number of years had exchanged them for the fields formerly held by Lachhma and Kanchetti, who are now in possession of the fields in dispute.

After taking evidence the Magistrate altogether disbelieved the story of the alleged exchange. He further found that there had been a wrongful dispossession of the non-applicant Ganpat. I do not propose in revision to interfere with the finding of fact as to poseession. But it is contended that no order should be passed against the Izardar because he was not in possession. The finding of the Magistrate is that Ganpat was dispossessed by the Izardar.

So far as the other two applicants Lachhma and Kanchetti are concerned, they were not parties to the proceedings in the lower Court and are not bound by the order, which is not against them. Their applications must be dismissed. It is open to them, if they are dispossessed, to take such steps as they are advised.

It is contended that there is no evidence that there is any likelihood of a breach of the peace, which is necessary in order to give a Magistrate jurisdiction: cf. Tularam Sao v. Bheoram (1), in which it is held that a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make any enquiry as to possession still less any final order, unless and until he is satisfied of the likelihood of a breach of the peace, and that it is absolutely essential that the fact and the grounds of his being so satisfied should appear in his first order directing the issue of notice, and the grounds must be such as to satisfy a Court of Revision. The Police report has been held not to be such a ground.

In the present case there is evidence that both parties are attempting to cultivate the land, the sowings of one party having been ploughed up by the other. This is likely to cause a breach of the peace and though the learned Magistrate has not made this clear in his order I do not think I ought to interfere in the circumstances of the present case.

All three applications will, therefore, be dismissed.

G. R. D. Applications dismissed.

(1) 12 C. P. L. R. Cr. 2.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 423 OF 1924.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 351 OF 1924).

December 11, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.

In re THIRUPPAL KADALNATHA PILLAI—ACCUSED—PETITIONER.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 423—

Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920), ss. 159 (1), 163 (1)—Conviction under s. 159—Appeal—Conviction, whether can be changed to one under s. 163.

Petitioner was convicted of an offence under s. 159 (1) of the Madras Local Boards Act. On appeal the Appellate Court found that the section under which the accused had been convicted had no application but it went on to convict the accused under s. 163 (1) of the Act. On revision:

Held, that the petitioner not having been charged with or tried for or convicted of an offence under s. 163 (1) of the Madras Local Boards Act, the Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to change the conviction to one under that section.

Petition, under ss. 435 and 439, Cr. P. C., 1898, praying the High Court to revise the judgment of the Court of the Joint First Class Magistrate, Shermadevi, in Criminal Appeal No. 3 of 1924, preferred against the judgment of the Court of the Stationary Sub-Magistrate, Nanguneri, in Calendar Case No. 254 of 1923.

Mr. K. V. Sesha Iyengar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. J. C. Adam, Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.—The order of the Appellate Magistrate is clearly wrong. After having found that s. 159 (1) had no application, he went on to convict the accused under s. 163 (1). No charge was framed under this latter section. The accused was not tried for that offence, or convicted by the lower Court for any such offence. I cannot possibly see what right the Appellate Magistrate had to confirm the conviction, on the ground that the offence under a different section, not charged against the accused was made out. Further, there is absolutely no evidence that an offence even under the section, he referred to, had really been committed by the accused, because there is no reliable evidence that what was done by the accused caused any obstruction on the road. In these circumstances, the conviction of the accused is clearly wrong. The Public Prosecutor has also fairly intimated to me that he cannot possibly support the conviction. In these circumstances, the conviction is set aside and the fine, if levied, will be refunded to the accused.

V. N. V. Conviction set aside;
Z. K. Accused acquitted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEALS NOS. 478 AND 485 OF 1924.

January 15, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Babington Newbould, Kt., and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

IN CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 478 OF 1924

LEDU MOLLA AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

IN CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 485 OF 1924

ASMATALI MIRDHA AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 400—Habitually associating for the purpose of committing dacoity—Previous conviction or order directing security to be of good behaviour, whether admissible.

In a trial in respect of an offence under s. 400 of the Penal Code, evidence of the commission of an offence by the accused or that the accused were bound down under s. 110 of the Cr. P. C. is admissible for the purpose of proving habit as well as association. [p. 925, col. 2]

Case-law reviewed.

Babus Suresh Chandra Talukdar and Mahendra Kumar Ghose, for the Appellants in No. 485 of 1924.

Mr. Khundkar and Babu Lalit Mohan Sanyal, for the Crown in both Appeals.

JUDGMENT.—The 18 appellants before us in these two appeals have been convicted of an offence punishable under s. 400, Indian Penal Code, namely, of belonging to a gang of dacoits. One of the appellants Ledu Molla was convicted on his plea of guilty. The other 17 have been convicted on a unanimous verdict of guilty by the Jury. In this case 171 witnesses were examined for the prosecution, 35 witnessess were examined for the defence and one witness was examined by the Court. There were also 69 documents exhibited on behalf of the prosecution. As there is no appeal on the facts it is unnecessary for us to discuss this evidence. The learned Sessions Judge has dealt with it carefully and at sufficient length in his charge to the Jury.

On behalf of the appellants the points taken are that there has been misdirection and also wrongful admission of evidence on certain points. The first point raised is that in a trial for an offence punishable under s. 400, Indian Penal Code the evidence of commission of an offence or that the accused were bound down under s. 110, Cr. P. C. is not admissible. Some support to this contention is to be found in the case of Kasam Ali v. Emperor (1) following an earlier decision of this Court in Mankura Pasi v. Queen-Empress (2). But these cases have been decided on the point that evidence of previous conviction could not be used for the purpose of proving character. In the latter of these cases, a doubt was expressed whether they might not be used for proving association, and further, the attention of the learned Judges who decided the last of these two cases was not drawn to other cases of this Court in which it was distinctly held that such evidence was admissible. The cases in which a contrary view was taken are Bhona v. Emperor (3) and Kader Sunder v. Emperor (4) and in both these cases it was held that such convictions can be proved for the purpose of proving habit as well as association. In the case Bhona v. Emperor (3) several unreported cases are cited in support of the view that was taken, and in the present case our attention has been drawn to a more recent unreported case Emperor v. Arajulla Pramanik, decided by Walmsley and Pearson, JJ. on the 17th November 1921. We are in entire agreement with the authorities which hold that such evidence is admissible for this purpose and overrule this objection.

The next point taken is that the Jury were not properly charged as regards certain circumstances under which the approver who gave evidence in this case first conferred. It is not alleged that the facts proved as to these circumstances have not been correctly stated to the Jury. What is urged is that the learned Judge should have told the Jury that these circumstances made the approver's evidence unworthy of credit. It would appear, however, that the learned Judge himself was of opinion that the approver was a witness of truth and he could not therefore have told the Jury that in his opinion the approver should be disbelieved on account of these circumstances. In this connection it is said that the Jury were misdirected as to the failure of the prosecution to call as witness the C. I. D. Inspector, Akhoy Kumar Gupta who had interviews with the approver on two occasions. We agree with the learned Sessions Judge that it is very doubtful as to the point on which this witness could give evidence of any value and that the settlement made by the approver to this witness could not have been proved by the prosecution. The learned Judge told the Jury that they might draw an inference adverse to the prosecution if they held that this Inspector was an important witness and had been deliberately withheld, and that under the circumstances was quite sufficient.

As regards the general direction as to the evidence of the approver the learned Sessions Judge gave the ordinary direction in a manner to which no objection can be taken. It is said that he was wrong in telling them that if the approver was corroborated on some points they might believe him on other points in respect of which he was not corroborated. The Jury were told, however, that the condition of believing him on these uncorroborated points, was if they thought it reasonable. It is not necessary that the approver should be corroborated as regards every single statement that he makes and as we read the charge in this respect we hold that the Jury were rightly directed.

Objection has been taken to the evidence as to the verification of his confession by the approver. It is said firstly that the learned Sessions Judge attached too much weight to this evidence and was too dogmatic in telling the Jury his own opinion as to its value. The passage to which objection has been taken is in the following terms:—"I would suggest to you that it would be possible for Asmat Ali to be tutored to this extent by the Inspector in the course of two interviews in the Jail; but it appears to me that the results of the verification of the confession of Asmat Ali prove without doubt that Asmat Ali Sheikh did himself take part in the dacoities which he describes." That passage by itself might be objectionable. But reading the charge as a whole we find over and over again that the Judge impressed on the Jury that they were to form their own opinion on questions of fact, and in this particular passage he told the Jury that the matter was one for them to decide.

It is further urged that the procedure adopted in verifying the confession had been condemned in this Court. Our attention has been drawn to certain decisions,

(1) 55 Ind. Cas. 994; 47 C. 154; 31 C. L. J. 192; 21 Cr. L. J. 386.
(2) 27 C. 139; 4 C. W. N. 97; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 92.
(3) 9 Ind. Cas. 555; 38 C. 408; 15 C. W. N. 461. 12 Cr. L. J. 97.
(4) 13 Ind. Cas. 279; 16 C. W. N. 69; 13 Cr. L. J. 39.

but those decisions do not lay down as a general rule that in no case can the statement of a confessing accused be verified by enquiry on the spot. They are rather condemnatory of the procedure which was in fact followed in those individual cases. They cannot be held to support the contention that the identification proceedings in the present case were of no value as corroboration of the accomplice evidence.

Some other points were urged, but on our expressing the opinion that they are untenable they were not pressed by the learned Vakil for the appellants.

The sentences passed on several of the accused are severe, but the learned Sessions Judge has given good reasons for severity of these sentences.

The appeals are dismissed.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 121 OF 1925.

March 24, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Stuart.

AMIR—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Arms Act (XI of 1878), ss. 14, 19 (f)—Empty cartridge cases, whether ammunition—Possession—Offence.

The possession of empty cartridge cases which are incapable of being re-loaded in India does not amount to an offence under s. 19 (f) of the Arms Act.

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Cawnpur, dated the 22nd October 1924.

REFERENCE.—Accused is charged with the possession of two 405 rifle cartridge cases in contravention of the provisions of s. 14 of the Arms Act. On 15th August 1924, Sub-Inspector Wajid Ali with one Constable was searching accused's house for stolen property in some cycle thefts. After the Police party had been searched by accused, the Sub-Inspector found a locked box in a kothri. Accused supplied the key of the box and on its being opened the cartridge cases were found inside it.

There are two witnesses of the search. Abdul Baqi states that all the party were searched in front of accused, but, that he himself did not search the others' trouser pockets. Accused, however, searched all the party thoroughly, even their trousers. Witness saw the cartridge cases taken from a box of which accused supplied the key. Budgu Lal saw the cartridge cases recovered from the box. He and Baqi felt the pockets of the Sub-Inspector and the Head Constable and felt them from head to foot. Accused was present.

Accused states that he was not allowed to search the Sub-Inspector and his party. The room in which the cartridge cases were found was that of his son, Nazir. Accused cannot say if the cartridge cases are his—he has neither a gun nor a license. He insinuates that the Police planted the cartridge cases in his box—this is absurd, for they were not even searching for cartridge cases but for stolen bicycles. Accused owns the whole house.

He produces two witnesses.

His son Nazir states that he occupies the second story of accused's house and that the room where the cases were found is his. The key of the box was taken from witness's wife. No one's person was searched according to the witness.

2. Narain, a neighbour, says that the second story is Nazir's. Witness did not enter accused's house during the search, so cannot say what was done or not done inside. As he last went into the house six months ago, he cannot know whether Nazir occupies the second story now.

There is no doubt whatever that the cartridge cases were found in the box and were not brought by the Police. It is also clear that as accused produced the key of the box, he is the owner of the box and its contents. Were Nazir the owner, it is strange that he, who was present, did not possess the key. I find that the accused was in possession of two empty 405 rifle cartridge cases. The interpretation clause of the Arms Act of 1878 defines as ammunition "all parts of ammunition" therefore the accused was in possession of ammunition in contravention of the provisions of s. 14, Arms Act. I find accused guilty of an offence under s. 19 (f) of the Arms Act, but as the offence is not a serious one I fine him Rs. 50 only or in default one month's rigorous imprisonment.

Mr. Saila Nath Mukerji, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—I am of opinion that there is considerable force in Mr. Saila Nath Mukerji's argument that no offence has been committed because the empty cartridge cases in question are incapable of being re-loaded in India. In any circumstances I regret the zeal which has caused the prosecution of this particular applicant. While the Police were searching his house for stolen property (which was not present), they discovered in a locked box two empty brass 405 used cartridge cases. It seems almost impossible to suggest that the man could have retained these cartridge cases for an improper purpose and he probably was retaining them owing to the incurable reluctance common to so many of his countrymen which prevents the throwing away anything, however useless it may be. He may have kept them as curious or possibly he thought that some day he might add them to a collection of rubbish and obtain something of the nature of one pice for their value as brass. In any circumstances it is difficult to understand why any Police Officer or Magistrate should have looked askance at his action.

I set aside the conviction and sentence and direct the fine to be refunded.

Z. K.

Conviction set aside.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 257 OF 1924.

January 22, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

ASHGAR ALI—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

AKBAR ALI—COMPLAINANT—NON-APPLICANT:

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 259—Dismissal of complaint—Fresh complaint, whether entertainable.

A complaint dismissed under s. 259, Cr. P. C., can be revived on a fresh complaint as the dismissal does not amount to an acquittal. The fresh complaint need not be filed before the same Magistrate who dismissed the previous complaint but may be entertained by any other Magistrate having jurisdiction to entertain it.

Application for revision against an order of the Magistrate, First Class, Nagpur, dated the 25th August 1924.

Mr. W. G. Joshi, for the Applicant.

Mr. S. R. Mangrulkar, for the Complainant.

ORDER.—The facts of this case are that the non-applicant made a complaint against the applicant of cheating under s. 420, Indian Penal Code, in the Court of Mr. Vyas, First Class Magistrate. There were several hearings and then the case was dismissed for the absence of the complainant under s. 259, Cr. P. C. Subsequently a fresh complaint was made by the complainant in the Court of Rao Bahadur Deshpande on the same facts. The accused contended that the complaint would not lie, but this contention was overruled by the Magistrate and the case was ordered to proceed. The applicant files an application for revision of this order on two grounds: first, that if the complaint had been dismissed by Mr. Vyas it could only be entertained by him and not by another Magistrate, and, secondly, on the ground that the facts of the case show that it is of a civil nature.

As far as the first point is concerned, the applicant relies on Queen-Empress v. Adam Khan (1) which, however, is a case of dismissal on the merits. It is settled law that a complaint dismissed under s. 259, Cr. P. C., can be revived on a fresh complaint as it is not an acquittal: cf. Chinnathambi Mudali v. Salla Gurusamy Chetty (2), Emperor v. Chinna Kaliappa Gounden (3) and Dwarka Nath Mondul v. Beni Madhab Banerjee (4), and it is admitted that, if the complaint had been made to Mr. Vyas no objection could have been taken to it. It appears, however, that Rao Bahadur Deshpande is the Magistrate who entertains cases arising in the City of Nagpur and that the case was originally taken up by Mr. Vyas only owing to Mr. Despande's absence on leave. I do not, therefore, think that Mr. Deshpande should be regarded as incompetent to take up the complaint.

With regard to the question of the complaint being of an offence which is of a civil nature, that is a question of merits into which I cannot go at the present stage.

The application is dismissed.

Z. K. Application dismissed.

(1) 22 A. 106; A. W. N. (1899) 211; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1100.

(2) 28 M. 310; 2 Weir 325A; 2 Cr. L. J. 758.

(3) 29 M. 126; 16 M. L. J. 79; 1 M. L. T. 31; 3 Cr. L. J. 274.

(4) 28 C. 652; 5 C. W. N. 457 (F. B.).

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 330 OF 1922.

December 5, 1924.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

MOHANLAL MOTILAL SHAH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

HARILAL BHOGILAL SHAH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909)—Insolvency—Transaction between insolvent and creditor, validity of—Fraud—Transaction, whether can be enforced against third party.

A transaction between an insolvent and one of his creditors conducted behind the back of the Official Assignee and without informing the Court is null and void. Any such transaction is wholly repugnant to the scheme of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, inasmuch as the whole of the insolvent's estate vests in the Official Assignee, his affairs have to be investigated by the Official Assignee and by the Court which deals with his discharge, and there is nothing left for the insolvent to do except to perform his duties which are prescribed by the Act by giving information and assistance to the Official Assignee, and to proceed to take the steps necessary to obtain his discharge.

Plaintiff obtained a decree against the first defendant who was subsequently adjudged insolvent. Plaintiff thereupon compromised his claim against the first defendant by accepting a cash payment of a certain amount from the first defendant and taking promissory notes for a portion of the balance. The second defendant was induced to sign the promissory notes without receiving any consideration for them. In a suit to recover the amount of the promissory notes:

Held, (1) that the transaction between the plaintiff and the first defendant was null and void as against the Official Assignee, as being fraudulent;

(2) that as the whole transaction was tainted with fraud the plaintiff could not succeed as against the second defendant either.

First appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge, Nadiad, in Suit No. 70 of 1922.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. M. H. Mehta), for the Appellant.

Mr. H. V. Divatia, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff brought this suit to recover Rs. 8,100 on three promissory notes of Rs. 2,700 each, signed by the first and the second defendants, with interest thereon. The promissory notes were signed on October 12, 1921.

The plaintiff had got a decree for Rs. 14,517 in the High Court in Suit No. 2756 of 1919 against defendant No. 1, who was adjudged insolvent by an order of the High Court on October 4, 1921, under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, and consequently any dealings thereafter between the plaintiff and the insolvent with regard to his property, his assets or estate would be null and void as against the Official Assignee, and also as against the Court which had the conduct of the insolvency proceedings. According to the evidence it seems that the plaintiff had compromised his claim of Rs. 14,517 by accepting a present payment of Rs. 1,100, taking promissory notes for Rs. 8,100 and relinquishing the rest of his claim.

The whole proceeding was tainted with fraud. The first defendant being insolvent could not make any payment to his creditors, and Rs. 1,100 paid by the insolvent to the plaintiff was money vested at that time in the Official Assignee. The second defendant was induced in some way to be a party to the fraud, and signed the promissory notes without receiving any consideration whatever. It has been contended that unless we find from one of the sections of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act some authority for the proposition that any transaction between the insolvent and the creditor, conducted behind the back of the Official Assignee and without informing the Court, must be considered as null and void, we cannot set it aside. There is no necessity to refer to any particular section in the Act, because any such transaction would be wholly repugnant to the scheme of the Act, since the whole of the insolvent's estate is vested in the Official Assignee, his affairs have to be investigated by the Official Assignee and the Court which deals with his discharge, and consequently there is nothing left for the insolvent to do except to perform his duties which are prescribed by the Act by giving information and assistance to the Official Assignee, and proceeding to take the steps necessary to obtain his discharge.

The suit was clearly bad against the first defendant because no leave of the Court was obtained, and there was a very good reason for not asking the Court's leave, because if the Court had been aware of all the circumstances from which the claim arose in the plaintiff's suit, it would certainly have declined to give the leave asked for, and would probably have ordered the plaintiff to pay into Court Rs. 1,100 which he had received from the insolvent. The Judge was, therefore, clearly right in dismissing the suit against the first defendant.

With regard to the second defendant the plaintiff cannot separate the transaction and say that it was good as against the second defendant, although it was bad as against the first defendant, as the whole transaction was tainted with fraud. Therefore, the decision of the Court below was right and the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES Nos. 1341 TO 1344 OF 1922 AND 2721 TO 2729 OF 1923.

January 14, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Suhrawardy and Mr. Justice Cuming.

IN Nos. 1341 TO 1344 OF 1922

INDRA NARAIN MANNA AND OTHERS DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Srimati SARBASONA DASI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

IN Nos. 2721 TO 2729 OF 1923.

Srimati SARBASONA DASI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

JATINDRA NATH SAMANTA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Widow—Surrender, what amounts to—Gift in favour of reversioner, validity of—Family arrangement, scope of—Landlord and tenant—Suit for rent—Plea of jus tertii*—Procedure—Title, question of, whether can be investigated.*

In a rent suit where the defendant pleads the right of a third party, the Court ought not to make such a third party a party to the suit and thus convert a suit for rent into a complicated title suit. [p. 931, col. 2.]

Lodai Mollah v. Kally Dass Roy, 8 C. 238; 10 C. L. R. 581; 4 Shome L. R. 275; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 152, followed.

Where, however, the plaintiff's title is a derivative one and the defendant denies the existence of the relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and himself there must be an enquiry into the plaintiff's title in order to determine this question. The relationship of landlord and tenant is not established merely because the plaintiff alleges that he derives his title from a person to whom the tenant had attorned. [p. 931, col. 2; p. 932, col. 1.]

In order to make a surrender of her estate by a Hindu widow with the consent of the next heir valid, the surrender must be total, not partial, and it must be a bona fide surrender, not a device to divide the estate with the reversioner. [p 933, col. 1.]

A gift made by a Hindu widow even in favour of the next reversioner if it does not amount to a complete surrender of the widow's estate, is not valid according to Hindu Law and does not pass any title to the donee. It may be operative during the lifetime of the widow but after her death it ceases to have any legal effect. [p. 934, cols. 1 & 2.]

Case-law reviewed

A family arrangement requires some consideration and under the guise of a family arrangement a party cannot enter into a transaction which he is not under the law competent to enter into and which may be beyond his disposing power. [p. 933, col. 2.]

IN Nos. 1341 TO 1344 OF 1922.

Appeals against the decrees of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Howrah, in Hughly, dated the 21st March 1922, (In Nos. 1341, 1342 and 1344) and 24th March of 1924 (In No. 1343) reversing those of the Munsif Second Court at Uluberia, dated the 28th of April 1921.

IN Nos. 2721 TO 2729 OF 1923.

Appeals against the decrees of the Addition Subordinate Judge, Howrah in Hughly, dated the 24th September 1923, reversing those of the Munsif First Court at Uluberia, dated the 30th of September 1921.

Mr. Amarendra Nath Bose (with him Babu Rupendra Kumar Mitter), for the Appellants.

Babus Sudhansa Sekhar Mookerjee, Mahendra Nath Roy and Charu Chandra Ganguli, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Suhrawardy, J.—These two groups of appeals arise out of rent suits brought by the plaintiff in respect of the 16-annas rent for 1326 and a portion of 1327 B. S. The defence of the tenants was that the plaintiff was not entitled to more than 8-annas share of the rent. In the first group of cases the Court of first instance dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the ground that she had not acquired a title in respect of 8-annas of the property, and with reference to the other 8-annas the claim was dismissed as the plaintiff failed to prove separate collection. On appeal by the plaintiff the learned Subordinate Judge decreed the plaintiff's suit for the entire 16-annas of the rent. The first group of appeals, therefore, are from the decrees of the lower Appellate Court by the tenants-defendants. In the second group of cases the Court of first instance (presided over by a different officer) decreed the plaintiff's suit in full and on appeal by the tenants the Subordinate Judge (who was a different officer) dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the ground that the plaintiff was not entitled to 8-annas share of the rent from the defendants and with regard to the remaining 8-annas she failed to prove separate collection. The second group of appeals is by the plaintiff-landlord; and as the two sets of appeal raise the same question they were heard together.

Before considering the points that arise in these cases it is necessary to give a brief history of the litigation. There was a putni under the seal zemindars held by two brothess Aghore Dutt and Sarat Dutt. Aghore died in 1876 leaving a widow Binodini. In 1877 Binodini made a gift of 8-annas share in the putni which she inherited to Sarat retaining some other properties for her own maintenance and use. In 1901 Sarat took a fresh pottah (for reasons not disclosed in the case) from 9-annas 12 gandas co-sharer landlord. In 1908 he took another pottah from 3-annas 4 gandas co-sharer landlord. There was no fresh settlement in respect of the remaining 3 annas 4 gandas. In execution of rent decrees obtained by the co-sharer landlords the putni was sold and purchased by the plaintiff in July 1919. The decrees were obtained against Sarat but before the property was brought to sale Sarat died in April 1918. Benodini died in March 1919. On these facts the tenants contend that the plaintiff did not acquire the whole interest in the putni inasmuch as on Binodini's death Aghore's share vested in his reversioners and the sales did not pass their interest.

In the first set of appeals the learned Subordinate Judge allowed the plaintiff's appeals and decreed the rent suits on two grounds; first, that the tenants should not be allowed in a rent suit to introduce complicated questions of title and thus convert a simple suit for rent into a title suit; and as the learned Judge was of opinion that the plaintiff's purchase created the relationship of landlord and tenant as between the plaintiff and the defendants the plaintiff's suits ought to be decreed without entering, into the question whether or not she had acquired a right to the property. For this view he has relied upon the decision in the case of Lodai Mollah v. Kally Dass Roy (1). As we understand this judgment in a way different from the way in which the learned Subordinate Judge has understood it, it is necessary to examine the effect of that decision. Field, J., in his learned judgment lays down the true scope of a suit for rent and the appropriate defences that may be raised by the tenants in such a suit. He mentions the different circumstances in which different defences may be taken one of such circumstances being where the plaintiff sues for rent on a derivative title. To such a suit of the defences as suggested by the learned Judge is that the defendant may deny the circumstances from which the plaintiff alleges that the tenancy is inferrible or has been created by implication; and to elucidate this point the learned Judge observes that there may be denial of the facts which constitute the derivation or denial of the assignment. At page 244* of the report there is the following pertinent observation: "Where there has been no attornment (as in the present case) the plaintiff must prove his title as a condition precedent to establishing the relation of landlord and tenant between himself and the defendant; and if there be none of the other defences already referred to, this may be the only point to be decided." Then the learned Judge proceeds to examine the English Law on the point and comes to the conclusion that there is no authority for the procedure adopted by the Court, in the circumstances, of adding a third party to a rent suit for the purpose of determining the question of title raised. That case lays down the very sensible and salutary principle that in a rent suit where the defendant pleads jus tertii or right of a third party, the Court ought not to make such a third party a party in the suit and convert a suit for rent into a complicated title suit. The reasons given in support of this view are very cogent and need not be repeated here. It will be a misreading of the case if it is supposed to be an authority for the view that in no case can the tenant plead title in a third person in a rent suit and in no case can such a question be decided in a suit for rent. The learned Subordinate Judge presumes that by the plaintiff's purchase the relationship of landlord and tenant is established. We do not think that there is any anthority for this presumption. If the only question in a suit for rent, as Field, J., observes in Lodai Mollah's case (1) is whether there exists the relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and the defendant in order to determine this question there must be an enquiry into the plaintiff's title when it is derivative. To hold that such a relationship is established merely because the plaintiff alleges that he derives his title from a person to whom the tenants had attorned is to beg the whole question. The case of Lodai Mollah v. Kally Dass Roy (1) was considered and explained in the case of Rahimunnessa Bibee v. Mahadeb Das (2), Mukerjee, J., says as follows: "We may also observe that as explained by this Court in the case of Lodai Mollah v. Kally Dass Roy (1), the plaintiff cannot possibly maintain the position that the defendant is not entitled to question his title. As was pointed out by the learned Judges in the case last mentioned even where the plaintiff claims by a derivative title and the defendant has attorned to him, the defendant is not thereby estopped from showing that the title is really not in the plaintiff but in some other person." That case is direct authority for the view we take and it must be understood that Lodai Mollah's case (1) not only lays down that in a suit for rent a third party set up by the tenants should not be dragged to convert it into a title suit but it also holds that the question with regard to the plaintiff's right cannot only be raised but must be raised where it is denied by the tenant. This ground, therefore, on which the learned Judge bases his judgment fails.

(1) 8 C. 238; 10 C. L. R. 581; 4 Shome L. R. 275; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 152.

*Page of 8 C.—[Ed.]

The second ground on which he founds his judgment is that the transaction between Sarat and Benodini was a family arrangement and that this deed of gift should not be considered to be void but only voidable. It will be necessary to consider this question in detail in connection with the other group of appeals.

In those appeals the learned Subordinate Judge has found that at the time when the sale took place half of the putni had vested in the reversionary heirs of Aghore then in existence. It is not disputed that on Binodini's death the share of Aghore passed to his reversioners who are other than the heirs of Sarat. The learned Subordinate Judge has held that the deed of gift could not enure beyond the lifetime of Benodini and that it was not surrender of the widow's life-estate in favour of the reversioners. This view of the law has been challenged before us on the ground that the learned Subordinate Judge misinterpreted the deed of gift and should have held that it was a surrender of the life-estate of the widow to the reversioner and that it conveyed to Sarat a valid title to the 8-annas share of Aghore. In support of this view reliance has been placed on the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Sureshwar Misser v. Maheshrani Misrain (3). In that the reversioners had brought a suit against the widow to set aside the Will. The parties entered into a compromise under which the widow surrendered all rights of succession to the immoveable property to the plaintiff reversioner and the plaintiff transferred a portion of such property to the daughters and the plaintiff and the daughters each gave a small portion of the land to the widow for her life. This transaction was held by the Judicial Committee to be valid according to Hindu Law on the ground that there was a surrender of the entire property in which the widow had her life-interest to the reversioner and the subsequent transfer by the plaintiff of a portion of that property to the widow for her life did not affect the surrender by the widow of her life-estate. The ground upon which the surrender of the life-estate by the widow to the next reversioner is upheld is the principle of acceleration and the Judicial Committee followed the earlier decision of their Lordships in Rangasami Gounden v. Nachiappa Gounden (4). In that case all the decided cases on the point were considered and the result of such consideration was formulated by their Lordships thus: "(1) An alienation by a widow of her deceased husband's estate held by her may be validated if it can be shown to be a surrender of her whole interest in the whole estate in favour of the nearest reversioner or reversioners at the time of the alienation. In such circumstances, the question of necessity does not fall to be considered. But the surrender must be a bona fide surrender, and not a device to divide the estate with the reversioner. (2) When the alienation of the whole or part of the estate is to be supported on the ground of necessity, the consent of the reversioner will be held to afford a presumptive proof which will validate the transaction as a right and proper one". In Sureshwar Misser's case (3), the law is thus summarised: "Now there are two conditions which must be fulfilled to make a surrender by the widow, with consent of the next heir (necessity being out of the question), valid. The first is that the surrender must be total, not partial. The second is that the surrender must be a bona fide surrender, not a device to divide the estate with the reversioner". It is, therefore, incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove that the transaction between Binodini and Sarat in 1877 was a complete surrender by Binodini of her life-interest in all the properties left by her husband to Sarat who was admittedly the next reversioner. This leads us to an examination of the document on which this contention is founded.

(2) 7 Ind. Cas. 846; 12 C. L. J. 428.

(3) 57 Ind. Cas 325; 47 I. A. 233; 48 C. 100; 25 C. W. N. 194; (1920) M. W. N. 472; 39 M. L. J. 161; 28 M. L. T. 154; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 128; 12 L. W. 461; 18 A. L. J. 1069; 41 C. L. J. 433.

(4) 50 Ind. Cas. 498; 46 I. A. 72; 36 M. L. J. 493; 17 A. L. J. 536; 29 C. L. J. 539; 21 Bom. L. R. 640; 23 C. W. N. 777; (1919) M. W. N. 262; 42 M. 523; 26 M. L. T. 5; 10 L. W. 105; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 66 (P. C.).

The document divides the properties left by her husband into two Schedules ka and kha. As to the properties mentioned in Schedule ka, the lady made a gift of the 8-annas share of the putni on the following terms: "You have from this day become entitled to half the share left by my husband in the properties mentioned in Schedule ka empowered to make a gift or to sell and enjoy the same down to your sons, grandsons, etc." With reference to the property of Schedule kha, the following terms are inserted in the document: "Out of 211 bighas 2 cottas and 10 chittacks of rent free lands of Schedule kha leaving aside your half share of 105 bighas 1 cotta 5 chittacks I shall keep in my possession my own half share, 105 bighas 1 cotta and 5 chittacks for the period of my life for pious and religious purposes as well as for my maintenance.....Out of the income of half the properties of Schedule (kha) which remains in my possession, I shall so long as I live perform pious and religious works. If owing to disagreement with you I separate from you I shall not be competent to claim maintenance from you. Even if I do the same it will be entertained.....After my death these rooms as well as half the properties of kha which are left in my possession would belong to you,.....After my death you, down to your sons and grandsons, etc., will enjoy my half share in the properties of Schedule kha being entitled to sell, make a gift or otherwise to alienate the same" There are other expressions also to the same effect. Reading this document as a whole it is manifest that the transaction was a gift by the lady of her one-half share in the putni to Sarat retaining Aghore's 8-annas share in certain properties mentioned in Schedule kha. The gift, therefore, was not a surrender of the whole life-interest in the whole estate as laid down by the Judicial Committee in the cases cited above. It was a surrender of a part of Aghore's estate, the other part was to come to the possession of the reversioners after the death of the lady; such a surrender is not valid according to law and it vested no title in Sarat. But at the same time it could not be questioned so long as the lady was alive: on her death admittedly some other persons have succeeded to Aghore's share in the putni. The conclusion we come to is that by the deed of gift of 1877 Sarat did not acquire an absolute title to Aghore's share and the sale of the putni which took place after his death in execution of the decrees against him with his widow as representing his estate on the records did not pass any interest beyond his share in the putni.

The next question that calls for decision is the second ground in which the learned Subordinate Judge in the first group of cases allowed the plaintiff's suits. We cannot uphold the view taken by the learned Judge that the deed of gift of 1877 was in the nature of a family arrangement. A family arrangement requires some consideration and under the guise of a family arrangement a party cannot enter into a transaction which he is not under the law competent to do and which may be beyond his disposing power. It is not suggested that after Aghore's death there was a difference between Sarat and Bindoini which was settled by the deed of gift, an unilateral disposition. As a matter of fact recitals in the deed show that Binodini and Sarat were living together and Binodini was under the protection of Sarat.

The question that really requires consideration is whether the alienation in favour of Sarat was voidable at the instance of the reversioners or whether it terminated with the life of Binodini. It has been laid down by the Judicial Committee in the case of Bejoy Gopal Mukerji v. Krishna Mahishi

Debi (5), that an alienation by a Hindu widow is not absolutely void but is prima facie voidable at the election of the reversioners who may affirm it or treat it as a nullity without the intervention of the Court or may retify it. It is, however, argued by the tenants that the principle of Bejoy Gopal's case (2) is available to transferees for value and does not extend to volunteers and that the gift in favour of Sarat became inoperative after the death of Binodini and in support of this view reliance is placed upon the case of Khawani Singh v Chet Ram (6), where the law is expounded as follows: "That a transfer made by a Hindu widow with the consent of the nearest reversioner will take effect as against the more remote reversioner, is applicable to cases of transfer for consideration. It has not been extended to a case where a transfer has been made by way of gift." The same view was taken in the case of Pilu Appa Nalvade v. Babaji Naru Mang (7), where the law is thus enunciated: "The operation of the principle which prohibits a Hindu widow's alienation of immoveable property otherwise than for legal necessity is relaxed in cases where the consent of the whole body of persons constituting the next reversion has been obtained...is ordinarily limited to transfers for consideration and cannot be extended to voluntary transfers...where there is no room for the theory of legal necessity. It should not be extended to cases where the widow has made only a partial relinquishment of the estate." This principle is based on the theory that the widow can sell the property in which she has acquired a widow's estate only for legal necessity. In the case of a gift the hypothesis of legal necessity does not exist and, therefore, she has no right of alienation of such property. The result of these authorities is that a gift made by a Hindu widow even in favour of the next reversioner, if it does not amount to a complete surrender of the widow's estate, is not valid according to Hindu Law. The gift in the present case, therefore, was invalid and did not pass any title to Sarat. It might have been operative during the lifetime of Binodini but after her death it ceased to have any legal effect. This disposes of all the points raised before us by the parties. The result of the view we take of the questions argued before us is that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover rent in respect of the 8-annas share of the putni belonging to Aghore.

In the above view the first group of appeals must be allowed, the decrees of the lower Appellate Court are set aside and the plaintiff's suit dismissed with costs. The second group of appeals fails and is dismissed with costs.

Cuming, J —I agree.

Z. K. Appeals Nos. 1341 to 1344 allowed: Appeals Nos. 2721 to 2729 dismissed.

(5) 34 C. 329; 5 C. L. J. 334; 11 C. W. N. 424; 9 Bom. L. R. 602; 17 M. L. J. 154; 2 M. L. T. 133; 4 A. L. J. 329; 34 I. A. 87 (P. C.).

(6) 37 Ind. Cas. 86; 39 A. 1; 14 A. L. J. 972.

(7) 4 Ind. Cas. 584; 34 B. 165; 11 Bom. L. R. 1291.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 438 OF 1923.

December 8, 1924

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump

MANILAL JIBHAI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ISHVARBHAI SAMALBHAI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT No. 1.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 91—Nuisance—Encroachment on public street—Private person, suit by, whether maintainable—Special damage, proof of.

Plaintiff brought a suit for a declaration that certain land was street land and for an injunction directing the defendant to remove an otla made by him on the land:

Held, that the plaintiff could not sustain the suit in the absence of evidence to show that as a consequence of the encroachment he was unable to use the road, nor could he seek the assistance of the Court to get the otla removed, merely because he wanted to walk over that portion of the street occupied by the otla unless he proved special damage.

Appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge, A. P., at Ahmedabad, in Appeal No. 224 of 1922, reversing the decree passed by the Joint Subordinate Judge, at Nadiad, in Suit No. 391 of 1920.

Mr. H. V. Divatia, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. H. Mehta, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff filed this action to have a declaration that the land described in the plaint was street land and to obtain a mandatory order directing defendant No. 1 to remove an otla made by him on the land. The Municipality of Nadiad City, in which the property was situated, was made a party defendant, Defendant No. 1 asserted that his otla existed since a long time; that plaintiff had no interest in the land; that the land was held to be of his ownership by the City Survey Officers and that no damage was caused to the plaintiff.

The Trial Court held that the suit land was a public street and that plaintiff was entitled to sue to have the encroachment made by defendant No. 1 thereon removed.

The first defendant appealed. In his judgment, the Judge said :—

"Assuming that the otla land forms part of a public street land, the question is whether defendant No. 1's act amounts to a public nuisance. I think, it does, vide Queen-Empress v. Virappa Chetti (1) and In re Kariyappa Ningappa (2) which lay down that appropriation of a part of a public road or building on it, amounts to a public nuisance. Plaintiff is, therefore, not competent to sue without complying with the provisions of s. 81 of the C. P. C."

Accordingly he allowed the appeal and reversed the decree of the Trial Court.

The appellant contends that although the otla was a public nuisance, the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction restraining the defendant from using that part of the road occupied by the otla without proving special damage. He relies upon the decision of this Court in Baslingappa Parappa v. Dharmappa Bassappa (3).

"Plaintiffs sued on behalf of themselves and of other members of a religious community to have a declaration of their right of marching in procession with a car along a particular public road to certain temples and for an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with the plaintiffs. The defendants contended that the plaintiffs had no right to march along the road. The lower Courts dismissed the suit on the ground that the road being public the plaintiffs could not sue unless special damage were shown and proved.

On second appeal by the plaintiffs it was held, reversing the decree and allowing the claim, that the suit was not for removal of a public nuisance but for a declaration of the right of an individual community to use the public road. Every member of the public and every sect has a right to use the public streets in a lawful manner and it lies on those who would restrain him or it to show some law or custom having the force of law abrogating the privilege."

The question here is an entirely different one. The plaintiff does not seek for a declaration that he has a right to use a public road, nor can he say that such a right has in any way been obstructed. But he wishes to make a claim to a right to pass over the particular portion of the road occupied by the otla, though his right to use the rest of the road has not been interfered with. He cannot sustain the suit, as he has not been able to show that he is unable to use the road, nor can he seek the assistance of the Court to get the otla removed, merely becuse he wants to walk over that portion of the street occupied by the otla, unless he proves special damage.

The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 20 M. 433; 1 Weir 233; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 307.
(2) 68 Ind. Cas. 619; 24 Bom. L. R. 807; 23 Cr. L. J. 587; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 384; 47 B. 89.
(3) 7 Ind. Cas. 663; 34 B. 571; 12 Bom. L. R. 586.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

EXECUTION OF DECREE APPEAL No. 57 OF 1924.

January 30, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C., and Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

Babu BANWARI LAL BHARGAVA—PURCHASER—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

Rai Sahib BISHAMBHAR NATH TANDAN AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), ss. 55, 56—Transfer by insolvent, validity of—Purchaser in good faith and for valuable consideration—Burden of proof.

Section 55 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act is quite general and a transfer of property made by an insolvent falling within the provisions of that section is void altogether as against the Official Assignee unless it is shown by the transferee that he is a purchaser in good faith and for valuable consideration.

Appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge, Lucknow, dated the 26th May 1924.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for Mr. Bisheshar Nath Srivastava, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. D. Rastogi, for the Respondents,

JUDGMENT.—One Rai Saheb Bisham-bhar Nath Tandon obtained simple money decree against Syed Ali Haider for a sum of Rs. 13,726-10-8. The decree-holder was subsequently declared an insolvent by the High Court of Calcutta. On the 7th November 1922 he transferred the decree now under execution to Babu Banwari Lal Bhargava for a sum of Rs. 700. Babu Banwari Lal Bhargava has applied under O. XXI, r. 16, of the C. P. C. for the execution of the decree. The insolvent is represented in these proceedings by the Official Assignee of Calcutta. The Official Assignee took objection to the application of Babu Banwari Lal Bhargava on the ground that the transfer of the 7th November 1922 was not in good faith and for valuable consideration within the meaning of s. 56 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act and was, therefore, void as against him under s. 55 of the same Act. The Court below has upheld the objection and dismissed the application for execution. This is an appeal against that order.

We are of opinion that the decision of the Court below is correct. Section 55 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act is quite general and under it we must hold that the transfer under consideration is void altogether as against the Official Assignee unless it is shown by the transferee that he is a purchaser in good faith and for valuable consideration under s. 56. The Court below has given good reasons for the view that the transfer was neither in good faith nor for valuable consideration. It is proved on the evidence that the judgment-debtor owns 30 or 35 villages. It is admitted that the decree which the insolvent held against Ali Haider was for a sum of Rs. 1,300 odd. When these facts are placed side by side with the fact that the transferor was an insolvent and the fact that the appellant obtained the transfer of that decree for a sum of Rs. 700 only the irresistible conclusion is that there was neither good faith nor valuable consideration.

At the hearing of the appeal the learned Pleader for the respondents raised a preliminary objection that the appeal was barred by the rule of res judicata. As we have decided the appeal on its merits against the appellant we express no opinion on this objection.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 357 OF 1922.

December 10, 1924.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

JADAVBAI LAKHICHAND—DEFENDANT —APPELLANT

versus

MULTANCHAND HARAKHCHAND—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Partition—Grandsons, whether remain joint with their father—Presumption—Divided co-heirs, whether tenants-in-common or co-parceners.

In ordinary cases of partition between a Hindu father and his sons, the grandsons, though they take an interest in the family property as from their birth can only derive that interest through their father, with whom the presumption is that they remain joint after partition. [p. 937, col. 1.]

A Hindu father has no right to release his son's interest in the family property while the grandfather is alive. Where, however, the father obtains his share in the joint family property from the grandfather and is released of his liability in respect of the debts of the family, the arrangement amounts to a partition between the father and the grandfather and the grandsons must abide by it unless it can be set aside on the ground of fraud or for other good reason. [ibid.]

Where a Hindu is succeeded by heirs who have already separated from each other, the heirs take the property as tenants-in-common and not as co-parceners. [p. 937, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Jalgaon, in Suit No. 415 of 1920.

Mr. K. H. Kelkar, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. B. Shingne, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Hasraj had four sons, Fulchand, Lakhichand, Harakchand and Chunilal. Fulchand passed a farkhat in 1904 to his father, which was in effect a partition deed. In 1907, the remaining three sons also passed farkhats to their father, which were in effect documents of partition. Chunilal died about 1907 leaving no heirs and we are not concerned with his estate. Harakchand died in 1912 leaving his son, the plaintiff. Fulchand died in 1916 leaving a widow. Then Hasraj died in February 1918 and Lakhichand died on March 22, 1918, leaving a widow.

Plaintiff claimed that he was entitled to the suit property on the ground that he remained joint with his grandfather after his father Harakchand had separated. He made an alternative claim that if he did not remain joint with Harakchand, he was entitled to the property left by Hasraj because he inherited it with his uncle Lakhichand and he became entitled to the whole by survivorship on Lakhichand's death.

The plaintiff has succeeded in the lower Court. We do not think that on the facts the learned Judge realized the true legal position. Fulchand separated in 1904. The Judge held that he re-united with Hasraj sometime before 1907, because in the farkhat passed by Harakchand to his father, Fulchand was a party and Harakchand said that Hasraj and Fulchand were joint. It is an undoubted fact that Fulchand became separated in 1904, and, therefore, in my opinion a mere statement by Harakchand that in 1907 Fulchand and Hasraj were joint was not by itself sufficient to prove re-union. It might be a strong corroboration of any direct evidence that Fulchand and Hasraj re-united. Therefore, Fulchand's widow is entitled to the property, if any, which Fulchand received when he separated. If the widow demands it there must be an enquiry whether any of the suit property belonged to Fulchand.

With regard to the plaintiff we cannot say that there is any evidence that when his father separated in 1907, he remained joint with his grandfather. In ordinary cases of partition between a Hindu father and his sons, the grandsons, though no doubt they take an interest in the family property as from their birth, can only derive that interest through their fathers, with whom the presumption is that they remain joint after partition.

There is a distinction between a release and a partition. It may well be said that a father has no right to release his son's interest in the family property while the grandfather is alive. But it has happened in this case that Harakchand obtained his share in the joint family property and was released of his liability for certain debts. Therefore it is clear there was a partition and his son must abide by it unless it can be set aside on the ground of fraud or for other good cause Therefore when Hasraj died his property went to his son Lakhichand and his grandson the plaintiff as his co-heirs. The plaintiff has next contended relying on para. 31 of Mulla's Hindu Law that according to the Mitakshara such co-heirs will take as co-parceners, and, therefore, on the death of Lakhichand plaintiff would be entitled to the property as against his widow. But Mr. Mulla is referring to sons in a joint Hindu family who inherit the self-acquired property of their father. In that case they take it as co-parceners and if they continue as a joint family such property would go by survivorship. It is different, however, when the family is already separated. Then the heirs take the property as tenants-in-common. Therefore we allow the appeal to this extent as far as the widow of Fulchand, defendant No. 1 is concerned. She will be entitled to such part of the suit property which she can prove was taken by Fulchand in 1904. The second defendant will be entitled to half the property left by Hasraj to which her husband Lakhichand became heir, and the plaintiff will be entitled to the other half.

We, therefore, send back the case to the Trial Court for proper enquiries to be conducted in accordance with our judgment.

All costs to come out of the estate in both the Courts.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 515 OF 1921.

April 20, 1925.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice LeRossignol.

Musammat SURJO—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat DALELO AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Alienation by widow—Widow, whether can challenge alienation.

The restrictions imposed by the Hindu Law on a widow's power of alienation of her husband's estate are inseparable from her estate and their existence does not depend on that of heirs capable of taking on her death. Therefore, a Hindu widow is entitled to restrain an alienation of immoveable property held by another widow on the usual life-tenure, where the former is entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of the latter.

Lahori v. Radho, 72 P. R. 1906; 108 P. L. R. 1907; 125 P. W. R. 1906, followed.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Hoshiarpur, dated the 24th August 1920, affirming that of the Munsif, First Class, Kangra, dated the 15th March 1920.

Messrs. Sagar Chand and C. L. Gulati, for the Appellant.

Lala Mehr Chand Mahajan, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of an action brought by the appellant Musammat Surjo to contest a sale of agricultural land by one Musammat Dalelo, the widow of her deceased husband's brother. The parties are Brahmans of the Tahsil Dehra Dun in the Kangra District; and the question for determination is whether a widow is entitled to restrain the alienation of immoveable property held by another widow on the usual life-tenure. Now, the learned District Judge holds that the plaintiff is entitled to succeed to the estate in the event of her surviving Musammat Dalelo, but that she has failed to establish a custom empowering her to contest an alienation made by the latter.

Upon the evidence produced by the plaintiff, it is impossible to hold that any custom, such as has been relied upon by her, has been established. It is true that a Division Bench of the Punjab Chief Court in Lahori v. Radho (1) held that among the Girths of the Kangra District there is a custom authorizing a widow to impeach an alienation of immoveable property made by the widow of her husband's collateral, but we cannot extend the rule laid down in that judgment to Brahmans in the absence of any evidence showing that they are governed by a similar custom.

The plaintiff, however, invokes also the Hindu Law, and it is beyond dispute that under that law a widow takes only a life-interest in the estate of her husband, and that the nature of her interest can never alter, even though there be a complete want of heirs. As laid down in Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata Narrainapah (2), "the restrictions imposed by the Hindu Law on a widow's power of alienation of her husband's estate are inseparable from her estate, and their existence does not depend on that of heirs capable of taking on her death." It accordingly follows that the plaintiff, who, under the Customary Law, is entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of Musammat Dalelo, has the power to impeach an unauthorized alienation made by her.

Accordingly we accept the appeal, and, setting aside the judgments of the Courts below, remit the case to the Court of first instance for re-decision with reference to the remaining issues. The Court-fees on the memorandum of appeal in this Court as well as on that in the Court of the District Judge shall be refunded, and other costs shall abide the event.

Z. K. Appeal accepted.

(1) 72 P. R. 1906; 108 P. L. R. 1907; 125 P. W. R. 1906.

(2) 8 M. I. A. 529; 2 W. R. (P. C.) 61; 1 Suth. P. C. J. 76; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 820; 19 E. R. 631.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 212 OF 1921.

March 14, 1924.

Present :—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal.

SHIB DEO MISRA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAM PRASAD AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Adoption—Adoptive father and adopted son belonging to different sub-castes, effect of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11, O. VI, r. 15—Suit by widow to challenge adoption—Decision, whether binding on reversioners—Res judicata—Arbitration, reference to—Award, evidentiary value of—Plaint—Verification, absence of—Subsequent verification, effect of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 141, —Suit by reversioners to recover property on death of widow—Limitation—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 41—Transferee from Hindu widow, whether can claim benefit of section—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 35, 79—Death register, entries in, admissibility of —Official document—Certified copy—Presumption of correctness.

A plaint which does not contain the verification clause as required by r. 15 of O. VI of the C. P. C. is not void. The omission to verify the plaint is a mere irregularity which can be cured at a later stage, and a subsequent verification does not amount to an amendment of the plaint. [p. 940, col. 1.]

Rajit Ram v. Katesar Nath, 18 A. 396; A. W. N. (1896) 102; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 971, Basdeo v. John Smidt, 22 A. 55; A. W. N. (1899) 172; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1068 and Mohini Mohun Das v. Bungsi Buddan Saha Das, 17 C. 580; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 498; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 926 (P. C.), followed.

Where on the death of a Hindu his widow takes possession of his estate, it is not incumbent upon his reversioners to bring a suit for a declaration that a certain person who claims to be the adopted son of the deceased was not in fact adopted by him. The reversioners are entitled to wait till the death of the widow and then bring a suit for recovery of possession, and if such a suit is brought within twelve years of the death of the widow it cannot be held to be barred by time. [ibid.]

A death register kept at a Police station is an official book and the entries in it are admissible in evidence under s. 35 of the Evidence Act. [p. 942, col. 1.]

Sampat v. Gauri Shankar, 10 Ind. Cas. 713; 14 O. C. 68, Habib Ullah v. Emperor, 18 Ind. Cas. 653; 15 O. C. 351 at p. 356; 14 Cr. L. J. 93, Bisheshar Dayal v. Hira-

Lal, 36 Ind. Cas. 941; 19 O. C. 221; 4 O. L. J. 49, Mohammad Jafar v. Emperor, 54 Ind. Cas. 166; 22 O. C. 250; 6 O. L. J. 577; 21 Cr. L. J. 22, Tamiz-ud-din Sarkar v. Taju, 46 Ind. Cas. 237; 46 C. 152; 22 C. W. N. 822, Zaibunnissa v. Hasaratunnissa, 52 Ind. Cas. 162; 22 O. C. 124; 1 U. P. L. R. (O.) 1 and Devarapalli Ramalinga Reddi v. Srigiriraju Kotayya, 41 Ind. Cas. 286; 41 M. 26; 22 M. L. T. 17; 33 M. L. J. 60; (1917) M. W. N. 558; 6 L. W. 246, referred to.

The correctness of a certified copy of an official document must be presumed under s. 79 of the Evidence Act. [p. 943, col. 1.]

Decrees of Courts are not to be lightly treated on a mere suspicion or on a mere supposition based on no special evidence that they are collusive. [p. 944, col. 1.]

A suit brought by a Hindu widow to challenge an adoption alleged to have been made by her late husband must be regarded as a representative suit and the decision arrived therein is, in the absence of collusion, binding upon the reversioners and operates as res judicata between them and the adopted son. [ibid.]

Under the Hindu Law for the purposes of inheritance each primary caste must adopt within its own limits and an adoption would not be invalid so long as the adoptive father and the adopted son belong to sub-castes of the same primary caste. [p. 946, col. 1.]

Narain Singh v. Shiam Kali Kunwar, 25 Ind. Cas. 45; 17 O. C. 186, relied on.

Where the question of the factum and validity of an adoption is referred to arbitration, the award made by the arbitrators is, apart from its being res judicata, a weighty piece of evidence in a subsequent suit between the parties in which a dispute arises as to the alleged adoption. [p. 944, col. 2.]

A Hindu widow enters into possession of her husband's estate by right and not with any express or implied consent of the reversioners. While she is alive the reversioners have no voice in the matter and have no right to intervene. She can continue in possession in spite of their protest. A transferee from the widow, who is in possession by her own right and as to whose possession no consent of the reversioners can be implied by law, cannot claim the protection of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act. [p. 948, col. 1.]

First appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Agra, dated the 11th of April 1921.

JUDGMENT.—This is a plaintiffs' appeal arising out of a suit for recovery of possession on the allegation that the plaintiff No. 1 is the reversionary heir of Kallu Misra deceased, the last male owner of the property. Plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 are transferees from plaintiff No. 1. In the plaint it was alleged that on the death of Kallu Misra his widow Musammat Mohini entered into possession as a Hindu widow for her life, that she unlawfully made various transfers and ultimately died on the 15th of December 1907. The suit as brought was just within limitation of this date as the Courts were closed on the 15th and 16th December 1919. The defendant No. 1 claims to be the adopted son of Kallu Misra. The other defendants are transferees either from Musammat Mohini or from the defendant No. 1, who are now in possession of the bulk of the property in dispute.

On behalf of the defendants there were several pleas taken. There was a denial of the pedigree set up by the plaintiffs. There was a plea that the claim was barred by time, that Ram Prasad defendant No. 1 was the adopted son of the deceased, that the claim was barred by the principle of res judicata and that it was also barred by estoppel.

In the pleadings or at the time when the issues were settled there was no suggestion that the deceased Kallu Misra had left any Will. On the other hand, the plaintiffs' Vakil admitted that Shib Deo Misra, plaintiff No. 1, had other brothers alive and also stated that he would not amend his plaint. As matters stood on the pleadings it is clear that in any event Shib Deo Misra not being the sole surviving reversioner at the time of the death of Musammat Mohini, the entire claim could not be decreed. At a late stage in the case Ram Prasad defendant No. 1 filed a number of papers among which there was a document purporting to be a Will of Kallu Misra and bearing the date 4th October 1887. Under it, with the exception of a temple and rights connected therewith which were to go to Ram Prasad himself, the rest of the property was on the death of Musammat Mohini to go to Shib Deo Misra to the exclusion of his other brothers.

The learned Subordinate Judge came to the conclusion that the plaintiffs' pedigree was established, that Ram Prasad's adoption had not been established, and that the claim was not barred by res judicata. He, however, found that the plaintiffs had failed to prove that Musammat Mohini died within 12 years of the suit, that the Will produced by Ram Prasad was a forgery and that the claim was barred by the principle of estoppel.

The plaintiffs have come in appeal and challenged the findings arrived at against them. The learned Advocate for the respondents has not only supported the decree on the findings in his favour but has also supported it on the other pleas raised. Thus all the important issues of fact and law have been re-argued before us and we propose to dispose of all of them.

The first question is one of limitation.

This plea was based on three grounds, (1) that the alleged adoption of Ram Prasad not having been set aside within six years the claim was barred by time, (2) that the plaint when originally filed was not verified at all and this defect was not cured till long after the expiry of the period of limitation, and (3) that Musammat Mohini had not died on the 15th of December 1907 but died either on the 9th or 10th of December of that year and the claim was beyond time.

We agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that the six year's rule has no application to this case. The reversioners were not bound to bring a suit for a declaration that the alleged adoption had in fact not taken place. They were entitled to wait till the lady died and then bring a suit for recovery of possession. The present claim is not one for a mere declaration but is for a possession. If it is brought within twelve years of the death of Musammat Mohini it cannot be held to be barred by the six year's rule.

We, however, do not agree with the view taken by the learned Subordinate Judge that the verification having been made after the expiry of twelve years the suit itself was barred by time. It appears that the plaint was actually presented in Court on the 17th of December 1919, but though it bore the signatures of all the plaintiffs it did not contain any verification by them. This defect was brought to the notice of the munsarim by one of the defendants and subsequently to that of the Court. Under an order of the Court the verification was ultimately made, but it was some months afterwards. We are, however, of opinion, that the plaint was not a void plaint merely because it did not contain the verification clause as required by the C. P. C In our opinion the omission to verify it was a mere irregularity which could be cured even at a later stage. Merely on the ground of such a defect the plaint cannot be treated as altogether invalid. The subsequent verification was not an amendment of it. This has been the view consistently followed in this Court and we may refer to the cases of Rajit Ram v. Katesar Nath (1) and Basdeo v. John Smidt (2) which follow the case of Mohini Mohan Das v. Bungsi Budan Saha Das (3) decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council.

The main point to consider in connection with the plea of limitation is the exact date on which Musammat Mohini died. There can be no doubt that the burden lies on the plaintiffs to prove conclusively that her death took place within twelve years of the suit.

In support of their case the plaintiffs rely on a number of documents as well as oral evidence. The defendants rely mainly on oral evidence. So far as the oral evidence of the parties is concerned it is clear that it cannot be of much value when the dispute is confined to a difference of a few days only. No witness can be expected to remember the date of her death exactly. The only witness who has attempted to give an exact date is Jhaman Lal, a witness for the defendants, but his cross-examination shows clearly that he has not a good memory and we find it impossible to rely implicitly on his statement. We shall also show later on that the date given by Jhaman Lal now is not quite consistent with the written statement which he had filed in 1908.

Soon after the death of Musammat Mohini Ram Prasad instituted a suit on the 23rd of September 1908 against Jhaman Lal, Musammat Mohini's own brother, claiming certain jewelleries, ornaments and other articles. In para. 3 of his plaint he stated that about eleven months ago Jhaman Lal had taken away the plaintiff's mother Musammat Mohini during her illness to his own village and she died there on Aghan Sudi, 14 Sambat 1964, corresponding to the 18th of December 1907. Then in para. 7 he gave this date as the date of his cause of action. In the written statement filed by Jhaman Lal he nowhere specifically denied that the date of the death of Musammat Mohini was not the correct date. The learned Subordinate Judge in his judgment also assumed that the date of her death was the 18th of December 1907. At that time both Ram Prasad and Jhaman Lal were nearly connected with Musammat Mohini and were in the best position to know or to find out the exact date of her death. At that time there was no motive for either of them to conceal the exact date of her death. It is clear, therefore, that a statement of the exact date of her death, both according to the calender year and the Sambat year, made only a few months after her death, is of a very great evidentiary value and cannot be lightly passed over. The only ground on which the learned Subordinate Judge has ignored this statement is that on a subsequent date, namely, on the 5th of December 1919, Ram Prasad filed another suit in which he stated that Musammat Mohini died on the 9th of December 1907. The statement in the last mentioned plaint is, however, not of much value, as we know that it was in that very month that preparations were being made for the filing of this suit, and it might well be assumed that the parties were well aware that litigation was going to be launched. The second plaint, therefore, cannot very much derogate from the value of the former plaint.

(1) 18 A. 396; A. W. N. (1896) 102; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 971.

(2) 22 A. 55; A. W. N. (1899) 172; 9 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 1068.

(3) 17 C. 580; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 498; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 926 (P. C.).

The plaintiffs also relied on two death registers of which certified copies were produced and the originals also were summoned from the Office of Superintendent of Police. One of these registers is a bigger register and contains entries of deaths of villagers arranged according to the various villages. The other is a smaller register which contains reports of deaths in chronological order and not by division of villages. For the sake of reference we shall call the first register as the village death register and the second the daily death register.

The entry of the date of the death of Musammat Mohini as contained in the village death register is admittedly suspicious. It has certainly been tampered with at one stage or another. On the 3rd of September 1919 one of the plaintiffs applied for a certified copy of this entry and a certified copy was granted to him on the 17th of September 1919. This copy stated the date of her death to be the 15th of December 1907, but a note was added that the original was not clear. As admittedly the claim would have been well within time in September 1919 there was no occasion for the plaintiffs to get the date tampered within that month. Armed with the certified copy the plaintiffs waited till December and ultimately filed the plaint on the re-opening day, i. e., on the 17th of December 1907. We find it difficult to believe that before the 17th of December the plaintiffs must have got the date tampered with. They could very well have not allowed any time to be wasted and might have taken steps to get the plaint filed rather than tamper with the death register on which they were going to rely. On the 8th of January 1920, an application was made on behalf of one of the defendants and a certified copy of this entry was granted to him on the 9th of January. The heading of this certified copy has been carefully corrected and in this copy the date "10th of December 1907" is mentioned at no less than three places. A perusal of this copy suggests that pains were taken to show that the date of the death of Musammat Mohini was the 10th of December 1907. There is also no note whatsoever in this copy which would indicate that the original was either not clear or suspicious. After this one of the plaintiffs again applied for a certified copy on the 12th of January 1920, but did not mention the date of Musammat Mohini's death in the application. He was asked to supply this date but failed to do so. The application was accordingly struck off. He then filed a second application on the 5th of February 1920 on which a fresh copy was granted to him, but it has not been produced in Court. The defendants also applied for a fresh copy on the 9th of February 1920, and a copy was granted on the 20th of February 1920 which gave the date of her death as the 10th of December. There is note on this certified copy that this copy was made exactly as the original (could be read). As matters stand the original is now suspicious. We find it now unnecessary to speculate as to which party must be held to be responsible for the tampering. We have come to the conclusion that this Death Register should be excluded from consideration altogether.

The other register namely daily death register on the face of it is not suspicious. It is a bound book the stitches of which do not appear to have been broken. The entry regarding the death of Musammat Mohini in this register has not at all been tampered with. The original has come from proper custody and a certified copy of the entry has also been produced. Both the original and the copy say that the death of Musammat Mohini as reported by the village chaukidar on the 19th of December 1907, had taken place on the 18th of December 1907. It is to be noted that this date fits in with the date given in Ram Prasad's plaint filed in the year 1908. These two pieces of evidence, therefore, corroborate each other. It is true that this date does not tally with the date given in the plaint, but for this the plaintiffs have an obvious explanation, namely, that they got this date from the certified copy which had been granted to them shortly before the suit was instituted. As the plaintiffs cannot have a personal knowledge of the exact date of her death it seems impossible to pin them down to the date mentioned in the plaint.

The learned Subordinate Judge, however, has held that this register is not admissible in evidence at all and the learned Advocate for the respondents has strongly supported that finding. The chaukidar who made the report of Musammat Mohini's death has not been traced and has not been produced. He is probably dead. No attempt has been made by the plaintiffs to produce any other evidence in order to prove the handwriting in this book. The learned Advocate for the respondents has, therefore, argued that this register is not at all admissible and that even if it is admissible and relevant, it requires some proof.

He has relied on a number of cases decided by the Oudh Court in support of his contention. In all these reported cases, however, the book in question was the chaukidar's pocket-book and not the Death Register kept at the Police station. The cases reported as Sampat v. Gauri Shankar (4), Habib-ullah v. Emperor (5), Bisheshar Dayal v. Hira Lal (6) and Mohammad Jafar v. Emperor (7) are thus distinguishable. On the other hand it has been laid down in the case of Tamiz-ud-din Sarkar v. Taju (8) and in the case of Zaibunnissa v. Hasratunnissa (9) that the death register kept at the Police station is an official book, and the entries in it are legally admissible. A somewhat similar view has been expressed in the case of Devarapalli Ramalinga Reddi v. Srigiriraju Kotayya (10).

Under the Police Act (V of 1861), s. 12, the Inspector-General of Police is authorised to frame orders and rules relative to, amongst others, the collecting and communicating by them of intelligence and information, etc. Under the Police Regulations, Ch. XXIV, para. 274, sub-cl. (4) the head muharrir of every Police station officer has to keep registers of births and deaths and make entries therein as reported by the village chaukidars. There are prescribed forms Nos. 1 and 5 which have to be used for that matter. The register in question contains printed pages of the form No. 5 and it was manifestly kept at the Police station and later on forwarded to head-quarters. The mere fact that the entries in it are made in chronological order would not show that this document is not an official book. We are clearly of opinion that this register was an official book, register or record made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty within the meaning of s. 35 of the Indian Evidence Act. An entry made therein would, therefore, be itself a relevant fact.

Mr. Dhar, who argued the case on behalf of another set of respondents, has strongly contended that even if the register is an official book within the meaning of s. 35 and even if an entry in it is a relevant fact, the register must either be proved by some evidence or be shown to come within the scope of s. 81 of the Indian Evidence Act. It cannot be denied that there is no oral evidence on the record that this was the identical register which was kept at the Police station Etmadpur in which circle village Brijnathu where Musammat Mohini died is situated. All that is known is that this was brought in Court from the Record Room at head-quarters by a clerk named Abdul Ghani. Mr. Dhar has, therefore, contended that the Court can presume its genuineness under s. 81 of the Evidence Act only when it is shown that this is a document directed by any law to be kept by any person and if such document is kept substantially in the form required by law and is produced from proper custody. His argument is that the Police Regulation para. 274, sub-cl. (5) enjoins the keeping of a register with separate pages assigned for each village and that, therefore, this register is not

(4) 10 Ind. Cas. 713; 14 O. C. 68.
(5) 18 Ind. Cas. 653; 15 O. C. 351 at p. 356; 14 Cr. L. J. 93.
(6) 36 Ind. Cas. 941; 19 O. C. 221; 4 O. L. J. 49.
(7) 54 Ind. Cas. 166; 22 O. C. 250; 6 O. L. J. 577; 21 Cr. L. J. 22.
(8) 46 Ind. Cas. 237; 46 C. 152; 22 C. W. N. 822.
(9) 52 Ind. Cas. 162; 22 O. C. 124; 1 U. P. L. R. (O.) 1.
(10) 41 Ind. Cas. 286; 41 M. 26; 22 M. L. T. 17; 33 M. L. J. 60; (1917) M. W. N. 558; 6 L. W. 246.

kept substantially in the form required by law, assuming that the law requires it to be kept. He has argued that it was, therefore, incumbent on the plaintiffs to lead evidence to prove the identity of this register and to show that it is this very register which has come from the Record Room and which was the register kept at the Police station. The answer to this objection is that in addition to the original register the plaintiffs have produced a certified copy of its entry, and a certificate is endorsed on it purporting to have been given by an authorized officer. The correctness of the copy must, therefore, be presumed under s. 79 of the Evidence Act. This copy removes all doubt as to any possible mistake in the identity. We have already said that the entry in the daily death register is corroborated by the statement contained in the plaint of 1908. These two pieces of evidence, even excluding the other register, are very strong evidence of the exact date of the death of Musammat Mohini. As against this we have no rebutting evidence whatsoever except the solitary statement of Jhamman Lal, the brother of Musammat Mohini. We have already said that Jhamman Lal when sued in 1908 by Ram Prasad did not specifically deny the correctness of the date. In the witness-box he did not appear to be a man possessing a retentive memory.

There is, of course, always a possibility that the date given by Ram Prasad in his plaint might not have been the exact date or that the date as reported by the chaukidar was not the correct date. But in the absence of any other reliable evidence there is no reasonable ground for doubting that the statements contained in these two independent documents, which corroborate each other, were inaccurate.

We accordingly hold that the plaintiffs have established that Musammat Mohini died on the 18th of December 1907, and that, therefore, the present claim was in no way barred by time.

The next point which we propose to consider is the question of Ram Prasad's adoption.

The plea of res judicata is raised in connection with this issue and is based on the following circumstances. Kallu Misra had admittedly brought up Ram Prasad in his house from his childhood. It is the defendants' case that he even performed Ram Prasad's janeo ceremony and marriage ceremony, but the evidence as to this consists of the solitary statement of Jhamman Lal and is, therefore, not necessarily strong. There can be no doubt, however, that Ram Prasad had been living in Kallu Misra's house when he died and continued to live for some time longer. On the 20th of August 1897, he executed a bond in which he asserted that he was the adopted son of the deceased Kallu Misra. Musammat Mohini promptly instituted a suit on the 26th of November 1897, for a declaration that Ram Prasad was not the adopted son of Kallu Misra and that the bond referred to above was altogether invalid and ineffectual. Ram Prasad filed a written statement on the 18th of December 1897 in which he put forward his claim of a valid adoption. The parties, however, entered into an agreement to refer all their disputes to arbitration and the Court referred the matter to the arbitration of three arbitrators. Two of these three arbitrators are proved in this case to have been residents of the same mohalla Kachahri Ghat where Kallu Misra used to live and one of these two, namely, Ganga Prasad used to live in a house which was in front of Kallu Misra's house, the two houses being separated only by a road. Ganga Prasad's son Mahabir Prasad proves this. On the 24th of February 1898, the arbitrators delivered their award in which they stated that they were empowered under the agreement to decide the dispute between the parties, without having regard for the issues and without taking any evidence. They expressed the opinion "Ram Prasad is the son and the proper heir of Kallu Misra deceased." Then they proceeded to direct that out of the entire estate left by him one house was to remain in the possession of Musammat Mohini for life and to go to Ram Prasad after her death and that two houses were to vest absolutely in her with full power of alienation. Ram Prasad filed objections to this award on the 14th of March 1898. The Court, however, disallowed these objections on the 25th of March 1898, and ordered that a decree be prepared in accordance with the award. A decree was accordingly prepared which bears the date 25th of March 1898.

The learned Subordinate Judge has held this decree not to be binding on the plaintiffs on the ground that, in his opinion, it was not passed after a fair trial, but merely embodied a private settlement of the dispute, the arbitrators having been given power to decide the case without taking any evidence and without having regard to the issues framed. There is not much evidence on the record to indicate any peculiar circumstances under which the proceedings had been conducted. All that we know is that there was one sitting of the arbitrators. At least two of the arbitrators were residents of the same mohalla and there is nothing strange if they had been given power to decide the case on their own personal knowledge without taking any further evidence. The suit was a contested one and the award was made after the case had been referred to the arbitrators under an order of the Court. Objections were also filed to the award and they were disallowed. We are, therefore, entitled to presume in the absence of any satisfactory evidence to the contrary that the Court at that time was satisfied that it was a bona fide litigation and not a collusive or fraudulent one. We find it impossible to fix upon any particular circumstance which would justify us in holding that there was not a fair trial at all. Decrees of Courts are not to be lightly treated on a mere suspicion and on a mere supposition based on no substantial evidence, that they are collusive. We are, therefore, unable to agree with the view which the learned Subordinate Judge has taken of the arbitration proceedings.

Musammat Mohini represented the whole estate for the time being. The reversioners had then no rights in præsenti. Her claim was to avoid the adoption set up by Ram Prasad. The suit was, therefore, brought not only in her own interest but in the interests of the whole body of reversioners who would be entitled to the property after her death. If the adoption were to be upheld the line of the reversioners would be altogether cut off. The suit brought by Musammat Mohini must, therefore, be treated as a representative suit and all persons having a common interest must be deemed to have been represented through her under s. 11, Explanation 6 of the C. P. C. The defendants Nos. 7 and 8 are claiming through Ram Prasad, whereas the plaintiff No. 1 must be deemed to have been then represented by Musammat Mohini. The award and the decree, therefore, operate as res judicata between them.

Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and defendant No. 9, as will be shown later, claim title under Musammat Mohini and, therefore, the plea of res judicata cannot be successfully urged on their behalf.

We now proceed to consider the question of adoption itself. The defendants rely on an agreement dated the 21st of April 1878 which purports to have been executed by Bansi the father of Ram Prasad in favour of Kallu Misra. The stamp of this document was sold to Bansi himself. The document purports to be more than 30 years old and there is nothing suspicious about it. It must, therefore, be presumed that it is a genuine document. It shows that Bansi was giving one of his sons named Ram Bakhsh to Kallu Misra in order that the latter might "make him his son." The learned Subordinate Judge has thought that this document negatives the theory of adoption. We think that if this document refers to the defendant No. 1 then it corroborates that theory. The name given in the document, however, is Ram Bakhsh. After adoption the original name of the boy is always changed. It is, therefore, not at all unlikely that Ram Prasad's original name was Ram Bakhsh. At the same time it cannot be denied that Bansi had more than one sons and there is a possibility that this agreement might have referred to an elder brother of his. We would, therefore, not say much more about it.

The next important evidence is the arbitration award to which we have already referred. Apart from all questions of its binding nature it is certainly a very strong piece of evidence inasmuch as it was pronounced by arbitrators two of whom were residents of the same mohalla as Kallu Misra and was pronounced when apparently a dispute arose for the first time. We consider it to have great weight.

We may next refer to a number of documents which have not been referred to by the learned Subordinate Judge in his judgment and which show that Ram Prasad ever since then has been consistently asserting himself as the adopted son of Kallu Misra. These assertions were made in documents of the following dates. The 12th of June 1898, the 6th of June 1899, the 10th of September 1899, the 31st of March 1900, the 14th of June 1900, the 19th of October 1907, the 17th of April 1908, the 16th of April 1912, the 12th of February 1917, the 5th of February 1918, and also in the plaint dated the 5th of December 1919, and in the written statement in this case. It was not till Ram Prasad went into the witness-box that he denied a formal adoption. It is true that all these statements are mere admissions of Ram Prasad in his own favour, but they are admissible in order to show that adoption had been asserted all along. But a strong circumstance in support of the theory of adoption is to be found in the position taken up by Jhamman Lal when Ram Prasad brought a suit in 1908 against him. That suit was contested by Jhamman Lal and it was dismissed, and the decree was appealed against by Ram Prasad. It can not, therefore, be suggested for a moment that that litigation was a collusive one. In the plaint which Ram Prasad had filed he had described himself as the son of Kallu Misra. Jhamman Lal admitted the correctness of this statement. It is apparent that if Jhamman Lal did not know or did not believe that Ram Prasad was the adopted son of Kallu Misra, one of the pleas which he would have naturally taken, would have been that Ram Prasad had no locus standi to sue as he was not the adopted son of Kallu Misra at all. The admission by Jhamman Lal so soon after the death of Musammat Mohini, in our opinion, is of great significance. It is only on this former admission of Jhamman Lal that we are prepared to attach some importance to his deposition in this case, where he says that the adoption had in fact taken place. The other evidence produced on behalf of the defendants has not been believed by the Court below and we are not prepared to say that the learned Subordinate Judge was wrong in rejecting that testimony. As against all this evidence the plaintiffs have produced practically no evidence. Hakim Gayan Singh one of the plaintiffs merely stated that Ram Prasad was not the adopted son of Kallu Misra but when cross-examined had to admit that he had made no enquiries about it as he did not think that there was any need for it. As to Ram Prasad, it must be remembered that he had put forward the plea of adoption in his written statement, but when examined as a witness he stated that the ceremony of adoption had not been formally performed. He in fact gave up his plea of adoption by admitting that he was not a formally adopted son. The other contesting defendants, however, claim title under documents executed by Musammat Mohini or by Ram Prasad himself prior to the suit and are in no way bound by a subsequent adverse admission by Ram Prasad. His statement is merely a piece of evidence in the case which has to be considered for what it is worth. We may say at once that we are not prepared to place any reliance whatsoever on what Ram Prasad has stated in this case one way or the other. He is a totally unreliable witness who is capable of changing his statement to suit the occasion. He gave one date of Musammat Mohini's death in the plaint which he verified in 1908. He gave another date in the plaint which he verified in 1919, according to his personal knowledge and then ultimately stated in the witness-box that he had no personal knowledge of it.

The evidence on this issue, in our opinion, is all one sided and the learned Subordinate Judge was not right in holding that merely because the oral evidence produced by the defendants to prove the giving and the taking was not of a satisfactory nature the issue should be decided against them. It is to be noted that Ram Prasad has been asserting himself as an adopted son for a very long number of years. Although the reversioners of Kallu Misra were not bound to bring a declaratory suit in the lifetime of Musammat Mohini nevertheless they could have brought one if they wanted. They chose to wait for a long period till Musammat Mohini's death and then waited again till nearly 12 years after her death. The plaintiffs now at this long distance of time call upon the defendants who are mere transferees and not connected with the family of Kallu Misra or of Bansi, to prove that all the formalities required for a valid adoption were gone through in the seventies. After such a long lapse of time the defendants are entitled to fall back on the documentary evidence and the conduct of the parties. It is impossible now to expect that they would be able to produce eye-witnesses to this adoption. We are satisfied that the balance of evidence is entirely on the side of the defendants and that its weight has not been properly appreciated. They have fully discharged the burden of proving that the adoption had in fact taken place.

In the Court below there was an objection as to the validity of the adoption on the ground that Kallu Misra was a Kankubjya Brahmin and Bansi was a Sanadh Brahmin and it was suggested that an adoption of a Sanadh boy by a Kankubjya Brahmin was not valid. Two witnesses, namely, Shib Deo, plaintiff, and Suraj Prasad stated that such an adoption could not take place. We are unable to accept this contention. A registered sale-deed dated the 25th of January 1906 shows that Jhamman Lal is of the caste of Sanadh Brahmin. Musammat Mohini, therefore, must have been of the same caste. She was duly married to Kallu Misra who was a Kankubjya Brahmin. There was obviously, therefore, no bar to a marriage between them. Nor can the adoption of a boy belonging to the same sub-caste be held to be invalid. In the case of Narain Singh v. Shiam Kali Kunwar (11), the Oudh Bench of which one of us was a member held that for the purposes of inheritance each primary caste must adopt from within its own limits and that the adoption would not be invalid so long as the adoptive father and the adopted son belonged to sub-caste of the same primary caste. We, therefore, think that there is no force in this objection.

We have already indicated that so far as the pleadings went Shib Deo Misra and his transferees would in no case be entitled to the entire property left by Kallu Misra, as it is admitted that at the time of the death of Musammat Mohini when succession opened to the reversioners, there were more than one person entitled to it. In cases of such collateral succession the property inherited is the separate property of all the reversioners and does not go to the head of the family only. In order to get over this difficulty, the appellants relied on a Will which was produced by Ram Prasad at a very late stage in the case. In the plaint there was no suggestion that Kallu Misra had left any Will. Even in the written statement which Ram Prasad filed there was no suggestion that Kallu Misra had not died intestate. The story told by Ram Prasad is that soon after the death of Musammat Mohini he obtained possession of a large number of papers left by her and kept them since. He, however, did not discover that that bundle of papers contained this document. It was only a few months ago when certain other persons were examining the papers that this Will was discovered. We find it difficult to believe that Ram Prasad could have had possession of all these papers for a period of nearly ten years without getting them examined by some person. We agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that this document is a rank forgery and was manufactured for the purposes of this case. In this document Ram Prasad gets the temple and rights appertaining thereto, which alone now remain after the various transfers. On the other hand Shib Deo, to the exclusion of the other reversioners, gets the entire estate on the death of Musammat Mohini. It is clear that this document was prepared in order to benefit Ram Prasad and to benefit Shib Deo Misra and his transferees. Ram Prasad himself produced it in Court and is responsible for its production. Though we have a suspicion that it was produced in Court at the instance of at least some of the plaintiffs it is difficult to come to a conclusion as to which of them got it produced.

The learned Subordinate Judge has held this document to be a forgery on two internal circumstances afforded by the deed itself. At places where there were creases the ink used in the writing has spread out. This clearly indicates that some old paper was got hold of and written upon subsequently. It can also be shown that the boundaries of the house entered therein at No. 7 could not have been the boundaries which existed in 1887 which date the document purports to bear. The eastern boundary of Kallu Misra's house No. 7 is shown as Deoki's house and the western boundary as Hira Lal's house. These boundaries are the same which appear in a subsequent document of 1897, namely, the plaint filed by Musammat Mohini against Ram Prasad. It is suggested on behalf of the defendants that in forging the Will the boundaries of this house as given in the plaint of 1897, were copied out. Between 1887 and 1897, comes a sale-deed dated the 22nd of June 1890 executed by Ram Chandra in favour of Deoki Nandan. This document clearly recites that the house which was being sold by Ram Chandra was bounded on the east by the house of Deoki Nandan and on the west by the house of Kallu Misra. There is also a recital that this house of Ram Chandra had been in his family from the time of his grandfather and had been acquired in 1874. It is clear, therefore, that in the year 1887, Ram Chandra's house intervened between Kallu Misra's house and Deoki Nandan's house. When, however, Deoki Nandan purchased Ram Chandra's house the latter house also became Deoki Nandan's, and this very well explains the eastern boundary as given in the plaint of 1897, for in that year Deoki Nandan's new house was situated to the east of Kallu's house. On the other hand in 1887 Deoki Nandan's house was not the eastern boundary of Kallu's house but it was Ram Chandra's house which was the eastern boundary. This internal evidence also shows that this document was not in existence before 1890.

(11) 25 Ind. Cas. 45; 17 O. C. 186.

There is another still more important circumstance which has not been detected by the Court below and which we may point out as conclusively establishing that the document Ex. 1 is a forgery. This document purports to have been executed on the 4th of October 1887, corresponding to Aghan Badi 3, Sambat 1944. A reference to the calendar at once makes it clear that the Hindi date corresponding to the 4th of October 1887, was Katik Badi 2 Sambat 1914, and the English date corresponding to Aghan Badi 3 Sambat 1944, was the 3rd of November 1887. It is manifest that a hopeless blunder was committed in putting down the two dates on this document. We have, therefore, no hesitation in rejecting this altogether.

Some attempt was made in the Court below to lead oral evidence to prove the signatures on this document. Hakim Gayan Singh plaintiff tries to prove the signature of Kallu Misra and so does Ram Prasad. While a third witness Ganeshi Lal tries to prove the signature of one of the attesting witnesses. We have examined their evidence and have come to the conclusion that no reliance can be placed on it. Gayan Singh is an interested witness and Ram Prasad is totally unreliable. Nor is the evidence of Ganeshi Lal in any way convincing.

We come now to the question of estoppel. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 claim under a title derived from Musammat Mohini. On the 3rd of August 1898, Musammat Mohini made a gift of the house in her possession to Jagdhar her own brother. On the 25th of January 1906, Jagdhar sold it to Santan Lal and Lakhshmi Narain. On the 3rd of February 1910 Santan Lal and Lakhshmi Narain mortgaged it to Hardayal and Raj Narain. The mortgagees obtained a decree for sale on the basis of the mortgage-deed and purchased the property at auction on the 9th of March 1918. The previous deeds recited the award and the fact of Ram Prasad's adoption. The reversioners allowed the transferees Santan Lal and Lakhshmi Narain who were the ostensible owners to remain in possession even after the death of Musammat Mohini. We are satisfied that Har Dayal and Raj Narain were bona fide transferees for value after due enquiries. The claim as against them is barred by s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Defendants Nos. 7 and 8 derive title from Ram Prasad. After the death of Musammat Mohini, Ram Prasad remained in possession of the house which is now in their possession. He mortgaged it on the 18th of May 1910 to Behari Lal and then on the 3rd of October 1911 contracted to sell the equity of redemption to Badri Prasad. On the 16th of April 1912 he sold the equity of redemption to Badri Prasad the mortgagee. Defendants Nos. 7 and 8 are the sons of Badri Prasad. We are satisfied that Badri Prasad was a bona fide transferee for value and he had made due enquiries and acted in good faith on the strength of the award of the arbitrators which was recited in the previous title deed. The reversioners allowed Ram Prasad to remain in possession as ostensible owner and the transferees are protected.

Defendants Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 10 are also transferees but they have compromised their disputes and we are not now concerned with their rights in this appeal.

The case of defendant No. 9 Khubi stands on a slightly different footing. He took a mortgage from Musammat Mohini herself on the 17th of July 1898, and then took a sale-deed of the equity of redemption from her on the 11th of March 1899. He, therefore, derived title from Musammat Mohini herself and the deeds in his favour were executed in her lifetime. We are of opinion that a transferee from a Hindu widow who takes the property from her before the reversioner's right has accrued cannot successfully plead the bar of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act. Assuming that he was a bona fide transferee for value who has taken the property after due enquiry and believing in the validity of the award, it cannot be held that he has taken it from an ostensible owner who was in possession with the consent, express or implied, of the reversioners. A Hindu widow enters into possession of her husband's estate by right and not with any express or implied consent of the reversioners. While she is alive the reversioners have no voice in the matter and have no right to intervene. She can continue in possession in spite of their protest. A transferee from such a person who is in possession by her own right and as to whose possession no consent of the reversioner can be implied by law, cannot claim the protection of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The only point that remains now is the question of costs. The suit is failing substantially on a ground common to all the defendants, namely, the factum of the adoption of Ram Prasad. We think, therefore, that it is a case in which one set of costs only should be allowed to the defendants against the plaintiffs. The learned Subordinate Judge has not allowed separate costs though the decree that has been prepared gives the defendants separate costs on account of Pleaders' fees.

We accordingly dismiss this appeal with this modification that the plaintiffs' suit shall stand dismissed as against all the defendants. The plaintiffs will bear their own costs and pay the costs of all the defendants other than Ram Prasad in both Courts. The defendant Ram Prasad shall bear his own costs throughout. The total legal fee allowed will be the maximum taxable fee both in this Court and in the Court below. Fees in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 203 OF 1922.

December 10, 1924.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

AHMED SULEMAN JIVA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RANDER TOWN MUNICIPALITY—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Bombay District Municipal Act (III of 1901), ss. 96, 174—Reference to Collector—Advice by Collector, whether order—Order passed on application of person not owner, whether binding on owner—Application for permission to build—Municipality, power of, to refuse application.

Where before deciding a matter a Municipality refers it to the Collector for his advice and the Collector advises that a previous order passed by him should be adhered to, the advice given by the Collector cannot be treated as an order under s. 174 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, which only gives the Collector power to suspend an order which a Municipality has actually made. [p. 949, col. 2.]

Where a person who is not the owner of a piece of land makes an application to the Municipality for permission to build upon the land an order passed on such application is not binding on the real owner, and it is not necessary for the latter to have the order set aside. [p. 950, col. 1.]

A Municipality has no power on an application to build to pass an order which practically amounts to a refusal. It is entitled to direct, that the proposed building should be set back to a certain distance from the street but it is not entitled to order that on each side of the proposed building open spaces should be left with the object of preventing the applicant from building at all. Such an order is ultra vires of the Municipality and cannot be brought within its powers under s. 96 of the Bombay District Municipa Act. [p. 949, col. 2; p. 950, col. 1.]

First appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Surat, in Civil Suit No. 4 of 1924.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. M. B. Dave), for the Appellants.

Mr. S. S. Patkar, Government Pleader, for Respondent No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs are owners of a house site at Rander which is 13 feet by 120 feet. On December 11, 1918, they gave notice to the Municipality of their intention to build a house on this site through their Attorney Ismail Hussen Jiva. On December 23, at a meeting of Managing Committee of the Municipality at which the application was considered it was resolved that the Committee were unable to interfere with the resolution previously passed by the General Board in the matter. On March 11, 1919, the matter came before a Special General Meeting of the Municipality, when it was decided (Ex. 68) that the Board was of opinion that permission could be granted on the applicants undertaking to leave off building on both sides of the land, namely, the east and west, that is to say, on their leaving a set-back on the east and west to the streets on which the land rebutted. Accordingly it was resolved that a letter should be written to the Collector and permission should be given on receiving a reply. The Collector replied on July 22, stating that he had seen the land and agreed with Mr. Anderson's order that the land should not be allowed to be built upon except on the conditions made by him. According to those conditions 5 feet from the northern side and 5 feet from the southern side had to be left vacant, so that the owner would only be able to build on a strip 3 feet wide. That was really a refusal to permit the owner to build on his land.

So the General Board resolved on July 24, 1919, that Ismail Hussen should be informed that they could not make any alteration in the permission note granted by the General Board on July 19, 1915. That order was communicated to the plaintiffs on August 8, 1919, and it is really that order against which the plaintiffs have applied to the Court for relief. The history of the previous application for building on this land is as follows: One Fatma had given notice to build on the land in 1913 and the Municipality gave her permission but the order passed on that application by the Municipality was cancelled by the Collector acting under the powers given him under s. 174 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (Ex. 53). The Collector said "the Municipality should effect this (the prevention of excessive congestion) by requiring the landholder to leave a margin of five feet not built upon on each side of his proposed building (which is impossible). Since he cannot do that he cannot build at all." As a matter of fact Fatma who made the application was not the owner of the land. Then in 1915, one Mahomed Suleman Jiva, purporting to be a co-sharer in the land, had given notice to the Municipality of his intention to build, and on July 19, 1915, a resolution was passed that permission could be given on the condition that the building should be within the alignment in front, and 5 feet of space should be left open on each side. Before that order was passed Suleman died, and it is to that order to which the Municipality referrred in their letter of August 8, 1919, addressed to the plaintiffs' Attorney. The learned Judge in the Court below held that the suit was barred by limitation because it was not brought within six months from the orders of the Municipality in 1913 and 1915, and the resolutions of the Managing Committee dated December 23, 1918, and of the General Board dated July 24, 1919. On the other issues it was held that the Collector had power under s. 174 of the Bombay District Municipal Act to suspend the permission granted by the Municipality, and that the resolution of the Municipality, dated July 24, 1919, adhering to its order of 1915, was not illegal and ultra vires.

It seems to us that the real point which lies within a very small compass has not been perceived by the District Judge. The order on the resolution of July 24, 1919, was only communicated to the plaintiffs on August 8, 1919, and from that date the plaintiffs had six months' time within which to appeal to the Court for relief, and, therefore, the suit was within time. It is not a suit to set aside an order of the Collector. The only order of the Collector which we have before us was made in September 1913 on the application of Fatma, who was not the owner, to build on the land. It is true that the Municipality in 1919 before passing their order referred the matter to the Collector for his advice. The Collector advised that the previous order passed by Mr. Anderson should be adhered to, and this was incorporated in the terms of the order made on the plaintiffs' application. This advice given by the Collector in 1919, could not be an order under s. 174 of the Act, which only gives the Collector power to suspend an order which a Municipality has actually made.

Therefore, the only question is whether the order of the Municipality of August 8 was within their powers under s. 96 of the District Municipal Act.

We agree with the appellants' contention that the Municipality have no power on an application to build to pass an order which practically amounts to a refusal. They would be entitled to direct that the proposed building should be set back to a certain distance from the street, but they would not be entitled to order that on each side of the building open space should be left with the object of preventing the applicant from building at all.

On referring to the plaint we note that the land between the two streets on the east and west has been divided up into narrow strips, and it may be that the Collector thinks that in the interest of the inhabitants of the town an open space should be created in the block of buildings between the two streets. The question whether the Collector can, under the powers given to him by s. 174 of the Act, virtually deprive an owner of the use of his land without giving him compensation does not arise in this case. In any event such improvements cannot be brought about by orders passed by the Municipality under s. 96 of the Act. The Municipality must acquire the land in the proper way if they wish to create open spaces. We think, therefore, that the order of August 8 was ultra vires of the Municipality to this extent that they had no power to direct the plaintiff to set back his building on the north and south so as to prevent him building on his own land.

The appeal will be allowed to that extent with costs in both the Courts.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 37 OF 1924.

December 23, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

RAGHURAJ SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat MAJID-UN-NISSA AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. VI, r. 17, O. XLI, r. 23—Remand, when can be made—Amendment of pleadings—Power of Court.

A remand should be made when a preliminary point only is decided or where the Trial Court has not understood the case and a new trial is desired. [p. 950, col. 2.]

The discretion of the Court under O. VI of r. 17 of the C. P. C. to allow amendment of pleadings is very wide. [p. 951, col. 1.]

Appeal against an order of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Sitapur, dated the 28th April 1924

Mr. H. D. Chandra, for the Appellant.

Mr. Muhammad Ayub, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—Two grounds of appeal were argued in this Court:

(1) that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have permitted amendment of the plaint as it did, and

(2) that there was no necessity for the remand of the suit under O. XLI, r. 23, C. P. C.

The active plaintiffs are purchasers of ¾ths of the land in suit from two persons of the name of Dabhu Sah and Dooni Sah. Dabhu Sah is dead and Dooni Sah was the other plaintiff. The plaintiffs stated that they had received a grant from Shahi times of the plots in suit and were proprietors thereof. They called the contesting defendant zemindar of the village but stated in para. 3 of the plaint that he had nothing to do with the land in suit. In para. 9 it was urged that the plaintiffs were entitled to possession of the land as proprietors or by right of possession. What the scribe, who prepared the plaint, meant by "right of possession" he alone can tell.

In the Court of Trial all these contentions were brushed aside and the contest appears to have been on the ground that the plaintiffs were under-proprietors of the land in suit. On that footing the case was tried. This is the impression I have received from a very careful judgment of the Trial Court. If in the Trial Court any allegation had been pressed that the plaintiffs were proprietors or had some strange right by virtue of possession the officer presiding in the Court, who appears to have fully understood the facts of the case, would have noticed this contention. It often happens that things are adjusted by word of mouth in the Trial Court and strange fantastic assertions are made by the learned Counsel in the Appellate Court on the basis of written pleadings.

The Munsif of the Trial Court held that the plaintiffs were under-proprietors and passed a decree for possession of the ¾ths share purchased by the active plaintiffs, and granted a money decree for mesne profits.

From this decree an appeal was lodged and was heard by the Additional Subordinate Judge of Sitapur. He has written a rambling judgment and practically ordered the Trial Court to take upon itself a new trial on points already decided.

There was no reason whatsoever for a remand. A remand is made when a preliminary point only is decided, or where the Trial Court has not understood the case and a new trial is desired. In the present case nothing of the sort has happened. I am fully satisfied that what was agitated in the Trial Court was under-proprietary title and nothing else. The plaintiffs did not appeal on the ground that proprietary possession was not decreed to them. Even in the cross-objection there is nothing said as to decree of the ¾ths share. The cross-objections related only to the ¼th share of the property about which the suit was dismissed. Under the circumstances the plaintiffs must be taken to have abandoned their claim to proprietary title, if they ever set it up, and the remand was quite wrong for an enquiry as to whether the plaintiffs were proprietors or not.

The Judge of the Trial Court definitely held that Dooni Sah had not been in possession during the period of limitation. This was a definite finding which the Appellate Court could have confirmed or set aside. It did not require any re-trial.

The question of jurisdiction is one of law and the lower Appellate Court could have decided it without remitting any issue.

As to whether the plaintiffs are this, or that, or the other, the Trial Court has definitely decided that they are not black or white or grey but are under-proprietors. This means that they are nothing else. These findings of fact could either have been accepted by the Appellate Court or set aside. There was no cause for a remand.

It is obvious to me, therefore, that the appeal ought to have been decided by the lower Appellate Court and not remanded.

As regards amendment the discretion of a Court under O. VI, r. 17 is very wide. The pleadings may be altered or amended in such manner and on such terms as may be just and all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties. There is nothing unjust in putting down definitely the real issue between the parties that the plaintiffs were under-proprietors of the land in suit. The Trial Court has really gripped the contest between the parties and is quite correct in its statement that the real issue is whether the plaintiffs are under-proprietors or not. When this is definitely stated in the plaint no harm is done and such a definite statement was necessary for the purposes of determining the real question in controversy between the parties. The amendment shall, therefore, stand.

In the result I set aside the order of remand and direct the lower Appellate Court to decide the appeals finally without making any remand. The Trial Court has either affirmed or negatived all the contentions of the plaintiffs. The question of jurisdiction was not specifically referred to by the Trial Court, possibly because in his Court no Counsel troubled himself about it. That question, however, is one of law and does not require remand for decision.

Costs here shall abide the result and about other costs the lower Appellate shall give directions at the time it passes final orders in the appeal pending before it.

Z. K. Order set aside.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 133 OF 1923.

December 11, 1924.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

KALLAPPA RAMAPPA DEYANNAWAR —DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BALWANT DASO BETTIGERI— PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 41—Charge created on property by decree—Judgment-debtor, whether ostensible owner—Transferee, whether gets good title.

A charge created by a decree on property in the possession of a judgment-debtor reduces his full ownership to a limited ownership and the judgment-debtor is in no better position than a mortgagor who retains for himself the equity of redemption, so that it is only the equity of redemption that he can dispose of. A transferee from such a judgment-debtor cannot claim the benefit of the provisions of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act. The judgment-debtor in such a case is not an "ostensible owner" within the meaning of the section so as to be able to give a good title to a transferee for value without notice. [p. 952, col. 1.]

Maina v. Bachchi, 28 A. 655; A. W. N. (1906) 165; 3 A. L. J. 551, referred to.

Second appeal from the decision of the Assistant Judge, Belgaum, in Appeal No. 181 of 1921, confirming the decree passed by the Subordinate Judge at Gokak, in Civil Suit No. 111 of 1916.

Mr. H. C. Coyajee (with him Mr. Nilkanth Atmaram), for the Appellants.

Mr. Bahadurji (with him Mr. A. G. Desai), for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

Mr. Y. N. Nadkarni, for Mr. K. H. Kelkar, for Respondent No. 3.

JUDGMENT.—This suit was originally dismissed on the ground that it was not competent according to the provisions of s. 47 of the C. P. C. In second appeal to this Court* we held that that decision was wrong, and setting aside the proceedings of both the lower Courts remanded the case to the Trial Court for decision on certain issues which this Court considered were the proper questions to be determined between the parties. It is now suggested that there was another issue which ought to have been sent down for trial, namely, whether the plaintiffs' objection to the sale advertised by the mamlatdar should have been considered, and whether the fact that the objections were not considered was sufficient to invalidate the sale. More than four years ago this Court passed that order, and now for the first time it has been suggested that that issue ought to have been remanded for trial. It is impossible now at this stage of the proceedings to consider that question. All the issues sent down by the High Court were found in favour of the plaintiffs, and consequently a decree was passed in their favour.

*Since reported as Balwant v. Umabai, 61 Ind. Cas. 287; 23 Bom. L. R. 254; 45 B. 812.—[Ed.]

The important issue was the third issue: "whether the judgment-debtor was the ostensible owner of the suit lands with the consent, express or implied of the decree-holder within the meaning of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act." That would depend upon whether the charge created by the decree on the property in the possession of the judgment-debtor reduced his full ownership to a limited ownership. If his ownership was so reduced, then he could not be the ostensible owner so as to give a title to the transferee for value without notice. In Maina v. Bachchi (1), it was held "that, it being clear upon the construction of the decree that it was the intention of the parties to create a charge on the property for the payment of maintenance within the meaning of s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, the charge could be enforced against the bona fide transferees for value without notice." The following passage appears in the judgment at page 659*:—

"The Transfer of Property Act recognizes in the clearest manner that immovcable property can be made security for the payment of money by way of charge, just as it recognizes the various kinds of mortgages. It equally recognizes the right to enforce the mortgage or charge. It would appear that the provisions as to registration contained in the Registration and Transfer of Property Acts apply to charges (when created by acts of parties) just as much as to mortgages, and if they do so apply I can see very little reason for drawing a distinction between mortgages on the one hand and charges (within the meaning of s. 100) on the other, more particularly as registration amounts to notice."

It follows that there can be no difference between a decree directing that certain property should be a charge for the plaintiff's maintenance as decreed in the suit, and a decree directing, as in this case, that certain property should be a charge for payment of the decretal amount.

Consequently the judgment-debtor in this case was in no better position than a mortgagor who retains for himself the equity of redemption, so that it would only be the equity of redemption that he could dispose of. The result must be that the plaintiff only got at the sale what was left to the judgment-debtor, as he took the property subject to the charge created by the decree. The appeal must be allowed and the suit dismissed with costs throughout subject to any previous order thereon.

The plaintiff to pay costs of the present appellants throughout.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

(1) 28 A. 655; A. W. N. (1906) 165; 3 A. L. J. 551.

*Page of 28 A.—[Ed.]

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS CASE No. 665 OF 1924.
April 3, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

RAMJI LAL—DEFENDANT—PETITIONER

versus

THE FIRM LAKSHMI CHAND-HINGAN LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Application filed beyond time—Extension of time—Ignorance of law, whether sufficient cause.

An application for leave to appeal as a pauper was filed beyond the period of limitation and the applicant alleged that he did not know what the prescribed period of limitation for the application was:

Held, that ignorance of law could not be accepted as sufficient cause for not filing the application within time.

Petition, under O. XLIV, r. 1, C. P. C., for leave to appeal to this Court in forma pauperis against the judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Ambala, dated the 3rd March 1924.

Mr. B. A. Cooper, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Shamair Chand and Kanwar Dalip

Singh, Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—This is an application for leave to appeal as a pauper. The application is barred by time. Counsel for the applicant states that the latter did not know that it was to be filed within 30 days from the date of the decree, but ignorance of law cannot be accepted as a sufficient cause for not filing it within time. I dismiss it with costs on the ground that it is barred by time.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 68 OF 1923.

December 12, 1924.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Crump.

AMOLAKCHAND LADURAM—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANT

versus

MOTILAL AGIARIRAM—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT No. 1.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 66—Bombay High Court Civil Circular No. 69 (6), (7)—Hindu Law—Joint family—Decree against father as manager of family—Execution of decree—Sale of family property—Interest of sons, whether passes to purchaser.

A decree was passed against a Hindu father carrying on business in the name of the family as manager, and certain family property was sold in execution of the decree. In a suit by the sons of the judgment-debtor for a declaration that their interest in the property had not passed to the auction-purchaser:

Held, that the decree having been passed against the father as manager of the family the whole of the family property was liable for the family debt and that the whole interest of the family had passed to the purchaser. [p. 954, col. 2.]

First appeal from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge, at Dhulia, in Special Civil Suit No. 448 of 1921.

Mr. G. N. Thakor (with him Mr. M. V. Bhat), for the Appellants.

Mr. V. S. Bhandarkar (with him Mr. Y. V. Bhandarkar), for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs prayed for a declaration that their interest in the suit lands was neither put up to sale in Darkhast No. 199 of 1919 nor purchased by defendant No. 1 Motilal, and for partition. The plaintiffs are minors who with their father defendant No. 2 constituted a joint Hindu family. In 1915 Motilal filed a suit against the second defendant in the Bombay High Court in respect of certain trade transactions which defendant No. 2 had made with him as his Adatya in Bombay. Laduram was therein described 'as manager of the joint family consisting of himself and his minor sons and carrying on as such manager a joint family business at Mandal as a merchant.' Defendant No. 2 contended that he was an agriculturist, that the High Court had no jurisdiction, that the transactions sued on were all wagering transactions and made without any lawful consideration, and further set up a counter-claim against defendant No. 1. The High Court disallowing all these contentions passed a decree against the second defendant in favour of Motilal for Rs. 13,235-14-1 on December 16, 1918. In execution of that decree under Darkhast No. 119 of 1919 Motilal got attached certain lands of defendant No. 2. Out of them eight lands, the subject-matter of this suit, were purchased by Motilal himself with the Court's permission. In taking possession Motilal was obstructed by Bhuribai, the wife of the second defendant, purporting to act as the guardian of the minor sons on the ground that their interests in the lands had not been sold. This led to an application by Motilal for removal of the obstruction and delivery of possession of the entire lands to him. The Court granted that application and ordered possession to be given to him. The plaintiffs then filed this suit.

We do not quite follow the arguments which appear to have prevailed in the Trial Court on a preliminary point. The Judge said the suit should fail because the plaint had not been amended. It is a perfectly proper suit. In the circumstances of the case the sale had already been made to the purchaser, and, therefore, the plaintiffs had to sue for a declaration that their interest had not passed at the sale.

On the merits the plaintiff's claim was dismissed with costs on the ground that defendant No. 2 described himself as manager of the joint Hindu family, that the decree was against the family property, and that the sale by the Court was of the interest of all the members of the family, which thereupon passed to the purchaser.

The appellants rely upon the High Court Circular No. 69 (7), which purports to give directions with regard to the preparation of the proclamation for sale in execution proceedings. In Circular No. 69 (6) it is said that the object of the enquiry under s. 287 of the C. P. C. of 1882, now O. XXI, r. 66 of the Code of 1908, is merely to collect particulars to be inserted in the proclamation for the information of intending purchasers. The conclusions arrived at in this enquiry are not subject to appeal, for they are not determinative between the parties. In sub-cl. (7) it is stated that the enquiry shall be completed as soon as possible. When it is finished, the proclamation of sale shall be prepared in the form prescribed (No. 29, Appendix E, Sch. I of the Code). If in the case of a Hindu judgment-debtor it is desired to sell the interest of any other member of the family (e. g., that of a minor son or brother) the name of such member and the fact that his interest is being sold must be stated in the proclamation, as otherwise his interest will not pass to the purchaser. That would really mean that in all proclamations of sale, when the property of a Hindu judgment-debtor is put up for sale, and nothing is said about the interest of other members of his family, a condition should be implied that only his interest passes to the purchaser, even though he is described as the manager of the joint Hindu family, and it had not been suggested that the debt or claim for which the property was being sold was not a proper debt or claim against the family. Now the law with regard to such proclamations of sale is laid down in Sripat Singh Dugar v. Prodyot Kumar Tagore (1), where the facts are exactly similar to the facts in this case. The property which belonged to a joint Mitakshara family, consisting of a father and two sons, was sold in execution of decrees against the father, the order and notices providing for the sale of the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor. It appeared from the circumstances in which the above words had been inserted, from the conduct of the sons, and the price paid by the execution creditor, that it was a sale of property over which the father had a disposing power. It was held that the substance and not the technicalities of the transaction should be regarded, and that the entire property passed to the purchaser. The observations in Mahabir Pershad v. Moheswar Nath Sahai (2) were affirmed. That case was followed by this Court in. Dada Jinappa Vagiani v. Yesu (3), where again there was a mortgage decree executed by the father the first defendant in the suit. The mortgagee purchased the property at the Court sale, and the plaintiff sued the first defendant and his sons to recover possession. The sons contended they were not parties to the prior suit and that their interests were not affected by the sale. No reference appears to have been made to the High Court Circular, and it was held that the interest of all the members of the family passed under the execution proceedings to the purchaser.

We have been referred to Timmappa Devarabhatta v. Narsinha Timmayya (4) and Hanmandas Ramdayal v. Valabhdas Shankar Das (5). In Timmappa Devarabhatta v. Narsinha Timmayya (4), the High Court Circular was actually incorporated in the proclamation and, therefore, the purchaser knew exactly what he was purchasing. If it had been expressly mentioned in the proclamation in this case that the interest of the father only passed, then undoubtedly the plaintiffs would be able to succeed.

But the Circular has not been incorporated in the proclamation of sale, and, therefore, we have to apply the ordinary law as laid down in the decided cases, in order to ascertain what passed to the purchaser, for the Circular cannot be considered as laying down the law by which we are bound, so that we must hold that the interests of the sons were not purchased, because they were not mentioned in the proclamation. Consequently as a decree was passed against the father carrying on business in the name of the family as manager, the whole of the family property was liable for the family debt, and when the property of the debtor was put up for sale, the whole interest of the family passed to the purchaser.

Therefore, we agree with the judgment of the Court below and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 252; 44 I. A. 1; 19 Bom. L. R. 290; 32 M. L. J. 133; 15 A. L. J. 147; (1917) M. W. N. 193; 21 C. W. N. 442; 25 C. L. J. 220; 21 M. L. T. 222; 44 C. 524 (P. C.).

(2) 17 I. A. 11; 17 C. 584; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 489; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 929 (P. C.).

(3) 73 Ind. Cas. 402; 25 Bom. L. R. 491; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 450.

(4) 21 Ind Cas. 123; 37 B. 631; 15 Bom. L. R. 794.

(5) 46 Ind. Cas. 133; 43 B. 17; 20 Bom. L. R. 472.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

REVISION APPLICATION No. 58 OF 1922.

January 30, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Raymond, A. J. C., and Mr. Kennedy, A. J. C.

FIRM OF AYASING-UTTAMSING—PLAINTIFFS—APPLICANTS

versus

FIRM OF CHETANDAS-TANOOMAL—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Procedure—Set-off, whether can be forced on defendant—Jurisdiction.

It is not for the plaintiff to force the defendant to claim a set-off.

A person claiming to recover a certain amount of money cannot claim the sum due from him to the defendant on an altogether different transaction and thus bring his claim within the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court.

Application to revise an order of the Judge of the Small Cause Court, Karachi, in Suit No. 4316 of 1921.

Mr. Lunindaram T. Bolakani, for the Applicants.

Mr. Srikishindas H. Lulla, for the Opponents.

JUDGMENT.—This suit by the applicant seems to have been an extremely vicious suit. His allegation was that in October and December 1918 transactions took place between him and the defendant which led to the defendant owing him a sum of Rs. 3,275 odd. He wished naturally to recover this from the defendants and as the defendants were unwilling to pay, he was desirous of bringing an action. But as he was reluctant to pay the Court-fees and as he wished to get the benefit of the summary procedure of the Small Cause Court, he proceeded to allege that on the 23rd of August 1918, another and totally unconnected transaction had taken place between himself and the defendant—the result being that he became liable in the sum of Rs. 2,304 odd to the defendants. He, therefore, in his plaint filed in the Small Cause Court proceeded to deduct Rs. 2,304 odd from Rs. 3,275 odd and put in a prayer for decree in respect of the sum of Rs. 970 odd —thus bringing the claim within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court.

The Small Cause Court rightly, in our opinion, held that it had no jurisdiction to try the suit and returned the plaint for being presented to the proper Court.

We say that the Small Cause Court was right in this because it is clear that the plaintiff had no right to bring a suit in that manner. There was no question as to there being any account between the plaintiff and the defendant so that plaintiff was entitled to sue for the balance due at the foot of the account. There had been no settlement or agreement between the parties set up that one claim was to be deducted from the other. It is not for the plaintiff to force the defendant to claim a set-off. The correct procedure for the plaintiff was to file a suit in this Court for the sum of Rs. 3,275 odd leaving it for the defendant, if so advised, to put in a counter-claim or claim a set-off for Rs. 3,204 odd. Otherwise it is possible they might have been induced to settle up the accounts on both the transactions and could have brought an action on the amount due at the foot of the account.

It appears that the procedure adopted by the plaintiff is wholly illegal and is highly inconvenient. It is quite obvious that this system of forcing a set-off on to the defendants might easily be the means of unduly extending the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Cause so that cases which refer to larger sums and are of high complexity might by this artifice be brought between the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Courts.

We, therefore, think that the Small Cause Court was perfectly right in refusing to entertain this suit in its present form.

What the plaintiff now wishes to do after gathering our opinion is to allow him an opportunity to amend his plaint. It is very difficult to see how he can amend. His claim for Rs. 3,275 odd is apparently barred. If he agrees to reduce his claim to Rs. 970 odd without any reference to the counter-claim by the defendant, it is by no means certain that the counter-claim of the defendants will be barred. In any case, he ran the risk and cannot complain of when the chance proves unfavourable to him if he has to pay the penalty. In this case the plaintiff ran the risk of getting his claim rejected or suffering other inconveniences in consideration of the hope that he might get a cheap and speedy relief in respect of the balance of his claim and if in this attempt he has failed, he cannot legitimately complain if he has to pay the penalty.

It seems to us, therefore, all that we can do in this case is to dismiss this application with costs.

K. S. D. Application dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 115 OF 1924.

January 21, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.

KANHAYA BAKHSH SINGH AND ANOTHER —PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SHEO NATH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS —RESPONDENTS.

Oudh Laws Act (XVIII of 1876), s. 9—Pre-emption—Member of village community, who is—Admission of fact and admission of law—Admission of fact made by Pleader, whether binding on party.

An admission made by a Pleader on a point of law is not binding on the party whom he represents. [p. 956, col. 2.]

Whether an admission is one of law or of fact, must depend upon the circumstances of each case. [ibid.]

In the matter of pre-emption ownership of land is the one condition of the membership of the village community for the purpose of s. 9 of the Oudh Laws Act. It is immaterial whether the land consists of one plot only on which no revenue is assessed. The owner of a plot of land in the village on which there stands a grove for which no Government revenue is paid is a co-sharer for the purpose of pre-emption within the meaning of the Oudh Laws Act. [p. 957, col. 1.]

An admission of a Pleader that a certain person owns land in the village so as to be a member of the village community within the meaning of s. 9 of the Oudh Laws Act is an admission of fact and not one of law and is binding on the party whom the Pleader represents. [ibid.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 16th January 1924, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, Sultanpur, dated the 25th October 1923.

Mr. St. G. Jackson, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. N. Misra, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs sued Sheonath and Sant Bakhsh for pre-emption under s. 9 of the Oudh Laws Act. The plaintiffs are co-sharers in Mahal Zemin Bahadur Singh, the defendant Sheonath is a co-sharer in Mahal Gaura Baraman and the property in suit is situated in Mahal Badri Singh. Obviously, therefore, the plaintiffs and Sheonath fall within the 3rd class mentioned in s. 9 and they are all members of the village community with respect to the property sold. The sale-deed specifies the shares of the vendees and Sheonath is purchaser of one-half.

The defence of Sant Bakhsh was that he also belonged to the village community because he was owner of groves together with the land on which those groves stand and of stray trees, wells, etc., in the village. He also claimed that he had equal right of purchase with the plaintiffs. Evidence was led on behalf of both the parties and after evidence was closed on both sides on 25th October 1923, certain proceedings were recorded by the Trial Court. It was admitted there by the Pleaders of parties that the plaintiffs and both the defendants were members of a village community, and, therefore, equally entitled to pre-empt. The Court, thereupon, made a note that in such a case lots must be drawn.

The Court then proceeded to judgment on the question whether the plaintiffs had notice of the sale and refused to purchase and as regards the sale price entered in the deed. On these points the findings being against the defendants as to notice and against the plaintiffs as to the sale price, lots were drawn and the defendants were determined to be the persons entitled to purchase by success in drawing the lot.

The suit was dismissed in consequence. On appeal to the lower Appellate Court it was pleaded that the admission of the plaintiffs' Pleader as regards Sant Bakhsh was an admission on a point of law and not binding on the plaintiffs. This argument was not accepted by that Court and the appeal was dismissed.

In second appeal the same argument is advanced. As regards Sheonath there is no cause for appeal because admittedly the plaintiffs and Sheonath are members of the village community as regards vended property and they all come within cl. (3) of s. 9 of the Oudh Laws Act. The plaintiffs have no preferential aight of purchase as regards him.

The point of law urged by the learned Counsel for the appellants is correct but in the present case the admission is not one of law. If the Pleader had made a mistake in thinking that on certain conditions Sant Bakhsh was a member of the village community the admission would be considered one of law and the plaintiffs would not be held bound thereby. In the present case the issue was one of fact because Sant Bakhsh alleged that he was owner of land as well as of a grove standing thereon. If he was the owner of the land as well as of the grove, no mistake in law was made by the Pleader in making the admission which he did. Whether the admission is one of law or fact will depend upon the circumstances of every case. It has been settled law here that in the matter of pre-emption ownership of land is the one condition of membership of the village community for the purpose of s. 9 of the Oudh Laws Act—see Narendra Bahadur Singh v. Balkaran Singh (1). It does not matter if the land consists of one plot only on which no revenue is assessed. As pointed out by a Bench of this Court in Aulad Husain v. Zainab-un-nissa (2), the payment of revenue cannot be a criterion, for proof of share in the village or of ownership of land because if it were, muafi-holders would not be considered co-sharers. In that case the Bench re-affirmed a decision of a Single Judge reported in the same volume at page 86 [Ram Kishun v. Nadir Hussain (3)] that the owner of a plot of land in the village on which there stands a grove for which no Government revenue is paid is a co-sharer for the purposes of pre-emption within the meaning of the Oudh Laws Act. The case where a grove-holder was not held to be a member of the village community was one where the owner of the grove did not own the land underneath —Gangoll v. Kamar Ali Khan (4). In that case also the learned Judges quoted with approval the case of Narendra Bahadur Singh v. Balkaran Singh (1) already quoted in this judgment.

The learned Counsel for the appellants here argued that what Sant Bakhsh owns is only the trees and not the land on which the trees stand. In view of the admission of the Pleader in the Trial Court I shall not inquire into this matter here. I take the admission of the Pleader to amount to an admission of fact that Sant Bakhsh did own the land of the grove purchased by him in 1896 (Ex. A-2). The admission would have been one of law if the learned Counsel for the appellants here had satisfied me that even where a grove-holder holds the land on which the grove stands he would not be a member of the village community. In such a case it may be argued that the Pleader had made a mistake as to the law applicable in cases of pre-emption. If it is admitted that Sant Bakhsh is owner of the land of his grove, he would under the prevailing law of pre-emption in Oudh be a member of the village community; so when such an admission is made by a Pleader it cannot be said that the admission was defective in law. For these reasons I am of opinion that the plaintiffs cannot go behind their Pleader's admission in this appeal.

I dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 7 O. C. 275.
(2) 10 O. C. 225.
(3) 10 C. C. 86.
(4) 7 Ind. Cas. 613; 13 O. C. 202.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 427 OF 1923.
January 9, 1925.
Present:—Mr. Hallifax, A. J. C.
SHIOGOPAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
SUKHRU AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Insolvency Act (V. of 1920), s. 28—Hindu Law—Joint family—Insolvency of father—Share of sons, whether vests in Receiver—Transfer after adjudication, validity of.

When a member of a joint Hindu family is adjudicated as an insolvent, the undivided share of his sons but not that of other members of the family, vests in the Receiver, though the sons' share would not be liable for any debts which they could prove to be illegal or immoral. [p. 958, col. 2.]

Fakirchand Motichand v. Motichand Hurruckchand, 7 B. 438; 8 Ind. Jur. 93; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 294, Rangayya Chetti v. Thanikachalla Mudali, 19 M. 74; 6 Ind Dec. (N. S.) 757, Bawan Das v. O. M. Ghiene, 64 Ind Cas. 976; 20 A. L. J. 155; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 79; 44 A. 316 and Sita Ram v. Beni Prasad, 84 Ind. Cas. 790; 22 A. L. J. 1097; L. R. 6 A. 109 Civ., followed.

Section 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act protects the secured creditor in respect of his security, but it does not protect the insolvent in respect of a voluntary transfer of his property. [ibid.]

Appeal against the decision of the District Judge, Raipur, dated the 6th July, 1923, in Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 3 of 1923.

Dr. H. S. Gour, for the Appellant.
Sir B. K. Bose, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—On the 17th of September 1918 Bhuni Sonar, the Manager of a joint Hindu family consisting of himself and his two sons, executed in favour of the appellant Shiogopal a mortgage by conditional sale of a village share belonging to the family. In June 1919 the amount due on the mortgage was Rs. 700. On the 15th of March 1919, Bhuni Sonar applied to be adjudged an insolvent, and was so adjudged on the 26th of April 1919.

The appellant Shiogopal was aware of Bhuni's insolvency, though it seems quite probable that he was not aware of the legal effects and bearings of the adjudication, and acted quite honestly according to his own dim lights. Anyhow on the 17th of June of the same year he bought the whole of the share mortgaged to him for Rs. 2,000. Of this sum Rs. 700 went to pay off his own mortgage and the insolvent, paid off unsecured debts of Rs. 210, Rs. 155, Rs. 647 and Rs. 350 to four other persons, making Rs. 2,062 in all.

One of these creditors had applied to the Insolvency Court before his debt was paid off to have the sale declared void as in contravention of s. 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, or rather of s. 16 of the Act then in force, which was Act III of 1907. He, of course, withdrew the application as soon as his debt was paid but equally, of course, another creditor who had not been paid off appeared in his place, and the sale was set aside.

The main reliance of the appellant, who seeks to support the sale to himself, is on sub-ss. (5) and (6) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907, which are re-produced without change in sub-s. (6) of s. 28 of Act V of 1920. In this connection the learned District Judge has distinguished the case of Shiam Sarup v. Nand Ram (1) by finding that in that case the mortgagee who was paid off by means of another mortgage was apparently "the principal if not the only creditor" of the insolvent. If that were so, how could there be any adjudication of insolvency, and who attacked the transfer? I cannot, however, see that the view of the meaning of s. 28 of the Insolvency Act as applied to that case differs at all from that taken by the learned Judge himself, which seems the only possible view of the meaning of the plain words of the section.

The appellant came into Court not as a mortgagee at all but as a full owner by purchase. He first bought the property, that is to say, the equity of redemption which had already vested in the Receiver. It was after that purchase that he proceeded to realise his security by receiving payment of the mortgage-debt from the insolvent. The latter did in fact pay the mortgage-debt out of the money paid to him for the equity of redemption but that makes no difference either way. Section 28 protects the secured creditor in respect of his security, but it does not protect the insolvent in respect of a voluntary transfer of his property.

A further contention, put forward apparently for the first time in this Court, is that as the insolvent has two sons it was only one-third of the village share that vested in the Receiver, and the sale is good for the two-thirds share belonging to the sons. The argument has an appearance of ingenuity but is unsound. Any unsecured creditor can bring the whole of the family property to sale for a debt due by the insolvent, unless his sons can prove the debt to be "illegal or immoral", the burden of proving this being on them. The insolvent could sell his sons' share in the property for the same purpose and subject only to the same restriction. This right is transferred to the Receiver when the father is adjudicated an insolvent. It appears to me beyond question that when a member of a joint Hindu family is so adjudicated the undivided shares of his sons, though not those of other members of the family, vest in the Receiver, though the sons' shares would not be liable for any debts which they could prove to be "illegal or immoral." This view has been accepted as sound in Bombay in Fakirchand Motichand v. Motichand Hurruckchand (2) in Madras in Rangayya Chetti v. Thanikachalla Mudali (3) and in Allahabad in Bawan Das v. O. M. Chiene (4) and the very recent case of Sita Ram v. Beni Prasad (5).

It is pointed out by the learned Counsel for the appellant that considerable hardship has been caused to him by the avoidance of his sale; as has been said, he probably acted in good faith according to his lights, and though he still has his mortgage, which he can enforce, he loses the Rs. 1,300 paid to the other creditors. But he can go on the schedule for that sum, which is due to him by the insolvent under s. 65 of the Contract Act, and the Court will be bound under s. 54 of the Insolvency Act, apparently of its own motion and without any application, to annul the payments made by the insolvent

(1) 63 Ind. Cas. 366; 43 A. 555; 19 A. L. J. 511.

(2) 7 B. 438; 8 Ind. Jur. 93; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 294.

(3) 19 M. 74; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 757.

(4) 64 Ind. Cas. 976; 20 A. L. J. 155; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 79; 44 A. 316.

(5) 84 Ind. Cas. 790; 22 A. L. J. 1097; L. R. 6 A. 109 Civ.

to the other creditors, and then take steps for the recovery of the amounts so paid. The appellant will then be entitled to his proportionate share of his Rs. 1,300 along with the other creditors. It ought not to be difficult to induce the other creditors to forego the fraudulent preference each of them has obtained by refunding the amount paid to him and sharing in the general rateable distribution. It might be pointed out to each of them that a refusal to refund means a civil suit against him of which the inevitable result is a decree for the whole amount with costs and possibly interest, and may even mean that he does not share in the eventual rateable distribution. The appeal will be dismissed and the appellant must pay all the costs.

G. R. D.
Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 92 OF 1924.
January 15, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

Lala HARI KISHEN DASS—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MAIKU LAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Under-proprietary title—Mortgage of tenancy rights—Acceptance of rent—Estoppel—Appeal, second—Finding of fact—Evidence, absence of, effect of.

Where there is an entire absence of evidence the High Court is entitled to interfere with a finding of fact in second appeal. [p. 959, col. 2.]

A landlord may accept rent from a mortgagee of tenancy land though the mortgage may be invalid under the law. The mere acceptance of rent in such a case does not indicate that the tenant was the owner of an under-proprietary holding, nor is the landlord estopped from contending that the tenant has no such title. [p. 960, col. 1.]

Second appeal, under s. 100, C. P. C., against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Hardoi, dated the 28th February 1923, reversing that of the Munsif, Sandila, dated the 22nd April 1922.

Mr. M. H. D. Chandra, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The question at issue is whether the plaintiff Maiku Lal, who is a mortgagee of certain plots, is entitled to obtain possession of those plots after ejectment by the Revenue Court. His plea, which was repelled by the Trial Court was that the plots over which he had possession as a mortgagee consisted of land in which his mortgagor had under-proprietary interest. On appeal by the plaintiff the lower Appellate Court in a confused judgment held that the tenure was under-proprietary. The judgment consists mostly of a catalogue of documents without discrimination or discussion. I have gone through the record and do not find an atom of evidence to support the claim of the plaintiff to under-proprietary tenure for his mortgagor. When there is an entire absence of evidence this Court is entitled to interfere with a finding of fact.

The only record in which the holding is shown as an under-proprietary tenure is the khasra of the last Settlement. This entry was copied in the yearly khasra upto 1308*F*. for seven years. In that year the entries were checked by some officer and after that year the record was of ordinary tenancy and not of an under-proprietary tenure.

The wajib-ul-arz of the first Settlement (copy Ex. 2) most abundantly proves that the mortgagor had only the rights of a grove-holder to own the trees standing on this plot. In para. 2 the taluqdars and owners to whom plots of land had been decreed are declared to have the right of transfer. Then the following clause appears, bajuz (that is with this exception) the groves entered in a list subjoined were planted with the permission of the zemindar and the grove-holders of those groves had no right of transfer. The lower Appellate Court has made no attempt to translate this Urdu entry, so this Court is not able to state how that Court interpreted the entry. Possibly it read the word bajuz along with the following clause which would make that clause meaningless. Obviously the word bajuz means that with the exception of what has gone before. This plot was not mentioned in the khatauni prepared at the time of Settlement (copy Ex. A-12) which gave a list of under-proprietary holdings. The entry in the list of groves that the grove was maurusi (ancestral) and under mortgage does not indicate under-proprietary rights of the mortgagor. A note is made that no trees stood on the land at the time. The grove may have been ancestral but when the trees are removed the holder thereof becomes an ordinary tenant of the land. He was so treated by the Revenue Court and his mortgagee was rightly ejected.

Reference was made by the respondent's learned Counsel to receipts granted by the defendant-appellant's agent to the plaintiff calling the plaintiff a mortgagee. There is no mention in these receipts of under-proprietary tenures. It was argued that when the plaintiff was called a mortgagee it must be understood that the zemindar held the land to be such as could be validly mortgaged. No such deduction can be drawn. The zemindar may accept rent from a mortgagee of tenancy land though the mortgage would be invalid under the law. No question of estoppel arises because these receipts were given long after the mortgage was effected.

There is no evidence whatsoever, however, wrongly it may be interpreted, on which a finding in favour of an under-proprietary tenure can be based. I, therefore, set aside the finding of the lower Appellate Court and uphold the finding of the Trial Courts.

I allow this appeal and dismiss the plaintiff's suit with costs of all the Courts.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS PETITION No. 4419 OF 1925.

January 7, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.

MERUVA PARASURAMADU—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

MANDAVILLI RAMANNA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLIV, r. 1, proviso—Leave to appeal in forma pauperis*—Principles applicable—Respondent,* locus standi of, to be heard.

On an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis under r. 1 of O. XLIV of the C. P. C., all that is required under the proviso to the rule is that the Court before admitting the appeal should be satisfied that it is not merely a frivolous appeal, and that there are reasonable grounds for doubting the correctness or justness of the decision of the lower Court.

It is not necessary that the Court must go through the whole case and admit the appeal only if it is satisfied that it would reverse the decision of the lower Court there and then if no appearance were entered for the respondent.

Where such an application comes on for admission, the respondent has no locus standi to be heard.

Petition, under O. XLIV, r. 1 of the Act V of 1908, praying that in the circumstances stated in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to grant leave to the petitioner to appeal in forma pauperis against a decree of the Court of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Cocanada, in Original Suit No. 19 of 1924, (O. S. No. 84 of 1922 on the file of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Cocanada).

Mr. G. Lakshmanna, for the Petitioner.

Mr. P. Somasundaram, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—I think this is a case in which leave to appeal should be granted under the provisions of O. XLIV, of the Procedure Code. Mr. P. Somasundram appeared without any notice on behalf of the respondent in the appeal and wished to be heard on the question whether having regard to the terms of the proviso to r. (1) of that Order there is such a case made out for the appellant as would justify me in saying that the judgment and the decree of the lower Court are erroneous or unjust. I am not satisfied that he has got any locus standi to appear at this stage and require to be heard, but I have nevertheless heard him, and even after hearing him I am not at all satisfied that the requirements of the proviso are not satisfied in this particular case. I cannot possibly read the terms of the proviso as indicating that I must go through the whole case and admit the appeal only if I am satisfied that I would reverse it there and then if no appearance was entered for the respondent. I take the terms in the proviso merely to indicate that the Court before admitting such a pauper appeal should be satisfied that it is not merely a frivolous appeal and that there are reasonable grounds for doubting the correctness or justness of the decision of the lower Court. In that view I consider that there is a great deal to be said with regard to the correctness of the decision of the lower Court and I, therefore, order that the appeal should be admitted.

V. N. V.
Z. K. Appeal ordered to be admitted.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEALS NOS. 37, 40, 45 AND 46 OF 1924.

April 14, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kennedy, A. J. C.

ALLAHDITO AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 112, 117—Accused, admission by—Enquiry, whether necessary—Qualifications of sureties, whether can be altered.

Even where a person against whom an order under s. 112, Cr. P. C., has been made, on its being read over to him, admits the allegations in the said order, it is incumbent on the Court to proceed to make an inquiry as provided by s. 117 of the Cr. P. C.

A Magistrate has no right to introduce new qualifications while deciding on the suitability of sureties offered by the accused.

Quære.—Whether an order committing a person to prison on default of security being furnished, for a period to be specified later on is legal.

Appeals from Jail against an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Shah Bunder, dated the 17th December 1923.

Mr. Naderbeg Mirza, Third Assistant Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case four persons were sent up before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate on the ground that they should furnish security under s. 110, C. P. C., because they are habitual thieves and bad characters. The Magistrate duly framed an order under s. 112 and the accused being in Court read it (the order) over to them. The accused admitted the allegations against them and the Magistrate thereupon proceeded to require them to produce two sureties of the sum of Rs. 500 and inasmuch as they failed to do so they were committed to Jail for a period which the Magistrate ultimately fixed at 12 months or until such sureties were produced.

Now the procedure adopted by the learned Magistrate was not in some respects strictly in accordance with the law as laid down in the Cr. P. C. Section 117, cls. 1 and 2 require that when an order under s. 112 has been read or explained under s. 113, to a person present in Court, when that person appears or is brought before the Magistrate in compliance with or in execution of a summons or warrant issued under s. 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to enquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken and take such further evidence as may appear necessary. By virtue of sub-s. 2 the enquiry is to proceed on the lines of an enquiry into a warrant case except that no charge need be framed. The order, therefore, on which the proceedings start is in no way a charge, but something more like a complaint and just as it would be unlawful or inexpedient to convict an accused person of a serious offence without ascertaining whether on the facts admitted a legal offence was committed, so it does not seem intended by the Code, that even where the accused persons do admit they fall under the categories given in s. 112, no enquiry should be made. It is obvious that the people exposed to the operation of Ch. VIII are often illiterate and ignorant people and a mere admission is not conclusive proof that they are persons who should be bound over. The whole Chapter is a chapter which vests extraordinary powers in the Police and the Magistracy and, if it is not to form an instrument of intolerable oppression it must be worked with the utmost discretion. The proper procedure, therefore, in the cases of these three appellants not having been followed the order of the learned Magistrate is set aside and the case remanded for disposal according to law.

In addition to the above remarks it is perhaps desirable to say that it is by no means clear to this Court, that the order of the Magistrate, dated the 17th December 1923, directing that the accused be detained in prison for a period to be specified hereafter is a legal order and it would also be a matter for discussion whether the amount of security demanded is not excessive and it is further to be noted that in the proceedings taken after the order of securities was made and the accused persons brought certain sureties, Magistrate irregularly introduced certain new qualifications while deciding on the suitability of these sureties. There is no word in the order about khatedars or tax-payers and the Magistrate had no right to reject the persons if they were otherwise suitable according to the terms of the order on the ground that they were not khatedars. The case will go back to the Magistrate. I set aside the proceedings subsequent to the drawing up of the order and I direct the learned Magistrate to dispose of the matter according to law.

K. S. D. Order set aside.

P. B. A.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 770 OF 1924.

January 19, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

BISHAMBHAR NATH BAJPAI—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal trial—Charge, proof of—Liability for act of agent—Benefit of doubt—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 409—Criminal breach of trust—Intention—Proof.

An important principle of Criminal Law is that the guilt of an accused person must not only be proved beyond any reasonable doubt but that it must be proved strictly in accordance with the law. An accused person is on his trial in respect of a particular charge and to import matters into the trials not relevant to the charge is equivalent to trying him as to matters on which he has no opportunity to defend himself. [p. 962, col. 2.]

Manna Lal v. Emperor, 75 Ind. Cas. 753; 27 O. C. 40; 9 O. & A. L. R. 947; 25 Cr. L. J. 49; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 1, followed.

The criminal intention necessary to be proved in order to sustain a conviction under s. 409 of the Penal Code is a matter of inference from the facts proved. [p. 963, col 1.]

There can be no criminal liability for the act of an agent. [p. 964, col. 1.]

Where the conduct of the accused is as much consistent with his guilt as with his knowledge of the guilt of another and the anxiety to protect him, the benefit of the doubt must be given to the accused. [ibid.]

Appeal against an order of the Sessions Judge, Lucknow, dated the 22nd December 1924.

Dr. J. N. Misra, Messrs. K. P. Misra and Harkaran Nath Misra, for the Appellant.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant, Bishambhar Nath Bajpai, has been convicted and sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment under s. 409 of the Indian Penal Code by the learned Sessions Judge of Lucknow. The charge on which he has been tried stands as follows:—"That you between 8th May 1923 and 17th July 1923 at Unao being the managing Director of the Unao Town Bank and in such capacity entrusted with dominion over Rs. 17,000 committed criminal breach of trust in respect of the said amount of Rs. 17,000, and thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 409 of the Indian Penal Code." As a result of the trial the appellant can only be convicted on proof of the particular charge and on no other ground.

In my judgment the decision of the learned Judge has been influenced by several matters which are wholly extraneous to the charge under consideration. An important principle of Criminal Law is that the guilt should not only be proved beyond any reasonable doubt but that it should be proved strictly in accordance with law. The reason underlying the principle is obvious. The accused is on his trial in respect of a particular charge and to import matters into the trial not relevant to that charge is equivalent to trying him as to matters on which he has no opportunity to defend himself. I had had occasion to refer to this principle in a recent case of Manna Lal v. Emperor (1). It is, therefore, necessary to eliminate all extraneous matters from the consideration of this case.

In his judgment under appeal the learned Judge observed as follows:—"I must here refer to some incidents that took place before those on which the present charge is based. . . . . " Then he proceeds to relate those incidents and draw the inference that the conduct of the appellant was dishonest in respect of those incidents. The learned Judge thinks that those incidents are evidence under ss. 11 and 15 of the Indian Evidence Act. In my opinion they are not. There are other pieces of evidence which on the face of them are hear-say and consequently inadmissible. It is not necessary to recapitulate them here.

The case for the prosecution underlying the charge set forth above is as follows:—(1) That on the 8th May 1923 the appellant withdrew Rs. 2,000 (2) that on the 17th May 1923 he similarly withdrew Rs. 7,000 and, (3) that on the 11th June 1923 he again withdrew Rs. 5,000 and (4) finally on the 17th July 1923 he withdrew Rs. 3,000 from the Unao Town Bank with the ostensible object of placing them in deposit with the Oudh Commercial Bank but that he did not do so. This then is the substance of the charge. The learned Judge states the case for the prosecution in the following sentence:—"The case for the prosecution is that the accused never intended the money to reach the Oudh Commercial Bank and that in taking it himself or ordering it to be handed over to his brother-in-law he dishonestly misappropriated it. It will be seen that there is no substantial difference between the version which the learned Judge has given and the one which I have given of the case for the prosecution except in so far that in stating the facts on proof of which the prosecution depends he has included, and rightly, the criminal intention of the accused as well. This intention is obviously a matter of inference from the facts proved. What then are the facts proved? It is proved beyond any reasonable doubt that the entire amount of Rs. 17,000 was paid on the dates mentioned above by the Unao Town Bank to one Gauri Shankar, who is the brother-in-law of the appellant, and not to the appellant. The finding of the learned Judge is not definite on that question of fact. At one place in his judgment he says:—"The direct evidence and the vouchers themselves point very strongly to the conclusion that the accused intended to put the money in the hands of Gauri Shanker even if he did not take it himself." At another place we find the following observation:—"What was necessary was for Gauri Shanker, who had had the use of the money for some months, to re-pay the principal....." (The italics are mine). Finally the learned Judge remarks:—"If the accused intended to misappropriate the money, it would really be rather surprising to find that he had done so in such a direct way as to receive the money into his own hands and seeing what his position is he would be far more likely to pay the money to some one else; and there is no doubt whatever that the money was paid, if not to him, to his brother-in-law." The learned Judge is of opinion that the fact that the money was not paid into the hands of the appellant is a matter of little or no importance. I am unable to agree with him in this opinion. According to my judgment that element is of first importance in the whole case. My conclusion, therefore, on the consideration of the entire evidence is that every farthing of the sum of Rs. 17,000 was delivered by the Unao Town Bank into the hands of Gauri Shankar. This Gauri Shankar was the Head Clerk of the Oudh Commercial Bank with which the money was intended to be invested. The further fact proved is that Gauri Shankar instead of making the desired investment appropriated it himself.

(1) 75 Ind. Cas. 753; 27 O. C. 40; 9 O. & A. L. R. 947; 25 Cr. L. J. 49; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 1.

Now an important conclusion reached by the learned Judge is as follows:—"I do not imagine and it has not been suggested for the prosecution that there was any intention on the part of the accused to misappropriate this capital sum of Rs.17,000 permanently. It was the use of it and the interest, that would be obtained on it, that was needed . . . ." This conclusion of the learned Judge reduces the case for the prosecution into a very narrow margin. I do not think for a moment that the prosecution would succeed if it were shown, that the money withdrawn from the Unao Town Bank was not deposited in the Oudh Commercial Bank as originally intended but was deposited, say, in the Imperial Bank. Whichever may be the place where the money finally went to, the use of the money during the continuance of the deposit will lawfully be made by the depositee and consequently such a use will not be wrongful gain nor could it amount to a wrongful loss to the Unao Bank because the Bank had admittedly agreed to part with the money for its being deposited with another. The Unao Town Bank in the ordinary course of business would merely be entitled to interest as a part of the transaction, on the deposit and to the repayment of the capital on demand or at a period agreed upon. The capital has all been re-paid by Gauri Shanker and there is documentary evidence on the record (Ex. 51) that interest has also been paid to and accepted by the Unao Town Bank. There is no evidence that there was any stipulation as to the time of re-payment or that it was broken. Further, as to the actual use we have the finding of the learned Judge already quoted that Gauri Shanker had had the use of the money, ..." The bulk of the judgment of the learned Judge is devoted to the consideration of the conduct of the appellant in relation to certain matters; for instance his attitude as to the absence of a pass-book of a receipt from the Oudh Commercial Bank indicating a deposit with the Bank; his silence at the meeting of the Directors and his acquiescence in the passing of the balance-sheet falsely showing a deposit with the Oudh Commercial Bank. To my mind the conduct of the appellant in relation to those matters reasonably leads to the inference that he had knowledge of Gauri Shanker's default in making the required deposit and that he had the desire to shield Gauri Shanker whom he expected to re-pay in proper time the entire capital together with interest to the Unao Town Bank. It may be and it is highly probable, that in certain matters Guari Shanker was really the agent of the appellant. This would particularly be true as to the affairs of the shop at Cawnpore in which the appellant had also an interest and for the benefit of which, it is said by the prosecution, the money was taken, though there is no direct evidence that the money was so utilized. But there can be no criminal liability for the act of an agent.

Finally, the only other possible conclusion, that can be drawn from the entire evidence and the circumstances in the case, is that the conduct of the appellant is as much consistent with his guilt as with his knowledge of the guilt of Gauri Shanker and the anxiety to protect him. The learned Sessions Judge has taken the former and I have taken the latter view. The benefit of the doubt must accrue in favour of the appellant. On these grounds I am of opinion that the charge fails.

I allow this appeal, set aside the conviction and sentence and acquit the appellant of the offence charged. The appellant was released on bail by this Court. The bail is cancelled.

Z. K. Appeal allowed; Conviction set aside.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATIONS NOS. 69 AND 70 OF 1920.

August 16, 1920.

Present:—Mr. Kennedy, J. C., and Mr. Aston, A. J. C.

SHAFI MAHOMED AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 476, applicability of—Statement made to Magistrate in his executive capacity—Magistrate, whether can take action—Intended bigamous marriage—Magistrate, whether can stop.

Section 476 of the Cr. P. C. applies only when a false statement is made in the course of judicial proceedings. [p. 965, col. 1.]

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to stop an impending bigamous marriage. [p. 964, col. 2.]

Criminal revision against an order of the Additional City Magistrate, Karachi, dated the 16th August 1920.

Mr. Motiram Idanmal, for the Applicants.

Mr. T. G. Elphinston, Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Kennedy, J. C.—The facts of this case are that one Shafi Mahomed presented an application to the Additional City Magistrate stating that one Sharoo being the wedded wife of Shafi Mahomed was about to commit a bigamous marriage with some other person. This application was supported by affidavit and also by statement on solemn affirmation by Allahdino who was examined by the Magistrate.

The Magistrate thereon sent the application to the Police in consequence of which the Police went to the house where marriage was about to be celebrated and directed all the people to stop the marriage until further orders.

Subsequently inquiries were held and it was discovered that the allegation namely, that Sharoo was the wedded wife of Shafi Mahomed was entirely fictitious.

The Magistrate thereupon issued orders allowing the marriage of Sharoo with her intended husband to proceed and issued notices to Shafi Mahomed and Allahdino to show cause why they should not be dealt with under s. 476 of the Cr. P. C. After holding the enquiry the Magistrate came to the conclusion that they have made wilfully false statements and acting under s. 476, Cr. P. C., sent the case for trial to the nearest Magistrate of the First Class. It is against this order that the present applications have been filed both by Shafi Mahomed and by Allahdino.

The point taken by the applicants which seems fatal to the proceedings is that there was no judicial proceeding pending before the Magistrate. It is only in cases where there is judicial proceeding pending that s. 476 has any applicability. And reading the application of Shafi Mahomed and the Magisterial order whereon and the subsequent proceeding upto the time when the marriage was allowed to proceed, it seems to us that the application was made to the Magistrate rather in the executive capacity or in respect of a possible breach of peace, not to him in his Magisterial capacity. There is no provision so far as I know of law that enables the Magistrate to stop an impending bigamous marriage. Bigamous marriage is not a cognizable offence and is not entered in Ch. XIII and as a wife is not an immoveable property the Magistrate has no preventive power to interfere. It does not appear that any breach of peace was contemplated or that the Magistrate purported to act under Ch. VIII of the Cr. P. C., This seems to exhaust the power of the Magistrate to deal with the prevention of an offence. Moreover had the Magistrate contemplated action as a Magistrate he would have acted, under s. 203 which he did not do but gave information to the Police under s. 155 which is not an appropriate section when the informant is acting in a judicial capacity. Therefore, there being no judicial proceeding pending the Magistrate could not act under s. 476, Cr. P. C. This is sufficient to dispose of the present application. Moreover there being no judicial proceeding a prosecution under s. 193 could not lie. Whether it under s. 182 which prima facie seems more appropriate would be good need not now be considered.

Meanwhile we set aside the present order of the Magistrate and quash the proceedings.

Aston, A. J. C.—I agree with the decision of the learned Judicial Commissioner, but would add the following remarks:—I think the Magistrate contemplated action, as a Magistrate, when he addressed the order to the City Inspector, for the order purported to be under s. 155 (2), Cr. P. C. It is clear, however, that the order was not passed in a judicial proceeding. No case was pending before the Magistrate he was not sitting to determine jural relations between parties nor exercising special powers for the prevention of crime, under which he could have legally taken evidence on oath. He had not received a complaint, that an offence had been committed. His intention, rather, was to authorize the Police to take steps to prevent the commission of an offence, if certain circumstance existed.

K. S. D. Order set aside.
P. B. A.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 175-B OF 1924.
December 23, 1924.
Present :—Mr. Baker, J. C.

ISMAIL AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED—APPLICANTS
versus
EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 337—Pardon—Offences exclusively triable by Sessions Court—Pardon relating to other offences, validity of—Commitment, whether can be quashed on ground of want of evidence.

A pardon can be granted under s. 337, Cr. P. C., by a Magistrate enquiring into a case exclusively triable by a Court of Session along with one not so triable, and the fact that there may be other offences which are not so triable will not invalidate the pardon granted in respect of the offence exclusively triable by the Sessions Court. But once the pardon is granted the approver is an approver with regard to the whole case and not with regard to some of the accused only. [p. 967, col. 1.]

A commitment can be quashed on a point of law only, and not on the ground that there is no evidence on the Committing Magistrate's record to sustain the charge. [p. 967, col. 2.]

Emperor v. Suleman Ibrahim, 10 Ind. Cas. 802; 13 Bom. L. R. 201; 12 Cr. L. J. 256, followed.

Reference for an order quashing the commitments in all charges except first part of the charge under ss. 467/109, Indian Penal Code, against the applicants.

Messrs. M. Gupta, M. R. Bobde, K. R. Cama, K. B., and M. B. Niyogi, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. P. Dick, Government Advocate; for the Government.

ORDER.—This is a Reference by the Sessions Judge, East Berar, asking for the quashing of the charges against the accused Ismail and others, except the first charge under ss. 467/109, Indian Penal Code, against Ismail and the charge under s. 467 against Yeshwant. The District Magistrate has been heard as also the accused, who contend that the charges should be quashed altogether.

The facts as stated by the Sessions Judge in his order of Reference are that in a suit for redemption of a possessory mortgage against one Ismail Panju he produced some false kabuliyats with the object of showing that the rent of the land was lower than was actually paid and thus reducing the profits. The alleged forged kabuliyats were written by one Yeshwant and the thumb impressions of Mohan, the tenant of the land, were taken. The kabuliyats were subsequently attested by Baba, Shaikh Jalal and Shaikh Sajjan,

The Munsif of Pusad who tried the case being of opinion that the kabuliyats were forged took proceedings under s. 476, Cr. P. C., and made a complaint against all of them for an offence under s. 463, Indian Penal Code, and against Ismail for an offence under s. 471, Indian Penal Code, also. The Magistrate who tried the case tried all the accused jointly and framed charges as follows:—

(1) Against Ismail under ss. 467-109 for abetment of forgery of the kabuliyats which are valuble securities. Under s. 471 for fraudulently using as genuine the forged kabuliyats. Under s. 193 for making a false statement in respect of the execution of the kabuliyats.

(2) Against Yeshwant under s. 467, Indian Penal Code, for forgery of the kabuliyats.

(3) Against Baba Vithoba and Shaikh Sajjan, two of the attesting witnesses, under s. 467 for forging the said kabuliyats and under s. 193 for making a false statement in regard to the execution of the kabuliyats.

(4) Against Shaikh Jalal, the remaining attesting witness, for forging the kabuliyats under s. 467, Indian Penal Code.

During the proceedings a pardon was offered to Mohan, the alleged executant of the kabuliyats, and he was examined as an approver. He deposed as to the forgery of the kabuliyats by Yeshwant at the instigation of Ismail, but did not know anything about the attestation which were not made in his presence.

The Magistrate then in accordance with s. 337, cl. (2 A), Cr. P. C. committed all the accused to the Court of Sessions.

The Sessions Judge is of opinion that this is illegal for the following reasons :—

(1) The order of the Subordinate Judge constituting the complaint made no reference to s. 193, Indian Penal Code, and the Magistrate could not take cognizance without a complaint of an offence under that section.

(2) The ruling in Gunwant v, Emperor (1) prohibits the joint trial of the scribe and attesting witnesses of an alleged forged document for giving false evidence in support of that document.

(3) The pardon cannot have reference to the giving of false evidence but to the forgery only as regards Ismail and Yeshwant. Section 193 is not one of the offences covered by s. 337, Cr. P. C. Section 337 will apply only to the charge under s. 467 and cannot warrant the commitment for an offence under s. 193. It has no reference to the attestation by the attesting witnesses.

Hence they have been wrongly committed and the case in respect of them should be remanded to the Magistrate for a fresh trial. So also the pardon has no reference to the charge under s. 471 against Ismail and the commitment under that head is also illegal as the case under that charge should be tried by the Magistrate.

The Sessions Judge desires to take up only the first head of charge (s. 467) against Ismail and Yeshwant. He is of opinion that the remaining parts of the trial should be taken up by the Magistrate as separate trials.

He, therefore, asks for orders under s. 215, Cr. P. C., quashing the commitment under all charges except the first part of the charge against Ismail and the charge against Yeshwant for forgery. He adds that his view is that the attestations were made some time after the executions and Mohan was not cognizant of the attestations and if they constitute forgery, they were not the same offence for which he was given pardon.

He adds that the Public Prosecutor does not agree with him. The District Magistrate has submitted a statement from him in which he states that in his opinion a pardon granted under s. 337 to Mohan extends to all charges against all the accused connected with the forgery of the kabuliyats.

A number of points have been raised by the learned Counsel on behalf of the accused, in which they have taken exception to the pardon granted to Mohan, a point I will deal with later.

To take first the question of the charge under s. 193, Indian Penal Code. Under s. 195 (1) (b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure no Court shall take cognizance of an offence punishable, under s. 193, Indian Penal Code, committed in relation to any proceeding in any Court except on the complaint in writing of such Court.

Admittedly the complaint made by the Munsif did not include s. 193, Indian Penal Code.

Therefore the Magistrate trying the case had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of it, and no power to try or commit the accused under it.

(1) 38 Ind. Cas. 723; 13 N. L. R 35; 18 Cr. L. J. 339.

It follows that the charge under s. 193 against Ismail, Baba Vithoba and Shaikh Sajjan must be quashed as being found without jurisdiction and not by a competent Magistrate and under s. 215 of the Cr. P. C. I quash it accordingly.

The ruling in Gunwant v. Emperor (1) will, therefore, not apply as there will be no question of a joint trial for giving false evidence. In the absence of any complaint by the Court in which the offence was committed, there can be no trial under s. 193, Indian Penal Code, at all.

Next as to the charge under s. 471, Indian Penal Code, against Ismail, the learned Sessions Judge is of opinion that the pardon can have reference only to the actual forgery.

This is not so. It has been held in Harumal Parmanand v. Emperor (2) that all that ss. 337 and 338, Cr. P. C., require is that there should be an offence that is triable exclusively by the Sessions Court under inquiry or trial, and the fact that there may be other offences alleged or charged which are not so triable is immaterial and will not invalidate a pardon granted in respect of the offence exclusively triable by the Sessions Court.

So also in Balmokand v. Emperor (3) it was held that when a Magistrate is enquiring into a case exclusively triable by a Court of Session along with one not so triable, pardon can be granted under s. 337.

These rulings show that the approver is an approver as regards the whole case and not as regards some of the accused only. Under the amended s. 337 of the new Code certain modifications have been introduced and it has been contended on behalf of the accused that this is not a case in which a pardon could have been granted at all, as the offence complained of was under s. 463, Indian Penal Code. Section 463 is merely a defining section and the offences must be regarded as one under s. 465, Indian Penal Code, which is not one of the offences covered by s. 337, Cr. P. C., and, therefore, no pardon could have been granted.

I do not think it would be proper at this stage of the case to express any opinion on this point, which raises a difficult question of law. I have nothing to do with the pardon granted to the approver.

(2) 30 Ind. Cas. 456; 16 Cr. L. J. 632; 9 S. L. R. 43.
(3) 28 Ind. Cas. 738; 16 Cr. L. J. 354; 11 P. W. R. 1915 Cr.; 17 P. R. 1915 Cr.; 246 P. L. R. 1915.

In any case there is the approver's evidence on record. Section 467, Indian Penal Code, under which the accused have been committed is one of the offences for which a pardon can be granted under s. 337, Cr. P. C. and I am not disposed, at this stage, to go into the question of whether a Magistrate to whom a complaint has been made by a Court under s. 463 or 465 could commit the case under s. 467. That is a matter which can be decided at the trial.

I do not see any reason for quashing the charge against Ismail under s. 471 and in view of the rulings above quoted the evidence of the approver, supposing it to be admissible, will be evidence as to all the charges.

As the Sessions Judge has split the trial of Ismail and Yeshwant, I do not think it necessary to do more than quash the charges under s. 193, Indian Penal Code. It is open to the Sessions Judge if he likes to try the attesting witnesses together or separately, but I agree with the view of the Public Prosecutor that the pardon granted to Mohan under s. 337 of the Code extends to all charges against all the accused connected with the forgery of the kabuliyats (except under s. 193, Indian Penal Code). I express no opinion as to the validity of the pardon and I certainly am not going to decide whether the kabuliyats are or are not a valuable security.

It has been contended on behalf of the attesting witnesses that as the approver does not implicate them, there is no evidence against them. A commitment can be quashed on a point of law only. It cannot be quashed on the ground that there is no evidence on the Committing Magistrate's record to sustain the charges cf. Emperor v. Suleman Ibrahim (4) followed in In re Sessions Judge of Coimbatore (5).

The papers are returned to the Sessions Judge.

G. R. D. Papers returned.

Z. K.

(4) 10 Ind. Cas. 802; 13 Bom. L. R. 201; 12 Cr. L. J. 256.
(5) 25 Ind. Cas. 993; 27 M. L. J. 593; 15 Cr. L. J. 666.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 55 OF 1924.

June 20, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kennedy, J. C.

YARU—ACCUSED—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 523, 524—Magistrate when can act on his own authority—Limitation, whether applies to possessor of property.

The period of six months prescribed by s. 523 of the Cr. P. C. applies only to a person other than the original possessor.

Under s. 523 the Magistrate to whom a report is made is competent to act on his own authority and it is only when action is contemplated under s. 524 that orders of a Magistrate of the class mentioned therein are to be obtained.

Appeal, under s. 524 (2) of the Cr. P. C., against an order of the Resident Magistrate and First Class Magistrate, Sujawal, dated the 25th March 1924.

Mr. Tarachand Khimandas, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nadirbeg Mirza, Third Assistant Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case, the house of the accused was searched in respect of an alleged theft of buffaloes. In the course of that search ornaments of the value of Rs. 800 were attached. The accused was prosecuted and convicted for the theft of buffaloes and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, but ornaments so attached, were not sent up to the Court as being part of the stolen property or its value. And it remained in the custody of the Police. Eventually the Police wrote to the Resident Magistrate of Sujawal asking for an order as to the disposal of property, and the learned Magistrate forwarded the application to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Shah Bander. Various proceedings took place and finally on the 25th of March 1924, the Resident Magistrate, Sujawal, finding that no one had made any claim as regards the property directed that the property be placed at the disposal of Government under s. 524 of the Cr. P. C. The applicant who appears to be the legitimate owner of the property appeals against that order. The procedure seems to be faulty and the result is that the present order cannot be sustained. It is the business of the Magistrate to whom the report is made, namely, the Resident Magistrate himself to dispose of the matter in the first instance and it is only when s. 524 applies, the orders of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate or specially empowered First Class Magistrate intervene. The error in which the Magistrate has fallen appears to be this. The suspicious property is found in the possession of a certain person and is proclaimed under s. 523, then it is the duty of any person other than the possessor who may have a claim to that property to appear within six months and establish his claim. If no such person appears within the period fixed or when a person appears has failed to establish his claim, then the further question arises and, that is whether the person in whose possession that property was found is able to show that it was legally acquired by him. And it is not the case that the possessor is subject to six months' period of limitation. That period of limitation applies only to the person other than the original possessor. Now it appears that no third person appeared within the six months. Therefore, it is now for decision whether the original owner, that is, Yaru, is entitled to retain it, and that enquiry should now be held. No doubt a certain amount of duty lies upon the owner to establish his claim properly. On the other hand, Yaru, the present possessor who was in Jail, must have found it somewhat difficult to ascertain precisely what his legal position was as regards these ornaments.

I set aside the order of the Resident Magistrate placing the property at the disposal of Government and directing its sale. I direct the Magistrate now to dispose of the matter according to law, that is, to pass a proper order after ascertaining whether Yaru is able to show that it was legally acquired by him. And in disposing of that matter, it would be proper to remember that there is always a presumption that a person actually in possession of the property is unless it is contrary shown the owner thereof.

P. B. A. Order set aside.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 605 OF 1924.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 506 OF 1924.)
January 8, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.

B. R. RAMANUJACHARIAR—ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

T. V. KAILASAM IYER—COMPLAINANT—RESPONDENT.

Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920), ss. 159, 207, 223--Failure to remove alleged encroachment after notice--Offence--Acquittal--Fresh notice--Second prosecution, legality of--Period of three months under s. 223, extension of, by fresh notice, whether permissible.

In a prosecution against an accused for an offence under s. 207 (c) read with s. 159 of the Madras Local Boards Act XIV of 1920, for failure to remove an alleged encroachment after due notice by the local authority, the real offence is the wrongful encroachment that is committed by the person. The notice referred to in s. 159 is in a sense merely in the nature of a condition precedent to the prosecution. [p. 970, col. 1.]

An offence within the meaning of the sections comes to be committed, at any rate, on the expiry of the notice by which the person is called upon to remove the encroachment and fails to do so within the time limited in the notice. Where a person commits an offence by disobeying the terms of the notice, he should not be deemed to commit a fresh offence every time the local authority chooses to give a fresh notice calling upon him to remove the obstruction. [p. 970, col. 2.]

The real principle underlying s. 223 of the Madras Local Boards Act is that it should not be within the power or province of a local authority to molest and annoy persons by prosecutions which are not promptly undertaken by the local authority. The local authority has no power by giving fresh notices to constitute the disobedience to each of such fresh notices as amounting to a fresh offence under s. 207 of the Act. [p. 969, col. 2.]

Where an accused person who was charged under s. 207 of the Local Boards Act for failure to remove an alleged encroachment after due notice under s. 159 is acquitted, a second prosecution for the same offence after a fresh notice is illegal, especially where it is instituted more than three months after the issue of the first notice. [p. 970, col. 1.]

Petition, under ss. 435 and 439 of the Cr. P. C., 1898, praying the High Court to revise an order of the Court of the Stationary Second Class Magistrate, Mannargudi, dated the 11th August 1924, and made in C. C. No. 166 of 1924, and to quash all proceedings in the said C. C. No. 166 of 1924.

Messrs. V. L. Ethiraj and T. R. Srinivasa Iyengar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. C. Kunhriraman, for the Respondent.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.—The petitioner in this case was charged before the Stationary Second Class Magistrate of Mannargudi with an offence under s. 159 read with s. 207 of the Local Boards Act, Madras Act XIV of 1920. He raised a plea in bar of the prosecution on the ground that for the same offence, he was previously charged in C. C. No. 215 of 1923, on the file of the same Court, that the complaint was then withdrawn by the local authority and that the order of acquittal then passed by the Magistrate under s. 248 of the Cr. P. C. was a bar to the present prosecution. The learned Counsel for the District Board of Tanjore has contended before me that according to the scheme of the Act the offence consisted not in the encroachment alleged to have been made by the accused but in his failing to comply with any direction lawfully given to him within the terms of cl. (c) of s. 207 of that Act and that, therefore, the local authority was entitled again and again to give notice under s. 159 and every time the conditions in the notice were not complied with, there would be an offence committed by the person to whom such notice is given. There is a very fatal objection to the maintainability of such a contention. Under s. 223 of the same Act it is provided that "no person shall be tried for any offence against the provisions of this Act, or of any rule, or bye-law made under it unless complaint is made by the Police, or the President of a Local Board, or by a person expressly authorised in this behalf by the Local Board or its President within three months of the commission of the offence." The contention of the learned Counsel for the District Board of Tanjore comes to this that it is within the powers of the Local Board to extend the period of limitation prescribed by s. 223 by giving fresh notice and constituting the disobedience to each of such fresh notices as amounting to an offence under s. 207. To construe it in that manner would obviously be to defeat the provisions of the principle underlying s. 223. I take it that the real principle underlying that section is that it should not be within the power or province of a local authority to molest and annoy persons by prosecutions which are not promptly undertaken by the local authority. If this view is correct it follows that the original offence was at any rate committed on the expiry of the first notice given by the local authority to the accused. The prosecution, therefore, was liable to be launched within three months of that date, and as the present prosecution is undertaken long after the expiry of three months from that date the present complaint is not sustainable.

Even apart from this, there is another objection to the maintainability of the present prosecution. There has been an acquittal by a competent Court in respect of the offence charged against the accused in the year 1923. If it was an offence not to comply with and carry out the directions of the notice issued by the local authority in the year 1923 and if of that offence the accused was acquitted he cannot possibly be tried again for the same offence, and I cannot read the sections of the Act as contemplating different offences being committed in respect of the same subject-matter every time the local authority choose to give a fresh notice and launch a prosecution. My attention has been drawn to the second clause of s. 207 which provides for enhanced sentence in the case of persistent or old offenders. That has, however, nothing to do with the question what is the offence that is contemplated by the Act for which a penalty is provided. It is no doubt true that s. 159 of the Act is not very happily worded. Taking a common sense view of the provisions of s. 159, it seems to be clear that the real offence in such cases is the wrongful encroachment that is committed by the person. The notice referred to in the section is in a sense merely in the nature of a condition precedent to the prosecution and all that the Act says is that no one should be prosecuted straight away simply because he has committed or is deemed to have committed an act of encroachment, but the Act required that some notice should be given to him and that he should be prosecuted only if, even after such notice, he fails to remove the encroachment. No doubt the contention that it is merely a failure to comply with the direction contained in the notice can be advanced having regard to the terms of s. 207 of the Act, and having regard to those terms, it is impossible to say that the offence is complete even before any notice is given because the Legislature clearly treats as an offence only a failure to comply with the terms of the notice. But taking the real nature of the acts said to constitute the offence and the terms of all the sections, it is clear that an offence within the meaning of the Act comes to be committed at any rate on the expiry of the notice by which the person is called upon to remove the encroachment and fails to do so within the time limited in the notice. It will be against all principle to hold that even though a person commits an offence by thus disobeying the terms of the notice, he should be deemed to commit a fresh offence every time the local authority chooses to give a fresh notice calling upon him to remove the obstruction. In any view, therefore, the present prosecution cannot possibly be sustained and I must, therefore, hold that the Sub-Magistrate was wrong in the view taken by him that the plea in bar was not valid. In my judgment the plea is not only valid but sound and in that view the complaint should be dismissed and I direct accordingly.

V. N. V. Petition dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION NOS. 857 AND 858 OF 1924.

December 2, 1924.

Present:—Justice Sir Babington Newbould, KT., and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

RASH BEHARY KARURY—PETITIONER

versus

THE CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 247—Complainant, absence of—Acquittal, right of, when accrues—Revival of criminal case—Adjournments, frequent, undesirability of.

An application or order for revival of a criminal case can only be made on the supposition that the case is over and not pending. A case which is pending cannot be revived. [p. 971, col. 2; p. 972, col. 1.]

Under s. 247 of the Cr. P. C. the right to an order of acquittal accrues to the accused upon two conditions, and is dependent, firstly, on the absence of the plaintiff and, secondly on the Court not adjourning the case. If a case is not taken up at all, it cannot be said that the second condition is fulfilled, for there is no knowing in what way the Court's discretion would have been exercised if the case had been taken up. [p. 972, col. 1.]

Frequent adjournments of a case at the request of the prosecution disapproved.

Babu Bankim Chandra Mukerjee, for the Petitioner.

Babu Kusi Prosonno Chatterjee, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

REVISION No. 858 OF 1924.

Mukerji, J.—This Rule has been issued to show cause why the proceedings mentioned in the petition should not be quashed.

The proceedings against the petitioner are under s. 495A of Act III (B. C.) of 1892, as amended by the Calcutta Municipal Amendment Act of 1917. A study of the proceedings as they were had in the Court of the Municipal Magistrate of Calcutta is surprisingly interesting.

The proceedings were started on the complaint of Dr. S. N. Ghose, Special Food Inspector, filed on the 2nd December 1923. The records do not indicate what happened till the 1st February 1924, which is the date which the first summons issued against the petitioner bears. The summons was signed by the Magistrate on the 13th February 1924 and evidently was served on the petitioner, on whose behalf, it appears, appearance was entered on the 23rd February 1924. The order passed on that date runs as follows:—"Pleader appears and would contest. To 8th March 1924 for evidence." On 8th March 1924 the order passed by the Magistrate was this: "Kunja Bihari Das for accused present. Prosecution not ready. To 15th March 1924 for evidence." On the last mentioned date the complainant was examined and partly cross-examined and then the case was adjourned with the following order:—"For further cross-examination of the Food Inspector (meaning the complainant) when certain documents called for by the defence are produced by the prosecution. To March 29th 1924." It appears that on the application of the defence a summons was issued to the Chairman, Corporation of Calcutta, for producing certain reports and correspondence. On March 29th 1924 the order recorded was in these words: "Papers wanted from Chairman not forthcoming. To 12th April 1924."

On the 12th April 1924 what happened is stated by the petitioner to be this, that the complainant was unwilling to proceed with the case on certain legal grounds. This is what the petitioner stated in a petition which he subsequently filed in the Court of the Magistrate and this again is what he has repeated in his petition to this Court. The learned Magistrate, however, in the explanation which he has submitted in answer to the Rule says that "the prosecutor was unwilling to proceed with the case for the time being, as powers had not upto that time been delegated under the new Act. It did not mean that he wanted to abandon the case." I fully accept the statement of the learned Magistrate as to what transpired in his Court and I hold that nothing happened on that day which may be construed as evincing a desire on the part of the prosecution to drop or discontinue the proceedings. On this the learned Magistsate recorded an order in these words:—"Accused's agent Kunja Bihari Das present, but the prosecution is unwilling to proceed with the case on legal grounds as no power under the new Act has been delegated yet to the officers. Proceedings stayed for two months." There is a controversy as to whether the complainant was present in Court on that day, it being alleged on behalf of the petitioner that he was not, and on behalf of the prosecution that he was. The matter is of no consequence, for the learned Magistrate thought fit to adjourn the case as he was perfectly entitled to do even in the absence of the complainant.

The order of the 12th April 1924 then was a good and proper order adjourning the case for 2 months. The next order that is to be found on the record is an order dated 21st June 1924 a date more than 2 months after the 12th April 1924 which runs in these words: "Proceedings revived. Summon accused for 5th July 1924." This order appears to have been passed on an application on a printed form which was worded thus: "The prosecution prays that Case No. 6895-B in which proceedings were stayed in this Court on the 12th April 1924 may be revived." The 12th of June was a holiday. This application was not filed on the 13th June 1924, the period of 2 months having expired on the 11th, but was filed on the 14th June 1924 and dealt with by the Magistrate on the 21st June 1924. On the 14th June 1924 the application being presented before the Magistrate he ordered the record to be put upon the 21st and on that date passed the order aforesaid.

The procedure that obtains in the trial of these cases, I take it, is regulated by the Cr. P. C. An application or order for revival can only be made on the supposition that the case was over and not pending, and it is difficult to imagine how a case which is pending may be revived. The period for which the adjournment was granted having expired it was the duty of the Court to take the case up and pass some orders on it. On the 13th June 1924 the complainant was admittedly absent. The course left open to the Court was to proceed under s. 247, Cr. P. C., unless it chose to act under s. 344, Cr. P. C. If it acted under s. 344, Cr. P. C., it could for a reasonable cause adjourn the trial if it thought fit to do so, by making an order in writing and stating the reasons for the order. Admittedly it did not do so. The only other section under which the Court could act is s. 247, Cr. P. C. That section lays down that if the summons has been issued on complaint (as it was in the present case) and upon a day to which the hearing may be adjourned (which in the present case was the 12th June 1924 and the Court being closed on that day it was the 13th June 1924) the complainant does not appear (as he did not in the present case) the Magistrate shall acquit the accused, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day (which he did not in the present case). The proviso to the section need not be considered as admittedly the learned Magistrate did not proceed with the case. If the Court had taken the case up and did not think fit to adjourn the case it would have been bound to acquit the accused under the law. The question is what is the legal consequence of the case not having been taken up on that day at all.

At one time I was inclined to take the view that as the law secures to the accused an indefeasible right to an order of acquittal the provisions of s. 247, Cr. P. C., being mandatory unless an order of adjournment is made, that right could not be defeated by the omission on the part of the Court to take the case up and pass an order. On a mature consideration, however, I have come to the conclusion that that view is not correct. The right to an order of acquittal accrues to the accused upon two conditions, and is dependent, firstly on the absence of the complainant and secondly on the Court not adjourning the case. If a case is not taken up at all, it cannot be said that the second condition is fulfilled, for there is no knowing in what way the Court's discretion would have been exercised if it had been taken up. To adopt the other view would result in unnecessary harshness to the complainant and undue leniency to the accused, which would be apparent if we take an extreme case like this, namely, where the Court is not sitting owing to illness or other engagements of the presiding officer and the complainant absents himself, believing that no useful purpose would be served by his appearance. I am, therefore, of opinion that on the failure of the complainant to appear on the 13th June 1924, and on the omission of the Magistrate to take the case up, the petitioner was not entitled to an order of acquittal. This view has been taken by my learned brother Suhrawardy, J., in the case of Sher Mull v. The Corporation of Calcutta (1).

In that case this Court while finding no illegality which would justify its interference expressed its strong disapproval of the procedure followed by the Magistrate, and pointedly drew his attention to the provisions of s. 344, Cr. P. C. The printed form of application for revival such as has been used in the present case was also used in that case, and in spite of the condemnation it received, the procedure seems to have been more established than before. No notice appears to have been taken of the observations contained in the judgment in that case, and on the other hand it has been cited in the explanation submitted in the present case, as an authority warranting the procedure. This disregard, in my opinion, is nothing less than contumacious.

In the case of Sher Mull v. The Corporation of Calcutta (1) the statament of the Magistrate under s. 441, Cr. P. C., showed that the Corporation had instituted a large number of prosecutions for adulteration of ghee, and as the cases are usually strongly contested, and as the evidence in the majority of cases is more or less similar it is inconvenient for the Corporation and the accused as also for the Court for the cases to go on at one and the same time, and consequently some of the cases, including the said case, had been stayed consistently with a procedure prevailing in the Court for the last 20 years. This Court pointed out that the procedure adopted could not be justified even by 20 years' prevalence, but it was of opinion that the convenience of parties would have been sufficient for adjourning the case and the circumstances of the case would have rendered remands for lengthy periods reasonable.

(1) 77 Ind. Cas. 892; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 725; 25 Cr. L. J. 492.

So far as the present case is concerned no question of convenience of the accused or of the Court appears to have arisen. The prosecutor did not appear on the 13th June 1924. Even after the revival the prosecution again took time twice, once on the 2nd and again on the 23rd August 1924 the grounds for which do not appear on the order-sheet or any where on the record. To my mind it is clear that the prosecution has, in the present case, been cherishing an idea that it is at the sweet will of the prosecution to go on with a case or get it adjourned, and the orders of the Court have tended to foster that idea. It must be remembered that the case had been partly gone into and then stood adjourned, for further examination of the complainant and for production of certain papers and also to enable the officers to have the necessary delegation of powers under the new Act. It may be presumed that the last mentioned defect was remedied before the application for revival was made. The offence for which the trial is to take place is now more than a year old, and the difficulty of an accused person to meet a charge in respect of an offence committed long ago is obvious.

If there is an impression any where that proceedings of this nature can be tolerated it is time that such impression should be removed. I am, therefore, of opinion that these proceedings should be quashed.

I would accordingly make the Rule absolute and quash the proceedings.

REVISION No. 857 OF 1924.

The facts of this case are similar to those of Revision Case No. 858 of 1924. The noticeable points of difference are these: on 8th December 1923 the case was adjourned to 15th December 1923 for defence. On 15th December 1923 the case was adjourned with the following order: "Corporation is looking afresh into the matter. Proceedings stayed for one month." The next order on the order sheet is dated 8th March 1924 on which date the case was revived, and then it was adjourned to the 29th March 1924 on which date it was ordered to be tried with the other case and since then it shared in the vicissitudes of the latter.

The same order is passed in this case as in Rule No. 858 of 1924.

Newbould, J.—I agree.

Z. K. Rule made absolute.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 328 OF 1924.

October 30, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Wallace.

THE PUBLIC PROSECUTOR—APPELLANT

versus

CHERU KUTTI—ACCUSED.

Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920), s. 170—Market, what is—Market in existence before Act, whether "new market".

A market is a place set apart for the meeting of the general public, of buyers and sellers, freely open to any such, to assemble together, where any seller may expose his goods for sale and any buyer may purchase. [p. 974, col. 1.]

Where arecanuts were brought to certain premises weighed and there purchased or sold to or by people and a fee was levied by the owner thereof:

Held, that the place constituted a "market" within the meaning of the Madras Local Boards Act. [p. 974, col. 2.]

The expression "new market" in s. 170 of the Madras Local Boards Act is used in its ordinary signification as "for the first time opened or kept open". [p. 975, col. 1.]

Appeal, under s. 417 of the Cr. P. C., 1898, against the acquittal of the aforesaid accused by the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Palghat, in Criminal Appeal No. 12 of 1924, on his file (C. C. No. 305 of 1923, Ponnani Sub-Magistrate's Court.)

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

Mr. D. A. Krishna Vanai, for the Accused.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against an acquittal of the accused in C. C. No. 305 of 1923 on the file of the Second Class Magistrate, Ponnani. The accused was charged for an offence under s. 170 of the Local Boards Act (XIV) of 1920 with keeping open a new private market. The Trying Court convicted him. The lower Appellate Court reversed the conviction and acquitted the accused, and Government have appealed against the acquittal.

The Taluk Board, Ponnani, has lately opened a public day market for the sale of arecanuts in Challisseri Town. It is contended that accused keeps a private day market for the same purpose which is not licensed by the Taluk Board. This market was being held admittedly before the Taluk Board opened its market, and, when that was opened, the President issued a notice to the accused to show cause against prosecution for keeping an unlicensed market to which the accused replied that he has not been keeping any market at all.

The Local Boards Act does not define the term "market", but in this case I do not think that presents any difficulty. A market is a place set apart for the meeting of the general public of buyers and sellers freely open to any such, to assemble together, where any seller may expose his goods for sale and any buyer may purchase. The notification of the Taluk Board is Ex. E. It states that an arecanut day maket is established "for the sale of arecanuts" and directs that in future, all arecaunts brought for sale shall be taken to the said market only and sold there. The first point that the prosecution has to prove, therefore, is that in the accused's so called private market, arecanuts are being brought for sale and sold, so as to constitute an act of interference with, or in the English legal phrase, a "disturbance," of the public market.

I shall for convenience' sake at present call the premises by the name of the accused's kada without considering if he is the owner thereof or not, a point on which the accused has put forward a case that he is not the owner. P. W. No. 1, a member of the Taluk Board, states that 200 people gather in the accused's kada for sale and purchase and that he has seen "the accused and his men collecting fees" presumably on the sales. He was deputed by the President of the Taluk Board to make a report about this unauthorised market. He admits that at the time of his visit the accused was not present and that he cannot say who "the accused's men" are, and that as to the sort of fees collected his information is pure hearsay. His report, Ex. C., implies that the accused was present when he made his enquiry but does not say that he saw any selling of arecanut going on. P. W. No. 2 is another member of the Board. He also enquired and made a report. He says that many go to the accused's kada for selling and buying and that fees are being levied. The accused was not there also when he went. He cannot name anyone who bought. His report, Ex. G, shows that what he saw in the accused's kada was the weighing of arecanuts; for which a fee was being charged. The weighment was no doubt for purposes of sale. But neither member seems to have seen sales going on in the accused's kada. Struck with the fact that arecanut brought to the accused's kada and similar kadas was more than the amount brought to the Taluk Board market, they inferred that these private kadas are used for exposing the arecanut also for sale. P. W. No. 3 says that these kadas are used for sales and that he himself has sold arecanut at the accused's kada once after the Taluk Board market was started. P. W. No. 4 states that he has sold in the accused's kada twice after the establishment of the public market. P. W. No. 5, not a disinterested witness, says that arecanut is taken for sale to the accused's kada. D. W. No. 1 professes to have leased the accused's kada in 1922 and does not say that sales did not take place there. D. W. No. 2 who professes to be a lessee from 1923, says that he used to buy arecanut there in large quantities. D. W. No. 3 admits that he sells arecanut in Cherukutty's, that is, accused's shop. D. W. No. 4 gives no evidence on this point. The defence witnesses, who were examined really to prove that the accused had sold the shop to his sister, really support the prosecution contention that buying and selling goes on freely in the accused's shop. Taking the evidence of P. W. Nos. 3 and 4 with the evidence of defence witnesses referred to above and the facts noted at their personal inspection by P. W. Nos. 1 and 2, I am satisfied that the greater part of the buying and selling of arecanut goes on, not in the Taluk Board market opened for the purpose, but, in the private markets, of which the accused's is one, and that the weighment there is merely a preliminary or a sequel to the real business, namely, the buying and selling, for which the shopman charges fees. That is the kada is a place ordinarily used by dealers in arecanuts to meet and expose their goods for the purpose of buying and selling; in fact it is a market used for exactly the same purpose for which the Taluk Board market is designed and established, and it constitutes, therefore, a disturbance of the public market.

The next point is, assuming that the accused is keeping open this market, is it a "new" market within the meaning of s. 170 of the Local Boards Act. It is not new in the sense that it has been established since that Act came into force for it was in existence prior to the Act. Is it a case then to which s. 171 would more appropriately apply as "a private market already lawfully established at the commencement of the Act". The Public Prosecutor argues that this phrase can only apply to private markets authorised under the previous Local Boards Act. This depends on whether under the old Act there could be any private market lawfully established which was not authorised by that Act. It seems quite clear that that could be. The provisions regulating private markets were for the first time introduced into the old Local Boards Act V of 1884 by Act VI of 1900, and from s. 117 (E) (3) introduced by that Act it is clear that there were even before the passing of that Act private markets lawfully established; nor does it follow that a market for which no license was granted was necessarily not lawfully established since it may have been a case provided for by s. 117 E. (6) when a license had been duly applied for, but the Taluk Board neglected to pass orders on the application. Such matters have not been gone into in this case since the prosecution was not under s. 171; but it follows from the argument that "new" in s. 170 is not equivalent to "every market not already licensed under the Local Boards Act of 1884". It is the more necessary not to widen the meaning of the word "new" because although under Act V of 1884, s. 117 (d) and the succeeding sections, a new market might be opened under prescribed conditions, under Act XIV of 1920 no new market may be opened at all. On a consideration of the above noted I must hold that the word "new" is used in its ordinary signification as "for the first time opened or kept open", and, therefore that s. 170 does not apply to the accused's kada in this case. Sections 171, 175 or 179 are more appropriate sections.

In this view, it is unnecessary to go further into the question of whether the building in which the market is held belongs to the accused or has been transferred to his sister. I would remark that under the section it is not the owner of the premises but the person who keeps open the market, that is, presumably the person who collects or has collected for him the fees levied in the market for the exposure and sale of the goods, who is punishable.

I must, therefore, hold that the conviction of the accused under s. 170 was rightly reversed by the lower Appellate Court. I must, therefore, refuse to interfere with the order of acquittal and dismiss this appeal.

V. N. V. Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REFERENCE No. 172 OF 1924.

December 3, 1924.

Present:—Justice Sir Babington Newbould, KT., and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

KUTISWAR MONDAL AND OTHERS—1ST PARTY—PETITIONERS

versus

JITENDRA NATH SEN AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 146, 438—Order under s. 146, operation of, extent of—Order when comes to end—Record of Rights, entry in, whether final adjudication by competent Court—Reference under s. 438, form of.

A reference under s. 438 of the Cr. P. C. should always be made in the form prescribed for such references by r. 139 of Chap. I of the General Rules and Circular Orders of the Calcutta High Court, Criminal Appellate Side. [p. 975, col. 2; p. 976, col. 1.]

Once an order under s. 146 of the Cr. P. C. has been passed by a Court it can come to an end only under one of two circumstances, the first being that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject-matter of the dispute, in which case the Magistrate would be competent to withdraw the order of attachment, and he can do so at any time at which he is satisfied that there is no further any such likelihood, and, secondly, it is competent for a Magistrate to release the subject-matter of the dispute from attachment if a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties to the proceedings or the person entitled to possession of the subject-matter of the dispute. [p. 976, col. 1.]

An entry in the Record of Rights cannot be regarded as constituting a final adjudication by a competent Court within the meaning of s. 146 (1) of the Cr. P. C. [p. 976, col. 2.]

Reference made by the District Magistrate, Jessore.

Babus Narendra Kumar Bose and Debendra Narain Bhattacharjee, for the Petitioners.

Babu Mukunda Behary Mullick, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is a Reference made by the District Magistrate of Jessore in connection with an order passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Narail, dated the 5th June 1924, whereby the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate ordered certain lands which had been under attachment under an order passed under s. 146, Cr. P. C., to be released in favour of the 1st Party. At the outset we should like to point out to the learned District Magistrate that the Reference is not quite in order. It is not in the form prescribed for such Reference by the General Rules and Circular Orders of this Court, Criminal Appellate Side, Ch. I, r. 139, and it does not appear from the order which the learned Magistrate passed as to what is the recommendation that he makes in connection with the order. Reference under s. 438, Cr. P. C., should always be made in that form. In as much, however, as the order is before us we propose to deal with it and pass necessary orders.

It appears that an order under s. 146, Cr. P. C., was passed in respect of these lands by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate on the 27th September 1915. Thereafter there were series of litigations between the parties which have been set out in very great detail in the order passed by the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate as well as in the order passed by the learned District Magistrate, and after these litigations and being moved by the two parties to the proceeding under s. 145 which led up to the order under s. 146, Cr. P. C., the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate on the 5th June 1924 passed an order that the lands which have since then been under attachment be released in favour of the 1st party.

Once an order under s. 146, Cr. P. C., has been passed by a Court it can come to an end only under one of two circumstances, the first being that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject-matter of the dispute, in which case the Magistrate would be competent to withdraw the order of attachment and he can do so at any time at which there is no such likelihood, and secondly, it is competent for a Magistrate to release the subject-matter of the dispute from attachment if a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties to the proceedings or the person entitled to possession of the subject-matter of the dispute. In the present case the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate does not find that, as a matter of fact, there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace and he does not base his order on that ground. He has referred to a series of litigations which there was between the parties since the order of attachment and he does not rely even upon the results of those litigations and in point of fact having regard to the orders that were passed in those cases it cannot be said that in any of them, there was any determination by a competent Court of the rights of the parties or as to the person who is entitled to possession of these lands. What has been relied upon by the learned Magistrate is an entry in the finally published Record of Rights to the effect that the lands appertain to the jama of the 1st party and that they are held by them under the 2nd party. This entry in the Record of Rights can at best be treated as presumptive evidence of the relation of landlord and tenant existing between the 1st party and the 2nd party to the proceedings, and cannot be regarded as constituting the final adjudication of a competent Court within the meaning of s. 146 (1), Cr. P. C. There is, therefore, no valid basis for the order which the learned Magistrate has passed in this case.

We accordingly think that that order should be set aside and the lands re-attached under the provisions of s. 146, Cr. P. C., and we order accordingly.

Z. K. Order set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL PETITION No. 36 OF 1925.

April 3, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

MANGAT—ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR THROUGH LAHIRI—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526—Transfer of case—Hindu-Muhammadan case—European Magistrate, desirability of.

Where a Hindu-Muhammadan question is involved in a criminal case it is desirable that the case should be heard by a European Magistrate.

Kadir Bakhsh v. Sundar Lal, 27 Ind. Cas. 837; 127 P. L. R. 1915; 1 P. W. R. 1915 Cr.; 16 Cr. L. J. 213, referred to.

Petition, under s. 526, Cr. P. C., for transfer of the case.

Messrs. Manohar Lal and Shamair Chand, for the Petitioner.

ORDER.—Nobody appears to oppose this application under s. 526, Cr. P. C.

There is a Hindu-Muhammadan question involved in the case and it appears desirable that the District Magistrate himself should enquire into it and determine it. The same order was made in the case reported as Kadir Bakhsh v. Sundar Lal (1). I order accordingly.

Z. K. Order accordingly.

(1) 27 Ind. Cas. 837; 127 P. L. R. 1915; 1 P. W. R. 1915 Cr.; 16 Cr. L. J. 213.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 487 OF 1923.

January 30, 1925.

Present:—Sir Norman Macleod, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Coyajee.

IMAMBHAI KAMRUDIN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAHIMBHAI USMANBHAI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Co-owners—Party wall—Nature of wall built on party wall—Windows, whether can be opened in party wall—Trespass—Injunction, suit for—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 120.

Where one of two neighbouring owners raises a party wall with the consent or acquiescence of the other, the raised portion must assume the same character, as the old party wall on which it stands, and neither party can be allowed to commit a trespass on the party wall so increased in height. If either of the parties opens windows in the raised part of the party wall his action would amount to a trespass and would be liable to be restrained at the instance of the other party. A suit to restrain such action must, however, be brought within a period of six years under Art. 120 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. Failing such a suit, however, the party aggrieved would be entitled to block the windows from his own side of the premises. [p. 978, col. 2.]

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge, Ahmedabad, in Appeal No. 269 of 1922, confirming a decree of the Subordinate Judge, at Ahmedabad, in Civil Suit No. 659 of 1920.

Mr. M. H. Mehta, for the Appellants.

Mr. H. V. Divatia, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs sued for an injunction against the defendants directing them to close up the windows which they had opened in the plaint joint wall, and for permission to the plaintiffs to do so at the defendants' costs if they failed to close up the windows, and to restrain the defendants from making any new openings, etc., in the said common wall.

The defendants contended that the wall in which the windows in the suit were opened had not been of joint ownership; that the plaintiffs were not prejudiced in any way; and lastly that the plaintiffs filed the suit about twelve years after the windows had been opened.

The first issue in the Trial Court was whether the wall between the two houses had been proved to be of joint ownership. The Judge found on the facts that the wall up to the roof of the plaintiff's house was old, and was of joint ownership, but that the plaintiffs had to admit that some years ago the wall had been raised by the defendants' ancestors at their own expense. The owner of plaintiffs' house not only acquiesced in the raising of that wall but had a knowlegde of his doing so and did not protest. The suit having been filed after his death and that of Usmanbhai, nobody was in a position to say what arrangement there was between them, when Usmanbhai raised the wall above the roof at his own expense. The learned Judge continued:—

"The old wall is a common wall. Thus assuming that the new wall is also a party wall, it could not be said that there is an ouster by the opening of the windows. At the same time, Watson v. Gray (1), quoted with approval in Kanakayya v. Narasimhulu (2), would show that the raised portion could not be called a party wall of joint ownership. The ruling in Motilal v. Maganlal (3) is based on a specific agreement on defendants' part not to pay his share of expenditure which was not proved. There is nothing to show that there was consent of Ismailji or that this raising of the wall was necessary for the benefit of his house. From any point of view I find that plaintiffs should not be allowed any injunction."

The Judge, therefore, dismissed the suit.

In appeal the District Judge said:—

"The first question that arises is whether the raised portion of the wall becomes a common party wall. It was erected by the defendants at their own expense. There is no evidence whether there was any arrangement between the defendants' ancestor and the plaintiffs when the wall was raised or whether they consented to the defendants' ancestor raising the wall. At the outset it may be said that there was an acquiescene on the part of the plaintiffs in standing by. In these circumstances what is the character of the portion of the wall thus raised? No doubt under the rule enunciated in Watson v. Gray (1), the plaintiffs could have compelled the defendants' ancestor to demolish the raised portion of the wall. But they did not do so. The result is, as stated by Parker, J., in Kanakayya v. Narasimhulu (2), that the newly erected portion will not be a common or party wall, but will be the exclusive wall belonging to the defendants. The ruling in Motilal v. Maganlal (3) does not militate against this view. All that it lays down is that the old party wall, even though re-built by a tenant-in-common at his own expense, does not cease to be a common party wall. That ruling says nothing about the portion of the wall newly raised by a tenant-in-common at his own expense. If then the raised portion of the wall did not become a common or party wall, the defendants have acquired an exclusive right to it by adverse possession for more than twelve years. There was, therefore, no trespass or ouster when the defendants opened the windows in the wall."

(1) (1880) 14 Ch. D. 192; 49 L. J. Ch. 243; 42 L. T. 294; 28 W. R. 438; 44 J. P. 537.

(2) 19 M. 38; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 731.

(3) (1888) Un. P. J. 297.

Accordingly the appeal was dismissed.

In Kanakayya v. Narasimhulu (2) the plaintiffs and defendants were tenants-in-common of a party wall. The defendants without the consent of the plaintiffs, intending to build a superstucture on their tenement, raised the height of the party wall. A suit was brought to compel the removal of the newly erected part of the wall. The District Munsif dismissed the suit, and his decree was confirmed by the Subordinate Judge. In appeal Parker, J., said :—

"The plaintiffs are entitled to the relief asked for. It is true that the refusal of plaintiffs to give the required permission may be ill-natured and that the raising of the wall will not really harm them ; but, at the same time, the altered wall is no longer the same wall and the newly-erected portion will not be a common or party wall. The erection of it might give rise to inconvenience and quarrels."

In Watson v. Gray (1) the owners in fee of two adjoining houses derived title to them from a common predecessor-in-title. The conveyances from that predecessor to the two owners respectively, contained a declaration that the wall which divided the yards at the back of the two houses should be and remain a party wall. It was held that the two owners were tenants-in-common of the wall. The plaintiff had complained that the defendant had committed trespass in that he had knocked down the new piece of wall which the plaintiff had built on the top of the party wall. The plaintiff claimed damages for the removal of the new piece of wall, and an injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with the re-building of it, and it was held that the defendant's action did not amount to a trespass and the plaintiff was not entitled to any damages in the throwing down of the wall.

But the real question on the facts here is, what is the nature of the wall added by the defendants' ancestor with the acquiescence of the plaintiffs' predecessor-in-title, and it seems to us that if one of two neighbouring owners raises a party wall the other owner either giving his consent or acquiescing, then the raised portion must assume the same character as the old party wall on which it stands. Then it would follow that neither party can be allowed to commit a trespass on the party wall so increased in height, and the defendants' action in opening the windows in the raised part of the party wall would be a trespass. The plaintiff could have objected to the windows being opened in the party wall, but not having done so within the period of six years, the suit, coming within Art. 120 of the Indian Limitation Act, would be barred. With all due respect, therefore, we cannot agree with the District Judge who says that the newly erected portion is not a common or party wall, nor with Parker, J., who held in Kanakayya v. Narasimhulu (2) that where one neighbour had not consented to the new erection by the other, the new erection became the exclusive property of that other. Consequently we think that the plaintiffs would have been entitled to an injunction if they had sued within time. Nor do we think that the defendants in the circumstances of this case have acquired an exclusive right to the newly erected portion by adverse possession. They are only protected against an action by the plaintiffs for trespass owing to the opening of the windows. We think, therefore, though on different grounds, that the lower Appellate Court was right in dismissing the plaintiffs' suit, and this appeal must be dismissed with costs. With regard to the future it is desirable that these two neighbours should arrange their disputes and come to some amicable settlement with regard to the party wall. It is clear that the plaintiffs would be entitled to block the suit windows from their own side of the premises and if the occasion arose they would be entitled to an injunction restraining defendants from making any new openings in the common wall.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.
FULL BENCH.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 179-B OF 1924.

January 5, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.,
Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C., and Mr. Kotwal, A. J. C.

NARAYAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

TULSIRAM—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Lex loci in Berar—Mitakshara and Mayukha, priority between.

In Berar, following the Bombay Deccan, the Mitakshara is paramount and the 'Mayukha' is of secondary consideration, being only relied upon when the Mitakshara is silent or doubtful. [p. 981, col. 2.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal against the decree of the First Additional District Judge, Akola, dated the 28th April 1924, in Civil Appeal No. 42 of 1924.

Messrs. R. R. Jayavant and A. V. Khare, for the Appellants.

Messrs. G. G. Hatwalne and V. D. Sindekar, for the Respondent.

OPINION OF THE FULL BENCH.

Prideaux, A. J. C.—(December 16, 1924).—The following genealogical tree explains the relationship of the parties:—

SHEORAM, (dead.)

(1) Musammat Parbati, (alive)	(2) Musammat Tulsi, (dead)	(3) Musammat Bayjai, (dead)
Narayan, (plaintiff No. 1).	Deoba, (died on 25-10-18) =Musammat Laxmi.	Jairam, (died on 25-10-18) =Musammat Punji, re-married on 30-8-21.
	Tulsiram, (defendant No. 1.)
		Tukaram, (plaintiff No. 2.)

The plaint states that Sheoram died in 1913, and that in the following year, i.e., February 1914 a partition of the ancestral property of the family was effected amongst Narayan, Deoba, Jairam and Tukaram, each getting a 1/4th share. At the time of the partition Narayan and Tukaram were minors and their guardian Musammat Parbati effected the partition on their behalf. After Narayan came of age he looked after the affairs of Tukaram. After the death of Deoba, Tulsiram became his heir, and on Jairam's death, his widow Musammat Punji, succeeded to his property. She was a minor at that time, living with her parents, and Musammat Laxmi the widow of Deoba took possession of the entire property of Musammat Punji as her guardian. Punji remarried on 30th August 1921 and thus the plaintiffs, it is contended, became heirs to Jairam's property; but Musammat Laxmi the guardian of Musammat Punji refused to deliver possession. Plaintiffs ask to be declared as owners of the moveable and immoveable property and claim mesne profits. This suit is thus for possession of Jairam's property in the hands of Deoba's widow defendant No. 2 and her son defendant No. 1.

Defendants Nos. 3 to 7 were joined being bataidars of the fields. The first two defendants pleaded that Tulsiram was the preferential heir, there having been a reunion shortly after the partition. It was further pleaded that the partition took place during the minority of all the brothers except Deoba and is not just and equitable, and that as the minors had not been properly represented that partition is void. Further pleadings were also raised with which we are not concerned.

The Trial Court held inter alia that the partition of 1914 was not invalid, or at least the defendant No. 1 cannot question it as his father Deoba, who was a party to the partition, was a major at that time; that at the time of the alleged re-union Jairam was a minor and there could not be a valid re-union. A decree was passed in plantiffs' favour, the Court finding that the parties were governed by the lex loci of Berar, i. e., by the Mitakshara supplemented by the Mayukha and that in cases of conflict between the two laws the former prevails; and that the plaintiffs as half brothers are preferential heirs to the brother's son defendant No. 1.

On appeal the lower Appellate Court, following Shriram v. Rajaram (1), held that it is accepted law in Berar that where Mitakshara and Mayukha conflict the Mayukha predominates, and that in the present case the parties are governed by the Mayukha. It was further held that the defendant No. 1 appellant who is the full brother's son is the preferential heir to the plaintiffs who are the half brothers of the deceased Jairam. The appeal was allowed and the plaintiffs' suit was dismissed.

(1) 78 Ind. Cas. 367; 19 N. L. R. 193; (1924) A. I. R. (N.) 83.

It is here admitted that if the Mitakshara prevails, the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree, while if the case is governed by the Mayukha, the decision of the lower Appellate Court is correct. Dr. Sarvadhikari, in his valuable work Hindu Law of Inheritance, at page 313 (2nd edition) states that the Maharashtra School of Law is divided into two sub-divisions, the Mayukha Districts, i. e., Gujerat, Island of Bombay and North Konkan where the Vyavahara Mayukha holds the first place and the rest of the Bombay Presidency where its authority is next to that of the Mitakshara.

Mulla, at page 12 of his Principles of Hindu Law (4th edition) writes :—

"As regards authorities in Western India, the Mitakshara ranks first and paramount in the Mahratta country, Northern Kanara and the Ratnagiri District. In Gujerat, the Island of Bombay and the North Konkan, the Mayukha is considered as the overruling authority where there is a difference of opinion between it and the Mitakshara. The principle, however, adopted by the High Court of Bombay, and sanctioned by the Privy Council, is to construe the two works so as to harmonize them with each other wherever and so far as that is reasonably possible. In Poona, Ahmednagar and Khandesh, the Mayukha is considered to be of equal authority with the Mitakshara, and not capable of overruling it as in Gujerat, Bombay and Northern Konkan."

Mayne, at page 29 of his Hindu Law and Usage (9th edition), says:—

"The works which supplement the Mitakshara in Western India are the Vyavahara Mayukha, and the Viramitrodaya. Of these the Mitakshara ranks first and paramount in the Maratha country and in Northern Kanara, and Ratnagiri, while in Gujerat, and apparently also in the Island of Bombay, the Mayukha is considered as the overruling authority when there is a difference of opinion. In Ahmednagar, Poona and Khandesh the Mayukha appears to be an authority equal to, though not capable of overruling the Mitakshara."

In Jankibai v. Sundra (2) it was held that the Ratnagiri district forms part of the Maratha country where the doctrines of the Mitakshara are paramount, and where the Mayukha notwithstanding the eminent position it has gained, is still a secondary authority. In Bhagwan Vithoba v. Warubai (3) their Lordships of the Bombay High Court held:—

"In cases governed by the Mitakshara, a sister comes in as heir to a deceased Hindu immediately after the grandmother; so that, where the competition is between her and a half brother's son, the latter, being higher in the line among heirs specifically mentioned in the Mitakshara, is entitled to preference over her as heir, though it would be otherwise in cases governed purely by the law of the Vyavahara Mayukha.....It is a well established rule of the Bombay High Court that where the Mitakshara is silent or obscure, the Court must, generally speeking, invoke the aid of the Vyavahara Mayukha to interpret it, and harmonise both the works, so far as that is reasonably possible."

In Ramprasad v. Subu Bai (4) a Judge of this Court held that "the Mitakshara, as interpreted in the Bombay Presidency, is the lex loci in Berar." And the late Mittra, A. J. C., in Bhadia v. Musammat Bhagi (5) found that under the Hindu Law, as interpreted in Berar, the sister is a preferential heir to the paternal uncle's son.

In Narhar Damodar v. Bhau Moreshwar (6) it was held that in the town of Mahad in the Kolaba District, Hindus are governed by the Mitakshara and not by the Vyavahara Mayukha.

There are a series of rulings of this Court on the question of the lex loci in Berar. In Narayan Vithal v. Govind Narain (7) the Judicial Commissioner of this Court held that among Mahratta Brahmans domiciled in the Central Provinces and governed by the Mitakshara, as interpreted in the light of the Mayukha, a daughter succeeding to her father's immoveable property does not take an absolute estate, but that the inheritance goes on her death to her father's heir. In Govind v. Dawalat (8) it was found that "under the Mitakshara, the stridhan of a woman dying without issue, and who had become a wife by any of the four approved modes of marriage belongs in the first instance to her husband. He excludes her sister." In

(2) 14 B. 612; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 875.

(3) 32 B. 300; 10 Bom. L. R. 389.
(4) 4 N. L. R. 31.
(5) 23 Ind. Cas. 229; 10 N. L. R. 24.
(6) 36 Ind. Cas. 539; 40 B. 621; 18 Bom. L. R. 744.
(7) 1 N. L. R. 154.
(8) 5 Ind. Cas. 426; 6 N. L. R. 3.

Balwant Rao v. Baji Rao (9) their Lordships of the Privy Council find that a man who has emigrated from the Bombay Presidency to the Central Provinces is prima facie subject to the law as expounded in Bombay; and that according to that law the daughter succeeds to the father in an absolute inheritance. In Ram Prasad v. Musammat Subu Bai (4), Stanyon, A. J. C. who had a large experience of judicial work in Berar, writes:—

"In my own experience of judicial work in Berar I never found it disputed, but on the contrary invariably taken for granted, that the Mitakshara, read with the Mayukha, was the predominating authority on Hindu Law in Berar cases. I therefore hold that the Mitakshara, as interpreted in the Bombay Presidency, is the lex loci in Berar."

In Girjabai v. Vyankatesh (10), Obbard, J. C. of Berar, held that the law compounded of Mitakshara, Mayukha and custom which obtains in the Bombay Presidency is applicable to Marathas in Berar. In Sitaram v. Laxman (11), Stanyon, A. J. C., held:—

"It is also beyond question that, subject to diversions created by caste customs, the personal law of the Berar Kunbi is the Mitakshara as interpreted by the Mayukha, otherwise called the Bombay School of Hindu Law."

In Madho v. Janki (12), it was held that the law applicable in Berar is the Mitakshara, as interpreted and followed in Western India. In Govinda v. Musammat Doomi (13) I held that in Berar the Mayukha is not paramount, the lexi loci being the Mitakshara interpreted by the Mayukha, and that the Mitakshara is paramount in that territory and the Mayukha secondary authority.

The Allahabad High Court in Kanhaiya Lal v. Gaura (14), held that where the Mitakshara is silent and doubtful other books of authority may be relied upon.

There seems no specific case from that part of the Bombay Presidency in which the Mitakshara is paramount, where in a case of conflict between that law and the Mayukha, the latter has prevailed, and it seems clear that the Mitakshara is, in the Bombay Deccan which adjoins Berar, supreme, the Mayukha only being relied upon where the Mitakshara is silent, or where it is indistinct or doubtful.

For the respondents in the present case Bhadia v. Musammat Bhagi (5), Musammat Chandrabhaga v. Vishwanath (15), and Madho v. Janki (12), are relied upon. But these cases do not seem to me to support the principle contended for. The trend of authority seems to me undoubtedly in favour of the proposition that in Berar, following the Bombay Deccan, the Mitakshara is paramount and the Mayukha is of secondary consideration, being only relied upon when the Mitakshara is silent or doubtful.

I would allow this appeal, set aside the decision of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the first Court.

Baker, J. C.—(December 18, 1924).—Admittedly the law in Berar is the same as it is in Bombay. The law in Bombay is the Mitakshara, except in Gujerat, North Konkan and the Island of Bombay. It has been stated in certain rulings that the law in force in Bombay is Mitakshara as interpreted by the Mayukha, but there is no case in which when the Mitakshara and Mayukha differ the Mayukha has been held to prevail outside the districts, above mentioned, where the Mayukha authority is supreme. Berar is geographically a continuation of the Deccan, being adjacent to Khandesh, and not far from Ahmednagar, and it is separated by Khandesh and Nasik from the nearest point of Bombay Presidency where the Mayukha prevails.

I can see no reason why the law in Berar should follow the law prevailing in Gujerat rather than that prevailing in the adjacent Deccan Districts. The law in the adjacent Deccan Districts is the Mitakshara. It may be that it is interpreted by the Mayukha, but where the Mitakshara and the Mayukha differ, there is, so far as I am aware, no decision that Mayukha is to prevail in the Deccan Districts. There can, therefore, be no reason why the Mayukha should prevail over the Mitakshara in Berar.

I am, therefore, of opinion that in Berar the Mitakshara is to prevail over the (9) 57 Ind. Cas. 545; 16 N. L. R. 187; 39 M. L. J. 166; (1920) M. W. N. 483; 22 Bom. L. R. 1070; 3 N. L. J. 251; 28 M. L. T. 157; 18 A. L. J. 1049; 12 L. W. 679; 47 I. A. 213; 25 C. W. N. 243; 48 C. 30 (P. C.).

(10) 2 Berar L. J. 135.

(11) 17 Ind. Cas. 133; 8 N. L. R. 128 at p. 129.

(12) 36 Ind. Cas. 514; 12 N. L. R. 148.

(13) 65 Ind. Cas. 671; 5 N. L. J. 187.

(14) 83 Ind. Cas. 147; 22 A. L. J. 890 at p. 892; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 19; L. R. 6 A. 1 Civ.

(15) 20 Ind. Cas. 557; 9 N. L. R. 102 at pp. 108, 109.

Mayukha in cases where the two do not take the same view.

Kotwal, A. J. C.—(January 2, 1925).—In Shriram v. Rajaram (1), I only stated what I considered to be the law applicable to Berar according to my interpretation of the previous rulings of this Court.

The appellants' contention before the Bench is that the respective authorities of the Mitakshara and the Mayukha in Berar should be the same as in the Bombay Presidency excluding the Island of Bombay, Gujerat and North Konkan; in other words, that where the Mitakshara and the Mayukha differ the former should predominate and that the Mayukha is to be followed only when the Mitakshara is silent or doubtful. When the silence of the Mitakshara as to the existence of a particular right has the same effect as an express statement that that right does not exist, I fail to see how, where the Mayukha which states that that right exists is followed, it can be said that predominance is not given to it over the Mitakshara. Nor do I see how, when on a certain point a custom in accordance with the Mayukha is given preference over the Mitakshara, the Mayukha cannot be said to be given predominance, however much the predominance may be disguised by calling the point doubtful under the Mitakshara. I am not convinced that on the previous rulings relating to Berar cited in Shriram v. Rajaram (1), it cannot be said that the Mayukha does not predominate over the Mitakshara.

However, the point now in dispute did not directly arise in the previous cases and on the ground of territorial proximity relied on by my learned colleagues and I may add also of communal and sentimental affinity between the Mahrathas of Berar and those of the greater part of the Bombay Presidency, I am not prepared to disagree with my learned colleagues.

JUDGMENT.—(January 5, 1925).—The result is that the decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside, and that of the original Court restored. The appellants will get their costs here and in the lower Appellate Court.

Z. K. Decree set aside.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION SUIT No. 310 OF 1923.

October 18, 1924.

Present:—Sir Lallubhai Shah, KT., Acting Chief Justice.

ROYAL BANK OF SCOTLAND—PLAINTIFFS

versus

RAHIM CASSUM & SON—DEFENDANTS.

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), ss. 9, 118—Person holding bill for collection with lien on bill, whether holder in due course.

Under s. 118 of the Negotiable Instruments Act the holder of a bill is to be presumed to be a holder in due course until the contrary is proved. [p. 984, col. 2.]

A person holding a Bill of Exchange for collection with a lien on the bill is a holder of the bill for consideration within the meaning of s. 9 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. [p. 984, col. 1.]

Mr. Kemp, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. B. J. Wadia, for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—This suit came on for hearing as a contested short cause on August 30, 1923, before Mr. Justice Coyajee when issues were raised. On that day the plaintiffs found it necessary to ask for an adjournment to have evidence relating to a certain letter of lien passed in their favour by Marshall & Co., Glasgow, taken on commission and the case was adjourned. It has now come on for hearing before me. After recording evidence and hearing arguments on October 15, I reserved judgment. I ordered the case to be set down for further arguments to-day. I have heard further arguments and have recorded further evidence of the defendants as to certain facts relating to the presentation of the bill for acceptance which were adverted to in the course of the arguments.

The material facts relating to this suit are really not in dispute and are sufficiently proved. The defendants are dealers in crockery and glassware in Bombay. They indented certain goods through Marshall & Co., Bombay Branch, from Marshall & Co., Glasgow. Marshall & Co. sent certain goods in pursuance of these indents, and on March 23, 1921, they drew a Bill of Exchange to the order of themselves for £167-9-0 payable at sixty days after sight "document against payment." The defendants were the drawees and Marshall & Co. (Bombay) were drawees in case of need. Messrs. Marshall & Co. (Glasgow) indorsed the bill in blank and sent it on to their Bankers, the Royal Bank of Scotland (Glasgow), for collection. The Bank sent this bill to their London Office. The bill bears the endorsement "remitted for collection by Royal Bank of Scotland, London Office," to the Mercantile Bank of India, Bombay. The bill was presented by the Mercantile Bank of India, Bombay, to the defendants. But, according to the evidence on behalf of the defendants which I accept, the bill was not accepted by them but returned to the Bank. The Bank then referred the matter to the Bombay Branch of Marshall & Co., who were mentioned in the bill as drawees in case of need. Marshall & Co., Bombay Branch, then took this bill to the defendants' firm. At that time the term "documents against payment" was altered to "documents against acceptance" which is noted in pencil on the bill, and the bill was accepted by the defendants. The indorsement of acceptance is in these terms: "Accepted. Payable at the office of the Mercantile Bank of India, Limited, Bombay." The documents were then handed over to the defendants. The due date for payment was June 23, 1921. No payment was made on that day and the fact of the bill having been dishonoured for non-payment was duly noted on June 24. Though at one stage a point was made that the dishonouring for non-payment was not proved, it has been accepted before me as a fact and it is clear from the protest attached to the bill that it was dishonoured for non-payment on behalf of the drawees as well as on behalf of the drawees in case of need.

Subsequently, defendants had some correspondence with the local branch of Marshall & Co., with reference to the goods indented by them. In the result the defendants asked Marshall & Co., to secure certain payments from the Insurance Company; and as a fact Marshall & Co. (Glasgow) realised £18-4-2 from the Insurance Company in September 1921. The defendants made payments amounting in all to Rs. 1,500 in three items of Rs. 500 each to Marshall & Co., Bombay Branch. Before the further payment of Rs. 500 was made apparently Marshall & Co., failed in November 1921 and the last cheque of Rs. 500, which has been referred to in the evidence, was cancelled. After the adjudication order, the present plaintiffs, who are the Royal Bank of Scotland, received Rs. 500 from the trustee of the drawers' estate in part payment of this bill some time before August 1923. The Mercantile Bank made a demand for the sum in respect of this bill in April 1922 on the defendants.

Ultimately the present suit was filed by the Royal Bank of Scotland to recover the sum due from the defendants on the Bill of Exchange as holders in due course.

The defendants pleaded that the plaintiffs were merely agents for collection, that they throughout dealt with Marshall & Co., Bombay Branch, in respect of this bill, that they made substantial payments in respect of this bill to the Bombay Branch of Marshall & Co., that the plaintiffs were not holders in due course and that in any case the payments made by them to Marshall & Co., Bombay Branch, should be given credit for in this suit.

The difficulty has arisen in the case on account of the insolvency of Marshall & Co.

On these pleadings five issues have been raised: but the most important issue in the case is whether the plaintiffs are holders in due course. I shall deal with that question first.

On a consideration of the arguments and the provisions of the Negotiable Instruments Act, to which reference has been made, I have come to the conclusion that the plaintiffs were holders in due course. The expression "holder in due course" means any person who for consideration became the possessor of a promissory-note, Bill of Exchange or cheque payable to bearer. I need not refer to the second part of definition of this expression, as I do not think that it can apply to the facts of this case. The indorsement on the Bill of Exchange by Marshall & Co. is an indorsement in blank as defined by s. 16 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. The name of the Royal Bank of Scotland is not mentioned as indorsee and the indorsement in blank has not been converted into indorsement in full as contemplated by s. 49 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. It is a bill on which the only indorsement is an indorsement in blank. Having regard to Explanation (2) of s. 13 as amended, it is clear that this bill was at the date of the presentation payable to bearer though originally drawn as payable to the order of the drawers. The instrument was handed over to the Bank for collection with the indorsement in blank. Thus the plaintiffs became holders thereof. They were holders for consideration. It is proved in the case that Marshall & Co., had current account with this Bank, and it is common ground that Marshall & Co. were indebted at the time and afterwards to a large extent far in excess of the amount of the bill. The letter of lien, which is proved by the evidence recorded on commission, shows that they were entitled to a lien on this bill in respect of the amount due to them. That letter distinctly gives a lien to the Bank over all bills which might be sent to them for collection and also expressly mentions that they would have the right to sue in respect of those bills. It is also clear on the evidence that when this bill was sent for collection to the plaintiffs by Marshall & Co. they wrote to the defendants here informing them of the fact that the bill was sent for collection to the plaintiffs. The bill, as I have already stated, was presented in the first instance by the Mercantile Bank of India on behalf of the plaintiffs to the defendants. According to the provisions of s. 27, sub-s. (3), of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, (45 & 46 Vic. c. 61) undoubtedly the plaintiffs would be holders for value, and it is not contested, and it cannot be contested, that having regard to the definition of "consideration" according to the Indian Contract Act, the Bank holding the bill for collection with a lien on the bill would be holder for consideration. It may be that Marshall & Co. sent the bill for collection to them, but, having regard to the state of their account with the Bank and their agreement with the Bank, the Bank would have a right in respect of the amount of this bill. It is not necessary to refer to the cases bearing on the question as to whether the Bank would be holder for value when such a bill is sent to them for collection prior to the Statute of 1882 as the law has been stated in sub-s. (3) of s. 27 of the Statute: and here we are governed by the definition of "consideration" according to the Indian Contract Act. I may mention, however, that even prior to that enactment the position of a holder, to whom the drawer was indebted, obtaining possession of a Bill of Exchange payable at a future date has been clearly stated in the case of Currie v. Misa (1). The law with regard to the Bill of Exchange payable at the future date has been stated in both the judgments. In the judgment of Lord Coleridge, C. J., it is pointed out that it is too late to dispute that a pre-existing debt due to the transferee of a bill entitles him to all the rights of a holder for value. I am, therefore, satisfied that the plaintiffs were holders for value, that is, for consideration. There is no specific provision in the Indian Negotiable Instruments Act corresponding to s. 27, sub-s. (3) but there can be no doubt that the law in India is not different on this point. There is also the presumption mentioned in s. 118 according to which a holder is to be presumed to be a holder in due course until the contrary is proved.

That being so, it is clear that they are entitled to sue the acceptor in respect of this bill: and unless their position as holders in due course was in any sense modified in law by the fact that Marshall & Co., Bombay Branch, intervened in the matter and got the bill accepted, it is clear that they must succeed in the suit.

As regards the point made by Mr. Wadia on behalf of the defendants that the bill was really presented to the defendants by Marshall & Co., Bombay Branch, and accepted at their instance and subsequent payments were made to Marshall & Co., by the defendants in respect of the goods on that understanding, I have come to the conclusion that the legal position of the plaintiffs as holders in due course is not altered thereby in any way and that the defendants cannot claim to set off those payments against the amount of the bill. It is undoubtedly a case of hardship in the sense that the defendants have paid certain sums to Marshall & Co., to whom the money was payable in respect of the goods. But the defendants were duly informed of the fact that the bill was sent for collection to the plaintiffs, and though the term "documents against payments" was altered at the time the indorsement for acceptance was made, the bill must be deemed in my opinion to have been presented on behalf of the plaintiffs by the Mercantile Bank. The alteration in the term "documents against payment" does not affect the plaintiffs' rights to recover on the bill so long as the plaintiffs do not object. I do not see how the defendants can complain of this alteration which was assented to by them and made at their instance. Whatever the rights as between the defendants and the original drawers of the bill may be in consequence of the payments, which are proved to have been made by the defendants to Marshall & Co., I do not see how according to law the defendants can get credit for these payments in a suit by the holder in due course in respect of the bill accepted by them. Unfortunately the defendants made payments to Marshall & Co. after accepting the bill without a proper realisation of their legal liability in respect of the bill as acceptor to the holder in due course.

(1) (1875) 10 Ex. 153.

I shall now deal briefly with the issues as framed. On the first issue my finding is in the affirmative.

As regards the second issue my finding is in the negative. Though the bill was sent to them for collection by Marshall & Co., Glasgow, I cannot say that they were merely collecting agents in the sense that they had no other right or interest in respect of this bill. On this ground my finding is against the defendants.

My finding on third issue is in the affirmative. I cannot see how the maintainability of the suit by the plaintiffs can be affected by the bankruptcy of Marshall & Co. and in fact this point has not been pressed.

I have already stated my reasons in respect of the fourth issue and my finding is in the negative.

As regards the fifth issue my finding is in the negative. Though a copy of the letter, dated June 22, 1922, has been produced on behalf of the plaintiffs, no attempt has been made to prove that that letter was in fact delivered to the defendants; and in the course of the arguments Mr. Kemp did not press that point. I have not overlooked the fact that there was a demand by the Mercantile Bank of India in April 1922. At the same time I may add that it can make no difference in the result whether the demand was made or not.

Deducting the sum of Rs. 500, which has been admittedly received by the plaintiffs in respect of this bill, there will be a decree for Rs. 2,134-8-7 with interest at eight per cent. per annum from June 23, 1921, to this date, and costs and interest on judgment at six per cent. per annum.

As regards the costs of the commission, strictly perhaps the plaintiffs may be entitled to those costs. Having regard to the circumstances of the case, I think it is rather hard upon the defendants that they should have to pay the costs of the commission; and I am not quite satisfied that the plaintiffs might not have produced better materials here before taking out a commission, which might have afforded prima facie proof of the letter of lien and which might have dispensed with the necessity of the commission. Under the circumstances I direct that the costs of the commission should be borne by the plaintiffs.

Z. K. Suit decreed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 272 OF 1923.

January 21, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Ryves and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

Lala SANT LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BANI PRASAD AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 19—Acknowledgment of liability, what amounts to—Letter admitting existence of running account—Precedents, value of.

In every case in which the plaintiff claims exemption from the bar of limitation on the basis of an acknowledgment of liability made by the defendant, the document relied on as constituting the acknowledgment must be interpreted by its own language and it is not very helpful to cite rulings as to the meaning to be attached to a document in another case unless the wording of the documents, in both cases, is the same. [p. 986, col. 1.]

In a suit for accounts the plaintiff relied upon a letter written by the defendant in which the latter admitted the existence of a running account between himself and the plaintiff and went on to say that his representatives would compare the accounts and pay what was found to be due:

Held, that the letter contained an acknowledgment of liability within the meaning of s. 19 of the Limitation Act and gave a fresh start of limitation. [ibid.]

Jogeshwar Roy v. Raj Narain Mitter, 31 C. 195; 8 C. W. N. 168, distinguished.

Second appeal from a decree of the Additional District Judge, Saharanpur, dated the 30th November 1922.

Mr. Nehal Chand, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—In this appeal the short point is whether the letter sent by the defendants on the 20th of January 1917 is an admission of liability within the meaning of s. 19 of the Indian Limitation Act.

The suit was one for balance of account and admittedly was time-barred unless limitation was extended by this letter.

Both Courts have found that it was a clear admission of liability within the meaning of that section. The decisive words are that the writer admitted the existance of a running account between the parties and went on to say that his representatives would in Phagun or Chait compare accounts and pay what was found to be due.

The learned Counsel for the appellants has relied on the case of Jogeshwar Roy v. Raj Narain Mitter (1). In every case of this kind the document in question has to be interpreted by its own language and it is not very helpful to cite rulings as to the meaning to be attached to a document in another case unless the wording is the same.

The case of Jogeshwar Roy v. Raj Narain Mitter (1) is entirely distinguishable from this case. That was not a case of accounts between the parties and the wording of that letter is very different from the present one.

In our opinion the matter is really concluded by the Privy Council case—Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand (2).

We, therefore, dismiss the appeal but without costs as the respondents are not represented.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 31 C. 195; 8 C. W. N. 168.
(2) 33 C. 1047; 4 C. L. J. 94; 8 Bom. L. R. 501; 10 C. W. N. 874; 1 M. L. T. 199; 3 A. L. J. 525; 16 M. L. J. 300; 2 N. L. R. 130; 33 I. A. 165 (P. C.).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 1885 OF 1922.

January 15, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Ewart Greaves, Kt., and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

JNANENDRA NATH SINGHA ROY —PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Sm. RAKHYAKALI DEBI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Tenancy, transfer of—Recognition by landlord—Dakhilas granted to transferee as sarbarahakar, effect of.

In order to determine whether there has been recognition by the landlord of a transfer of tenancy, the Court should not look to the words used in the dakhilas, such as "sarbarahakar", etc., but has to consider whether in fact there has been a recognition, Probhabati Dasi v. Taibaturinessa Chaudhurani, 20 Ind. Cas. 664; 19 C. L. J. 62 at p. 65; 17 C. W. N. 1088, relied on.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Nadia, dated the 8th of May 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, Ranaghat, dated the 2nd of September 1921.

Babu Rupendra Kumar Mitra, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff in a rent-suit against a decision of the District Judge of Nadia confirming a decision of the Munsif of Ranaghat. The landlord sued for rent for the years 1324 to 1326 and the defence was that the tenancy was a permanent one, and, secondly, that the tenancy had been transferred to one Lolit who had been subsequently recognised by the landlord as his tenant. The First Court accepted the contentions of the defence and held that the tenancy was a permanent one and that Lolit had been recognised and in the result dismissed the suit for rent. The lower Appellate Court held that the transfer had not been established inasmuch as the deed which purported to transfer the tenancy had not been proved and that it was not established that the tenancy was a permanent one and the learned Judge went on to find that by virtue of certain dakhilas it was established that the landlord had recognised Lolit as his tenant. In the circumstances, he agreed with the conclusion of the First Court and dismissed the suit.

It is urged before us, firstly, that the dakhilas do not establish the recognition of Lolit, and, secondly, that the defendant's case having been based on a deed of gift to Lolit he cannot rely on the rent-receipts as an answer to the landlord's claim. It appears that the dakhilas which were produced cover the period from 1318 to 1323. The rent-receipts for the years 1321 to 1322 while showing the tenancy as standing in the name of one Pran Hari Banerji show in addition Lolit as sarbarahakar. The other receipts, that is, those for the years 1318 to 1323, show Baranashi the husband of the defendant as a tenant and Lolit as being the person at present in possession. As has been pointed out in the case of Probhabati Dasi v. Taibaturinessa Chaudhurani (1) the Court cannot hereby look at words like "sarbarahakar" and similar words but has to consider whether in fact there has been a recognition. It seems to us that on the facts of the case and as shown by the dakhilas there was in the present case a recognition by the landlord of Lolit as his tenant. The first point, accordingly, fails.

(1) 20 Ind. Cas. 664; 19 C. L. J. 62 at p. 65; 17 C. W. N. 1088.

So far as the second point is concerned we do not see why, even if the defendant's case based on the deed of gift failed, she should not rely, as she has done, on the dakhilas.

The result is that we think that the judgments of both the Courts below are correct and that this appeal must be dismissed.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND EXECUTION OF DECREE APPEAL No. 1 OF 1925.

February 2, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Daniels, J. C.

SURAJ BAKHSH SINGH AND OTHERS —DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BANS BAHADUR SINGH—PLAINTIFF —RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 151—Pre-emption decree—Mistake in stating amount payable by decree-holder—Payment of correct amount—Amendment of decree after date fixed for payment—Inherent power of Court.

Under s. 151 of the C. P. C. the Courts have very wide powers to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court.

By a clerical mistake the decretal amount entered in a decree for pre-emption was in excess of the amount which the Court had declared to be payable. The decree-holder paid the correct amount of the decree within the time specified in the decree and obtained possession of the property. After the expiry of the period fixed in the decree for payment the judgment-debtor filed an objection to the effect that the decree had not been complied with and prayed that possession should be restored to him. Thereupon the decree-holder made an application for amendment of the decree and the Court amended the decree and corrected the mistake as to the amount payable by the decree-holder:

Held, that the Court had power to make the correction under s. 151 of the C. P. C. and that the power had been properly exercised.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 1st September 1924, upholding that of the Subordinate Judge, Sultanpur, dated the 5th January 1924.

Mr. Ghulam Hasan, for the Appellants.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal in execution proceedings. The facts of the case are peculiar. The suit was one for pre-emption. The amount of money really payable by the pre-emptor to the original vendee was Rs. 2,500. The ostensible price had been Rs. 5,000 but the remaining Rs. 2,500 was payable by the original vendee to various creditors, and it admittedly was never paid by him. These facts were stated in the judgment of the learned District Judge, but by a clerical error in the conclusion of his judgment he entered the sum payable by the plaintiff as Rs. 5,000 instead of Rs. 2,500. He allowed six months time for payment. The pre-emptor, being possibly unaware of the mistake in the decree deposited within the six months the sum of Rs. 2,500 which was really due from him. This was on 25th January 1923. He was given an order for possession on the following day. On 8th February the judgment-debtor filed objections to the effect that the decree had not been complied with and, therefore, possession should be restored to him. On this, the decree-holder filed an application under s. 152 for correction of the mistake in the decree and judgment. The learned District Judge Mr. Cole, corrected the mistake without sending notice to the present appellant on the ground that there was no time to issue notice and the matter was so clear that notice was not necessary. Strictly speaking notice should have been issued, but the learned District Judge was about to go on leave preparatory to retirement and was probably anxious to dispose of the case himself before he left. The appellant now objects, as he objected in the Courts below, that it was not competent to the District Judge to correct his decree after the six months period allowed for payment of the money had expired. Under s. 151 of the Code the Courts are given very wide powers to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court. In my opinion these powers are wide enough to cover the correction which has been made in this case. It would be flagrantly unjust that the respondent should be deprived of the fruits of his decree by reason of a purely clerical mistake for which he was no way responsible. In my opinion the order of the Court below is correct and I accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 308 OF 1924.

December 13, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

VITHOBA—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA THROUGH D. C., NAGPUR—DEFENDANT No. 1, ABAJI BALAJI SADAN—DEFENDANT No. 2—NON-APPLICANTS NOS. 1 AND 2.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 3—Parties—Joinder of defendant against wishes of plaintiff, whether permissible—Power of Court—Practice.

Ordinarily the plaintiff who comes into Court is the dominus litis and it must always be left to him to choose his opponent against whom he has to claim relief in the suit, and it is not the look out of the Court or of any other third person, to see whether somebody else must be allowed to intrude into the case as a co-defendant, against the plaintiff's will, simply because he represents to the Court that he is a person who would be affected by the decision. [p. 988, col. 2.]

Nobody is bound or affected by a decision to which he is not properly made a party, and it is not the intention of the law to let third persons ventilate their own grievances in, and thus derive profit from, a suit commenced by another man at his own cost and for his own benefit. [ibid.]

Application for revision of an order of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Nagpur, dated the 16th August 1924, in Civil Suit No. 157 of 1924.

Mr. R. N. Padhye, for the Applicant.

Mr. P. Lobo, for Non-Applicant No. 1.

Mr. G. R. Pradhan, for Non-Applicant No. 2.

ORDER.—This is a revision under s. 115, C. P. C., against an order dated 16th August 1924 making Abaji non-applicant No. 2 co-defendant in the suit. The suit, as laid, was by plaintiff as a lessee against his lessor, the Secretary of State, as the sole defendant for a construction of deed of lease dated 1st February 1921, and for a declaration that the land in dispute is covered by it, and that the plaintiff is entitled to be maintained in possession thereof as such lessee. The suit was instituted on 3rd July 1924.

The case came on for hearing on 16th August 1924, and on that day Abaji claiming to be interested in the subject-matter in dispute applied to the Court for being joined as a co-defendant. The ground of his claim as set forth in his petition is that he was himself a grantee of the leasehold rights in respect of the land in dispute in the case, from the Government, under an indenture executed in his favour by the latter. He urged that he was the only person who would be affected by the decision of the present case and was, therefore, a necessary party, and that his presence before the Court was necessary in order that all the questions involved in the suit may be adjudicated upon effectually and completely. The Court of first instance without caring to ascertain further facts on which the applicant Abaji based his claim to be so joined, and without even asking either the plaintiff or the defendant No. 1 about the necessity of joining him as a co-defendant, passed an order that he be joined as defendant No. 2. The plaint was ordered to be amended then and there, and the plaintiff had to carry out the order of the Court, though under protest. This procedure is quite irregular.

Ordinarily the plaintiff who comes into Court is the dominus litis and it must always be left to him to choose his opponent against whom he has to claim the relief in the suit. No stranger has any business to intrude into the case and force himself upon a plaintiff who does not want him and who does not claim any relief against him. The plaintiff is the best Judge of his own interest. If he seeks relief against a particular individual and impleads that individual as a sole defendant, it is not the look out of the Court or of any other third person, to see whether somebody else must be allowed to intrude into the case as a co-defendant, against the plaintiff's will, simply because that third person represents to the Court that he is a person who would be affected by the decision. The first principle of law is that nobdoy would be bound or affected by the decision to which he is not properly made a party. So far as I can see it is not the intention of law to let third persons ventilate their own grievances in, and thus derive profit from a suit commenced by another at his own cost and for his own benefit. What Abaji seeks to bring about is to get an adjudication of his own rights under a subsequent lease alleged to have been granted to him by the Secretary of State. His claim, therefore, is by way of antagonism to the claim of the plaintiff. The frame of the suit as laid does not call for any adjudication upon the question of the competency of the Secretary of State to grant this subsequent lease to Abaji. All that the plaintiff claims is a declaration that upon a proper construction of the terms of his lease dated 1st February 1921 the land in suit was comprised therein. For the purpose of giving this relief to the plaintiff the presence of Abaji is not necessary, and he has been improperly joined as a party to the suit, by the Court below.

No doubt if the plaintiff had chosen, he could have framed his suit in such a manner as to drag into controversy the so-called title of Abaji under a lease of a subsequent date, and claim an adjudication which would bind not only the Secretary of State but also the latter's so-called subsequent grantee. But plaintiff has chosen to limit the scope of his suit and he cannot be forced to enlarge it only to give facility to Abaji to have his own claim to the land in suit entertained and decided. It is open to Abaji to get the necessary adjudication as regards his rights in a suit of his own.

For all these reasons, I am of opinion that the order dated 16th August 1924 was irregular and unwarranted by the circumstances of the case and outside the scope of the suit as laid. To allow this order to stand unreversed would be to force plaintiff to submit to unnecessary harassment and to take up a larger burden of fighting with two persons, where he has chosen, for reasons best known to himself, to fight his battle only with his lessor. I, therefore, think that this is a fit case for interference in revision. The order dated 16th August 1924 is, therefore, set aside and the name of Abaji as co-defendant No. 2 is expunged from the record. Costs of this petition for revision will be borne by Abaji. Pleader's fee Rs. 10.

G. R. D. Order set aside.
Z. K.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 96 OF 1924.

December 19, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Devadoss and Mr. Justice Wallace.

BALAGURUSWAMI NAICKEN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GURUSWAMI NAICKEN AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 20, Sch. I, Art. 182 (5)—Execution of decree—Deposit of money to credit of suit—Application for payment by decree-holder, whether step-in-aid of execution—Mortgagee from judgment-debtor—Direction to pay decree-holder—Payment into Court long after—Limitation, fresh start of.

In order that an application for payment out of money in Court by a decree-holder may amount to an application to take a step-in-aid of execution under Art. 182 (5) of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, the money must have been realised in execution of the decree. [p. 990, col. 1.]

Where an amount of money is in Court to the credit of a suit and such amount has not been the proceeds of execution, an application for payment out cannot be said to be an execution application or an application in aid of execution. In such a case the plaintiff has only to apply to the Court for payment and the Court makes the payment without reference to the judgment-debtor in the suit. By asking for payment of the amount in Court, the plaintiff does not do anything to aid the execution of the decree. [p. 990, col. 2.]

Kuppuswami Chettiar v. Rajagopala Iyer, 70 Ind. Cas. 324; 45 M. 466; (1922) M. W. N. 113; 42 M. L. J. 303; 15 L. W. 348; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 79; 32 M. L. T. 27 and Narayanan Nair v. Raman Nair, 82 Ind. Cas. 743; 20 L. W. 190; (1924) M. W. N. 674; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 131, relied on.

An agent who can give the creditor the benefit of s. 20 of the Limitation Act has to act within the terms of his authority. If he exceeds his authority or does something which is not actually covered by his authority, he cannot bind the principal so as to give the creditor the benefit of s. 20. [p. 991, col. 2; p. 992, col. 1.]

Where a judgment-debtor executed a mortgage and directed the mortgagee to pay the mortgage amount immediately to the decree-holder and get a receipt but the mortgagee paid the money into Court more than a year thereafter and the decree-holder withdrew it:

Held, that the mortgagee was not a person duly authorized and that the payment by him did not fall under s. 20 of the Limitation Act so as to save the bar of limitation. [p. 992, col. 2.]

Linsell v. Bonsor, (1836) 2 Beng. (N. C.) 241; 2 Scott 399; 1 Hodges 305; 5 L. J. C. P. 40; 132 E. R. 95 and Alagappa Chettiar v. Subramania Pandia Thevan, 23 Ind. Cas. 810; 26 M. L. J. 509, relied on.

Appeal against an order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Coimbatore, dated the 20th December 1923, in E. P. No. 116 of 1923, in O. S. No. 64 of 1915.

Mr. Watrap S. Subramania Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. M. Krishnaswamy Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The question involved in this appeal is whether the execution of the mortgage decree in favour of the plaintiffs is barred by limitation. The Subordinate Judge held that the application for execution presented by the plaintiffs is not barred by limitation and the defendant has preferred this appeal.

The mortgage decree in favour of the plaintiffs was passed on 14th September 1916. An execution application was filed on 25th September 1917. It was dismissed on 17th October 1918. The present application is dated 9th March 1923. The contention of the plaintiffs is that a certain sum of money in Court was paid out to them by order dated 31st March 1920 and the cheque was actually issued on 1st April 1920 and that their application is, therefore, within three years from the date of the order for payment out. On the other hand Mr. Subramania Iyer for the appellant contends that the application for payment out of the sum of money in Court is not a step-in-aid of execution and, therefore, plaintiff's application for execution is barred. The defendant's guardian obtained leave of the Court for mortgaging the defendant's property for the purpose of raising money to pay off the plaintiff's debt. Sanction was given to the guardian to raise money in 1917 and on 14th October 1918 he hypothecated the defendant's properties to one Kasturi Naicker by Ex. I. The recital in Ex. I is "particulars of receipt of the said amount Rs. 17,690 is the amount received by way of direction given (to you) for setting and discharging the sum (payable) under the decree obtained against the said minor by Appanackenpettai K. Guruswami Naicken and others in O. S. No. 64 of 1915 on the file of the said Sub-Court and for obtaining receipt and retaining it as a title-deed herefor." The mortgagee seems to have paid the amount into Court on 19th March 1920 whereupon the plaintiffs applied for an order for payment out.

The question is whether in the circumstances an application for an order for payment out by the Court is a step-in-aid of execution. It is well settled that an application for payment out of money in Court by a decree-holder is a step-in-aid of execution if the money in Court was realised in execution of the decree. Venkatarayalu v. Narasimha (1), Karala Varma Valiya Rajah v. Shangaram (2), Kooramayya v. Krishnamma Naidu (3) and Bapuchand Jethiram Gujar v. Mugutrao (4). In this case the money in Court was not realised by the execution of the plaintiff's decree. The plaintiff's execution petition was dismissed so far back as 17th October 1918. The money was paid into Court to the credit of the suit and the plaintiffs applied for payment to them of the amount in Court. Where an amount of money is in Court to the credit of a suit and such amount has not been the proceeds of execution, an application for payment out cannot be said to be an execution application or an application in aid of execution. In such a case the plaintiff has only to apply to the Court for payment and the Court makes the payment without reference to the judgment-debtor in the suit. By asking for payment of the amount in Court, the plaintiff does not do anything to aid the execution of the decree. Where money is realised in execution of the decree, he has to ask the Court for an order to pay the money to him, and the Court, after considering whether there are other claimants in respect of the amount, passes an order in favour of the applicant. Such an order is a step-in-aid of execution. But, where the money is to the credit of the suit and all that is required of the plaintiff is to make an application for payment, it cannot be said that what he does is a step-in-aid of the execution of the decree.

In Kuppuswami Chettiar v. Rajagopala Iyer (5), Ayling and Venkatasubba Rao, JJ., held that an application to be a step-in-aid of execution should be one made in a pending execution application. Ayling, J. in delivering the leading judgment of the case differed from an observation of Ramesam, J., that "there is no warrant for the view that an application to take a step-in-aid of execution should be made "in execution, meaning, apparently, while an execution is pending." The application for the transfer of a decree from one Court to another for the purpose of execution is a step-in-aid of execution; and the application is in the form of an ordinary execution application with the prayer that the decree be transmitted to another Court for execution. Such an application is a step-in-aid of execution. In such a case it is necessary that the decree should be transferred to another Court for the purpose of execution; and, therefore, what is done in order to execute the decree is considered to be a step-in-aid of execution. But where the act of the plaintiff is not in furtherance of execution or in a pending

(1) 2 M. 174: 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 392.
(2) 16 M. 452; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1021.
(3) 17 M. 165; 3 M. L. J. 296; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 113.
(4) 22 B. 340; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 809.
(5) 70 Ind. Cas. 324; 45 M. 466; (1922) M. W. N. 113; 42 M. L. J. 303; 15 L. W. 348; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 79; 32 M. L. T. 27.

execution, his act cannot be said to be one in aid of execution.

Mr. Krishnaswami Iyer, for the respondents relies upon Thangi Shettithi v. Duja Shethi (6), as supporting his contention that the order of the Court for payment out is a step-in-aid of execution. That case is distinguishable from the present case, as in that case an order of the Court was necessary for paying out to the plaintiff the amount of Rs. 500 paid into Court as security for costs. There the learned Judges observed as the money was deposited only as a security an order of the Court was necessary to make it available for payment towards the decree amount. An application for such a purpose and for payment out of the money is thus clearly necessary; and such an application is one in execution of the decree itself. In this case as we have already observed no such order was necessary in order to enable the plaintiffs to draw out the money standing to the credit of the suit.

If payment is made to the decree-holder by the judgment-debtor or by anybody on his behalf, or by the Receiver appointed by the Court to be in charge of the defendant's properties it would not amount to a step-in-aid of execution. In Appasami Naickan v. Jotha Naickan (7), it was held that payment by the Receiver appointed by a Court out of the rents and profits of the defendant's properties was not a step-in-aid of execution. The Receiver was not appointed for the purpose of execution; he was appointed during the pendency of the suit, and the Court paid to the plaintiff the amount that was collected by the Receiver and paid by him into Court. The learned Judges observed at p. 452 "We do not think that it can be properly said that such money was collected or paid in execution of the decree, though no doubt it was as a consequence of the decree that the appellants plaintiffs became entitled to it. The appellants in demanding the payment of these current profits of the estate did nothing towards the execution of the decree, for the decree did not deal with these profits." In the present case the mortgagee paid into Court a sum of money which he was directed to pay directly to the decree-holder; and the Court paid the money out to the plaintiffs on their applying for it. The Court, therefore, simply acted as the agent of the mortgagee and not as a Court executing the decree. Jackson, J. in a recent case in Narayanan Nair v. Raman Nair (8), observed that the "mere payment, however, is not a step-in-aid of execution and it is only a petition put into certify such payment that can constitute a step-in-aid of execution such as will give a fresh starting point of limitation under Art. 182 (5), of the Indian Limitation Act." We hold that in this case the payment out by the Court to the plaintiffs on their application on 31st March 1920 is not a step-in-aid of execution and the plaintiff's application, therefore, is barred by limitation.

The next contention is that the payment towards the decree amount was made by a person duly authorised on behalf of the defendant and such payment having been made by the Court as the agent of the judgment-debtor and the payment appearing in the hand-writing of the person making the same by reason of the cheque having been signed by the Court, the terms of s. 20 of the Limitation Act have been satisfied and, therefore, the application is within time. In the first place it is to be noted that the mortgagee was not authorised to pay the amount into Court. The terms of Ex. I are clear. The guardian of the defendant did, with the sanction of the Court, execute Ex. I a mortgage in favour of Kasturi Naicker and directed him to pay the amount to the plaintiff and obtain a receipt from him and to retain it as a title. The mortgagee, therefore, was not authorised to pay the money into the Court. Secondly, the document was executed on 14th October 1918 and the mortgagee was asked to pay the amount without any delay, for in the particulars of consideration the recital is "Rs. 17,690 the amount received by way of direction given (to you) for settling and discharging the sum (payable) under the decree obtained against the said minor by Appanackenpettai K. Guruswami Naicken and others in O. S. No. 64 of 1915." The mortgagee, therefore, was not authorised to keep money with him for a considerable time, i. e., for more than a year and a half and then to pay it into Court. The agent who can give the creditor the benefit of s. 20 has to act within the terms of his authority. If he exceeds his authority or does something which is not actually covered by his authority he cannot bind the principal so as to give the creditor the benefit of s. 20 of the Limitation Act. We think this case comes within the principle of the decision in Linsell v. Bonsor (9). In that case the defendant's agent had instructions to offer the claimant a part of the debt in discharge of the whole. The claimant refused to take the money on those terms and the agent paid it in part discharge. It was held that this was not a part payment by defendant to take the case out of the operation of the Statute of Limitations. In Alagappa Chettiar v. Subramania Pandia Thevan (10), it was held following Linsell v. Bonsor (9), that though the mortgagee had authority to pay off the debt in full, he had no authority to make a pure payment of interest as such so as to bring the case within s. 20 of the Indian Limitation Act.

(6) 48 Ind. Cas. 226; 35 M. L. J. 575; (1918) M. W. N. 748; 8 L. W. 519; 24 M. L. T. 483.

(7) 22 M. 448; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 321.

(8) 82 Ind. Cas. 743; 20 L. W. 190; (1924) M. W. N. 674; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 131.

Mr. T. M. Krishnaswami Iyer relied upon in Govindasami Pillai v. Dosai Goundan (11), as supporting his contention. In that case a certain amount paid by the Government under the Land Acquisition Act into Court was paid out to the decree-holder. It was held that the payment of that amount was part payment of the principal of the decree debt and the Judge by whose order the payment was made, was an agent duly authorised by the judgment-debtor to make it and the fact of the payment appeared in the handwriting of the Judge within s. 20 of the Limitation Act. This case is distinguishable from the present case on the facts. In that case a portion of the hypothecated property was acquired by the Government under the Land Acquisition Act and Rs. 3,400 was deposited in Court for the Government to the credit of the suit and the decree-holder drew the amount from Court. There the money was paid into Court by the Government under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act. Seeing that the land acquired was subject to a mortgage and there was a decree for the sale of the property, the Government paid, the compensation for the land acquired into Court as it was bound to do. In the present case the mortgagee was not required by the mortgagor to pay money into Court. He chose to pay into Court out of his own sweet will and pleasure when it suited him. In the first place he had no power to pay it nearly one and a half years after the execution of Ex. I; and, in the second place, he was not asked to pay the amount into Court but was asked to pay the money directly to the decree-holder and obtain a receipt from him. Therefore, he was not a person specially authorised to pay the amount into Court so that it may be paid out to the decree-holder. This point also is found in favour of the appellant.

In the result the appeal is allowed and the order of the Subordinate Judge is set aside with costs throughout.

V. N. V. Appeal allowed.
Z. K.

(9) (1836) 2 Beng. (N. C.) 241; 2 Scott. 399; 1 Hodges 305; 5 L. J. C. P. 40; 132 E. R. 95.
(10) 23 Ind. Cas. 810; 26 M. L. J. 509.
(11) 68 Ind. Cas. 100; 41 M. L. J. 423; 14 L. W. 320; 92 1) M. W. N. 683; 44 M. 971.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 492 OF 1921.
EXECUTION MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION No. 172 OF 1923.
June 30, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.

FIRM OF GOKALDAS KHATAOO—PLAINTIFFS—DECREE-HOLDERS—APPLICANTS
versus
FIRM OF VASSUMAL WADHUMAL—DEFENDANTS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 50 (2), O. XXX, scope of—Suit against firm, nature of—Deceased partner, whether party—Legal representatives, whether can be proceeded against.

Order XXI, r. 50 (2), C. P. C., is limited in its operation to the case of a partner, who is living at the date of the decree and the estate of a deceased partner in the hands of his legal representatives, as such, cannot be proceeded against under this rule. [p. 994, col. 1.]

Ellis v. Wadeson, (1899) 1 Q. B. D. 714 at p. 718; 68 L. J. Q. B. 604; 47 W. R. 420; 80 L. T. 508; 15 T. L. R. 274, referred to.

Jivraj Laloobhai Patel v. Bhagvandas Gordhandas, 68 Ind Cas. 627; 24 Bom. L. R. 1037; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 66, dissented from.

Order XXX of the C. P. C. is not intended to recognize a firm as a legal entity but to provide, subject to certain limitations, a convenient mode of describing the partners who compose the firm in the plaint and in the summons. [ibid.]

A suit against a firm is in effect a suit against the individual partners of the firm and a dead partner cannot be assumed to be a party to the action. [ibid.]

Ellis v. Wadesen, (1899) 1 Q. B. D. 714 at p. 718; 68 L. J. Q. B. 604; 47 W. R. 420; 80 L. T. 508; 15 T. L. R. 274, referred to.

Mr. Fatehchand Assudamal, for the Applicants.

Mr. Assudamal Rewachand, for the Opponent.

ORDER.—The judgment-creditors have attached a sum of Rs. 21,118 in the hands of the Central Bank of India, Ld., and a further sum of Rs. 26,630 in the hands of the Mercantile Bank of India, Ld., as belonging to the firm of Vissumal Vadhumal who are the judgment-debtors in the suit. Both these sums are deposited in the two banks in the names of Jethanand, Pribhdas and Ghanshamdas. One of them, Jethanand has applied under O. XXI, r. 58, C. P. C. for raising attachment and contends that the money deposited in the two banks does not belong to the firm of Vissumal Wadhumal but to the minor Lachmandas son of Vissumal. In consequence of this application for raising attachment, the judgment-creditors have applied that leave may be granted to them under O. XXI, r. 50, C. P. C., to execute the decree against Lachmandas as the legal representative of Vissumal who was one of the partners of this firm. There are similar applications in three other suits filed by other creditors against the same debtors. All the applications have been tried together and the evidence recorded in this application and in execution application No. 998 of 1923 has been treated as evidence in all the applications.

There is very little dispute as to the facts. The firm of Vissumal Wadhumal was started by Vissumal several years ago as manager of the joint family consisting of himself and his brother Goumal who was then a minor six or seven years old. Vissumal died in October 1918. Before his death he entered into certain forward contracts for bajri of Mangh 1974 vaida which resulted in a loss. Certain suits including Suit No. 991 of 1918 were filed after Vissumal's death for recovery of this loss against the firm of Vissumal Wadhumal. Goumal who managed the family business after Vissumal's death defended the suits and pleaded inter alia that the contracts were wagering. Suit No. 991 of 1918 was treated as a test suit, and though keenly contested was decreed against this firm by Raymond, A. J. C. on 17th November 1921. Decrees in other suits followed.

It appears that on 14th November 1920 after the institution of some of the suits against the firm of Vissumal Wadhumal, disputes relating to the severance of the joint family tie and partition of property between Goumal and Lachmandas the minor son of Vissumal represented by his mother Tejibai were referred to arbitration, and on 12th January 1921 an award was passed partitioning the property between them. The business of Vissumal Wadhumal which was treated as a joint family business was allotted to Goumal as a going concern, he being held liable for the debts of this business. Certain property including the moneys now in dispute which were, however, realized by the sale of the immoveable properties belonging to the family was allotted to the minor, and the three persons in whose names this money has been deposited appointed as managers for the minors property. This award was objected to by Goumal and has recently been set aside by Aston, A. J. C., under s. 15 of the Indian Arbitration Act. The revision application filed against his order is still pending.

The application for attachment is misconceived. It is not disputed that the money under attachment has come out of the sale proceeds of the immoveable property belonging to the joint family. It did not form part of the assets of the business of Vissumal Wadhumal. At the date of the attachment it was not in the possession of the firm of Vissumal Wadhumal who are the judgment-debtors in this case, or in the possession of any person holding in trust for them within the meaning of O. XXI, r. 60, C. P. C. The money was held in trust for the minor as the minor's property and the applicant Jethanand is, therefore, entitled to have the attachment raised as having been improperly effected. The fact that the award has been set aside, also does not help the plaintiffs. The managers may have to account to Goumal for the money in their hands if the revision application is dismissed. They still hold it, whether rightly or wrongly, on behalf of the minor. At most it may be treated as the property of the joint family consisting of Goumal and the minor Lachmandas. This application is not for attachment either of the right, title and interest of Goumal in the joint family property or for attachment of the joint family property to pay off the debts incurred by the manager, for the joint family benefit or necessity, so as to enable the minor to raise proper issues as to his liability. As an application for attachment of property belonging to the firm of Vissumal Wadhumal it must fail. The subsequent application for leave to execute the decree under O. XXI, r. 50, C. P. C. against Lachmandas as the legal representative of a deceased partner is equally incompetent.

Clause (2) of O. XXI, r. 50, C. P. C. is in my opinion limited in its operation to the case of a partner who was living at the date of the decree. Jivraj Laloobhai Patel v. Bhagvandas Gordhandas (1) Shah, Ag. C. J. has taken a different view. With all due respect, I beg to differ. A firm as such has no legal existence in our jurisprudence. Order XXX, C. P. C. which corresponds to O. XLVIII. R. S. C. is not intended to recognize a firm as a legal entity but to provide, subject to certain limitations a convenient mode of describing the partners who compose the firm in the plaint and in the summons. The suit is in effect a suit against the individual partners of the firm sued, and as pointed out by Romer, L. J. in Ellis v. Wadeson (2) a dead man cannot be sued and so a dead partner cannot be assumed to be a party to the action. Similarly no judgment except a judgment nunc pro tunc can be passed against a dead man. If a suit instituted against a firm or a decree passed against a firm is in substance a suit, and a decree against the individual partners of the firm, it would follow that there is no decree against a partner of the firm who died either before the action or even before judgment, and, therefore, the provisions of O. XXI, r. 50, cl. (2), C. P. C. would have no application.

This view can hardly be said to be either unjust or not to have been contemplated by the Legislature. Order XXX, C. P. C., is intended to save the plaintiffs the trouble of making inquiries to find out the names of partners and to avoid unnecessary delay in the disposal of suits pending service on partners. Ordinarily a plaintiff expects to realize his debt from the assets of the firm or at most out of the private property of the partner who is served under O. XXX, r. 3, C. P. C. But r. (1) affords him an opportunity of finding out of the names of the partners of the defendant firm after service and if he is not content with realizing his claim from the assets of the firm and wishes to enforce it against the estate of a deceased partner, it is his business to be vigilant and to apply for joining the legal representatives of the deceased partner at the proper time and before judgment. If he does not do so, he has to thank himself.

Vissumal having died prior to the institution of this suit, this application under O. XXI, r. 50, cl. (2) also fails.

I order the attachment to be raised and dismiss the execution application with costs and dismiss the application under O. XXI, r. 50, C. P. C., but make no separate order for costs.

K. S. D. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 68 Ind. Cas. 627; 24 Bom. L. R. 1037; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 66.

(2) (1899) 1 Q. B. D. 714 at p. 718; 68 L. J. Q. B. 604; 47 W. R. 420; 80 L. T. 508; 15 T. L. R. 274.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2284 OF 1921.

March 17, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fforde and Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof.

LACHHA MAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

HIRDE NATH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II, r. 2—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 56 (1)—Contract for sale of land—Agreement to sell to third person—Injunction, suit for—Specific performance, subsequent suit for, whether maintainable.

The usual mode of proceeding in case of a breach of contract for the sale of land is to bring a suit for specific performance of the contract. The party aggrieved by the breach is not entitled to two reliefs in respect of the breach of such a contract, one by way of injunction restraining the defendant from selling the property to a third person and the other by way of specific performance. He is entitled only to one relief, namely, a suit for specific performance in which he can add a claim for compensation. The dismissal, therefore, of a suit for an injunction restraining the vendor from selling the property to a third person does not operate as a bar to the maintainability of a subsequent suit for specific performance. [p. 995, col. 2.]

Second appeal against the decision of the Sub-Judge, Delhi, dated the 19th May 1921.

Lala Sardha Ram, R. S., and Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellants.

Lala Jagan Nath Aggarwal (represented by Lala Har Gopal and Lala Amar Nath Chona), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff from the decision of the Trial

Judge who dismissed the suit on the ground that it was barred by the provision of O. II, r. 2, of the C. P. C.

The only question which arises for determination in this appeal is whether or not the suit is so barred.

The facts out of which the appeal arises are shortly as follows:—

On the 21st September 1918, Hirde Nath acting on behalf of himself, as mukhtar for Pushkar Nath and as guardian for Brij Mohan, a minor entered into an agreement with the plaintiff to sell to the latter a certain plot of land. On foot of this agreement, the plaintiff paid to Hirde Nath a sum of Rs. 99 as earnest money. On the 23rd September, 1918, the plaintiff paid the defendant a further sum of Rs. 100 and the latter thereupon executed a formal agreement for the sale of the property in question. On the 27th of January, 1919, the plaintiff paid the defendant Rs. 200 on foot of the same transaction. The defendant, however, instead of completing the sale entered into a contract to sell the same property to another person, whereupon the plaintiff on the 28th of August, 1919, brought a suit against the defendants for a permanent injunction to restrain them from carrying out this latter sale.

This suit, was dismissed on the ground that a suit for an injunction did not lie, and the plaintiff then brought the present suit for specific performence of his agreement, with an alternative claim for damages by way of compensation.

Mr. Har Gopal for the defendant, contends that the present suit is prohibited by cl. 3 of O. II, r. 2 of the C. P. C. That clause reads as follows:—

"A person entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of such reliefs; but if he omits, except with the leave of the Court, to sue for all such reliefs, he shall not afterwards, sue for any relief so omitted."

Mr. Sardha Ram for the plaintiff contends, firstly, that the two suits did not arise out of the same cause of action inasmuch as cause of action of the first suit was the agreement by the defendant to sell the property in question to some person other than the plaintiff, whereas the cause of action in the present suit is the breach by the defendant of his contract to sell the land to the plaintiff. He argues, secondly, that even if the cause of action in the two suits can be held to be the same a permanent injunction was not a relief which the plaintiff could sue for on foot of such a cause of action.

I do not think it necessary to decide whether or not the cause of action in the two suits is the same, for it is quite clear that a suit for a permanent injunction did not lie. The plaintiff was not entitled to come to the Court for such a relief in respect of the present cause of action. This is quite clear from the provision of s. 56 (i) of the Specific Relief Act, which provides that "an injunction cannot be granted when equally efficacious relief can certainly be obtained by any other usual mode of proceedings, except in case of breach of trust." The usual mode of proceeding on breach of a contract for the sale of lands is to bring a suit for specific performance of the contract. The plaintiff, therefore, was not entitled to two reliefs in respect of the breach of a contract, one by way of injunction and the other by specific performance. He was entitled only to the one relief, namely, a suit for specific performance, in which he could have added a claim for compensation. Order II, r. 2, therefore, is no bar to the present suit. A number of cases have been cited by Counsel, but I do not think it necessary to discuss them. It seems to me that no authority is required for the proposition that a plaintiff, who sues for a relief which the Courts cannot grant him, is not debarred from subsequently bringing a suit in respect of a relief which the Courts can grant him. There is certainly nothing in O. II, r. 2, to the contrary.

I would allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Court and remand the case for trial on the merits; the plaintiff to have his costs in both Courts.

Z. K. Appeal allowed; Case remanded.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 53 OF 1924.

December 17, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

SHEOKISAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

DOMA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—Lis pendens, doctrine of, applicability of—Mortgage suit —Transfer of mortgaged property pendente lite, effect of—Purchaser, rights of—Mortgage-decree—Private sale by judgment-debtor in favour of decree-holder—Decree-holder, whether can eject transferee pendente lite.

Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act does not say that any conveyance made pendente lite is void. It only says that such a conveyance does not affect the rights of any party under any decree or order which may be made in the suit. The effect of the doctrine of lis pendens is not to annul the conveyance made in contravention of it, but only to render it subservient to the rights of the parties to the litigation. [p. 996, col. 2.]

Nathaji Anandrav Patil v. Nana Sarjerao Patil, 9 Bom. L. R. 1173, relied on.

During the pendency of a mortgage suit the mortgagor sold a portion of the mortgaged property to the defendant. The plaintiff obtained a preliminary decree for sale which was made final, and the Court ordered the property to be sold and the case was sent to the Collector for execution. The mortgagor judgment-debtor applied to the Collector for permission to sell the property to the plaintiff and, permission having been given, the sale was effected. The plaintiff then brought the present suit to eject the defendant from the property purchased by the latter from the mortgagor during the pendency of the mortgage suit:

Held, that the defendant's purchase was subject to the decree eventually passed in the mortgage suit and that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to enforce the mortgage decree against the property in the hands of the defendant but was not entitled to eject the defendant from the property in his capacity of private purchaser of the property from the judgment-debtor in execution of the decree. [p. 997, col. 1.]

Thakur Prasad v. Gaya Sahu, 20 A. 349; A. W. N. (1898) 63; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 584, Madan Mohan Singh v. Raj Kishori Kumari, 39 Ind. Cas. 182; 21 C. W. N. 88, Ganga Prasad v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh, 29 A. 415; A. W. N. (1907) 112, and Shivlingappa v. Chanbasappa, 30 B. 337; 8 Bom. L. R. 16; 1 M. L. T. 46, distinguished.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Bhandara, dated the 17th October 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 29 of 1923.

Mr. Y. V. Jakatdar, for the Appellant.

Messrs. P. S. Deo and J. C. Ghosh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are set out in the judgments of the Courts below. They are rather complicated, but only a few of them are necessary for the determination of this appeal.

It is sufficient to state that one Sitaram Kalar had entered into various mortgages. The plaintiff, who is subsequent mortgagee, paid off the prior mortgagees and brought Suit No. 190 of 1918 against the mortgagor Sitaram to recover the amount so paid. The suit was instituted on 20th December 1918, and on the following day (21st December 1918) Sitaram sold the field in dispute in this appeal to the present defendant. It is admitted that the sale-deed was during the pendency of the suit and it is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens.

The plaintiff obtained a preliminary decree for sale in that suit, which was made final, and the Court ordered the property to be sold and the case was sent to the Collector for execution but in May 1922 the judgment-debtor applied to the Collector for permission to sell the land in dispute with other land to the plaintiff, and this was allowed by the Collector. Exhibit P-10 is the sale-deed to the plaintiff, dated the 10th May 1922.

The plaintiff brought this suit to eject the defendant from the field in suit, but his suit has been dismissed by both the Courts below.

It is contended that this transfer to the defendant during the pendency of the suit cannot, under s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, affect the rights which the plaintiff obtained under the decree, and, therefore, as it does interfere with them, it is void.

It is further contended that the sale by the judgment-debtor to the plaintiff with the permission of the Collector really amounts to a sale by the Collector in execution of the decree, and, therefore, the prior sale to the defendant which interferes with it is void. Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act does not say that any conveyance made pendente lite is void. It only says that it does not affect the rights of any party under any decree or order which may be made in the suit. It has been held in Nathaji Anandrav Patil v. Nana Sarjerao Patil (1) that the effect of the doctrine of lis pendens is not to annul the conveyance made in a contravention of it, but only to render it subservient to the rights of the parties to the litigation. The result then is that the sale to the defendant will be liable to be affected by the decree which the plaintiff obtained, that is the property sold will be liable to the charge decreed in the plaintiff's favour, but that will not justify the plaintiff in ejecting the defendant.

The learned Counsel for the appellant has referred to two cases—Thakur Prasad v. Gaya Sahu (2) and Madan Mohun Singh v. Raj Kishori Kumari (3) but these do not apply to the point now in issue. The law is that the purchaser is treated as standing in the place of the person from whom he has taken the assignment (Ghose's Law of Mortgage, 4th Edition, Vol. II, page 708). It is admitted on behalf of the respondent that he took the property liable to the charge, but the plaintiff is mistaken in seeking his remedy, for instead of enforcing the charge against the property he sues for ejectment.

(1) 9 Bom. L. R. 1173.
(2) 20 A. 349; A. W. N. (1898) 63; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 584.
(3) 39 Ind. Cas. 182; 21 C. W. N. 88.

It is further argued that there are no equities in the plaintiff's favour as he has tried to turn the respondent out of the property without executing his decree. The defendant paid a large sum for the property and also paid off a foreclosure decree obtained by the plaintiff against this property. There is no warrant for the contention that the sale by judgment-debtor with the permission of the Collector, when the Collector is in the management of the property under Sch. III, of the C. P. C., has the same affect as the sale by the Collector, and the cases quoted by the learned Counsel for the appellant—Ganga Prasad v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh (4) and Shivlingappa v. Chanbasappa (5)—do not lay down any such proposition; the latter of these cases is a case of attachment.

In these circumstances, I am of opinion, that the view of the lower Appellate Court is correct and that the plaintiff cannot succeed in ejecting the defendant in the present case. The sale to the plaintiff was a private sale made with the permission of the Collector and at that time Sitaram had already parted with his interest in the property and had none left to convey to the plaintiff. The sale to the defendant must be considered as subject to the charge which the plaintiff obtained by his decree, but that does not authorise the plaintiff to evict the defendant.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(4) 29 A. 415; A. W. N. (1907) 112.
(5) 30 B. 337; 8 Bom. L. R. 16; 1 M. L. T. 46.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 5 OF 1925.

February 27, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Daniels, J. C.

ALI ABBAS AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

NARAIN DASS AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS NOS. 1, 2 AND 3.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 47, 151, O. XXI, r. 90—Execution of decree—Sale—Permission given to decree-holder to bid at auction—Restriction placed on permission without notice to decree-holder—Irregularity—Purchase by clerk of decree-holder's lawyer—Fraud—Inherent power of Court to refuse to confirm sale.

In execution of a decree the Court granted an unconditional permission to the decree-holder to bid at the auction-sale of the judgment-debtor's property. Subsequently the Court made an order, without giving any notice to the decree-holder, fixing the minimum amount of the decree-holder's bid. As a result of this restriction the property was sold at a grossly inadequate price:

Held, that the action of the Court in placing a restriction upon the permission given to the decree-holder to bid at the auction-sale, without giving notice to the decree-holder, amounted to an irregularity within the meaning of O. XXI, r. 90, or of s. 47 of the C. P. C. [p. 999, col. 1.]

The clerk of a lawyer retained by a decree-holder stands in a position of active confidence towards the decree-holder, and if in execution of the decree, the clerk proceeds to purchase the property of the judgment-debtor which has been put up for sale, without informing the decree-holder of his intention to bid, his conduct amounts to a gross abuse of confidence and fraud on the decree-holder, and the Court has inherent power in such a case to refuse to confirm the sale. [pp. 998, col. 1; p. 999, col. 2.]

Appeal from an order passed by the Subordinate Judge, Mohanlalganj, dated the 17th November 1924.

Messrs. Niamat Ullah and Md. Ayub, for the Appellants.

Mr. M. Wasim, for the Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against an order setting aside an auction sale. The application was made under O. XXI, r. 90, C. P. C., the sale not having been confirmed. The applicant was the decree-holder Babu Narain Das. The opposite party were first the two judgment-debtors M. Ghazanfar Ali Khan and Musammat Afsar Jehan Begum, who are husband and wife, and the auction-purchasers Raza Ali Khan and Ali Abbas. The purchase was made by these two jointly. Raza Ali Khan is the son of the judgment-debtors, Ali Abbas is the clerk of the Pleader who represented the decree-holder in the suit.

Of the grounds on which it was sought to set aside the sale three are now material. They are as follows:

1. That the purchase by Ali Abbas, who was in a position of active confidence towards the decree-holder constituted a fraud on the Court and the decree-holder.

2. That after the decree-holder had been given permission to bid, the Court without notice to him improperly added a condition that his bid must be one of at least Rs. 10,000. It is alleged that in consequence of this fraud and irregularity the property was sold at far below its real value. The learned Subordinate Judge has rejected the first plea but set aside the sale on the second. The decree-holder urges that the first ground also should have been decided in his favour. It was further alleged on his behalf that the auction-purchasers were really benamidars for the judgment-debtors. It is quite possible that this really was the case but the decree-holder has not been able to substantiate it and it is not now pressed. It was also urged that owing to the fraudulent action of the judgment-debtor bidders were kept away from the sale. It is said that the judgment-debtor persuaded the decree-holder to agree to a fortnight's time, that hearing of this agreement bidders went away, and that after they had gone the judgment-debtor refused to sign the joint application which was to have been presented to the Court. The learned Subordinate Judge disbelieves the evidence under this head, and the decree-holder has not been able to satisfy me that he was wrong in doing so. These two grounds, therefore, need not be further considered.

On the other issues the facts are quite clear. There is no doubt whatever that Ali Abbas did stand in a position of active confidence towards the decree-holder, and that the purchase by him without informing the decree-holder of his intention was a gross abuse of confidence and amounted to a fraud on the decree-holder. The learned Subordinate Judge concedes that B. Makund Bihari Lal, the Pleader whose clerk Ali Abbas is, represented Narain Das in the suit and drafted the application for making the decree absolute. He thinks that because he fell ill after that and the decree-holder employed another Pleader, and because none of the papers in the execution case are in the handwriting of Ali Abbas, the latter did not stand in a fiduciary relation to the decree-holder and B. Mukund Bihari Lal's connection with the case was purely nominal. The admitted facts do not warrant this finding. B. Mukund Bihari Lal in his evidence admits that he came to Court once or twice in connection with the execution proceedings, and it was Ali Abbas who informed him that the permission to bid granted to the decree-holder had been made subject to a condition. Witness went to the decree-holder and informed him of this and advised the decree-holder to take whatever course he thought best. It is not correct that there is no paper signed by Ali Abbas in connection with the execution proceedings. He admits signing a receipt for diet money for witnesses in these proceedings. There is, therefore, no doubt, whatever that both B. Mukund Bihari Lal and Ali Abbas stood in a position of active confidence towards the decree-holder at the time when the sale took place. I need not refer to the numerous authorities on the duty of a solicitor or a solicitor's clerk in dealing with the property of his client. They will be found collected in such standard works as Kerr on Fraud, and Storey on Equity. The purchase in this case was made at a price far below the real value of the property and the decree-holder is fully entitled to have it set aside.

The facts on which the second plea is based are equally clear. On the 10th of May an unconditional permission was given to the decree-holder to bid. This permission was given on an application by the decree-holder. On 27th May some officious clerk in the office put up a report stating that this permission contained no limitation on the amount which the decree-holder might bid and asking whether any such limitation should be imposed. The Subordinate Judge thereupon without issuing any notice to the decree-holder passed an order that the decree-holder's bid must not be below Rs. 10,000.

As the Courts were closed for the vacation from 1st June and the sale took place on 20th June the decree-holder had no opportunity to object. Indeed the decree-holder did not hear of the order until after the Courts were closed. There is no doubt, having regard to the value of the property, that the limit imposed was much too high.

There is also no doubt that the property was sold far below its value. The price bid by Ali Abbas and Raza Ali was Rs. 1,900 only. The property was valued at Rs. 8,000 and there was a prior charge of Rs. 2,200 upon it. At the very lowest computation the amount bid was less than half of the real value of the property. There is also no doubt that this sale at a grossly inadequate price was the direct result of the limitation put on the decree-holder's right to bid. Had he been allowed to bid a reasonable sum he would certainly have made an attempt to buy in the property at something more nearly approaching its real value, especialy as the amount of his decree was over Rs. 11,000.

The main contention of the appellants is that even if these facts are admitted they do not constitute a fraud or material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale and that O. XXI, r, 90 is strictly limited in its operation to irregularity or fraud in connection with the publication or conduct of the sale. They also contend that as it was purely at the discretion of the Court to give permission to the decree-holder to bid at all any condition imposed on him could not amount to a material irregularity. As to the latter point the Court, it is true, need not have given permission to the decree-holder to bid, but having passed such an order the Subordinate Judge had no right to review it to the decree-holder's prejudice on an office report without any intimation to the decree-holder and without his having any opportunity of being heard. In modifying its order in this way the Court did in my opinion commit a material irregularity. As to the former plea the words "publishing and conducting the sale" must receive reasonable latitude of interpretation. It is the Court which is responsible for the conduct of the sale and the officer by whom it is actually held merely acts in a ministerial capacity subject to the orders of the Court. This is clear from the rules as to the sale of property laid down in the Oudh Civil Digest. I, therefore, agree with the Court below that modifying the permission already granted to the decree-holder to bid on an office report behind the decree-holder's back amounted to a material irregularity. The question whether this irregularity is covered by O. XXI, r. 90 is not really very material, because if it is not covered by that rule it would certainly be covered by s. 47, C. P. C. This was held in the very case relied on by the appellants, namely Parashram Hanmanta v. Balmukund Lachiram (1), and in that case the Court actually did set aside the sale. The auction-purchaser is the representative of the judgment-debtor. Anandi [Kunwari v. Ajudhia Nath (2) and Veyindramuthu Pillai v. Maya Nadan (3)], and the question is one relating to the satisfaction of the decree. Moreover the judgment-debtors are also parties to the proceedings, and it was held as far back as 1892 by the Privy Council in Prosunno Kumar Sanyal v. Kali Das Sanyal (4) that the fact of the auction-purchaser interested in the result of the proceedings had never been held to bar the application of s. 244 of the C. P. C., corresponding to the present s. 47. This case was followed by their Lordships in Ganapathy Mudaliar v. Krishnama Chariar (5). As regards the fraud committed on the decree-holder by Ali Abbas in purchasing the property I am content to follow the decision of the Madras High Court in Raghavachariar v. Murugesa Mudali (6), that in such a case the Court has inherent power in the interests of justice to refuse to confirm the sale. In the particular case before the Madras High Court the decree-holder had misled the Court as to the value of the property and thereby induced it to fix a reserve price which was far below the real value of the property, and the principle applies with equal strength to the facts of the present case.

For the reasons I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 10 Bom. L. R. 752; 32 B. 572.
(2) 30 A. 379; A. W. N. (1908) 157; 5 A. L. J. 557.
(3) 54 Ind. Cas. 209; 43 M. 107; (1919) M. W. N. 881; 26 M. L. T. 391; 38 M. L. J. 32 (F. B.).
(4) 19 C. 683; 19 I. A. 166; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 209; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 898 (P. C.).
(5) 44 Ind. Cas. 855; 41 M. 403; 23 M. L. T. 198; 27 C. L. J. 367; 34 M. L. J. 463; 4 P. L. W. 310; (1918) M. W. N. 310; 22 C. W. N. 553; 16 A. L. J. 353; 20 Bom. L. R. 580; 8 L. W. 427.
(6) 72 Ind. Cas. 545; 46 M. 583; (1923) M. W. N. 323; 32 M. L. T. 285; 44 M. L. J. 680; 17 L. W. 750; (1923) A. I. R (M.) 635.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 305B OF 1923.

November 20, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

DEORAO AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS NOS. 2 AND 3—APPELLANTS

versus

VITHAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANT NO. 1—RESPONDENTS.

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 4, 5—Stranger claimant, suit by—Jurisdiction of Civil Court, when barred—Possession, whether proof of title—Presumption.

Long continued exclusive possession gives rise to a presumption that such possession had a lawful origin, i. e., it originated in an exclusive title. [p. 1000, col. 2.]

If a stranger who is not bound to go to the Insolvency Court at all invites the decision of that Court upon the merits of a claim, he cannot afterwards turn round and question its jurisdiction. But where the Insolvency Court has refused to entertain and enquire into or adjudicate upon the rights of the stranger claimant or the latter has not preferred any claim for the consideration of the Bankruptcy Court there is no decision by it, which would operate to oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to decide the matter. [p. 1001, col. 1.]

Pita Ram v. Jujhar Singh, 43 Ind. Cas. 573; 39 A. 626; Mohin v. Baij Nath, 46 Ind. Cas. 394; 40 A. 582; 16 A. L. J. 456, Irshad Husain v. Gopi Nath, 49 Ind. Cas. 590; 41 A. 378; 17 A. L. J. 374; 1 U. P. L. R. (A.) 163, Ex parte Swimbanks, In re Shanks, (1879) 11 Ch. D. 525; 48 L. J. Bk. 120; 40 L. T. 825; 27 W. R. 898, and Ex parte Butters, In re Harrison, (1880) 14 Ch. D. 265; 43 L. T. 2; 38 W. R. 876.

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Akola, dated the 19th June 1923 in Civil Appeal No. 16 of 1923.

Mr. M. B. Niyogi, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. G. Hatwalne, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Yeshwanta was indebted to Deorao, who caused him to be declared insolvent and attached certain houses as his property and caused them to be sold by auction and defendant No. 3 Chihuji has become the auction-purchaser. The plaintiffs are related to Yeshwanta as his father Wansing's brother Harsing's great-grandsons. They asserted that the houses sold were their own property by virtue of a partition which took place 60 years ago; this was denied by the opposite party and it was asserted that they belonged exclusively to defendant No. 1.

The First Court held that house No. 2 was not sold by the Insolvency Court. That house No. 1 is the site on which the kotha was built by the plaintiff's father Pandhari 6 years ago and that the same has been in constant use of the plaintiffs and not of Yeshwanta, during the 12 years prior to suit. In this view of the case the plaintiffs' claim was decreed so far as it related to house No. 1 and the rest dismissed.

The Additional District Judge confirmed this decree upon an appeal preferred by defendants Nos. 2 and 3 and they have, therefore, come up in second appeal.

It is argued in appeal that the plaintiffs had to establish the fact of the partition as the first step for their success and that mere exclusive possession for a number of years would not suffice to prove their exclusive ownership. I say that long continued exclusive possession would give rise to a presumption that such possession had a lawful origin, i. e., it originated on an exclusive title. I have, therefore, no hesitation in upholding that view taken by the lower Appellate Court that the plaintiffs have established their title to the house No. 1. This disposes of grounds Nos. 2 to 5 which relate to the merits of the case.

As regards ground No. 1 that this suit is not maintainable without the previous sanction of the Insolvency Court reliance is placed on the following cases and it is contended that the suit should have been thrown out in view of the prohibition contained in ss. 4 and 5 of the new Insolvency Act.

Official Receiver, Tinnevelly v. Sankaralinga Mudaliar (1), Abdul Khader Sahib v. Official Assignee of Madras (2), Ramaswami Chettiar v. Ramaswami Iyengar (3), Govind v. Gopala (4), Bansidhar v. Kharagjit (5) and Trimbak v. Sheoram (6).

On the other hand reliance is placed on the following cases on behalf of the plaintiff-respondents.

Pita Ram v. Jujhar Singh (7), Mohni v. Baij Nath (8), Irshad Husain v. Gopi Nath (9), Bhairo Prasad v. S. P. C. Dass (10) and Ram Piyara v. Bhana Mal (11).

(1) 62 Ind. Cas. 495; 44 M. 524; 40 M. L. J. 219; (1921) M. W. N 236; 14 L. W. 505.

(2) 36 Ind. Cas. 524; 40 M. 810; 20 M. L. T. 311; 4 L. W. 425.

(3) 65 Ind. Cas. 394; 45 M. 434 at p. 441; 15 L. W. 273; (1922) M. W. N. 110; 42 M. L. J. 185; 31 M. L. T. 86; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 147.

(4) 22 Ind. Cas. 69; 9 N. L. R. 182.

(5) 26 Ind. Cas. 926; 37 A. 65; 12 A. L. J. 1273.

(6) 65 Ind. Cas. 941; 19 N. L. R. 126; 5 N. L. J. 144; (1922) A. I. R. (N.) 108.

(7) 43 Ind. Cas 573; 39 A. 626.

(8) 46 Ind. Cas. 394; 40 A. 582; 16 A. L. J. 456.

(9) 49 Ind. Cas. 590; 41 A. 378; 17 A. L. J. 374; 1 U. P. L. R. (A.) 163.

(10) 51 Ind. Cas. 113; 17 A. L. J. 787; 1 U. P. L. R (A.) 118.

(11) 61 Ind. Cas. 332; 3 L. L. J. 233; 3 U. P. L. R. (L.) 40; 2 L. 147.

I have gone through the cases cited on both sides and am of opinion that the present suit in a Civil Court is not barred by the provisions of the new Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920. The matter is very fully and exhaustively discussed in Bhairo Prasad v. S. P. C. Dass (10) and also in Maharana Kunwar v. E. V. David (12). The underlying principle of the rulings appears to be that where a stranger like the plaintiff in the present case has once come in and invited the decison of the Court of Bankruptcy upon the merits of a claim, he cannot afterwards turn round and question its jurisdiction. Vide Ex parte Swinbanks, In re Shanks (13) and Ex parte Butters, In re Harrison (14). When the merits of a dispute have once been finally determined it is the duty of the Court to make an end of the litigation. Pita Ram v. Jujhar Singh (7), Irshad Husain v. Gopi Nath (9). It, therefore, follows that where there is a decision after full enquiry, by a Bankruptcy Court, the same matter cannot be enquired into by the Civil Court because the idea is to give to such decision the force of res judicata. Where, therefore, the Insolvency Court has refused to entertain and enquire into or adjudicate upon the rights of the stranger claimant, or the latter has not preferred any claim for the consideration of the Bankruptcy Court there is no decision by it which would operate to oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to decide the matter. The necessary corollary of this proposition is that where property is sold by the Receiver as the property of the insolvent and a third party challenges the title of the insolvent to that property and seeks a declaration of title as against the purchaser, there is no need to implead the Receiver as a co-defendant, and it is unnecessary also to obtain the leave of the Insolvency Court to proceed against the purchaser. This principle was recognised in Muhammad Umar v. Munshi Ram (15) and also in Kundan Lal v. Shadi Ram (16). It was held in Gangadhar v. Shridhar (17), Civil Revision No. 94 of 1920, decided by Macnair, A. J. C., on 9th August 1920, that under s. 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920 a Court had full power to decide the merits of the claim of third parties.

In Bhairo Prasad v. S. P. C. Dass (10) which was a case under the old Provincial Insolvency Act of 1907, it was held that a stranger to the insolvency is not bound to go to the Insolvency Court at all. He has the ordinary right which every individual has, to seek redress in the ordinary Civil Courts, for any grievance or trespass to his property whether committed by an Official Receiver or anybody else, but he can if he pleases, if he complains against the act of the Receiver, apply under s. 22 to the Insolvency Court itself, and if he does so and obtains a decision upon the merits, that decision is final. [Irshad Hussain v. Gopi Nath (9)]. But if he applies under s. 22 he must do so within the period of limitation prescribed therefor and consequently if an application is made beyond time and the Insolvency Court declines to entertain it the application becomes rejected on the ground that it is barred by time and not on the merits. The Insolvency Court declines to exercise its jurisdiction and, therefore, there is no decision on the merits. If after such summary rejection of the petition without adjudication on the merits, the stranger claimant takes recourse to his ordinary remedy of a civil suit, he need not obtain the permission of the Insolvency Court for the institution of such a suit. As a matter of law such a permission could be neither given nor refused.

The question has been very satisfactorily dealt with in Maharana Kunwar v. E. V. David (12). It is pointed out there that the jurisdiction conferred by s. 4 of the new Act is not exclusive and that s. 68 of the Act gives an option to a claimant as it says he 'may apply'. "The language of the section is permissive, not mandatory. The person aggrieved has the choice either of applying to the Court or of seeking his ordinary remedy under the Civil Law". (page 747 ibid). The section is only an enabling section and does not bar civil suit. The following observations of Lindsay, J., at page 748 :—

"There is no statutory provisions for such sanction (of the Insolvency Court) being asked or given and on principle I fail to see why any such authority is required * * * * But he (Receiver) has no status as against parties who are entire (12) 77 Ind. Cas. 57; 21 A. L. J. 737; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 40; 46 A. 16.

(13) (1879) 11 Ch. D. 525; 48 L. J. Bk. 120; 40 L. T. 825; 27 W. R. 898.
(14) (1880) 14 Ch. C. 265; 43 L. T. 2; 28 W. R. 876.
(15) 41 Ind. Cas. 802; 54 P.R. 1917; 132 P.W. R. 1917.
(16) 41 Ind. Cas. 809; 55 P. R. 1917; 130 P. W. R. 1917; 134 P. L. R. 1917.
(17) 61 Ind. Cas. 589; 3 N. L. J. 279.

*Pages of 21 A. L. J.—[Ed.]

strangers to the proceedings in the Insolvency Court, and if under colour of his office as Receiver, or Official Receiver he commits an act of trespass, it is difficult to understand on what principle the person against whom the trespass is committed is under any obligation to ask permission of the Insolvency Court to bring an action against the Receiver. The remedy of the person complaining is the ordinary remedy at law and no question, therefore, of any sanction arises."

These observations have my entire concurrence and they apply here very clearly. The plaintiff respondent had applied to the Court on 4th March 1922 but his application was summarily rejected that very day. There was, therefore, a refusal to exercise jurisdiction and for the matter of that to give any decision under the insolvency jurisdiction. This does not in any way stand as a bar to the maintainability of the present suit on the ground that the permission of the Insolvency Court was not obtained. The suit is not by a 'creditor' and, therefore, the case in Trimbak v. Sheoram (6) is easily distinguishable from this case.

The result is that the suit was perfectly tenable in the Civil Court. The wording of s. 4 of the new Insolvency Act is not to the effect that 'no Civil Court shall take cognizance' so as to oust the latter's jurisdiction to take cognizance of all matters of civil nature under s. 9 of the C. P. C.

For all the reasons I overrule the contention of the appellant that the present suit was not maintainable without permission of the Insolvency Court.

The case of Seth Sheolal v. Seth Girdharilal (18), Second Appeal No. 319 of 1922, decided on 3rd November 1923 by Baker J. C., is clearly distinguishable as there also the suit was by a creditor of the insolvent and proceedings for an annulment of a transfer in favour of Girdharilal by the insolvent were actually pending before the Insolvency Court and there was a decision on merits of the petition of objections by the transferee as regards the validity of the transfer in his favour on which he relied for raising the attachment of the property.

The appeal, therefore, fails on all the grounds urged and I accordingly dismiss it with costs. Costs in the lower Courts will be paid as already ordered.

G. R. D.

Z. K. Appeals dismissed.

(18) 78 Ind. Cas. 140; (1924) A. I. R. (N.) 361.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 577 OF 1921.

March 31, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—PLAINTIFFS

versus

DINSHAW NAVROJI AND ANOTHER —DEFENDANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VI, r. 11, scope of—Signature to plaint, object of—Omission to sign, whether can be amended—Landlord and tenant, relations between—Tenancy, how can be terminated—Suit by tenant for possession—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (xi) (e)—Person inducted with land, whether necessary party—Overvaluing plaint, effect of—Costs, how assessed.

The object of the signature to a plaint is to prevent as far as possible disputes as to whether a suit was instituted with the plaintiff's knowldge and authority or not. This authority may be established by other means besides the signature. [p. 1006, col. 1.]

Basdeo v. John Smidt, 22 A. 55; A. W. N. (1899) 172; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1068, followed.

The provisions of O. VI, r. 11, C. P. C., relate to a mere matter of procedure and any mistake or omission in the signature may be amended at any time subsequent to the institution of the suit. [ibid.]

Bisheshar Nath v. Emperor, 44 Ind. Cas. 28; 40 A. 147; 16 A. L. J. 64; 19 Cr. L. J. 865, followed.

Where a tenancy has not terminated, or where on account of certain circumstances it is not open to a landlord to terminate a tenancy he cannot be allowed to dispossess his tenant without having recourse to law and then to retain possession which he could not obtain through a Court of Law. The tenant has a right apart from the provisions of s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act to sue to eject the landlord. [p. 1006, cols. 1 & 2.]

Reman v. City of London Real Property Co., (1921) 1 K. B. 49; 89 L. J. K. B. 1105; 123 L. T. 617; 18 L. G. R. 691; 36 T. L. R. 869 and Cruise v. Terrell, (1922) 1 K. B. 664; 91 L. J. K. B. 499; 126 L. T. 750; 20 L. G. R. 418; 66 S. J. 365; 38 T. L. R. 379, referred to.

In India, the Common Law right of re-entry by a landlord does not exist, and even where a landlord has obtained possession of the premises let by him after the tenancy has been validly terminated, it is open to the tenant to institute a suit within six months of dispossession, under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act. [p. 1006, col. 1.]

Rudrappa v. Narsingrao, 29 B. 213; 7 Bom. L. R. 12, relied on.

A suit by the Secretary of State for India under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act is governed by Art. 149 and not Art. 3 of the Limitation Act. [p. 1006, col. 2; p. 1007, col. 1.]

A suit for possession by a tenant against his landlord falls within cl. xi, sub-cl. (e) of s. 7 of the Court Fees Act. [p. 1007, col. 1.]

A person inducted with land by the landlord is not in every case a necessary party to a suit between the dispossessed tenant and the landlord, but may be a proper party, and the fact that he is joined as a proper party does not take away the suit from the purview of cl. xi sub-cl. (e). [p. 1007, col. 2.]

Furzand Ali v. Mohanth Lal Puri, 32 C. 268, Palaniappa Chetty v. Sithravelu, 31 M. 14; 3 M. L. T. 8; 17 M. L. J. 478 and Kader Bakhsh v. Sheo Parsad Missir, 42 Ind. Cas. 111; 2 P. L. J. 713; 3 P. L. W. 195 and 277, distinguished.

The Court Fees Act being a fiscal enactment must in cases of ambiguity be construed in favour of the public. [p. 1007, col. 2.]

Where a plaint is overvalued and excessive Court-fees paid, in the taxation of costs the plaintiff is only entitled to costs as taxed on the proper valuation. [p. 1008, col. 1.]

Mr. T. G. Elphinston, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Nadirshaw Navroji, for Defendant No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit for possession by the plaintiff who claims to be a monthly tenant of the first defendant.

The plaintiff's case is that the Police Department supply free quarters at Karachi to certain Police Officers and for that purpose rent premises from private owners; that the premises in suit were rented in 1916 from the first defendant for use of a Sub-Inspector of the C. I. Department in charge of the Passport Bureau and remained in occupation of different Sub-Inspectors in charge of the Bureau for the time being till 24th December 1919, the last Sub-Inspector who occupied the premises being one Jivatram that his successor went to occupy them on the 27th December 1919, and found that the first defendant had taken wrongful possession of the premises and had rented the same to the second defendant who was in occupation. A notice calling upon the first defendant to restore possession having proved futile this suit was instituted against both the defendants on the 18th February 1921. There was considerable delay in serving the first defendant with a summons, he being out of British India. The suit did not become ripe for framing issues for over a year. The written statement filed by the first defendant is dated 26th January 1922 and is signed and verified by him in London on that date. The first defendant has contended that the premises were not rented by the plaintiff but personally by each Police Officer in succession. He admits having received rent from the Police Department but under the directions of each tenant "without acknowledging the plaintiff as a tenant or looking to him as such." He has pleaded that the last of such tenants "to whom the premises were let in his personal capacity gave vacant possession of the premises to the defendant's brother without any reservation whatsoever and on such vacant possession being received the same were let to the second defendant."

The second defendant admitted being put in possession through the first defendant and raised certain legal defences which are incoroporated in the issues.

Before the final hearing of the case the second defendant had given up possession of the premises to the first defendant. He was absent at the hearing fixed for the 10th March 1924. The learned Government Pleader gave him up and the suit as against him was dismissed. The first defendant then applied for amendment of his written statement and for being permitted to raise certain further defences which was allowed so far as it related to legal defences and the issues accordingly amended.

The amended issues raised by the Court are as follows :—

1. Were the premises in suit hired by the plaintiff for Police Officers as alleged in para. 1 of the plaint?
2. Was the rent of the said premises paid by the plaintiff?
3. Where the premises let to Mr. Jivatram in his personal capacity as alleged in para. 4 of the written statement of defendant No. 1?
4. Did Mr. Jivatram give vacant possession to the defendant No. 1 without any reservation as alleged in para. 4 of the written statement?
5. Was defendant No. 1 justified in letting the premises to defendant No. 2 and was his action wrongful?
6. Is plaintiff entitled to possession of the premises in suit?
7. What should the decree be?
8. Is the defendant No. 1 entitled to rent not paid by Mr. Jivatram?
9. Does the plaint disclose any cause of action against defendant No. 2.?
10. Is the plaint over stamped, if so is not the plaintiff liable for excess of Court-fee stamps?
11. Is the suit competent as brought [covers points (a) and (c) of the further defence?]

Issues Nos. 1 to 4.—The Passport Bureau, Kiamari was started in 1916 and Mr. Barker. Ex. 11 then an Assistant Superintendent of Police was put in charge of it and one Abdulla Baghali, Ex. 9 appointed as Sub-Inspector under him. Mr. Barker states that Abdulla was entitled to free quarters, that under his authority Abdulla selected the premises in suit as residential quarters, that he himself visited the premises and approved of them, and that he was then given to understand that the landlord was willing to let them out to the Police Department, that the rent was paid by the Police Department to the landlord, the procedure adopted by the Police at that time being that the Police Department rented the premises for their subordinates who were entitled to free quarters and was responsible for payment of the rent to the landlord, that the rent was paid by the Police Accountant after the officer in charge of the Department sanctioned the bills for rent, the bills, however, being made out in the name of the individual officer occupying the respective tenements, to prevent mistakes and fraud in the payment of rent of private premises.

It appears from Ex. 12 the rent bills submitted by the first defendant that the bills for rent from 8th August 1916 the date of the commencement of the tenancy upto 30th November 1918, were made out in the name of Abdulla. The first bill for 23 days of August 1916, Ex. 12 is made out in the name of Abdulla Bagali Khureshi Esquire c/o. District Superintendent of Police, Karachi, and several subsequent bills bear the same address. In Ex. 12/14 the bill of rent for September 1917, the name of Abdulla is scored out and the name of Alli Mahomed Ihsanali substituted in red ink and the same alteration has been made in several subsequent bills by the Police Department before making payment. The bill for December 1918, and the subsequent bills are made out by the first defendant in the name of Jivatram.

Abdulla Bagali, Ex. 9 states that he selected the premises under orders of Mr. Barker, that he informed the landlord that the Government was renting the premises and would be responsible for the rent that the Police Office settled the amount of rent and paid it to the first defendant, that he occupied the premises up to August 1917 and that on his transfer from the post of Sub-Inspector, Passport Bureau, he handed over possession thereof to Sub-Inspector Ali Mahomed Ihsanali who relieved him under orders of the Assistant Superintendent of Police.

Ali Mahomed Ahsanali, Ex. 6 has denied that he had anything to do with the landlord and has stated that he occupied the premises under orders of the A. S. P. for one year and handed over possession to his relief Sub-Inspector Ghulam Hussein who succeeded him as Sub-Inspector of the Bureau on his transfer. It appears that Sub-Inspector Ghulam Hussein died in Karachi in November 1918, and was succeeded by Sub-Inspector Jivatram, Ex. 7 who has again deposed that he had nothing to do with the landlord and has denied having handed over possession to the landlord on his transfer from Karachi. He stayed in the premises for about one year and in the ordinary course removed his belongings on his transfer from here on the 24th December 1919. Abdulla Fatehdin, Ex. 8 his successor has deposed to having gone to occupy the premises on 27th December 1919 under orders of the A. S. P. when he found that the premises were occupied by the second defendant.

Immediately after the Christmas holidays a notice Ex. 14 was sent to the first defendant calling upon him to put the Police Department in possession of the premises.

The plaintiff has put in three sample entries, Exs. 25 to 27 from the Police Department Receipt Book to show that the rent was paid by the Police Department direct to the representative of the landlord who called for payment.

The first defendant who has verified the written statement as true to his knowledge has not been examined as a witness. His son Kowas, Ex. 13, and his brother Kaikushro, Ex. 23 have been examined as witnesses. Kowas deposes to his having personally given the premises on rent to Abdulla Baghali, denies that he was informed that the Government would be the tenant and swears that if he had known that the Government or the Police Department would be the tenant or responsible for the rent he would not have let the premises. He states that he submitted the bill for the first month to Abdulla and at his request represented that bill and other subsequent bills to the Police Department for payment. Kowas did not inspire confidence of the Court when he pleaded ignorance of the handwriting of his cousin's son P. B. Kharas and N. M. Dastur who had signed Exs. 25 to 27, in the Police Receipt Book and also when he pleaded ignorance of the handwriting on the bills issued on behalf of the first defendant except his own handwriting. His explanation that he would not have let out the premises if he had known that the Police Department would be the tenants or that they would pay rent is far from being true. It is inconsistent with his conduct in receiving payment of rent from the Police Department though the Rent Act was not in operation in 1916, and when he could easily have terminated the tenancy then by a month's notice. It appears that the premises in suit were not the first premises taken on rent from the first defendant for a Police Officer. On the 6th February 1916, another portion of the same block of buildings was taken on rent from the first defendant for use of the Police Officer, Ahmad Rashid. He was bold enough to assert that he let that particular tenement to Ahmad Rashid in his personal capacity and that he would not have put Ahmed Rashid in possession of his tenement if he had known that the Police Department would pay the rent and yet it appears from his counterfoil book, Ex. 24 that the very first bill, Ex. 15 was made out by him in the name of the Inspector of Police and not that of Ahmed Rashid which was altered by him in the name of the D .I. G. of Police for Sind. The subsequent bills for this tenement upto August 1916 are made out in the name of the D. I. G. and the rent received from the Accounts Department. His explanation that he had forgotten the name of his tenant in the very first month of the tenancy and, therefore, made out the bill in the name of the Inspector of Police and subsequently altered it to the name of the D. I. G. on being told that he would receive payment from the D. I. G. is palpably false. It is not unlikely that as from the 8th August 1916, two tenements in the same buildings were let out to the Police Department, the Police Department required that the bills should be made out in the names of the Police Officers and that this fact accounts for the two bills for the month of August 1916, Ex. 21 in the counterfoil bill book being made out in the name of Ahmad Rashid c/o. D. I. G. of Police for Sind and Ex. 22 which is the counterfoil of Ex. 12/1 being made out in the name of Abdulla Baghali c/o. D. S. P., Karachi the two officers being employed in two different offices and this amply corroborates the evidence of Mr. Barker, Ex. 11 on that point. It would also appear unreasonable that a Police Officer who is entitled to free quarters from Government should have been required in 1916, to rent the premises for himself, as he would be required to give a month's notice to his landlord before vacating his tenement which he could not possibly do when under orders of immediate transfer.

Though the premises in suit were occupied by different Sub-Inspectors and an assertion was made by the first defendant in para. 2 of the written statement true to his knowledge that each Sub-Inspector rented the premises in his individual capacity no attempt has been made to prove this assertion. Kowas pleads absence from Karachi. The bills submitted in the name of Abdulla Baghali upto December 1918, give a direct lie to the premises being let by the first defendant either to Ali Mahomed Ahsanali, Ex. 6 or Ghulam Hussain.

Kaikushro, Ex. 23, the uncle of Kowas is an equally unreliable witness. His story of having locked the premises before Jivatram occupied it, of his having let the premises by Jivatram in his personal capacity, and Jivatram having handed over possession to him, are a pure concoction and is flatly contradicted by Jivatram. I see no reason to disbelieve the plaintiff's witnesses. I hold on Issues Nos. 1 and 2 in the affirmative and on the Issues Nos. 3 and 4 in the negative.

Issue No. 5.—In view of my finding on Issues Nos. 1 to 4 it follows that the first defendant took possession of the premises without justification and wrongly let it out to the second defendant.

The Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, was then in force in Karachi and I have no doubt that the first defendant's representative took advantage of the fact that Jivatram Sub-Inspecter had removed his kit leaving the premises unlocked on the 24th December and on the quiet he put the second defendant in possession. I hold on this issue against the defendant.

Issues Nos. 6 and 11.—It is contended that this suit has not been properly instituted as the District Superintendent of Police who has signed and verified the plaint has no power to do so. The institution of the suit has been duly sanctioned by the Government of Bombay, vide Ex. 10. The plaint was presented by the Government Pleader, a proper Law Officer of the Crown for presenting the plaint. If the D. S. P. is not the proper officer to sign and verify the plaint this defect is not fatal to the suit. The object of the signature to the plaint is to prevent as far as possible disputes as to whether a suit was instituted with the plaintiff's knowledge and authority or not. This authority may be established by other means besides the signature Basdeo v. John Smidt (1) remarks at page 61. The provisions of O. VI, r. 11, C. P. C. relate to a mere matter of procedure and any mistake or omission therein may be amended at any time subsequent to the institution of the suit Bisheshar Nath v. Emperor (2). Under r. 103 of the Rules of the Conduct of Legal Affairs the Government Pleader can sign and verify the plaint in suit which has been duly sanctioned by the Government. I think, in the circumstances of this case, it will be proper to allow the Government Pleader to sign and verify the plaint and cure any defect that there may be, on account of want of authority of the D. S. P., if any, to sign and verify the plaint, and I order that the Government Pleader should do so.

The next objection is that this suit is incompetent whether it be treated as a suit for specific performance of the monthly lease or as a suit by the tenant for recovery of possession from the landlord. It is not a suit for specific performance of an agreement to lease the property and it is therefore not necessary to consider the first point or to consider the authorities relied on by Mr. Nadirshah in support of this point. The plaintiff's suit is in tort and so long as the right of action continues he has a right of suit. In India the Common Law right of re-entry by the landlord does not exist and even where the landlord has obtained possession of the premises after the tenancy has been validly terminated it is open to the tenant to institute a suit within six months of dispossession under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act: Rudrappa v. Narsingrao (3). Where the tenancy has not terminated or where on account of certain circumstances it is not open to the landlord to terminate the tenancy there is no reason why he should be allowed to dispossess his tenant without having recourse to law and then to retain possession which he could not obtain through a Court of Law. In the present case, though the tenancy is a monthly tenancy it has not been terminated. Apart from the provisions of the Bombay Rent War Restrictions Act a monthly tenancy can be terminated only in the manner prescribed under s. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act which applies to Sind. In this case no notice to terminate the tenancy has been given by the landlord. There is no express or implied surrender of the tenancy and the non-payment of rent if any is due to the landlord having disturbed the possession of the tenant which undoubtedly gives the tenant a right to suspend payment of the rent. The effect of the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, 1918, is however, to convert this monthly tenancy into a statutory tenancy and to empower the Court to grant relief to the landlord only under certain specified circumstances. The first defendant could not, therefore, have obtained possession by resort to Court even if he had given a month's notice to the tenant to vacate the premises.

Under the English Law it has been held that a tenant can claim the benefit of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restriction) Act, 1920, which is a Statute in pari materia with the Bombay Rent Act and can sue to eject the landlord who has obtained peaceful possession of the demised premises in exercise of his Common Law right of re-entry. Cf. Remon v. City of London Real Property Co. (4), Cruise v. Terrell (5).

It would be defeating the objects of the Bombay Rent War Restrictions Act to allow the plaintiff to obtain lawful possession of the premises and to retain them and I am of opinion that this is a fit case for a decree for possession. In the view I have taken of this case it is not necessary for me to consider the further question raised by Mr. Elphinston that the present suit is one falling under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, and that apart from any other considerations he is entitled under s. 9 of the Act to possession of the premises. He contends that a suit by the Secretary of State for India whether it be under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act or otherwise is governed by Art. 149 and not

(1) 22 A. 55; A. W. N. (1899) 172; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1068.
(2) 44 Ind. Cas. 28; 40 A. 147; 16 A. L. J 64; 19 Cr. L. J. 865.
(3) 29 B. 213; 7 Bom. L. R. 12.
(4) (1921) 1 K. B. 49; 89 L. J. K. B. 1105; 123 L. T. 617; 18 L. G. R. 691; 36 T. L. R. 869.
(5) (1922) 1 K. B. 664; 91 L. J. K. B 499; 126 L. T. 750; 20 L. G. R. 418; 66 S. J. 365; 38 T. L. R. 379.

by Art. 3 of the Limitation Act. There is considerable force in his argument as the period of six months limitation prescribed for a suit under s. 9 which was originally contained in the section itself, has been transferred by Act XII of 1891 to the Limitation Act. Both Arts. 3 and 149 are in the first division of the Second Schedule of the Limitation Act. It would, therefore, appear that the latter Article which expressly provides for a suit by or on behalf of the Secretary of State for India would govern the present case though it is anomalous that the Secretary of State should be allowed sixty years to institute a summary suit under s. 9, and that though it could not on the one hand have been the intention of the Legislature to allow such a long period for a summary suit on the other hand the period of six months provided in Art. 3 may be considered as too short a period for the Government machinery to be moved and the necessary sanction obtained to institute a suit of this nature.

I hold that the present suit is maintainable.

Issue No. 8.—It would appear that as the first defendant took wrongful possession of the premises on or before the 27th December, he is not entitled to rent for the month of December 1919. As, however, the first defendant has not paid Court-fee on the rent claimed by him for the month of December, I hold that he is not entitled to recover the rent for this month in this suit.

Issue No. 9.—This issue does not now arise.

Issue No. 10.—The annual rent of the premises is Rs. 240. Mr. Elphinston has valued the subject-matter of the suit for the purpose of Court-fees at Rs. 3,000. He states that this is the value of the premises but cannot explain how he has based his valuation. The premises consist of certain rooms on the first floor and form a part of a block of buildings. It is not possible to value them. They have no saleable value unless the whole block of building is sold.

This suit being a suit for possession by a tenant against his landlord it would on the face of it appear to fall within cl. xi, sub-cl. (e) of s. 7 of the Court Fees Act which refers specifically to a suit to recover the occupancy of immoveable property by a tenant against his landlord. In Furzand Ali v. Mohanth Lal Puri (6) a suit filed by a tenant against his landlord and a third person whom the landlords had inducted into the land was however held not to fall within this clause. It would appear from the statement of facts given in the report that in that case the landlords defendants Nos. 1 and 2 executed a thika patta in favour of defendant No. 3 and all the three defendants thereafter dispossessed the plaintiff. Under the circumstances the defendant No. 3 was both a tort feaser and a trespasser and a suit against him would lie in consequence of his wrongful act in personally ejecting the plaintiff apart from his being a trespasser on the land. If this ruling is intended to lay down that in every case where a person inducted on the land by the landlord is joined as a party to a suit between the dispossessed tenant and the landlord such suit does not fall within cl. (e) then with all due respect I demur. Such a person may be a proper party to the suit but is not in every case a necessary party to the suit, and the fact that he is joined as a proper party to the suit does not thereby take away the suit from the purview of cl. xi sub-cl. (e). It is still a suit between the tenant and the landlord. This ruling has been referred to with approval in Palaniappa Chetty v. Sithravelu (7). This decision is based on two grounds; the second ground which would appear to have been a good ground was that prior to the Amending Act VI of 1905, cl. xi (e) was limited to a suit for recovery of occupancy of land, and did not extend to a suit for occupancy of immoveable property as at present and as in that case the claim was in respect of melvaram rights and not a suit by dispossessed ryot for physical possession of land the suit was rightly held not to fall within this clause. The only other ruling referred to by Mr. Elphinston is Kadir Baksh v. Sheo Prasad Missir (8) which does not deal with the question of Court-fees. It holds that a person inducted to the land by a lessor during the continuance of a lease is a trespasser and may be ejected by the lessee.

The Court Fees Act being a fiscal enactment must in cases of ambiguity be construed in favour of the Public. Clause xi refers to suits between the landlord and the tenant. It does not restrict such suits to suits between the landlord and the tenant only. There is, therefore, no reason why cl. xi should be limited to suits where the landlord and the tenant alone are parties and should not apply to a suit of this nature where in order to avoid any unnecessary delay in execution proceedings the second defendant was joined as a proper party to the suit. This suit would have been equally efficacious if he had not been joined as a party. As a matter of fact he has given up possession before the date of the decree. I am of opinion that this suit has been overvalued and in the taxation of costs the plaintiff is only entitled to costs as taxed in a suit falling under s. 7, cl. xi, sub-cl. (e) of the Court Fees Act.

(6) 32 C. 228.
(7) 31 M. 14; 3 M. L. T. 8; 17 M. L. J. 478.
(8) 42 Ind. Cas. 111; 2 P. L. J. 713; 3 P. L. W. 195 & 277.

Issue No. 7.—I pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff against the first defendant for possession and costs as taxed in a suit for possession under s. 7 cl. xi (e) of the Court Fees Act.

K. S. D. Order accordingly.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION SUIT No. 3061 OF 1924.

December 19, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Taraporewala.

BAHADARMAL GURMUKHRAI NEMANI —PLAINTIFF

versus

MOHANLAL SURCHAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS.

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 4—Easement, definition of—Easement and freehold right, distinction between —Adverse possession—Projection over neighbour's land —Right acquired, nature of.

Where any part of the house of one owner projects over the soil of a neighbouring owner, the right acquired by the first owner is in the nature of possession of the column of air occupied by the said projection and the right is in the nature of the diminution of the freehold of the neighbouring owner and not merely in the nature of an easement. [p. 1009, col. 1.]

The right of easement as defined by s. 4 of the Easements Act is something less than the right of freehold and that something can be acquired for the benefit of the freehold under certain circumstances as laid down in the Easements Act, but this does not mean that whatever is for the benefit of the dominant owner must necessarily be an easement and nothing else. [p. 1009, col. 2.]

The shutters of the windows of the plaintiff's house opened on the defendant's land and the plaintiff also had certain weather-frames attached to his windows which projected over the defendant's land. The shutters and the weather-frames had existed for a period of over twelve years:

Held, that the plaintiff had acquired a right to maintain the shutters and the weather-frames by adverse possession and that he was entitled to restrain the defendant from building on his land so as to interfere with the right of the plaintiff to open the shutters on the defendant's land or to interfere with the weather frames. [p. 1010, col. 2.]

Case-law discussed.

Mr. Kanga, Advocate-General (with him Mr. Mulla), for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Bahadurji, for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the plaintiff abandoned at the hearing his claim that certain windows in the west wall of his building were ancient windows and that he was entitled to an easement of light and air through the said windows. He has confined his claim to an alleged right to open the shutters of the said windows on the defendants' property, and, further, to maintain weather-frames on the windows in the west wall on the second and third floors of the plaintiff's building as they exist at present. The said right to open the shutters at will and to maintain the said weather-frames on the windows is based on the ground that the said windows have been so opened and the said weather-frames have been in existence for more than twelve years and that the plaintiff is entitled to the said rights not by way of easement but by way of adverse possession of the column of air on the defendants' property, in which the said shutters open and on which the said weather-frames project.

The defendants have contended that the right to open the shutters of the windows as well as the right to maintain the weather-frames on the windows are in the nature of an easement and they can be acquired only, under the Indian Easements Act, by enjoyment for twenty years prior to the date of the suit. It is conceded by the plaintiff that if the said rights can only be acquired by way of easement, he has not done so, and he must fail.

The question as to the nature of the right acquired by the owner of one tenement having a part of his tenement projecting over his neighbour's tenement was considered in Mohanlal Jaichand v. Amratlal Bechardas (1). In that case the projecting part was the roof of the defendant's house. The said roof had projected for more than thirty years. Therefore, in either view of the case whether it was treated as an easement or as possession of the space occupied by the projecting roof, the defendant was entitled to succeed. Mr. Justice West, however, expressed his opinion, that the view that the enjoyment by the defendant of the right to project his roof was in the nature of possession by him of the space occupied by the projecting roof, commended itself to the Court.

(1) 3 B. 174; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 117.

The question again came before this Court in Ranchod Shamji v. Abdulbhai Mitabhai (2). There the question was whether the plaintiff's beams which were over-hanging the defendant's soil gave the plaintiff a right to the column of air above the said beams. Jenkins, C. J., who gave the judgment of the Court, held that the defendant being the owner of the soil was entitled prima facie to all above it, that the diminution in his rights by reason of the beams did not extend beyond the protrusion of the beams themselves, that is to say, so far as the beams protruded on the defendant's soil, the plaintiff was entitled by possession to the column of air on which the beams rested. He relied upon the judgments in Corbett v. Hill (3) and Harris v. De Pinna (4). Those cases clearly lay down that where any part of the house of one owner projects over the soil of the neighbouring owner the right acquired by the first owner is in the nature of possession of the column of air occupied by the said projection and that the said right is in the nature of the diminution of the freehold of the neighbouring owner and not merely in the nature of an easement.

It was contended before me by Mr. Bahadurji on behalf of the defendants that in view of the definition of "easement" in the Indian Easements Act those cases do not apply to India. The "easement" is defined by s. 4 as follows :—

"An easement is a right which the owner or occupier of certain land possesses, as such, for the beneficial enjoyment of that land, to do and continue to do something, or to prevent and continue to prevent something being done, in or upon, or in respect of, certain other land not his own."

(2) 28 B. 428; 6 Bom. L. R. 356.
(3) (1870) 9 Eq. 671; 39 L. J. Ch. 547; 22 L. T. 263.
(4) (1886) 33 Ch. D. 238; 56 L. J. Ch. 344; 54 L. T. 38; 50 J. P. 308.

Mr. Bahadurji has argued that the opening of the windows and the maintenance of the weather-frames being for the benefit of the dominant tenant, the rights acquired in respect thereof come within the definition of "easement." In my opinion, the fallacy in the argument is this that whatever is for the benefit of the dominant tenant must be an easement and cannot be anything else. The enjoyment of the freehold is also for the benefit of the dominant owner. The right of easement is something less than the right of freehold and that something can be acquired for the benefit of the freehold under certain circumstances as laid down in the Indian Easements Act, but that does not mean that whatever is for the benefit of the dominant owner must necessarily be an easement and nothing else.

Mr. Bahadurji has relied upon two later judgments of this Court in support of his contention, namely, Chhotalal Hirachand v. Manilal Gagalbhai (5) and Mulia Bhana v. Sundar Dana (6). The question in those cases was a claim to maintain eaves projecting on the defendant's soil for the purpose of discharge of water on the defendant's land. Now the right to discharge water over the defendant's land clearly can never be in the nature of possession of freehold. It must necessarily be in the nature of an easement. The cases, therefore, are not directly in point so far as the claim to maintain a projection over the defendant's soil, which may be in the nature of possession, is concerned.

The learned Chief Justice has tried to distinguish the decisions in Corbett v. Hill (3) and Ranchood Shamji v. Abdullabhai Mithabhai (2). He concedes that the projection in Corbett v. Hill (3) was reserved from the freehold by the transferor, which means that a projection on the neighbour's soil might be in the nature of a freehold; if it could not be, then, it could not be reserved even by the transferor. If such a part of the freehold could be reserved by the transferor by allowing a projection on his own soil, there is no reason why the neighbouring owner should not be entitled to acquire a right to such projection by adverse possession by encroaching upon the freehold of his neighbour to the extent of the projection.

(5) 20 Ind. Cas. 246; 37 B. 491; 15 Bom. L. R. 551.
(6) 21 Ind. Cas. 352; 38 B. 1; 15 Bom. L. R. 876.

Mr. Bahadurji had to contend that possession could only be of the soil and everything above and everything below it: and that there could not be possession of a column of air over-hanging the soil, because once it is conceded that you can have freehold in a projection over-hanging on the defendant's soil, and occupying a certain column of air above that soil, a neighbouring owner would be entitled by adverse possession to claim such a right in freehold. What was considered in Corbett v. Hill (3) was whether the projection carried with it the right not only to the column of air occupied by the projection but the air above and the air below it to the soil, and the Court held that the possession was only of the column of air occupied by the projection and that the column of air above and below belonged to the neighbouring owner who was the owner of the soil.

The same principle is laid down in Harris v. De Pinna (4). In that case also the projection was treated as part of the freehold and the claim to the air above the projection which was in dispute was considered to be in the nature of an easement. There was no question in that case of the plaintiff being entitled to maintain his projection which had been there for 12 years.

The point was also considered in Rathinavelu Mudaliar v. Kolandavelu Pillai (7). The Madras High Court followed the decision in Mohanlal Jechand v. Amratlal Bechardas (1), and held that the cornice over-hanging a neighbour's land could not be removed, if it had been in existence for more than 12 years. There also it was held that such projection was in the nature of possession and not an easement.

A later English case, Laybourn v. Gridley (8), was also cited to me where Corbett v. Hill (3), was followed by the learned Judge.

The last case cited before me was a judgment of this High Court in Kashibai Kalidas v. Vallavbhai Wagjibhai (9). There also the right in question was the right of the discharge of water from the eaves of the defendant on to the plaintiff's land. In that case, the real point considered was the right which was claimed, namely, to discharge rain water from the projecting eaves. There the learned Appellate Judge, from whose judgment the appeal was preferred to this Court, held that the plaintiff had lost his title to the land up to the line of the defendant's projection. Macleod, C. J., rightly criticised that decision as very startling and obviously wrong. No doubt even where the projection exists over a neighbour's property for more than 12 years, the person owning the projection cannot claim anything more than the right to possession of the column of air which the projection occupies.

The point which is before me was not before this Court in any of these three subsequent cases, but in my opinion, it was directly in issue in the first two cases of Mohanlal Jechand v. Amratlal Bechardas (1) and Ranchod Shamji v. Abdulabhai Mithabhai (2). I entirely agree with the views in those judgments. I hold that the plaintiff having opened his shutters and maintained his weather-frames projecting for more than 12 years on the defendants' soil, he has acquired a right thereto by adverse possession, and he is entitled to an injunction against the defendants restraining them from building so as to interfere with the right of the plaintiff to open the shutters on the defendants' land or to interfere with the said weather-frames.

There will, therefore, be a decree in favour of the plaintiff for an injunction restraining the defendants from building so as to interfere with the weather-frames and the column of air on which the plaintiff's shutters open. Plaintiff to pay all the defendants' costs occasioned by the plaintiff's claim as regards easement of light and air, and the defendants do pay the plaintiff's costs of the issues raised in the suit.

Z. K. Suit decreed.

(7) 29 M. 511; 16 M. L. J. 281.
(8) (1892) 2 Ch. 53; 61 L. J. Ch. 352; 40 W. R. 474.
(9) 57 Ind. Cas. 356; 24 Bom. L. R. 305; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 83; 46 B 827.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 50-B OF 1924.
February 17, 1925.
Present :—Mr. Baker, J. C.
KRISHNA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 AND 2—APPELLANTS
versus
BAYAJI—PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS NOS. 3 AND 4—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Berar—Stridhan—Property inherited by woman from father—Succession.

Under the Hindu Law prevalent in Berar a woman takes an absolute interest in property inherited by her from her father, and on her death it devolves on her daughter in preference to her son.

Gulappa v. Tayawa, 31 B. 453; 9 Bom. L. R. 834, followed.

Appeal against a decree of the Additional District Judge, Amraoti, dated the 22nd January 1924, in Civil Appeal No. 84 of 1923.

Mr. N. G. Bose, R. B., for the Appellants.

Mr. R. B. Gadgil, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit between a brother and a sister for possession of the land in suit. The plaintiff is the daughter of one Gujaba by his wife Gopi and claimed the land in dispute as her mother's stridhan, from defendant No. 1, her brother. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are transferees from the father of the plaintiff and defendant No. 1, Gujaba acting as guardian of his minor son Krishna.

It was never disputed in the lower Courts that the land was stridhan of Gopi, the plaintiff's mother, the case set up being that the plaintiff was not the daughter of Gopi but was of another wife of Gujaba, and that she was born in 1897, consequently the suit brought in 1922 is barred by limitation and adverse possession.

All these points have been found against the defendants by the lower Courts.

Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 make this second appeal.

The first point raised is one of limitation on the ground that Ex. D 1 shows that Krishna was born in 1902, and as the plaintiff admits that she is 3 years older than Krishna she must have been born in 1899, and the suit is barred by limitation.

The Courts below found on the evidence that the plaintiff is the daughter of Gopi and that she was born in 1901 and not in 1899. There is thus no question of limitation, and I cannot go behind this finding in second appeal.

It is further contended that no enquiry was made as to the right of the plaintiff's mother in the property. It is contended that if she got it from her mother or husband, it would go, under the ordinary law, to the male reversioner. It was, however, never contended in the Courts below or in the grounds of appeal that the property was not her stridhan, and it is now too late to raise this contention. Even if the plaintiff's mother inherited it from her father, then under the law prevalent in Bombay and Berar, Gopi would take an absolute interest in it and on her death it would devolve on her daughter in preference to her son: cf. Gulappa v. Tayawa (1).

It is next contended that defendants Nos. 2 and 3, Vithoba and Manohar, are subsequent transferees from Gujaba, Ex. P 2, being a lease executed by Gujaba, guardian of his minor son Krishna, to Manohar, from whom Vithoba took a sub-lease. It is contended that they are transferees in good faith and even if Krishna is not heir they are entitled to return of the consideration or to a proportionate part of it, about half the term of the lease, which was for 25 years, having expired.

It is also contended that they are not liable to mesne profits as they are not in wrongful possession. Both the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 lived with their father who was their guardian, and the defendants had no reason to suppose that Gujaba had no right to lease out the land on behalf of Krishna. The defendants, however, held under a person who had no title. The plaintiff obtained no benefit from the lease. The defendants can sue their lessor in respect of the failure of consideration.

I see no reason for interference and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

G. R. D. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 31 B. 453; 9 Bom. L. R. 834.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION SUIT No. 1162 OF 1919.

February 12, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Taraporewala.

HARDAYAL SHIVLAL—PLAINTIFFS

versus

Haji ADAM GOOLMAHOMED—DEFENDANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 52—Insolvency—Dividend payable to creditor of insolvent, whether can be attached by person holding decree against creditor.

Moneys in the hands of an Official Assignee which are payable to a judgment-debtor who is a creditor of the insolvent by way of dividend declared by the Official Assignee, are attachable under O. XXI, r. 52, of the C. P. C. [p. 1012, col. 1.]

Prout v. Gregory, (1890) 24 Q. B. D. 281; 59 L. J. Q. B. 118; 61 L. T. 696; 38 W. R. 204; 7 Morrell 1, Dolphin v. Layton, (1879) 4 C. P. D. 130; 48 L. J. C. P. 426; 27 W. R. 786 and Joosub Haji Alli v. N. W. Kemp, 4 Bom. L. R. 929; 26 B. 809, referred to.

Mr. Mody of Malvi, Mody, Ranchhoddas & Co., for the Applicants.

JUDGMENT.—The point for decision in this matter is whether moneys in the hands of the Official Assignee, which are payable to the judgment-debtors as creditors of the insolvent by way of dividend declared by the Official Assignee, are attachable under O. XXI, r. 52, of the C. P. C.

I have been told that there have been judgments of single Judges of this Court disallowing such attachment, following the English cases on the point. There is no judgment of a Judge of this Court with reasons given for the decisions on the point which might be of some assistance to me in deciding this question. The judgments of single Judges, however, are not binding on me.

Now there is no doubt that in England it has been held that the moneys in the hands of the Official Receiver payable by way of dividend to the judgment-debtor as creditor of the insolvent are not a debt liable to be attached within the meaning of O. XLV, r 1, of the Supreme Court Rules. The point was decided in Prout v. Gregory (1), on appeal from the Order of a Master discharging a garnishee order nisi, referred by a Judge at Chambers to the Court. The judgment of Lord Coleridge, C. J., is no doubt based on a broad ground, namely, that to make a garnishee order in such a case would be to interfere with the administration of an estate which has to be administered under the provisions of a Statute (Bankruptcy Act 1883, 46 & 47 Vic. c. 52) expressly dealing with the subject-matter, and containing express directions as to the manner in which the subject-matter is to be dealt with.

The judgment of Mathew, J., however, is put on the ground that the amount of the dividend so payable to the creditor of the insolvent cannot be treated as a debt and that the Official Receiver is not a debtor. In support of the opinion he cites the judgment in Dolphin v. Layton. (2), where it was held that money in the hands of the Registrar of a County Court as an Officer of the Court was not subject to the process of attachment on the ground that the moneys were not a debt due by the Registrar.

Whether Lord Coleridge, C. J., was right under the English Law in laying down the broad ground on which he disallowed the attachment or not, in my opinion, the matter is covered by O. XXI, r. 52, of the C. P. C. That rule provides for attachment of property in the custody of any Court or public officer. I find that there is no similar provision in the Supreme Court Rules, the only provision in the Supreme Court Rules being the rules under the heading "Attachment of Debts" and, as put by Mr. Justice Mathew in Prout v. Gregory (1), unless the moneys sought to be attached are a debt, they cannot come under O. XLV, r. 1, of the Supreme Court Rules, so as to be liable to be attached. The provision in the C. P. C. for attachment of debts is made by O. XXI, r. 46. Rule 52 deals with attachment of moneys in the custody of any Court or public officer. A public officer is defined by s. 2, cl. 17, sub-cl. (h), of the C. P. C., and the Official Assignee is a public officer coming within that definition. It was so held in Joosub Haji Alli v. N. W. Kemp (3).

There is no doubt that the amount in the hands of the Official Assignee which is payable by way of dividend to the judgment-debtors in this matter is the amount in the hands of a public officer and is payable by the public officer to the judgment-debtors. I do not think that by making an order on the Official Assignee to pay the amount to the decree-holder, who is the creditor of the person entitled to the dividend, I should be in any way interfering with the administration of the insolvent's estate. Immediately the creditor goes to the Official Assignee and asks for the moneys he is entitled to receive the same.

If the Official Assignee does not pay the dividend to the creditor, no suit can be filed against him, but the Court may, on the application of the creditor who is aggrieved by such refusal, order him to pay it, and also to pay out of his own money interest thereon at such rate as may be prescribed for the time that it is withheld, and the costs of the application as provided by s. 74 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act.

By this order I direct the public officer

(1) (1890) 24 Q. B. D. 281; 59 L. J. Q. B. 113; 61 L. T. 693; 38 W. R. 204; 7 Morrell 1.

(2) (1879) 4 C P. D. 130; 48 L. J. C. P. 426; 27 W. R. 786.

(3) 4 Bom. L. R. 929; 26 B. 809.

to pay the moneys to the decree-holder of the creditor instead of to the creditor.

Z. K. Order accordingly.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND RENT APPEAL No. 16 OF 1924.

February 16, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

KUNJAN LAL—DEFENDANT No. 5—APPELLANT

versus

Raja RUKMANGAD SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND BALDEO SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), ss. 108 (15), 126 (1), (2)—Co-sharers—Suit for profits—Lámbardar, liability of—Gross negligence, proof of—Decree, basis of.

In a case falling under cl. (2) of s. 126 of the Oudh Rent Act, the lambardar is entitled to collect rent from the tenants and to act on behalf of the other co-sharers, and is liable to the latter for the collections. [p. 1013, col. 2.]

Where in a suit for profits against the lambardar the plaintiff establishes gross negligence on the part of the lambardar, it is the duty of the lambardar to prove that he could not collect more than a certain percentage of the gross rental. In the absence of such proof the plaintiff is entitled to a decree on the basis of the gross rental. [p. 1014, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Hardoi, dated the 22nd April 1924, confirming that of the First Class, Tahsil Bilgram, District Hardoi, dated the 15th July 1922.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Appellant.

Mr. Bishesharnath Srivastava, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.—The defendant-appellant Kunjan Lal is the lambardar of village Marai which is a pattidari estate. The plaintiffs-respondents brought a suit for recovery of their share of the rent from the hands of the appellant. On the pleadings in the case the following issue arose for decision:—"What should be the basis of calculating profits, gross rental (on the plaintiffs) or actual collections (on the defendants)" and this is the only issue with which now I am concerned in second appeal. On the evidence in the case the Court of first instance came to the conclusion that the true basis for calculating the profits was the gross rental and on that basis decreed the suit of the plaintiffs. The defendant took the matter in appeal to the Court of the District Judge of Hardoi. The learned Judge at the outset of his judgment says that several grounds of objections were taken in appeal but the appellant's Counsel confined his argument to one point only and that point was that the profits should have been calculated on the actual collections and not on gross rental. On a careful consideration of the evidence in the case the learned Judge in agreement with the Court of first instance has come to the conclusion that the defendant-appellant was guilty of gross negligence and in the absence of any other evidence produced by the appellant he found that the gross rental was the only possible basis on which the profits could be calculated.

At the hearing of the appeal two points were urged against the decision of the learned Judge. It was urged that some of the co-sharers including some of the plaintiffs-respondents have partly collected their own share of rent from the tenants and have also ejected some of them. In those circumstances it was contended that the lambardar's liability ceased because his right to collect the rent of the tenure also ceased. In support of this contention reliance was placed upon a decision of the Board of Revenue in Hanuman Singh v. Raja Syed Ahmad Ali (1).

The learned members of the Board held in that case that a lambardar is not entitled to collect rent from tenants or otherwise act on behalf of the other co-sharers under s. 126 (1) of the Oudh Rent Act, except in mahals in which by custom of agreement he has the power of so acting. The lower Court has with reference to a series of decisions of this Court given its finding against the appellant's contention. I am satisfied that the opinion of the Court below is correct on that point.

In so far as the decision of the Board of Revenue is concerned it is enough to say that that was a case under cl. 1 of s. 126 and not under cl. 2 of the same section. That there is a difference in the two clauses is admitted by the learned Members of the Board themselves. The case before me is admittedly one which falls under the second clause of s. 126. The first argument, therefore, fails.

The second argument urged on behalf of the appellant is that the finding that the appellant was guilty of gross negligence should not result in saddling him with entire liability for the gross rental, and prayer is made for remission of an issue as to what amount of rent remained uncollected for the reason of the gross negligence of the appellant. I am not prepared to accede to this prayer and the reason is very simple. In the first place no such case was put forward by the appellant either in the Court of first instance or before the learned District Judge in appeal. In the second place the plaintiffs-respondents having discharged the onus of establishing gross negligence on the part of the lambardar it was obviously the duty of the lambardar to prove that he could not collect more than a certain percentage of the gross rental. He has produced no evidence whatsoever to sustain the onus which lay on him. On the other hand he has produced no accounts. He himself did not give evidence nor he invited either of the Courts below as I have already said to consider the question which he has now raised before me. In the circumstances there was no alternative left to allow profits to the plaintiffs except on the basis of gross rental.

(1) Select Decision No. 6 of 1922.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEALS Nos. 30 AND 31 OF 1923.

November 23, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Mr. Justice Rankin.

RAMA NATH SAUT AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL AS TRUSTEE TO THE ESTATE OF LATE MANIKLAL SEAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 102 (e), 103B—Record of Rights, entry in—Presumption of correctness—Rebuttal—Landlord and tenant—Suit for rent—Entry in Record of Rights proved incorrect—Procedure.

Section 102 (e) of the Bengal Tenancy Act requires a Revenue Officer to determine the existing rent and not to settle a fair rent in respect of a tenancy. [p. 1016, col. 1.]

After a Record of Rights has been finally published a presumption arises under s. 103B of the Bengal Tenancy Act that the entry therein with regard to the rent of a tenancy is correct; in other words in respect of an entry of rent, the presumption arises that what has been recorded is a correct statement of the existing rent. This presumption may, however, be rebutted and the entry may be proved by evidence to be incorrect. This evidence may be either evidence external to the settlement proceedings, or evidence of matters apparent on the face of those proceedings. Where, for instance, the very statement of his reasons for his conclusions given by the Revenue Officer shows that he did not determine the existing rent but an imaginary rent, the presumption with regard to the correctness of the entry in the Record of Rights is sufficiently rebutted. [p. 1016, cols. 1 & 2.]

Case-law reviewed.

Where in a suit for rent the landlord relies upon the relevant entry in a finally published Record of Rights, but the entry is proved to be incorrect, the only course open to the Court is to make a decree on the basis of the admission of the tenant. [p. 1016, col. 2.]

Letters Patent Appeals against the decrees of Mr. Justice Newbould, dated the 11th of May 1923, in Appeals from Appellate Decrees Nos. 1010 and 1006 of 1921.

FACTS appear from the following judgment of Newbould, J.—These five appeals are preferred against the decision of the District Judge of Midnapur in appeal against the decision of the Munsif of Tamluk in certain rent-suits. The question in each of these appeals is whether the plaintiff who is the appellant before me, is entitled to recover rent at the rates stated in the duly published Record of Rights. In three of these second appeals Nos. 1007 to 1009 arising out of Suits Nos. 2176, 2232 and 2259 both Courts have held that the entries in the Record of Rights have been rebutted by the decrees in contested rent-suits prior to the Record of Rights. On behalf of the appellant it is contended that if the judgments were read as well as the decrees it would show that the question of the rate of rent was not contested. It is stated that at that time the Record of Rights was being prepared and the plaintiff was willing to leave the question of the rental to be settled by the Settlement Officer and did not think it necessary to prove the rates claimed by him in the suits. I was asked to admit the judgments at the hearing of these appeals and this I refused to do as it was clearly the duty of the appellant if he wished to rely on those judgments to have filed them if not in the First Court certainly in the lower Appellate Court.

But it appears from the judgment of the Munsif that one of these judgments was filed with the decree relied on. The examination of that judgment does not support the appellant's contention. I am unable to hold that on the material before them that the lower Courts were wrong in holding that the presumption arising from the entries in the Record of Rights had been rebutted by these decrees.

In Appeals Nos. 1006 and 1010 arising out of Suits Nos. 2225 and 2231 the evidence of the Record of Rights had been rejected on another ground, and that is, that the mode of calculation adopted by the Revenue Officer in assessing rent was illegal and consequently the entries in the Record of Rights relating to the rate of rent must be held to be incorrect.

It appears that in the draft Record of Rights the rents payable were not entered but the entry was made that the tenancies were liable to assessment of rent. Thereupon the plaintiff filed an objection under s. 103 of the Bengal Tenancy Act asking that rent might be recorded as stated in his petition. In the two cases which I am now considering the tenants first appeared and asked for time for compromise. Time was granted but no compromise was effected. Then the landlord appeared and the tenants did not again appear and the landlord produced certified copies of certain solenamas as well as collection papers. The Revenue Officer recorded rents on certain principles which had been laid down by the Settlement Officer in an inspection note. Both the lower Courts have held that the directions of the Settlement Officer were not binding on the Revenue Officer performing the function of a judicial character under the Bengal Tenancy Act and that, therefore, the Revenue Officer acted illegally and the entries in the Record of Rights cannot be treated as properly made.

In support of this view of the case they relied on the case of Bagha Mowar v. Ram Lakhan Misser (1). But the facts of that case are clearly distinguishable. In that case the only material on which the rents were recorded was an unregistered document which was inadmissible in evidence, because it ought to have been registered. Here it would appear that there was evidence to support the case made out by the landlord and that evidence was unrebutted. There is no reason to suppose that the rents recorded were higher than the rents claimed by the landlord. If in applying the rule laid down by his superior officer the Revenue Officer recorded rents at a lower rate than the evidence supported the tenant certainly has no cause of complaint and I am unable to hold his conduct was such as to render the entries in the Record of Rights illegal, or such that the legal presumption of their correctness did not apply. In these two cases no evidence has been given to rebut that presumption or such as has been given has been held by the lower Courts to be insufficient to rebut the presumption. In these two cases I hold that the plaintiff is entitled to rent at the rate claimed by him.

There is one other small point that has been taken by the appellant and that is, that in order to prove the ground in which the Revenue Officer recorded the rent in Suit No. 2225 it was necessary to depend on a document, Ex. Q, which wes filed for the first time in the Court of Appeal. This was necessary in order to show that the Revenue Officer's judgment, Ex. Q, referred to this case as well as to Suit No. 2231. Though the learned District Judge did not, as he should have done, record his reasons for admitting this document I hold that there were sufficient reasons for allowing it to be admitted. It has been held that the omission to record the reasons does not make such evidence inadmissible. However as I said with regard to this Suit No. 2225 the appellant's case succeeds. It is, therefore, unnecessary to say more in this point.

The result is that Appeals Nos. 1007, 1008 and 1009 are dismissed with costs. Appeals Nos. 1006 and 1010 are decreed with costs and the judgments and decrees of two lower Courts are set aside and the plaintiff will get decrees in those suits for the full amounts he claimed.

Babu Apurba Chandra Mukherjee, for the Appellants.

Babus Gunada Charan Sen and Santosh Kumar Bose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—These are two appeals under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent from the judgment of Mr. Justice Newbould in two suits for recovery of arrears of rent.

In each suit the question was as to the amount of rent annually payable by the tenant to the landlord. The landlord relied upon the relevant entry in a finally published Record of Rights. The tenant contended that the entry had been rebutted and no reliance should be placed thereon. The primary Court took divergent views in the two suits. In one instance, it was held that the decree should be based on the entry, while in the other it was ruled that the decree should be in accordance with the admission of the tenant. There were appeals to the District Judge in both the cases. He came to the conclusion that in neither suit should the decree be based upon the entry in the Record of Rights. In second appeal to this Court, Mr. Justice Newbould has reversed the decision of the District Judge and has directed that the decree in each case be entered in favour of the landlord on the basis of the entry in the Record of Rights. The substantial question in controversy consequently is, whether the entry in the Record of Rights has been effectively rebutted.

(1) 41 Ind. Cas. 801; 27 C. L. J. 107.

Under s. 102, cl. (e) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the Revenue Officer is required to record the rent payable at the time the Record of Rights is being prepared. As pointed out in Secretary of State v. Nityе Singh (2) and Luchmi Pershad v. Ekdeshwar Singh (3), this provision requires the Revenue Officer to determine the existing rent and not to settle a fair rent in respect of the tenancy. After the Record of Rights has been finally published, s. 103B comes into operation. Sub-section (3) of that section provides that every entry in a Record of Rights so published shall be evidence of the matter referred to in such entry and shall be presumed to be correct until it is proved by evidence to be incorrect. Consequently, after final publication the presumption arises that the entry is correct; in other words, in respect of an entry of rent, the presumption arises that what has been recorded is a correct statement of the existing rent. This presumption may be rebutted, and the entry may be proved by evidence to be incorrect. This evidence, as was explained in the case of Bogha Mower v. Ram Lakhan Misser (1) may be either evidence external to the settlement proceedings or evidence of matters apparent on the face of those proceedings. To take one illustration, in the case of Sheonandan Persad Sukul v. Bacha Raut (4) evidence was produced to show that the rent actually payable at the time of the preparation of the Record of Rights was different from the rent entered in the Record of Rights. This evidence may be either anterior in point of time or subsequent in date to the Record of Rights. To take another illustration, as pointed out in the case of Bogha Mower v. Ram Lakhan Misser (1), it may appear on the face of the proceedings of the Revenue Officer that the entry is erroneous. The case before us is of the latter description.

The Revenue Officer had to determine the existing rent in respect of each of these tenancies. But the very statement of his reasons for his conclusions which are set out in his order, dated the 9th December 1916, shows that he did not determine the existing rent. He had, indeed, relevant evidence before him ; but in the consideration of that evidence, he did not apply his own judgment; on the other hand, he applied the principles which had been formulated for his guidance by his superior officer. It is plain that what he has determined is not the rent actually payable, but an imaginary rent. Whether that is fair rent it is impossible to determine; but this much is plain that it is not the existing rent in respect of either of these tenancies. In such circumstances, the conclusion is inevitable that the entry has been rebutted by evidence, namely, by such evidence as appears on the face of the proceeding of the Revenue Officer himself. We have consequently no doubt that the entry must be deemed to have been proved incorrect. This leads to the position that the landlord has failed to establish the rate of rent as alleged by him, and the only course open to the Court is to make a decree on the basis of the admission of the tenants.

We have been pressed by the landlord to remand the case to the Court of first instance in order that the suit may be re-tried; but we are clearly of opinion that we should not accede to this request. We cannot ignore the fact that the litigation has already lasted for more than five years in four Courts; and the circumstance that the decree will be made on the basis of the admission made by the tenants, will not preclude an enquiry by the Court as to the actual contract rate of rent in a subsequent suit.

The result is that these appeals are allowed, the decrees of Mr. Justice Newbould set aside and those of the District Judge restored with costs of two hearings in this Court.

(2) 21 C. 38; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 658.
(3) 4 Ind. Cas. 577; 13 C. W. N. 18.
(4) 4 Ind. Cas. 54; 9 C. L. J. 284.

Z. K. Appeals allowed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1 OF 1924.

December 11, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

GANESH PARSHAD AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

JOT SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11, Expl. IV —Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 96—Mortgage—Payment made by mortgagor to one of several mortgagees—Suit on mortgage—Decree for sale—Suit by mortgagor to recover money paid by him—Res judicata—Limitation—Hindu Law—Money received by father—Pious duty of sons to re-pay amount received.

B, L, and S were joint mortgagees of certain property. The mortgagor remitted the mortgage-money to the names of the three mortgagees by Money Order, but the amount was received by S alone who did not pay their share of the mortgage-money to the other mortgagees. L and S having died the sons of L and S and B subsequently brought a suit for sale on foot of the mortgage in which the mortgagor put forward the defence of payment but the Court held that payment to S alone did not amount to satisfaction of the mortgage-deed and made a decree. Thereupon the mortgagor brought the present suit against the sons of S to recover from them the amount received by S together with interest:

Held, (1) that with regard to one-third of the amount in suit the plaintiff's claim was barred by the doctrine of res judicata inasmuch as in the previous suit he should have put forward the claim that at least one-third of the amount received by S should be given credit for to him as against the sons of S; [p. 1018, col. 1.]

(2) that the claim with regard to the remaining two-thirds was not barred by res judicata as the Court in the previous case could not have given a decree to the mortgagor against the sons of S for that amount; [ibid]

(3) that the suit was governed by Art. 96 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act and that limitation began to run from the date of the judgment in the mortgage suit when the mortgagor discovered his mistake that S alone had been paid the money by the Post Office; [ibid.]

(4) that the mere keeping of the money by S or delay in distributing it did not amount to mis-appropriation on the part of S and that the sons of S were, therefore, under a pious duty to re-pay the money received by their father; [ibid.]

(5) that the present suit was not premature inasmuch as a decree for sale had been passed against the plaintiff and the plaintiff had been damaged by the threat of the sale of his property. [p. 1018, cols. 1 & 2.]

Second appeal against a decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Sitapur, dated the 15th September 1923, setting aside that of the Munsif, Sitapur, dated the 13th May 1922.

Mr. Radha Krishen, for the Appellants.

Messrs. H. D. Chandra and Bhagat Sarup, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The issues which arise in this appeal are clearly stated in the carefully drawn up grounds of appeal. A mortgage was executed by one Ajudhia Singh, father of the plaintiff, on 23rd of March, 1914, in favour of Lalta Prasad for Rs. 99-4. A partition suit was instituted to which the members of the family of the mortgagee were parties. This was in October 1914. These parties, therefore, issued a notice to the plaintiff, Jot Singh, whose father had died in the meantime, that he should not pay the mortgage-money to Lalta Prasad alone. On 18th February 1915, Jot Singh remitted Rs. 120 by Money Order to three persons of the family Barmha Din, Lalta Prasad and Sita Ram, each of them heads of their branches of the family and owning one-third of the joint family property. Unfortunately Sita Ram alone received the money and apparently did not pay their share to the others.

On 29th October, 1920, two sons of Lalta Prasad, two sons of Sita Ram (Lalta Prasad and Sita Ram having died in the meantime) and Barmha Din sued for sale and obtained a decree on foot of the mortgage on 14th January, 1921 (see judgment Ex. 4). In that suit Jot Singh put forward the defence of payment, but the Court held that payment to Sita Ram alone was not satisfaction of the debt and secondly that payment to Sita Ram also was not proved because his signature on the receipt was not proved.

On 17th November, 1921, the present suit was filed by Jot Singh for recovery of Rs. 120 with interest from the sons of Sita Ram by name Ganesh Prasad and Jwala Prasad. The defence was:—

(1) res judicata by virtue of the judgment of 14th January 1921,

(2) limitation on the ground that cause of action accrued on the date of payment on 18th February, 1915,

(3) that Sita Ram had misappropriated the money and so it was not the pious duty of his sons to r-epay, and

(4) that the suit was premature as the decree for sale had neither been satisfied nor executed.

These defences were repelled by the lower Appellate Court and hence this appeal.

One argument as regards res judicata must prevail. At the time of the former suit the sons of Lalta Prasad, the sons of Sita Ram and Barmha Din were separate. Jot Singh, therefore, ought to have insisted that at least the money which fell to the share of Sita Ram should be deducted from the amount found due by the Court. As regards that one-third share of the money it appears to me that the argument of the learned Counsel for appellant must succeed. As regards the two-thirds of the money that question could not have been decided in the former suit. Even if it had been held in the former suit that the entire money had been received by Sita Ram, remission would have been allowed by that Court only to the extent of one-third due to Sita Ram because it was not possible in a suit for sale by the mortgagee to pass a money-decree in favour of the defendant. I hold that the present suit is barred as regards one-third of the amount claimed.

As to limitation the appellants' learned Counsel himself referred to Art. 96 of the Limitation Act. Accepting that contention the time from which the period of limitation begins to run is when the mistake becomes known to the plaintiff. In the present case the plaintiff became aware of the mistake that Sita Ram alone had been paid the money by the Post Office and not all the payees, when judgment was delivered on 14th January 1921. No evidence was led either by examination of the plaintiff or otherwise that the plaintiff had become aware of the mistake earlier. The suit is, therefore, within limitation.

As regards the question of mis-appropriation there is no proof that Sita Ram misappropriated the money. The circumstances under which Sita Ram kept the money to himself are not known to the Court. It is quite possible that soon after receiving the money he may have died and been unable to distribute the money. Misappropriation is a question of intention and the mere keeping back of the money or delay in distributing it would not amount to mis-appropriation. As there is no proof of mis-appropriation the sons of Sita Ram are under a pious duty to pay the money received by their father and recoverable by the plaintiff. The suit is not premature because a decree for sale has been passed and the plaintiff has been damaged by the threat of sale of his property. Damage has been done to him and he is entitled to recover the money kept back by Sita Ram and not distributed to his co-sharers.

As to interest, I shall not interfere with the discretion exercised by the lower Court.

The appeal succeeds as to one-third. I decree it accordingly with proportionate costs of all Courts. The rest of the appeal is dismissed with proportionate costs of all the Courts.

Z. K. Appeal partly accepted.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 282-B AND 283-B OF 1923.

September 4, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

PUNJABRAO—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ATMARAM AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Hindu Law—Marriage in approved form—Presumption—Asura form—Test-marriage by exchange, whether asura Married sister, whether legal guardian—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 44, scope of—Alienation by person not de jure guardian, how far binding on minor—Right to impeach void alienations, whether personal.

The presumption under Hindu Law is that a marriage is in an approved form. [p. 1019, col. 2.]

The essence of the Asura form of marriage is the taking of a price for the bride. [ibid.]

In the case of a marriage by exchange, where a girl from one family is married to a boy of another family and vice versa, there being no question of the price for a bride, the marriage is in an approved form and not in the asura form. [ibid.]

Under the Hindu Law the married sister is not the guardian of her unmarried sister. [p. 1019, col. 2.]

Article 44 of the Limitation Act has no application to a sale effected not by a guardian but by a wholly unauthorized person. [p. 1020, col. 1.]

A person who is not a de jure guardian but purports to assume the guardianship of the estate of a minor Hindu is not in a better position than a stranger and has no authority to make any alienation. [p. 1020, col. 2.]

The right of a minor to set aside an alienation which is void is not personal but is also available to the transferee or the heir of the minor. [ibid.]

Appeals against the decrees of the Additional District Judge, Amraoti, dated the 18th July 1923, in Civil Appeals Nos. 15 and 16 of 1923.

Sir B. K. Bose, Messrs. M. Gupta, V. Bose and P. N. Rudra, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. B. Niyogi, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These two appeals are on the same point and may be disposed of in one judgment. They raise several points of law.

The facts are set out in the judgments of the Courts below. One Abhiman had three daughters, Saraswati, Bani and Gaya, a minor. Saraswati and Bani were married and Gaya was unmarried. After Abhiman's death Saraswati executed two sale-deeds, purporting to act for herself and Bani and as guardian of Gaya. The sale-deeds were executed to pay off her father's debts. Gaya subsequently married Kashirao. She died a minor and Kashirao as her heir sold the property to plaintiff, who brings these suits against the alienees from Saraswati. Both the suits were dismissed and the decrees were confirmed on appeal by the Second Additional District Judge, Amroati.

The following points arise in second appeal:—

(1) Had Saraswati authority to alienate Gaya's property?

(2) If so, was the alienation for legal necessity?

(3) Was Kashirao married to Gaya in an unapproved form?

(4) Has the plaintiff a right to seek to avoid these transactions?

The lower Appellate Court held that the existence of the debts due by Abhiman being proved, the onus was on the plaintiff to prove that the debts were barred by limitation, which he has failed to do. It further held that the alienations were thus for legal necessity and were made by a person who by reason of her near relationship to the minor and by her continued management could be looked upon as a person entitled to deal with the property as guardian; and hence her acts bind Gaya and her heirs.

The fact that the two married sisters believed that they were owners of 2/3rds of the property makes no difference, as they intended to transfer the whole field to pay off their father's debt.

The Additional District Judge further held that Kashirao was married to Gaya by exchange, which is not a marriage in an approved form, and hence his vendee cannot question the sale. It was also held by the First Court, and apparently accepted by the lower Appellate Court, that a purchaser from a minor's heirs cannot question the validity of a sale by the minor's guardian on the ground of absence of benefit or legal necessity.

I deal first with the question of marriage of Kashirao and Gaya being in an unapproved form. The presumption of law is that the marriage is in an approved form. It is contended that there is no evidence that the marriage is by exchange, but assuming it to be so, this does not necessarily cause the marriage to be in an unapproved form. In Chunilal Pranshankar v. Surajram Haribhai (1) it is laid down at page 442* that "the taint of the asura form lies in the gratuity paid to the giver of the bride for his benefit, not in anything paid to her; and it is the taint which determines the form." At page 437* it is stated: "Where the person who gives a girl in marriage receives money consideration for it, the substance of the transaction makes it, according to Hindu Law, not a gift but a sale of the girl. The money received is what is called bride-price; and that is the essential element of the asura form. The fact that the rites prescribed for the brahma form are gone through cannot take it out of that category, if there was pecuniary benefit to the giver of the girl." The essence of the asura form, therefore, would appear to be the taking of a price for a bride. There is no question of the price for a bride in the case of a marriage by exchange where a girl from one family is married to a boy of another family, and vice versa. I hold, therefore, that the marriage of Gaya and Kashirao is not in an unapproved form.

The next question is the right of Saraswati to dispose of Gaya's property, and whether it was for legal necessity or otherwise. It is perfectly clear that under Hindu Law the married sister is not a guardian. The learned Counsel for the appellant refers to In re, Gulbai (2), Thayammal v. Kuppanna Koundan (3) and Mayne's Hindu Law, page 284, para 211. It appears to be admitted by the lower Courts that Saraswati was not a de jure guardian. They have based their decision on Saraswati being a de facto guardian of the girl.

It has been laid down by the Privy

(1) 3 Ind. Cas. 765; 33 B. 433; 11 Bom. L. R. 708.
(2) 32 B. 50; 9 Bom. L. R. 923.
(3) 26 Ind. Cas. 179; 38 M. 1125; 27 M. L. J. 285.
*Pages of 33 B.—[Ed.]

Council in Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali (4) that "it is difficult to see how the situation of an unauthorized guardian is bettered by describing him as a de facto guardian. He may, by his de facto guardianship, assume important responsibilities in relation to the minor's property, but he cannot thereby clothe himself with legal power to sell it." In this connection it may be pointed out that Art. 44 of the Limitation Act has no application to the present case where the sale is effected, not by a guardian, but by a wholly unauthorised person: this is laid down in the same Privy Council judgment at page 223.*

The case, above quoted, was again followed by the Privy Council in Imambandi v. Mutsaddi (5), where at page 892† it is said that "the term 'de facto guardian'..... .....is misleading: it connotes the idea that people in charge of a child are by virtue of that fact invested with certain powers over the infant's property. This idea is quite erroneous; and the judgment of the Board in Mata Din v. Ahmad Ali (4) clearly indicated it."

It is true that both these cases are under Muhammadan Law, but it has been held by this Court in Husen v. Rajaram (6), that an alienation of the property of a minor by a person who is that minor's guardian de facto but not de jure is not mere voidable but absolutely void, and the minor need not sue to have it set aside before he can obtain possession of the property. Articles 44 and 91 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act do not apply to such a case. This is also a case of a Muhammadan. The same view has been taken by this Court in Vithu v. Devidas (7), which is a case of a Hindu where it was held that under the Hindu Law the step-mother is not the natural guardian of her minor step-son. She is not, therefore, a guardian within the meaning of Art. 44 of the Limitation Act, 1908, and so, that Article does not apply to an alienation by her. This has been followed in Shahoo v. Sheikh Mohiddin, (Second Appeal No. 140 B of 1916), decided on 20th April 1918.

The law, therefore, is clear. That a person who is not a de jure guardian but purports to assume the guardianship of the estate of a minor (Hindu), is not in a better position than a stranger and has no authority to make any alienations. It follows, therefore, that the view of the lower Courts as to the powers of Saraswati alienating the minor's property is wrong. The alienation is void and no question of necessity arises.

The only remaining question is as to the right of the plaintiff who is the alienee of the heir of the minor (for Kashirao being married in an approved form was the minor's heir). It has been contended on behalf of the respondents that the plaintiff cannot challenge the transfer. Reliance is placed on Muhammad Hafizullah Khan v. Bulaqi Mal (8) following Muthukumara Chetty v. Anthony Udayar (9), where it is held that the right to avoid appears to be a personal privilege, and though a minor may sue through a next friend to set aside a transfer even during his minority, he and he alone can exercise this personal privilege, and it was held in the Lahore case that the transferee is not entitled to question the previous transaction or to assume the privileges which are personal to the minor and to nobody else, whether the transfer was effected after or before the minor attained majority.

It may be observed that in both cases the transaction was treated as voidable, whereas in the present case it has already been shown that the transaction is void. The ruling in the Lahore case expressly dissents from the ruling of this Court in Mohanlal v. Kisan (10) which follows Dalchand v. Chand Khan (11) in which the ruling in Muthukumara Chetty v. Anthony Udayar (9), was considered and the view taken in Dalchand v. Chand Khan (11) was accepted.

In these circumstances I see no reason to differ from the view which has been consistently taken by this Court in published rulings and hold that the (4) 13 Ind. Cas. 976; 34 A. 213 at p. 222; 16 C. W. N. 338; 11 M. L. T. 145; (1912) M. W. N. 183: 9 A. L. J. 215; 15 C. L. J. 270; 14 Bom. L. R. 192; 15 O. C. 49; 23 M. L. J. 6; 39 I. A. 49 (P. C.).

(5) 47 Ind. Cas. 513; 45 C. 878; 35 M. L. J. 422; 16 A. L. J. 809; 24 M. L. T. 330; 28 C. L. J. 409; 23 C. W. N. 50; 5 P. L. W. 276; 20 Bom. L. R. 1022; (1919) M. W. N. 91; 9 L. W. 518; 45 I. A. 73 (P. C.).

(6) 26 Ind. Cas 813; 10 N. L. R. 133.

(7) 51 Ind. Cas. 943; 15 N. L. R. 55.

(8) 75 Ind. Cas. 99; 4 L. 156; (1923) A. I. R. (L.) 299; 5 L. L. J. 355 & 6 L. L. J. 42.

(9) 24 Ind. Cas. 120; 38 M. 867 at p. 877; 15 M. L. T. 361; 29 M. L. J. 617.

(10) 62 Ind. Cas. 313; 17 N. L. R. 53

(11) 27 Ind. Cas. 859; 11 N. L. R. 1.

*Page of 34 A.—[Ed.]

†Page of 45 C.—[Ed.].

plaintiff was entitled to challenge the validity of the transaction.

There can be no doubt that the transaction was absolutely invalid and that Saraswati had no authority to transfer any title in the minor's property. The question of legal necessity does not arise.

The decree of the lower Appellate Court must, therefore, be set aside and the plaintiff's suits decreed, but as the plaintiff has offered to pay the amount of the payment made by defendant No. 1 for the liquidation of his father's debt, as it was admittedly an ancestral debt, I direct that the plaintiff should pay Rs. 1,000 to Atmaram, defendant No. 1 in Suit No. 286 of 1922, Second Appeal No. 282-B of 1923; and Rs. 980 to Tukaram, defendant No. 1 in Suit No. 272 of 1922, Second Appeal No. 283-B of 1923, before taking possession. Defendant No. 2 Kashirao will bear his costs, and respondent No. 1 will bear the costs of the appellant in these appeals.

G. R. D. Decree set aside.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 326 OF 1923.

January 20, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, A. J. C.

BHAGWAN DIN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

AJUDHIA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Widow, possession of—Adverse possession by widow—Possession during lifetime of male holder, continuance of—Appeal, second—Possession, whether adverse or in lieu of maintenance—Finding, whether binding.

Where adverse possession in respect of property belonging to a male Hindu starts in his lifetime it will continue to run after his death during the tenure of his widow, but if adverse possession begins after the death of the last male-holder during the life-tenancy of the widow, the period of limitation against the reversioner would run from the date of the death of the widow. [p. 1022, col. 1.]

Where a Hindu widow is entitled only to maintenance out of the estate of her deceased husband, her possession of the estate would be regarded as adverse to the reversioners unless they are able to prove that it was the result of some arrangement between the widow and the reversioners. [p. 1023, col. 1.]

Bisheshar Dayal v. Hira Lal, 36 Ind. Cas. 941; 4 O. L. J. 49; 19 O. C. 221 and Parbati v. Mohammad Hadi, 68 Ind. Cas. 534; 9 O. L. J. 304; (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 31, distinguished.

Sham Koer v. Dah Koer, 29 C. 664; 29 I. A. 132; 6 C. W. N. 657; 4 Bom. L. R. 547; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 280 (P. C.) and Satgur Prasad v. Raj Kishore Lal, 55 Ind. Cas. 486; 42 A. 152; 22 Bom. L. R. 451; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 55; (1920) M. W. N. 3; 24 C. W. N. 394; 38 M. L. J. 259; 18 A. L. J. 235; 11 L. W. 384; 46 I. A. 197; 27 M. L. T. 200 (P. C.), followed.

Whether the possession of a widow is only in lieu of maintenance or is adverse is a question to be decided by legal inferences drawn from documents, and where wrong conclusions have been formed from such inferences, they are open to be reversed in second appeal. [p. 1023, col. 1.]

Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Rai Bareli, dated the 12th October 1923, setting aside that of the Subordinate Judge, Rai Bareli, dated the 14th February 1923.

Mr. M. Wasim, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. N. Misra for Mr. B. N. Srivastava, for the Respondent.

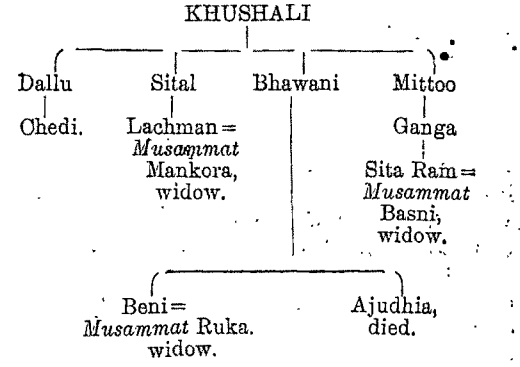
JUDGMENT.—The cases of the three appellants will have to be discussed separately. It is now admitted that the plaintiff-respondent Ajudhia is the next reversioner to the property of Lachman and that in the line of Khushali, Lachman was the last male owner to die. The following pedigree may be referred to:



In Khushali's line finally there remained the male owners Sita Ram, Beni and Lachman; Sita Ram holding $\frac{3}{4}$th, Beni $\frac{1}{2}$ Lachman $\frac{1}{4}$, if they partitioned. It is common ground that they were all three members of a joint Hindu family. Sita Ram died in 1887, and on 15th April, 1887 the name of Musammat Basni was entered in the village record. It is noted there that the entry is made by virtue of the right of inheritance (Copy Ex. C-3). Lachman was alive at the time and so was Beni. Beni died in 1899 and a month later Lachman died in the same year. On 10th June 1899 Musammat Ruka's name was entered as against $\frac{1}{4}$th share in the place of Beni and Musammat Mankora's as against the same amount of share in the place of Lachman.

On 4th April 1899 the three widows, Musammat Mankora, Musammat Ruka and Musammat Basni made gifts of their several shares by a joint deed. It is not necessary to mention the names of the donees or how the donees were succeeded. It will be sufficient for our purposes to mention that:

Bhagwan Din appellant derives title from the gift by Musammat Basni.

Musammat Basanta appellant from Musammat Mankora, and Musammat Murta appellant from Musammat Ruka.

The plaintiff reversioner's suit against these defendants was decreed by the lower Appellate Court and hence these defendants have brought this second appeal.

The appellants' learned Counsel Mr. Wasim admitted that Musammat Basanta's appeal cannot succeed as Musammat Mankora was a life-holder of Lachman's ¼th share and she died within the period of limitation.

As regards Musammat Murta also I think that the appeal must fail. The principle of law was admitted on both sides, so there is no necessity of quoting authorities, that if adverse possession started in the lifetime of the last male Hindu owner it will continue to run during the widow's possession but that if adverse possession began after the death of the last male-holder during the life-tenancy of the widow, the period of limitation against the reversioner would run from the date of the death of the widow. In the present case it is admitted that Beni died only one month prior to Lachman's death and there is no definite evidence that Beni's widow took possession adversely to Lachman during the one month of Lachman's surviving Beni. It was pointed out that the plaintiff's own witnesses deposed that Musammat Ruka took possession on the death of Beni. That is an ordinary way of talking and does not indicate a specific admission that during the lifetime of Lachman Musammat Ruka had taken possession adversely to Lachman. The deed of gift was admittedly executed subsequently to the death of Lachman because Lachman's widow also joined in it, and the mutation was made in favour of Musammat Ruka more than two months after this deed of gift. The balance of probability would be in favour of holding that Musammat Ruka took adverse possession after the death of Lachman. Musammat Murta's appeal must, therefore, fail.

The case of Bhagwan Din is different. Musammat Basni, widow of Sita Ram, took possession in the lifetime of Lachman and continued in such possession until Lachman's death and until she executed the deed of gift on 4th April 1899. The learned Counsel for the plaintiff-respondent asked the Court to presume, as the lower Appellate Court has done, that Musammat Basni was in possession of this property in lieu of maintenance. Personally I attach great importance to pleadings and when I refer to the plaint I find no such allegation there. The fact of the entry of Musammat Basni and Musammat Ruka's names in the village record was concealed by the plaintiff and the plaintiff came to Court as if Lachman's name had been entered in the village record on the death of his cousins and Musammat Mankoras's name on the death of Lachman. The plaintiff came to Court on a concealment of facts. My attention was drawn to the replication but when the times comes for replication the advice of a Pleader is obtained, and without any intention of making a reflection, it may be stated that at such a time the statement of a party is not what he honestly believes but what would be useful for the purposes of his case. The learned Counsel referred me to a Bench decision of this Court reported as Bisheshar Diyal v. Hira Lal (1). In that case however the observations were made by the Bench to repel an unusual presumption of the Trial Court that a certain Hindu lady was placed in possession of her husband's property with the status of a Hindu widow of a separated member of a family, though the family was admittedly joint. When the Trial Court had drawn such a presumption the Bench pointed out that the more natural presumption would be that she was placed in such possession in lieu of maintenance. There was no question, therefore, to any claim by right of adverse possession. The other ruling quoted by the learned Counsel in the case of Parbati v. Mohammad Hadi (2) is not to the point. There are pronouncements of their Lordships of the Privy Council as to how possession of a

(1) 36 Ind. Cas. 941; 4 O. L. J. 49; 19 O. C. 221.
(2) 68 Ind. Cas. 534; 9 O. L. J. 304; (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 31.

Hindu widow not entitled to such possession is to be viewed. In Sham Koer v. Deh Koer (3) their Lordships were of opinion that where widows were entitled only to maintenance out of the estate their possession could be considered adverse unless the plaintiff proved that it was the result of some arrangement between them and the rightful owner. Similar views were expressed in the case of Satgur Prasad v. Raj Kishore Lal (4) by their Lordships, this time in conflict with the opinion of both the High Court and the Trial Court. They were of opinion that where the question as to the nature and effect of possession, of property by a Hindu widow, i. e., whether possession is only in lieu of maintenance and not adverse possesion, is one decided by legal inferences drawn from documents, opinions of Courts, though concurrent, are not findings of fact, and where wrong conclusions from such inferences have been formed they are open to be reversed by their Lordships on appeal.

As I have already pointed out, in this case there was no allegation of an arrangement between Lachman and Musammat Basni and the plaintiff's own witnesses stated that Musammat Basni took possession on the death of Sita Ram and never alleged that this possession originated from an agreement between her and Lachman that she should hold such property in lieu of maintenance. By the lower Appellate Court's own showing there would be no necessity to make separate provision for maintenance when Musammat Basni was living in the same house which was occupied by Lachman. I hold that Musammat Basni's possession was adverse, so the plaintiff's suit as regards the property in possession of Bhagwan Din is time-barred.

In the result I dismiss the plaintiff's suit against Bhagwan Din with costs of all the Courts and dismiss this appeal, with costs as regards Musammat Basanta and Musammat Murta. So far as Bhagwan Din is concerned his appeal is allowed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(3) 29 C. 664; 29 I. A. 132; 6 C. W. N. 657; 4 Bom. L. R. 547; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 280 (P. C.).

(4) 55 Ind, Cas. 486; 42 A. 152; 22 Bom. L. R. 451; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 55; (1920) M. W. N. 3; 24 C. W. N. 394; 38 M. L. J. 259; 18 A. L. J. 235; 11 L. W. 384; 46 I. A. 197; 27 M. L. T. 200 (P. C.).

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 75-B OF 1924.

February 10, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

SINGUAJI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

GAMBHIRJI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 142, 144, scope of—Suit for possession after dispossession—Limitation—Burden of proof.

Every suit for possession of immoveable property in which the plaintiff alleges that he has had possession must fall under Art. 142 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. It is only where the plaintiff does not allege that he has ever been in possession, that the case will fall under Art. 144. Where the plaintiff while in possession has been dispossessed and is out of possession, the onus is upon him to prove that he was in possession and was dispossessed within twelve years of the suit. [p. 1024, col. 1.]

Jai Chand v. Girwar Singh, 52 Ind. Cas. 366; 41 A. 669; 17 A. L. J. 814 and Dharm Singh v. Hur Pershad Singh, 12 C. 38; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 26, distinguished.

Subappa v. Venkappa, 28 Ind. Cas. 24; 39 B. 335; 17 Bom. L. R. 141, Ganno v. Beni, 43 Ind. Cas. 943; 14 N. L. R. 82 at pp. 94, 95 and Mohima Chunder Mozoomdar v. Mohesh Chunder Neoghi, 16 C. 473; 16 I. A. 23; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 321; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 312 (P. C.), relied on.

Appeal against a decree of the Additional District Judge, Yeotmal, dated the 20th November 1913, in Civil Appeal No. 43 of 1923.

Mr. W. R. Pandit, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. R. Mangalmurti, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The only question that arises in this appeal is as to the Article of the Limitation Act applicable.

The plaintiff sued the defendant for possession of a plot of land of which he had been dispossessed by defendant in 1920.

The First Court found that the plot formed part of defendant's land and plaintiff was not in possession of it within 12 years previous to the suit and dismissed his suit.

On appeal the Additional District Judge, Yeotmal, found plaintiff's title proved but dismissed the appeal on the ground that plaintiff had failed to prove his possession within 12 years previous to the suit under Art. 142, Limitation Act, which is the Article applicable.

The plaintiff appeals on the ground that Art. 144 applies and it was for the defendant to prove his adverse possession.

The learned Counsel for plaintiff relies on Jai Chand v. Girwar Singh (1) and Dharm Singh v. Hur Pershad Singh (2). In the first of these cases defendant pleaded adverse possession and failed to prove it. The latter of these cases is one in which the evidence as to possession was conflicting and it was held that the presumption that the possession goes with title must prevail.

(1) 52 Ind. Cas 366; 41 A. 669; 17 A. L. J. 814.
(2) 12 C. 38; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 26.

The plaintiff's case is that he was in possession and was dispossessed and, therefore, the Art. 142 of the Limitation Act, which expressly applies to such a case, will govern the case. This has been clearly laid down in Subappa v. Venkappa (3), where it is stated that every suit for possession of immoveable property, in which the plaintiff alleges that he has had possession, must fall under Art. 142. It is only where the plaintiff does not allege that he has ever been in possession, that the case will fall under Art. 144. The same view has been taken by this Court in Ganno v. Beni (4) and by the Privy Council in Mohima Chunder Mozoomdar v. Mohesh Chunder Neoghi (5).

So also in Rakhal Chandra Ghose v. Durga Das Samanta (6), it was held that where the plaintiff while in possession has been dispossessed and is out of possession, the onus is upon him to prove that he was in possession and was dispossessed within 12 years of the suit.

The view of the lower Appellate Court is, therefore, correct and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(3) 28 Ind. Cas. 24; 39 B. 335; 17 Bom. L. R. 141.
(4) 43 Ind. Cas. 943; 14 N. L. R. 82 at pp. 94, 95.
(5) 16 C. 473; 16 I. A. 23; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 321; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 312 (P. C.)
(6) 67 Ind. Cas. 673; 26 C. W. N. 724; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 557.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 11 OF 1925.

February 26, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

AHMAD AGHA alias CHHOTEY SAHEB—APPLICANT—APPELLANT

versus

THE PERSON OF Musammat ZOHRA BEGAM AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE PARTY—RESPONDENTS.

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 19, 25—Father, whether can be appointed guardian—Custody of children, application for, whether maintainable.

By virtue of the provisions contained in s. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act, a father cannot be appointed the guardian of his minor children, but as their natural guardian he can take proceedings under s. 25 of the Act.

Chandra Kuar v. Chhotey Lal, 80 Ind. Cas. 330; 9 O. & A. L. R. 913; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 282, Achratlal Jekisendas v. Chimanlal Parbhudas, 37 Ind. Cas. 215; 40 B. 600; 18 Bom. L. R. 582, and Chhote Lal v. Chandra Kunwar, 80 Ind. Cas. 71; 11 O. L. J. 537; 10 O. & A. L. R. 758; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 257; 1 O. W. N. 330, referred to.

Appeal against an order of the District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 7th November 1924.

Messrs. Haider Husain and Mojiz Hasan, for the Appellant.

Mr. Radha Krishana, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the order of the District Judge of Lucknow, dated the 7th November 1924, in proceeding under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890. The appellant is the father of the minor child, Musammat Zohra Begam. The other party to the proceedings is the mother of Musammat Zohra Begam. The appellant applied under ss. 10 and 25 of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, to the District Judge of Lucknow for an order of appointment as the guardian of the person of the child. As a consequential relief he also prayed that the child be entrusted to him. His application has been dismissed on the technical ground that "the father cannot use the Guardians and Wards Act at all." In support of that view the learned Judge has quoted a decision of this Court in the case of Chandra Kuar v. Chhotey Lal (1) and also a decision of the High Court at Bombay in Achratlal Jekisendas v. Chimanlal Parbhudas (2).

So far as the above rulings lay down the proposition that a father cannot be appointed guardian by proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act, I am entirely at one with them but that as a natural guardian he can take proceedings under s. 25 of the Act is clear to my mind. That view I expressed in the case of Chhote Lal v. Chandra Kunwar (3) and in that decision I referred to an earlier decision in the case of Mushaf Husain v. Muhammad Jawad (4) decided by Mr. Lindsay.

(1) 80 Ind. Cas. 330; 9 O. & A. L. R. 913; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 282.
(2) 37 Ind. Cas. 215; 40 B. 600; 18 Bom. L. R. 582.
(3) 80 Ind. Cas. 71; 11 O. L. J. 537; 10 O. & A. L. R. 758; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 257; 1 O. W. N. 330.
(4) 48 Ind. Cas. 60; 21 O. C. 194; 5 O. L. J. 616.

The application now under consideration was mainly made for the purpose of obtaining an order of appointment as a guardian. The application was clearly not maintainable in view of the provisions of s. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act and was, therefore, rightly rejected by the learned Judge. It is open to the appellant to take other proceedings which he my be advised to do according to law.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 389 OF 1923.

February 24, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

ALI MAHAMMAD—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MAHAMMAD NOOR—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 73, O. XXI, rr. 11, 30—Rateable distribution, when can be ordered—Application for rateable distribution—Application for execution, absence of, effect of—"Otherwise as the nature of the relief granted may require", scope of.

Before a person is entitled to rateable distribution under s. 73 of the C. P. C., a formal and regular application for execution must be made. Rateable distribution cannot be ordered where there is only a prayer for rateable distribution of the assets, but there is no regular application for execution.

Under O. XXI, r. 11, sub-r. (2), cl. (j) of the C. P. C., an application for execution must specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, the modes of execution of a money-decree being given in r. 30 of the Order. Rateable distribution is not one of the modes of execution of a money-decree, and an application which merely contains a prayer for rateable distribution cannot, therefore, be treated as an application for execution.

The words "otherwise as the nature of the relief granted may require" in cls. (j) (v) of r. 11 (2) of O. XXI of the C. P. C. refer to the nature of the relief granted by the decree and have no reference to the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Nagpur, dated the 26th July 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 95 of 1923.

Mr. D. P. Tiwari, for the Appellant.

Mr. W. H. Dhabe, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The point in this appeal is the same as in Second Appeals Nos. 111 and 156 of 1924. This judgment will govern those appeals also.

The facts are simple. Four persons obtained decrees against the same judgment-debtor. One of them, Mahammad Noor, who is the respondent in all these appeals, attached the house of the judgment-debtor and applied for sale. Before the sale took place, the other three decree-holders, who are the appellants in these three appeals, applied for rateable distribution, which was ordered. Mahammad Noor, however, raised an objection that rateable distribution should not be allowed. This objection was overruled, so he filed three regular suits for declarations that the other decree-holders were not entitled to rateable distribution. The first of these suits was dismissed by the Munsif, but on appeal the District Judge of Nagpur held that rateable distribution could not be ordered because the applications were not in proper form, and the other two suits were decided accordingly. The appellants make these three appeals, urging that rateable distribution should have been allowed.

There is very little to be said in this appeal. The learned District Judge has correctly stated the law on the point. Before a person is entitled to rateable distribution under s. 73 of the C. P. C., an application for execution must be made. In the present cases no regular applications for execution have been made, as the prayer is only for rateable distribution of the assets.

Under O. XXI, r. 11, sub-s. (2), cl. (j), C. P. C., an application for execution must specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required. Under O. XXI, r. 30, the modes of execution of a money-decree are given and rateable distribution is not one of them. It has been held by this Court in Seth Maganmal v. Raja Raghunathrao (1) that proceedings for rateable distribution are of a non-judicial character. The present case is governed, as the learned District Judge has pointed out, by Dwarkadas v. Ghasi Ram (2). I entirely agree with the reasons given by the learned District Judge.

The learned Pleader for the applicant has relied on O. XXI, r. 11 (2), cls. (j) (v), which says "otherwise, as the nature of the relief granted may require." That, however, applies to the nature of the relief granted by the decree, e. g., in a case of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights, and does not affect the present case. It is not a mere irregularity, as there was no application for execution to the Court, as required by s. 73, C. P. C.

(1) 75 Ind. Cas. 749; 19 N. L. R. 172; (1924) A. I. R. (N.) 39.

(2) 64 Ind. Cas. 53; 17 N. L. R. 143

I see no reason for interference and dismiss the appeal with costs. The other two appeals will follow the result of this appeal.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION SUIT No. 3641. OF 1921.

July 28, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Taraporewala.

KEDARNATH TULSHIDAS AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

versus

BIHARILAL JAGAMAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 95, O. XXXVIII, r. 5—Attachment before judgment, order for—Attachment not actually levied—Damages, suit for, whether maintainable.

Section 95 of the C. P. C. which provides for compensation in the case of wrongful attachment of the goods of a party is applicable only where the attachment is in fact effected, and does not apply to a case where the attachment is applied for but is not in fact levied. Where the aggrieved party claims a larger compensation than Rs. 1,000 the remedy by way of a suit is allowed, but that does not make the basis of the suit in any way different from the basis on which compensation is allowed in the suit itself where the process has been wrongly put into effect, except that in a suit something more is required than under s. 95, that is to say, that under s. 95 it is sufficient to prove that the attachment was applied for on insufficient grounds while in a suit the plaintiff has to show not merely that it was applied for on insufficient grounds but that it was so done maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause. In both cases it must be proved that the attachment was actually levied. [p. 1028, cols. 1 & 2.]

It is an essential part of the cause of action in a suit to recover damages for wrongful attachment that the plaintiff must show that the order under which the process was enforced to his detriment was set aside in the original suit. [p. 1028, col. 2.]

Where an attachment before judgment is ordered but the actual levy of the attachment is avoided by payment of the amount required as security for the decree, the person against whom the order for attachment was made can have no cause of action for a suit to recover damages for wrongful attachment. [p. 1028, col. 2; p. 1029, col. 1.]

Mr. M. J. Mehta (with him Mr. Vasvada), for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Munshi (with him Messrs. Jinnah and Kania), for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—This suit has been filed by the plaintiffs to recover a sum of Rs. 1,05,000 by way of damages on the ground that an attachment before judgment and injunction were applied for by the defendants in this suit in Suit No. 2145 of 1921 filed by the defendants against the plaintiffs on insufficient ground, that such application was made by the defendants wrongfully and maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, and that by reason of such wrongful application the plaintiffs suffered damage in their credit and reputation and have been put to trouble and inconvenience and expenses.

Various issues were raised by Mr. Munshi for the defendants. The first issue is whether the plaint discloses any cause of action. Mr. Munshi has asked the Court to try this issue as a preliminary issue in order to save the costs and expenses of inquiring into the merits if the first issue is decided in the defendants' favour. Mr. Munshi has contended that the plaint does not disclose any cause of action on two grounds: first, that no attachment was, in fact, levied and that mere procuring of an order for attachment, before judgment does not of itself afford a cause of action for damages, and secondly, that the order of attachment in the original suit was confirmed and a summons to vacate the said order was discharged by the learned Chamber Judge who heard it; that it is an essential part of the cause of action in a suit for damages for the abuse of civil proceedings that the proceeding in which the process complained of is taken out should have terminated in favour of the plaintiff or that the particular procees complained of has been superceded or discharged.

In my opinion the defendants are right in both of their contentions on this point. As to the first point, it is admitted by the plaintiffs that no attachment was in fact levied but the plaintiffs' Counsel contends although the cause of action is not so stated in the plaint,—that the very fact of the Court's bailiff going to the shop of the plaintiffs with a view to enforce the warrant of attachment was sufficient to cause damage to the credit of the plaintiffs and that the fact of the biliff's going in execution of the order, which, the plaintiffs say, was obtained maliciously and without probable and sufficient cause, was an abuse of the process of the Court, and that the plaintiffs need not allege anything further to entitle them to damages for the said act. In paras. 12, 13 and 14 of the plaint the plaintiffs contend that they had suffered damage by reason of the wrongful application made by the defendants for attachment before judgment. Even assuming that the plaintiffs are now entitled to prove that the bailiff went to the shop to enforce the warrant of attachment and that to prevent such attachment moneys were paid by a relative of the plaintiffs, as stated in the plaint, the said act of the bailiff does not give any cause of action to the plaintiffs. In Rama Aiyer v. Govinda Pillai (1), attachment was not in fact levied on the plaintiff's moveables, but the reason why it was not levied is not stated in the facts of the case. Probably, there also the plaintiff paid the security, which is always mentioned in every warrant of attachment of goods, and for that reason the attachment was not levied. From the judgment of Mr. Justice Napier it appears that the bailiff did go to attach the moveables in pursuance of the warrant of attachment in that case. The only reason, therefore, to my mind, why the goods were not attached must have been that the plaintiff there gave security. But even if that was not the case the plaintiff in that suit did put his cause of action on the ground of the defendant's action in applying for attachment before judgment and "coming to attach his moveables", and the Court there held that procuring an order for attachment before judgment, however, maliciously did not of itself afford a cause of action for damages. In the present case also what happened, according to the plaintiff, was that the bailiff went to the shop of the plaintiffs to attach and that in fact no attachment was levied as a relative of the plaintiffs paid the amount mentioned in the warrant as being payable by the plaintiffs as security on his failing to show cause to the contrary. The warrant of attachment here does not order the plaintiffs to pay security and in default of such payment order attachment of the goods of the plaintiffs. As pointed out in Lotlikar v. Lotlikar (2), where a similar provision in the old C. P. C. was considered by the Appeal Court, the construction of the usual order of attachment before judgment is this. The defendants are called upon to furnish security for the fulfilment of any decree that the plaintiffs might obtain against them or to show cause on any day fixed in the order why security should not be furnished and to this direction is appended an order for provisional attachment as provided in the form at the end of the C. P. C. Mr. Justice West, in his judgment at page 644*, says that an order made under s. 484, which is similar to the provision for attachment before judgment in the C. P. C., 1908, might mean "an attachment to be made conditionally on the security not being furnished or cause shown by the prescribed day, or it might mean an immediate attachment of a provisional kind conditioned to become plenary if security should not be furnished, or cause shown according to the terms of the order." Mr. Justice West held that the form showed that the latter was the intention of the Legislature, and he goes on further to hold that if the attachment had been actually made it would in the first instance have been only a temporary one and the defendants showing cause on the day fixed in the order would have had it set aside, and that to prevent the discredit and inconvenience that would arise from the attachment they took the only step open to them, namely, to pay the amount of security mentioned in the order. As Mr. Justice West observes (page 644)*: "The order for attachment was supplementary to that for furnishing security, and the order for furnishing security was itself, if the defendants chose, dependent on their failing to show cause on [the day fixed]. Primarily, therefore, they had till that date to perpare their reasons, and the additional order for intermediate attachment could not deprive them of that right. Neither, therefore, should the giving of security to avoid the pressure of that order." These observations of Mr. Justice West clearly show that the giving of the security before showing cause as to whether security should be given or not is entirely optional with the plaintiff and that if he does give it, it is merely to avoid the discredit and incovenience that might arise from the attachment.

The plaintiffs here have based their cause of action on the ground that there was discredit and inconvenience by the mere fact of the bailiff going to their shop, not by reason of the giving of the security. The giving of the security in fact saved the discredit and the inconvenience. "The plaintiffs, therefore, cannot contend that the very act which was done to save discredit and inconvenience resulted, notwithstanding its object, in discredit and inconvenience. To my mind this is a contradiction in terms, and, as observed in Rama Ayyar v. Govinda Pillai (1), there cannot be alleged any possible inconvenience or discredit by reason of the giving of the security, which would form the basis for a claim for damages for abuse of the process of the Court. Mr. Mehta contended that procuring an order for attachment with the object of getting speedy payment of the amount claimed in a suit was an abuse of the process of the Court sufficient to give the plaintiffs a cause for action for damages. In Grainger v. Hill (3), it was held that where the process of the law had been abused to effect an object not within the scope of the process, it was immaterial whether the suit which that process commenced had been determined or not or whether or not it was founded on reasonable and probable cause. Even in Grainger v. Hill (3), the process was enforced and the plaintiff was arrested. The principles of that case are applicable only where the process is employed to compel the aggrieved party to do something which he is not legally bound to do under the process, and not in a case like this which is analogous to an action for a malicious arrest or malicious prosecution. I need not refer to the various cases cited and discussed in Rama Ayyar v. Govinda Pillai (1). I express my entire agreement with the reasoning in the judgment of Mr. Justice Napier in that case.

(1) 32 Ind. Cas 448; 32 M. 952; 3 L. W. 82; 30 M. L. J. 180; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 156.
(2) 5 B. 643; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 424.

*Page of 5 B.—[Ed.]

Section 95 of the C. P. C., which provides for compensation in the case of wrongful attachment of the goods of a party, clearly shows that it is applicable only where the attachment is in fact effected and does not apply to a case where the attachment is applied for and has not in fact been levied. The remedy by way of a suit is allowed where the aggrieved party claims a larger compensation than Rs. 1,000. But that does not make the basis of the suit any way different from the basis on which compensation is allowed in the suit itself where the process has been wrongly put into effect, excepting that in a suit something more is required than under s. 95 and not that something less is required, namely, that under s. 95 it is sufficient to prove that the attachment was applied for on insufficient grounds, while in a suit the plaintiff has to show not merely that it was applied for on insufficient grounds but that it was so done maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause.

On these grounds, therefore, I hold that the fact that attachment was not levied is quite sufficient to put the plaintiffs out of Court and that the plaint does not disclose any cause of action for damages.

Coming to the second ground, in my opinion, it is an essential part of the cause of action in a suit like this that the plaintiff must show that the order under which he says, the process was enforced to his detriment whether by way of attachment or by way of arrest was set aside in the original suit. Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. XIX, at page 692, gives the exceptions to the rule that the termination of the proceedings in favour of the plaintiff or discharge of the process complained of must be proved to give a cause of action to the plaintiff; but the exceptions, to my mind, refer to cases of quite a different nature than a case under an order for attachment or arrest under the C. P. C. Under the C. P. C. an order for attachment is not confirmed until the party against whom it is made fails to show cause against the order on the day fixed for the purpose. If by reason of the party's absence on the day so fixed the order is confirmed ex parte the party may take out a summons for having the order vacated, and if he succeeds in satisfying the Court that he was unable to appear for a sufficient cause and that the order was not justified on the facts the order would be vacated by the Court. The order for attachment complained of in this suit was confirmed ex parte and the plaintiffs took out a summons for vacating the same, but unfortunately for them, although the learned Chamber Judge was of opinion that there was sufficient cause for the plaintiffs' absence and that the order was not justified on the facts, he dismissed the summons and did not vacate the order on the ground that the point was academic, inasmuch as a decree had been passed against the plaintiffs for the amount which they had deposited for security and the plaintiffs had agreed that the amount so deposited by the plaintiffs should be withdrawn by the other party in satisfaction of the decree. The question, however, could not be treated as academic if the plaintiffs were going to claim heavy damages as they have done in this suit. The question was very important from that point of view. The plaintiffs' Counsel ought to have brought that aspect of the order to the notice of the Chamber Judge. It does not appear from the notes of the Judge's clerk that this point was put before the Chamber Judge. It may be that the point was not then present to the mind of the plaintiffs, or that Counsel may have thought that even if the order was set aside, as no attachment had been levied, the result would be merely academic. If it had been present to the mind of Counsel that a big claim for damages was going to be made because of the wrongful attachment, he would have asked the Court to vacate the order on the ground. Whatever may be the reason, I must say that I cannot go by the opinion given by the learned Chamber Judge. I am bound by the fact that the original order for attachment was confirmed and still subsits. I cannot in this suit go into the merits of that order and hold that the order was wrongly made and treat the order as discharged or vacated. On the second ground also, therefore, I hold that the plaint discloses no cause of action inasmuch as it does not show that the original order of attachment was vacated.

(3) (1898) 4 Bing. N. C. 212; 5 Scott 561; 7 L. J. C. 85; 132 E. R. 769.

On this finding I do not think that the time of the Court or moneys of the parties should be further wasted in going into the merits of the case. I must say here that there is not a word in the plaint as to there being any damage by reason of the payment of the moneys by way of security. As to the damage by reason of the bailiff going in the shop, as held in Rama Ayyar v. Govinda Pillai (1), no such damage can be possibly proved, and to my mind, therefore, even on the merits it would be futile to allow the plaintiffs to adduce evidence to show that in fact there was damage. There could not possibly have been any damage.

I hold that it is not necessary to go into the other issues in the case, and that the suit must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Suit dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS JUDICIAL CASE No. 66-B OF 1924.

January 14, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

ATMARAM—RESPONDENT No. 1—APPLICANT

versus

PUNJABRAO AND OTHERS—RESPONDENT No. 2—NON-APPLICANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLVII, r. 1 (1)—Review—Mistake of law—Decision wrong on merits—Authoritative precedent, whether discovery of new and important evidence—Ground for review—Practice—Reference to Full Bench—Decided case, whether can be referred.

A case already decided cannot be referred to a Full Bench. [p. 1030, col. 1.]

A judgment cannot be reviewed under O. XLVII, r. 1 (1) of the C. P. C., on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, where the alleged mistake or error is a wrong exposition of law, for instance, where the judgment is based on a precedent which has been modified by a subsequent decision. [ibid.]

Even assuming that the discovery of an authoritative precedent by which a precedent relied on in the judgment has been modified amounts to the discovery of new and important evidence within the meaning of O. XLVII, r. 1 (1) of the C. P. C., such a discovery is not a ground for review without strict proof that the subsequently relied on authority was not within the knowledge of the applicant or could not be produced by him when the decree or order was passed or made. [ibid.]

A review which is really an attempt to re-argue the appeal cannot be ordered on the ground that the decision was wrong on the merits. [ibid.]

Case-law referred to.

Application for review of the decree of the Judicial Commissioner, in Second Appeal No. 282-B of 1923, dated the 4th September 1924, printed as 87 Ind. Cas. 1018.

Sir Dr. H. S. Gour, for the Applicant.

ORDER.—This is an application for review of the judgment of this Court in Second Appeal No. 282-B of 1924 on the ground that the judgment is not in consonance with the views of this Court as explained in certain cases referred to, including one published judgment, Jago v. Oodal (1) and that the principle laid down in that case is recognized in Vithu v. Devidas (2), referred to in the judgment of which review is sought, and that the effect of the judgment which deals with the validity of alienations made by the de facto guardian of a Hindu minor will affect a number of people and that the point may be referred to a Full Bench.

(1) 4 N. L. R. 20.
(2) 51 Ind. Cas. 943; 15 N. L. R. 55.

As regards the last point I am of opinion that a case already decided cannot be referred to a Full Bench. The application is really based on the judgment being wrong in law, and as such it is covered by the recent ruling of the Patna High Court in Srimati Garabini Kamarin v. Surja Narain Singh (3) which lays down that a judgment cannot be reviewed under O. XLVII, r. 1 (1), on account of some mistake or an error apparent on the face of the record when the alleged mistake or error is a wrong exposition of the law, as, for instance, when the judgment is based on a precedent which has been modified by a subsequent decision.

It was further held that even assuming that the discovery of an authoritative precedent, by which a precedent relied on in the judgment has been modified amounts to the discovery of new and important evidence within the meaning of O. XLVII, r. 1 (1), such a discovery is not a ground for review without strict proof that the subsequent authority was not within the knowledge of the applicant, or would not be produced by him when the decree or order was passed or made.

The judgments quoted in the application are all long prior to the present case and could have been quoted at the hearing, when both sides were represented by Counsel and the case was argued at length. As a matter of fact my notes show that Second Appeal No. 316-B of 1914, referred to in the application was quoted. The review is really an attempt to re-argue the appeal which cannot be allowed.

The Patna case is based on the Privy Council decision in Chhajju Ram v. Neki (4) in which it was held that a review cannot be ordered on the ground that the decision was wrong on the merits. Assuming, therefore, that my judgment is wrong in law, which the other side would presumably not admit, that is no ground for a review.

If, as is stated, there are conflicting decisions of this Court on the question of the validity of alienations made by the de facto guardian of a Hindu minor, the next appeal in which this question occurs might properly be referred to a Full Bench, unless the Privy Council decides the question in ths meanwhile.

In the present case as the plaintiff has been ordered to re-pay to the purchasers the amounts they had paid to the de facto guardian no injustice has been done to them, and as to the alleged injury which is likely to be done to the estates of orphans the Guardians and Wards Act was passed in order to legalise the position of guardians and can always be availed of.

I accordingly reject the application without issuing notice to the other side.

G. R. D.

Z. K. Application rejected.

(3) 75 Ind. Cas. 177; 3 Pat. 134; (1923) Pat. 361; 5 P. L. T. 52; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 250.

(4) 72 Ind. Cas. 566; 3 L. 127; 30 M. L. T. 295; 26 C. W. N. 697; 41 P. L. R. (P. C.) 1922; 3 P. L. T. 435; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 112; 16 L. W. 37; 17 P. W. R. 1922; 43 M. L. J. 332; 24 Bom. L. R. 1238; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 99; 36 C. L. J. 459; 49 I. A. 144 (P. C.).

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 199 OF 1924.

February 26, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Daniels, J. C.

PRATAB BALI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Mahant SURESH DUTT AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115—Transfer of non-transferable holding—Plea of non-transferability, whether can be taken by transferor—Estoppel.

Where the Legislature has declared an occupancy holding to be non-transferable, a tenant who has effected a transfer of such a holding is not estopped from setting up the plea of non-transferability of the holding as against his transferee. [p. 1031, col. 2.]

Beni Madho v. Kali Pershad Singh, 6 O. C. 331, followed.

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 8th February 1924, reversing that of the Munsif, Fyzabad, dated the 24th November 1923.

Mr. H. Husain, for the Appellants.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the defendants in a suit for possession on the basis of a deed of gift. The property in suit is situated in several villages but the appeal relates only to the property in village Kanakpur. The suit was decided in the Court below mainly on the question whether the deed of gift relied on by the plaintiffs was procured by fraud. On this question the lower Appellate Court, differing from the Trial Court, found in favour of the plaintiff, and though a plea attacking this finding was taken in the grounds of appeal it has not been pressed. The only plea pressed is that the Kanakpur property was an occupancy holding in which the plaintiffs' predecessor had by virtue of s. 5 of the Oudh Rent Act no transferable interest. The point is not discussed in the judgment of the Court below. The learned Munsif found in favour of the plaintiffs that the property was transferable. The property was acquired under a settlement decree giving kabzadari rights and the Munsif appears to have found that in this instance kabzadari meant under-proprietary rights. A reference to the decree shows clearly that this finding was wrong. The decree refers specifically to Ch. II, s. 5 of the Oudh Rent Act of 1868, which was then in force. This is the section which deals with occupancy rights. It was also objected by the Munsif that the decree does not give the numbers of the plots but a perusal of the decree with the settlement entries in which the decree is referred to shows clearly that the plots were those in suit.

The case was argued by the respondents on two grounds: First, that this plea must be taken to have been abandoned in the Court below, and secondly, that the plaintiffs are estopped from asserting it. As to the first point there is nothing in the judgment of the Court below to show definitely that it was abandoned. In that Court the plaintiff and not the defendant was the appellant. The learned Subordinate Judge refers to this question as one of the defences to the suit taken by the defendants. He then says nothing more about it but proceeds to deal with the pleas taken by the plaintiff in his appeal. At the hearing in this Court it was stated by the Vakil who appeared in the Court below that the point was argued. It is not clear from the judgment of the Court below that the point was abandoned and I hold, therefore, that the defendants are not precluded from raising it. The second plea is based on the fact that the first appellant Pratab Bali is the man who made the gift and it is said that he cannot deny the validity of his own gift. The second and third defendants are holding under a transfer from the same person and if the holding is untransferable, their title is also bad. On the other hand they are in possession of the property and it has been held by a Bench of this Court in Beni Madho v. Kali Pershad Singh (1) that in the case of occupancy holdings, which the Legislature has declared to be untransferable, there is no estoppel. Following that ruling I hold that the defendants are not debarred from setting up this defence. The result is that the appeal must be and hereby is allowed so far as the Kanakpur property is concerned, and the decree of the Trial Court is restored with reference to this property. As the appeal has partly succeeded and partly failed, the parties will bear their own costs throughout.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

(1) 6 O. C. 331.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 59 OF 1924.

November 22, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

THE MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MARATHA RY. CO.—DEFENDANT No. 2 —APPELLANT

versus

Seth RAMNATH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Carriage of goods—Risk Note Form "A," execution of—Burden of proof—Liability of Railway Company —Company when can insist on Risk Note being executed.

Risk Note Form "A" is to be used when articles intended for carriage are either already in a bad condition or so defectively packed that they are liable to damage, leakage or wastage in transit. When goods are carried under this Risk Note, the obligation of the carrier is simply to deliver them to the consignee at destination; he is not responsible for the condition in which the goods are delivered. [p. 1033, col. 1.]

If a consignor consents to execute a Risk Note in Form "A" he must be bound by it unless he shows that he was compelled to execute it by fraud or mis-representation. [p. 1034, col. 1.]

In a suit to recover damages in respect of goods consigned to a Railway Company for carriage under Risk Note Form "A" the burden is on the plaintiff to show that the consignor was compelled by force, fraud or mis-representation to execute the Risk Note, when, as a matter of fact, the goods were properly packed and not damaged. [ibid.]

It is open to a Railway Company to require that perishable articles consigned to it for carriage should be packed securely. [ibid.]

Tobacco is a perishable article and as single bagging is not sufficient to keep out rain when a consignment of tobacco in single bagging is made over to Railway Company for carriage, the Company is entitled to require the consignor to execute a Risk Note in Form "A." [ibid.]

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Bhandara, dated the 7th April 1924, in Civil Suit No. 92 of 1922.

Messrs. V. M. Jakatdar and P. Lobo, for the Appellant.

Messrs. G. L. Subhedar and Erachshah, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from a decree of the First Class Subordinate Judge, Bhandara, awarding the plaintiff Rs. 5,340 as damages against the Railway Company.

The facts are briefiy that a large consignment of tobacco was sent from Kolhapur on the M. S. M., Railway, Co. consigned in three lots to the plaintiff, at Kamptee, Tirora and Tumsar stations on the B. N. Railway on 24th April 1922, by the plaintiff's agent Bhise. Of these the Kamptee consignment and 133 bags out of the Tirora consignment, which consisted of 196 bags, were received in good condition, but the remaining 63 bags of the Tirora consignment and the whole of the Tumsar consignment (112 bags) were not received till the month of June and half the tobacco was rotten and useless. The plaintiff, therefore, sued M. S. M. Railway Company, the G. I. P. and B. N. Railway Companies over whose lines the consignment travelled, being also added as defendants, as agents of the Company to whom the goods were consigned. The suit as against G. I. P. and B. N. Railway Companies was dismissed, and a decree was passed against the M. S. M. Railway Company, holding that there had been wilful negligence by their agent, the G. I. P. Railway Company. The M. S. M. Railway Company appeal.

The case raises some important questions of law, and as there is little dispute as to the actual facts it would be as well to give the facts in detail. The tobacco was brought in 29 carts from Nipani by road to Kolhapur where it arrived on Sunday, the 23rd of April 1922. It is stated that it was kept in a godown that night and a receipt is produced for the rent of the godown. It appears to have been taken to the Railway Station on Monday, the 24th April, as an octroi receipt bearing that date is produced. It was consigned that day under Risk-Notes Forms A and B in three lots. The Risk Note Form A bears the remark "single bagging and bags partly wet by rain." The goods were sent from Kolhapur to Poona by the metre guage line of the M. S. M. Railway, Co., where they were transhipped to a broad gauge waggon and arrived at Dhond (G. I. P. Railway) on 28th April 1922. It was there found that the roof of the waggon, in which a portion of the cosignment was placed, had been almost entirely blown off. The waggon was marked sick and detained, as it was, at Dhond for more than a month till 29th May 1922, when the contents were unloaded and re-loaded in another waggon which left Dhond on 3rd June 1922, and arrived at Tumsar and Tirora on 11th June 1922. The consignment being in a damaged condition the consignee refused to take delivery and the bags were placed in the goods-sheds at these two stations and were surveyed by the Railway Company, delivery being ultimately given in August and December respectively.

There is evidence that about half the consignment was valueless. During the period when the consignment lay at Dhond in a waggon without a roof, there was rain on two occasions (as is proved by rainfall returns), the amount on one occasion being half an inch. It is contended, and is found by the lower Court that the damage to the tobacco was done while it was at Dhond, and this constitutes wilful neglect.

I do not feel it necessary to deal in any detail with this part of the case, because it is quite clear from the evidence of the servants of the G. I. P. Railway Company at Dhond, which has been referred to at length by the Subordinate Judge, that no steps whatever, in spite of several reminders by the Waggon-Examiner to the Station Master, were taken to protect the consignment from the effects of the weather by transhipping it to some other waggon, or by effecting any repairs to the roof of the waggon, which was comparatively a simple matter as it only meant replacing the corrugated sheets which had been blown off. I agree with the view of the lower Court that this constitutes wilful neglect on the part of the servants of the Railway Company, and the learned Counsel for the Railway Company has been unable to put forward any argument justifying the conduct of the Railway Company in thus leaving a valuable consignment unprotected from the weather for a period of nearly five weeks.

The case, however, does not end here, for it is necessary to consider the provisions of the Risk Notes, under which the goods were despatched from Kolhapur, that is Risk Notes Form A and B, and in particular the former.

The terms of the Risk Note Form A are that "Whereas the consignment. . . . . is in bad condition and liable to damage, leakage and wastage in transit as follows:—single bagging and bags partly wet by rain, I the undersigned do hereby agree and undertake to hold the said Railway Administration and all other Railway Administrations working in connection therewith, and also all other transport agents, etc., harmless and free from all responsibility for the condition in which the aforesaid goods may be delivered to the consignee at destination and for any loss arising from the same."

There are two Risk Notes, in Forms A and B, in this case. Both of them are admittedly signed by Bhise, the plaintiff's agent at Kolhapur, and he admits that the remark on one of them "single bagging and bags partly wet by rain" is in his hand. The similar remark on the other Risk Note, he says, is not in his handwriting, and the lower Court has, therefore, held that he is not bound by it. As he has executed the Risk Notes in both cases he is bound by the statements therein, which he admits he understood, and the lower Court is, therefore, incorrect in thinking otherwise.

There are very few rulings on Risk Note Form A. In Lahiri's Law of Carriers in British India of 1923, page 101, it is said that "this form is to be used when articles tendered for carriage are either already in bad condition or so defectively packed that they are liable to damage, leakage or wastage in transit. When goods are carried under Risk Note Form A, the obligation of the carrier is simply to deliver them to the consignee at destination, but the carrier is not at all responsible for the condition in which the goods are delivered." Then there is a quotation from "Disney on Carriage by Railway" stating: "There is a clear admission that the goods are not packed as the Company have a right to require that they should be packed, and it seems only reasonable that if they waive this right, and accept the goods, they should in return be protected from liability for negligence and from vexatious enquiries as to whether damage caused was due to imperfect packing or otherwise. . . . . It will be noticed that this contract does not attempt to protect the Company from liability for delay or mis-delivery."

The present is not a case in which damages were caused by delay or claimed for delay, and no case of mis-delivery arises, the whole consignment having been delivered to the plaintiff although part of it was damaged and valueless. The principal question in this case, therefore, is whether the Railway Company are protected by this Risk Note. The view of the learned Judge of the lower Court on this point commences from para. 11 of his judgment. He states that in spite of the remark "single bagging and bags partly wet by rain." D. W. No. 6 Bishe deposed that, as a matter of fact, the bags were not wet but only some 25 bags were slightly wet by rain. That Bhise is only responsible for the remark on one Risk Note; and that the remark on the other Risk Note is in the handwriting of the Goods Clerk and, therefore, not binding on him. Moreover it appears that the Railway Company will not book consignments of tobacco unless the Risk Note Form A is executed, irrespective of the condition of the goods. That the remark in the Risk Note Form A did not, therefore, represent the true condition; that if there were patches of wet on the bags it was no indication that the goods were damaged; and that such patches of wet on a few bags could not have played such havoc as to ruin the consignment and that the same remark applied to the whole consignment, yet the whole of the Kamptee consignment and the majority of the Tirora consignment arrived in good condition and, therefore, the damage could not have been caused before the goods were consigned but must have been caused on the way, and the conclusion is that the Risk Note Form A was taken as a matter of formality or for safeguarding the Company from any possible damage to the goods after they were consigned without reference to the actual condition of goods, and is, therefore, not binding, and the goods were not damaged before they were consigned.

I am unable to agree with this reasoning. I have already pointed out that Bhise admits execution and must, therefore, be held to be bound by the remark in the Risk Note and he has also admitted in his deposition as D. W. No. 5 at page 60 that the remark made was correct. He has further admitted that the remark on Form A accompanying the consignment note No. 84 is in his handwriting. Bhise is in the habit of consigning goods, being a commission agent, and it is difficult to believe that he would have written that the bags were wet if they were not. He has admitted that it rained the previous day, though no evidence has been led as to the amount of the rain which fell.

P. W. No. 18, the Goods Clerk at Kolhapur, does not say that in all cases goods of this nature must be despatched under Risk Notes Forms A and B. He says "when goods are despatched at the owner's risk then I have to ask the consignor to sign the Risk Notes Forms A and B as the case may be." The burden is on the plaintiff to show that the consignor was compelled by force, fraud or misrepresentation to enter into Risk Note Form A when, as a matter of fact, the goods were properly packed and not damaged. There is no allegation of this kind in the plaint and the evidence is insufficient to prove it.

There is another aspect of the case. Apart from any damage by rain before the goods were consigned, it is not disputed that the tobacco was packed in single bagging only and was not, therefore, liable to such damage. It is, I think, open to the Railway Company to require that perishable articles should be packed securely and as tobacco is a perishable article single bagging is not sufficient to keep out rain and they are entitled to require the consignor to execute a Risk Note in Form A. In any case if the consignor consents to execute a Risk Note in Form A, he must be bound by it unless he shows that he was compelled to execute it by fraud or misrepresentation.

The Subordinate Judge has pointed out, and I think with force, that although the remark in Form A applied to the whole of the consignment the greater part of it, i. e., the Kamptee consignment and the bulk of the Tirora consignment, arrived in good condition in spite of the alleged damage before despatch, and that only those bags which were in the waggon which had no roof which were delayed at Dhond and damaged. I have no doubt in my mind that although some of the bags must, in view of the Risk Note and of the admission of Bhise himself, have been wet with rain before they were despatched, the bulk of the damage must have taken place while they were lying at Dhond, and the question is whether the Railway Company are protected by the Risk Note.

I am of opinion that they are protected. The terms of the Risk Note, which have already been given, free them from all responsibility for the contention in which the aforesaid goods may be delivered to the consignee at destination and for any loss arising from the same. The case is not based on delay but on damage to the goods, and the cases quoted by the learned Counsel for the respondent are cases of delay, in which the prices of goods fell during the period in which they were in transit. It cannot be said how much damage had been done to the consignment by the rain at Kolhapur, and in view of the fact that part of the consignment reached its destination in good condition, I think it may fairly be inferred that had the bags now in suit not been exposed to the weather at Dhond for more than a month, they would have arrived in equally good condition. But although it may seem that this is a hard case, I do not see how the plaintiff can recover in the face of the Risk Note in Form A which has been executed by his agent who has admitted the remark as to the "single bagging and bags partly wet by rain" to be correct. Unless, therefore, the plaintiff can get out of the effect of this, he cannot recover anything from the Railway Company.

In these circumstances I do not think it is necessary to go into the question of the Risk Note in Form B which was also executed by the consignor. That involves a further point of law as to the meaning of "loss of a complete consignment or of one or more complete packages." I would follow the view of the Madras High Court that the word "loss" means loss to the owner, but there is a further question in this case as to whether this can be considered to be a "loss of a complete consignment or of one or more complete packages," and it has been argued that as only a portion of the consignment was damaged there was no such loss. The question of the meaning of "loss of a complete consignment," on which there are conflicting rulings of the various High Courts, is at present pending before a Bench of this Court on a reference from myself, and were it necessary to decide this point in the present case I should have felt obliged to adjourn the case until the opinion of the Bench had been delivered. I am, however, of opinion that in this case the Risk Note in Form A is a sufficient answer to the plaintiff's claim and I cannot see how this can be avoided. The obligation of the Railway Company was simply to deliver the goods to the consignee at destination without responsibility for the condition in which they were delivered on the ground that they were not properly packed and that they were wet by rain. In my opinion the present is a very clear case of the kind which Risk Note Form A is intended to cover. I rely on the remarks from Disney quoted at page 4 of this judgment.

I regret that I have been forced to come to this conclusion as I am of opinion that there was wilful neglect on the part of the Railway Company in leaving the goods exposed in a roofless waggon at Dhond, and I have no doubt that the bulk of the damage was caused there; but the plaintiff cannot recover damages in face of the Risk Note signed by his agent, more especially when the agent has admitted that the remark in the Risk Note as to the condition of the goods and packing is correct.

I need not refer at length to the argument that the goods were damaged by the consignee not taking delivery forthwith after their arrival at their destination as the damage must have been done before their arrival, and as it was hot weather and the goods had a long journey from Dhond to Tumsar, the tobacco must have dried very quickly. It was kept in the goods-sheds and was not further damaged. However, this is not material in view of my finding that the Railway Company are protected by the Risk Note in Form A.

The decree of the lower Court must be set aside and the plaintiff's suit dismissed with costs in both Courts.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 52 OF 1924.

February 2, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Daniels, J. C.

SAGAR SINGH AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MATHURA PRASAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Mortgage by manager—Interest, high rate of—Necessity—Burden of proof—Appeal, second—Finding of fact.

Where money is borrowed by the manager of a joint Hindu family on the security of family property at an unusually high rate of interest, the burden lies on the mortgagee to prove that there was necessity to borrow at so high a rate.

Where in such a case the lower Appellate Court having rightly appreciated the question of the burden of proof arrives at the finding that the necessity was sufficiently urgent to account for the rate of interest charged, the finding cannot be interfered with in second appeal.

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Sultanpur, dated the 31st October 1923, confirming that of the Munsif, Sultanpur, dated the 21st November 1922.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Appellants.

Mr. Radha Krishna for Mr. G. N. Misra, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The only issue in this case is whether the mortgage in suit was supported by legal necessity. The mortgage was made by two persons Hanuman and Udhai Bir as managers of the joint family. The defendants-appellants are collateral members of the family and are not bound by the mortgage unless it was for legal necessity. The issue falls into two parts. The first is legal necessity for the actual loan and the second legal necessity for the rate of interest charged which was 36 per cent. On the first point there is really no room for controversy. The whole of the money borrowed was borrowed for payment of land revenue and the demand for land revenue was so pressing that the moveable property was actually under attachment on the date when the mortgage was executed. In regard to a part of this money it was paid in on the same day on which the mortgage was executed.

Another portion had been borrowed from one Gayadin a few days before and was re-paid by the execution of the mortgage in suit. The fact that the mortgagors had succeeded in obtaining the money temporarily pending execution of the mortgage does not in any way affect the question of legal necessity.

On the question of interest the appellants' learned Counsel rightly contends that where the rate of interest is unusually high the burden lies on the mortgagee to prove that there was necessity to borrow at so high a rate. This was fully recognized by the learned Subordinate Judge who decided the appeal. He found, however, that, as property belonging to the family was actually attached on the date of execution, the necessity for obtaining money to pay this amount was very urgent and sufficiently accounts for the high rate of interest charged. As has already been pointed out the money was paid into the Tahsil on the very day that the mortgage was executed. The Court below having rightly appreciated the question of the burden of proof there is no legal ground for interfering with his finding that the necessity was sufficiently urgent to account for the rate of interest charged. The appeal, therefore, fails and it is hereby dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 62-B OF 1924.

February 14, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Baker, J. C.

JANKUBAI AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

PARVATI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law, applicability of—Gonds—Raj-Gonds, whether governed by Hindu Law—Succession—Widow, estate taken by—Custom, proof of—Berar Waste Lands Rules of 1865—Lease of village—Proprietary or patelki rights, acquisition of, mode of—Surrender by widow, whether can be challenged.

Gonds are not Hindus and as such are not governed by the Hindu Law. [p. 1037, col. 2.]

Vithoba v. Lalsingh, 76 Ind. Cas. 980; 19 N. L. R. 104; (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 317 and Ujiyara v. Tilochan Gond, 44 Ind. Cas. 435; 2 N. L. J. 129, followed.

Raj-Gonds are not the offspring of inter-marriages between Gonds and Rajputs, and though they have adopted the manners, customs and dress of the Hindus and worship Hindu deities, they are not governed by the Hindu Law. [p. 1038, col. 1.]

On the death of a Raj-Gond his widow succeeds to his property as a full owner. [p. 1039, col. 2.]

In order to establish a custom it must be shown to be ancient, certain and invariable. [p. 1038, cols. 1 & 2.]

It is open to a lessee of a village under the Berar Waste Lands Rules of 1865, to accept the proprietary or patelki rights under certain conditions, either during the continuance or at the expiry of the lease or to transfer the lease with the permission of the Deputy Commissioner. To constitute proprietary rights it is necessary that there should be an election by the lessee followed by an application and an agreement to abide by the conditions and the grant of a sanad conferring proprietary rights. The mere fact that on the expiry of a lease the assessment is raised and the lessee pays the enhanced assessment for some time is not enough to confer such rights on him. [p. 1040, cols. 1 & 2.]

An alienation by a widow can be challenged by her heirs only when it is an alienation of family property. [p. 1040, col. 2.]

Where the widow of the lessee of a village under the Berar Waste Lands Rules elects not to apply for proprietary rights, but surrenders the lease for a consideration, that is not such an alienation as can be challenged by her heirs. [ibid.]

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Yeotmal, dated the 16th June 1924, in Civil Suit No. 39 of 1922.

Mr. N. R. Alekar, for the Appellants.

Mr. M. Gupta, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff No. 1, Jankubai, who is the widow of one Nilkanthrao, and plaintiff No. 2, Gunwantrao, who is alleged to have been adopted by plaintiff No. 1 to her husband, sued to recover possession of the property in suit, the izara village of Chikhaldoha in the Wani Taluka of the Yeotmal District, from the defendants who are the representatives-in-interest of one Tanabai, to whom the village was sold by Jankubai's co-widow Ambabai.

The plaintiffs' case is that as Raj-Gonds they are governed by the Hindu Law, that the co-widows Ambabai and Jankubai inherited the estate from their husband Nilkanthrao, Ambabai being the managing widow, in whose name the village was entered. Ambabai sold the said village to Tanabai for Rs. 400 in 1898, without any legal necessity and without the consent and knowledge of the plaintiff No. 1 by a razinama and kabuliyat. Tanabai used to give the plaintiff Jankubai the profits of her half share. Ambabai died in April 1920 and the plaintiff No. 1 became the owner of the whole village by survivorship and she sued to recover possession of the village from defendants, the date of the cause of action being the death of Ambabai, in April 1920. After the death of Ambabai, plaintiff No. 1 adopted plaintiff No. 2, who consequently became the owner of the village. Tanabai died after the suit was filed and her heirs were added.

There is some dispute between the defendants as to who is the heir of Tanabai with which we are not concerned.

The defendants contended that Nilkanthrao was a Gond and hence his widow Ambabai became the absolute owner of the village and had a right to alienate it. Jankubai's status as a widow was denied as she was admittedly married by pat and it was contended that no such custom existed amongst the Gonds. Hence Jankubai had no interest in Nilkanthrao's property and no right to adopt a son to him, as in any case the custom of adoption did not prevail among Gonds. The fact of the adoption was also denied. They further pleaded that no share of profits was ever paid to Jankubai out of the village after the sale and, therefore, her claim was barred by adverse possession, and they also pleaded that the sale of the village was for legal necessity and was made with the consent of Jankubai, as the widows were in straitened circumstances and unable to maintain themselves, and lastly it was pleaded that as soon as the izara lease had expired and Tanabai was given proprietary rights by the Government and a sanad was issued in her name, all rights of the former owner in the village were extinguished.

In reply the plaintiffs stated that the Raj Gonds had adopted Hindu customs and that Hindu Law applied to them. They denied the legal necessity and the consent to the sale by Jankubai. They pleaded that by custom all the principles of Hindu Law regarding widows applied to Raj Gonds, and in particular the family of the deceased Nilkanthrao had adopted Hindu customs.

The Subordinate Judge, First Class, Yeotmel, held that it was not proved that Raj Gonds had adopted Hindu customs in matters of adoption, inheritance and limited interest of widows, and survivorship amongst co-widows, nor was it proved that the family of Nilkanthrao had adopted the above Hindu Law and customs. He further held that plaintiff No. 2 was adopted by plaintiff No. 1, but that the adoption was not valid as there was no custom of adoption amongst the Gonds. He held that Jankubai was a lawful wife by pat of Nilkanthrao and could inherit his property, but her suit was barred by limitation. He further held that there were no rights left in the plaintiffs after the conferral of the sanad on Tanabai by Government in 1898, and further held that the sale was for legal necessity and was justified and is binding on the plaintiffs and the suit must be held also to be barred by adverse possession. He, therefore, dismissed the plaintiffs' suit.

The plaintiffs appeal on the grounds as set forth in the memorandum of appeal.

The most important question in this case is whether the plaintiffs are governed by Hindu Law, in which case the questions of the limited interest of Ambabai, inheritance or survivorship between her and her co-widow Jankubai, the validity of the adoption of plaintiff No. 2 by plaintiff No. 1 and the right of the adopted son to challenge the alienations prior to his adoption will be important points in the case. It has been held by this Court in clear terms that Gonds are not Hindus. This will be found in Vithoba v. Lalsingh (1) and also in Ujiyara v. Tilochan Gond (2).

The first point that arises in this case is whether any distinction is to be drawn between Raj-Gonds and Gonds. The learned Pleader for the appellants has referred to several authorities. In the Gazetteer of the Central Provinces of 1870, 2nd Edition, Introduction page cx., there is a reference to Raj-Gonds, claiming "Rajput ancestry." In the Imperial Gazetteer of India, Central Provinces Volume, page 160, it is stated: "The Raj-Gonds.....may roughly be taken to be the descendants of Gond landed proprietors who have been formed into a separate sub-division and admitted to Hinduism with the status of a cultivating caste, Brahmans taking water from them. The elevation is justified by the theory that they have inter-married with Rajputs, but this has probably occurred only in a few isolated instances. Some Raj Gonds wear the sacred thread, and outdo Brahmans in their purificatory observances .....But many of them are obliged once in four or five years to visit their god Bura Deo and to place cow's flesh to their lips wrapped in a cloth, lest evil should befall their house." In Sherring's Hindu Tribes and Castes, Volume II, page 138, it is stated that the Raj-Gonds "are the highest rank of Gonds; and the title is borne by most of the noble and governing houses." There is a reference to inter-marriages between the worshippers of seven deities and those who worship a less number. I mention this point because it is referred to in evidence. Sherring states that the Raj-Gonds imitate closely the highest castes of Hindus. He states: "Notwithstanding their adherence to Hindu usages, they are obliged occasionally to visit their own deities, and even to put cow's flesh to their lips folded in cloth, to ward off evil from their houses." In Russell's Tribes and Castes of the Central Provinces, Volume III, page 63, it is stated: "According to Forsyth the Raj-Gonds are in many cases the descendants of alliances between Rajput adventurers and Gonds. But the term practically comprises the land-holding sub-division of the Gonds, and any proprietor who was willing to pay for the privilege could probably get his family admitted into the Raj-Gond group. The Raj-Gonds rank with the Hindu cultivating castes, and Brahmans will take water from them. They sometimes wear the sacred thread." In the Imperial Gazeteer of India, Volume VII, under the heading Berar, page 380, it is mentioned: "The Gonds and Korkus, though still Animists, are tinged with Hinduism and worship Mahadeo as well as other Hindu gods." In the Yeotmal District Gazetteer, at page 70, it is stated that the Gonds have adopted Hindu dress and customs to a larger extent than in the Central Provinces.

(1) 76 Ind. Cas. 980; 19 N. L. R. 104; (1923) A. I. R (N.) 317.
(2) 44 Ind. Cas. 435; 2 N. L. J. 129.

It is contended that these references and the evidence given in this case will show that Raj-Gonds have become Hindus, that they have Hindu names like the parties to this case, that they worship Hindu deities and perform Hindu ceremonies, that they observe shraddhs as Hindu do, perform marriages like Hindus, respect the cow and do not eat beef, that Brahmans attend their ceremonies, that they go on pilgrimage to holy places, and that they wear Marhatta dress and burn their dead.

The references quoted by the learned Pleader for the appellants show that the Raj-Gonds claim to be of Rajput origin but this is not established. The effect of all these authorities is only to show that the Raj-Gonds have arisen in the social scale and have been treated as Hindus of the cultivating classes; but more than this is required to be shown, viz, that they are governed by Hindu Law in matters of adoption and inheritance. In order to establish custom it must be shown to be ancient, certain and invariable. In the present case it has to be shown that either the Raj-Gonds as a class or the plaintiffs' family are strictly governed by Hindu Law, that a widow inherits only a limited interest and cannot alienate except for legal necessity, that co-widows inherit with right of survivorship, that a widow can adopt, that she can do so without husband's authority, and that the adoption relates back to the death of the widow's husband, so that the adopted son can challenge alienations prior to his adoption.

The evidence for the plaintiffs, in my opinion, falls far short of proof of this. Although Raj-Gonds may be performing certain Hindu ceremonies it does not follow that they are governed by Hindu Law, and it would have to be shown that the above mentioned principles of the Hindu Law have been applied to specific cases of widow's estate, inheritance and adoption. The learned Pleader for the appellants has relied on certain remarks in Gour's Hindu Code, page 208, where the learned author says that "Gonds and Bhils, though aborigines, are now universally classed as Hindus. They retain their old customs to a certain extent, but they equally acknowledge the supremacy of the Brahmans, worship some of their gods and have commenced to observe some of their caste conventions. Some of them have intermarried with Hindus, thereby originating distinct castes. So the alliance of Rajputs with Gond women has produced the caste of Raj-Gonds....All such and similar castes admit allegiance to the Shastras by which they profess to be bound."

I am not aware on what evidence these remarks are based. I am unable to accept the view that the Raj-Gonds are the offspring of the inter-marriages of Gonds and Bajputs or that Gonds who retained their old customs to a certain extent could be called Aryans. The evidence in this case has been read out. P. W. No. 1 is a Brahman, who officiated at the adoption of plaintiff No. 2 by plaintiff No. 1. P. W. No. 2, a Komti who was present at the adoption, states that certain Hindu ceremonies were performed at the plaintiffs' house. P.Ws. Nos. 3, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 are Raj-Gonds, who depose to their observance of Hindu customs, and P. W. No. 5 is a Brahman who speaks to the same effect. But on examining the evidence of these witnesses it will be found that there is practically no evidence regarding instances of adoption and limited interest of widows sufficient to prove the custom pleaded by the appellants.

P. W. No. 1 who officiated at the adoption of plaintiff No. 2 by plaintiff No. 1 admits that this was the only occasion on which he attended an adoption of Gonds. P. W. No. 3, a Raj-Gond, who deposed that the Hindu customs and adoption were prevalent amongst Raj-Gond, has no personal knowledge of such adoption and only speaks by hearsay of an adoption by Godabai of Kayer. That adoption was held not proved in a suit. He refers to widows having only rights of maintenance amongst them, and admits that his family is called "Sat Deva" and the plaintiffs are called "Six Deva": cf., the quotations above in Sherring as to the worshippers of six and seven gods.

P. W. No. 5 refers to certain adoptions, but admits that he has not attended any. This witness was not summoned. He is a Brahman and has not attended any feasts given in any Gond's house. He does not know what sort of obsequies are performed by the Raj-Gonds of Chanda. He was formerly in the service of the zemindar of Ambagarh Chowki, who is of the same caste as the Raja of Chanda. He admits in cross-examination that the zemindar worshipped a god called Baradeo on the Dasahra day.

The next witness P. W. No. 6, also a Raj-Gond, gives a long list of Hindu customs observed by his caste and says that the custom of adoption of sons and the limited interest of widows prevail in his caste. The only adoption of which he has personal knowledge is that by Godabai of Kayer, already referred to, which was held not proved by the Court. He also admits that he does not know of any alienation by a Gond widow which was set aside. He is a "Sahadev".

P. W. No. 7 Maniram also states that there is a custom of adoption in his caste, but admits in cross-examination that he has never attended any adoption in his caste and does not know of any instance where the Gond widow's alienations have been set aside.

P. W. No. 8 has also heard of the adoption at Kayer and admits that Deokaran ceremony is performed amongst them.

P. W. No. 9 is a "Sahadev" Gond. He has not attended any adoption, though he says that an adoption took place in his caste. He says that the widow inherits the husband's property, but she cannot sell the husband's property. This he has read in a book and he does not know of any case in his caste.

The next witness P. W. No. 10 can only refer ta Godabai's adoption. He is a "Chardev" Gond. So also the next witness P. W. No. 11 has no personal knowledge of any adoption except that by Godabai, and has not been able to give any instance of the sale by a Gond widow being declared void. The next witness P. W. No. 13 is Jankubai's mukhtiar. He deposes to the observance of Hindu customs in his caste, to the custom of adoption and of pat marriages. He says that a widow has a right only to maintenance and cannot sell, but does not give any instance.

The last witness for the ptaintiffs is a priest from Nasik called to prove that the family of Nilkanthrao had gone on pilgrimage to Nasik.

The evidence of these witnesses does not show anything more than that the Raj-Gonds have adopted a certain number of Hindu customs and the worship of Hindu gods, as the books of reference say; but while the witnesses speak generally of the limited interest of widows and the validity of the adoption, they are unable to give a single instance of alienation by a widow being set aside, or of an adoption. The only adoption, they refer to, is that by Godabai, who is a member of the family of the plaintiffs and that adoption was held not proved in a suit.

On behalf of defendants D. W. No. 15 who is a cousin of Nilkanthrao, and D. W. No. 17 have been examined to prove that Raj-Gonds are not Hindus.

In these circumstances I agree with the lower Court in holding that the plaintiffs have failed to prove that the Raj-Gonds as a whole or the family of Nilkanthrao are governed by Hindu Law. This being so, plaintiff No. 2 obtains no rights in the property of Nilkanthrao based on adoption, since the theory of adoption is peculiar to the Hindu Law.

As it is not proved that the plaintiffs are governed by the Hindu Law, the co-widows succeeded to their husband's property as full owners. Ambabai had a right to alienate her half share and it cannot be recovered. As regards Jankubai's share, although it is alleged in the plaint that the alienation was without her knowledge and consent, it is further alleged that the plaintiff No. 1 for a number of years received her share of the income, that is Rs. 200, from Tanabai. This they have entirely failed to prove and the only witness who deposed to it is Hanmanta (P. W. No. 12), who is the plaintiffs' mukhtiar. He says that in 7 or 8 years Rs. 200 were paid, but no receipts were taken. It cannot, therefore, be pleaded that Jankubai has no subsequent knowledge of the alienation, even if it was made without her consent. Her claim would be barred long ago by adverse possession, but in view of the fact that she took no steps for over 20 years to set aside the alienation and on her own case received certain payments from the alienee, I think it may be presumed that she consented to it and that the device of adoption has been resorted to in order to meet the difficulty that she herself has never challenged the alienation. In any case her claim must be barred either by adverse possession or by reason of her having consented.

In this view of the case the question of legal necessity is not of much importance. The evidence shows that Ambabai was in embarrassed circumstances and used to borrow small sums re-payable by Re. 1 or Rs. 2 a month and also grain. Exhibit D-28 shows that the assessment on the village was raised from Rs. 35 to Rs. 126-6-0 in the year 1896, when the lease expired. This probably led her to part with the village. It is true that her application to the Deputy Commissioner does not mention any debt and says that she could not manage it because she resided in another village. I am not, however, prepared to disagree with the view of the lower Court on the question of necessity. There is evidence that the land was not productive and there was little cultivation in the village.

There is another aspect of the case. The village was not the property of Nilkanthrao, but was held under the Berar Waste Lands Rules of 1865, under a 30 years' lease. The rules provided that at the expiry of the lease, or during its continuance, the lessee might exercise the option of accepting proprietary rights under certain conditions, or patelki rights under certain conditions, or might transfer the lease with the permssion of the Deputy Commissioner. No application for proprietary rights or patelki rights was ever made by Nilkanthrao or Ambabai during the continuance of the lease, and the mere fact that on the expiry of the lease when the assessment was raised Ambabai paid the enhanced assessment for two years, is not enough to constitute the proprietary rights referred to in the rules, which appear to me to contemplate a distinct election by the lessee followed by an application and an agreement between the lessee and Government to abide by the conditions and then the grant of a sanad conferring proprietary rights.

It is not alleged that any such sanad was granted to Ambabai, the proprietary rights being for the first time conferred upon Tanabai after Ambabai had transferred the village to her by razinama and kabuliyat.

In this view of the case the village was not really family property at all in the strict sense of the word, and if Ambabai elected not to apply for proprietary rights but surrendered the lease for a consideration that is, in my opinion, not such an alienation as could be challenged by her heirs, even supposing they had a right to challenge any alienation. At the most it can be said that she did not elect to renew her lease or to acquire higher rights than those of a lessee, and I do not think that the person to whom those rights were subsequently granted by the Government could in any circumstances be made to restore them to the heirs of the widow. I am not aware of any case in which the alienations made by a widow, which have been challenged, are other than alienations of family property.

The suit thus fails on all points and was rightly dismissed by the lower Court. The appeal is consequently dismissed with costs.

G. R. D. Appeal dismissed.
Z. K.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 332 OF 1923.
December 19, 1924.
Present:— Mr. Dalal, J. C.
Musammat MAHRAJA—PLAINTIFF —APPELLANT
versus
BAJRANG BALI AND ANOTHER— DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Appeal, second—Finding of fact—Evidence not weighed, effect of—Finding, whether binding.

A finding of fact arrived at by an Appellate Court without correctly appreciating the point for determination and without properly weighing all the evidence on the record, is not binding in second appeal. [p. 1041, col. 2.]

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 1st October 1923, reversing that of the Probationary Munsif, Sultanpur, dated the 10th April 1923.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Appellant.

Chaudhury Niamat Ullah, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The judgment of the lower Appellate Court is very unsatisfactory in comparison with the excellent judgment written by the Trial Court. Musammat Mahraja, daughter of one Musammat Gulaba, sued for the redemption of the property in suit. The original mortgagees were Chauharja and Bajrang Bali. The mortgage was executed on 14th April, 1881, by Musammat Gulaba. The present representatives of the mortgagees are defendants Bajrang Bali and Musammat RamRaji widow of a grandson of Chauharja. There were various defences entered in the Trial Court and repelled by that Court. I shall discuss only one of them that the plaintiff has no interest in the equity of redemption and is not, therefore, entitled to sue. She was admitted to be the only child of Musammat Gulaba, but the plea was that being a female she was excluded from inheritance by custom applying to the family of her father, to the clan to which he belonged and to the whole community of Kayasths of a particular denomination. The lower Appellate Court accepted this defence. Instead of decreeing the appeal and dismissing the suit on this ground it has made some scrappy remarks on other grounds of appeal also. I am not satisfied that it has considered the other grounds of appeal properly. So in this second appeal I shall confine myself only to the question whether the plaintiff Musammat Mahraja has an interest in the equity of redemption or not.

The argument was put forward by the learned Counsel for the defendants that the finding of the lower Court was one of fact, that the evidence on the record was sufficient to establish the custom of exclusion of daughters. As already pointed out by me the judgment is inefficient and I am not sure that the lower Court has properly weighed all the evidence on the record.

No reference whatsoever is made by it to the difference in the language of the wajib-ul-araiz of villages Jalali and Mangraulia The record of the wajib-ul-arz of Mangraulia which did not support the conclusion of the lower Court is not touched at all. In a summary sort of way, reference is made to all the wajib-ul-araiz in a lump (Exs. A-8 to A-14). Nor is the oral evidence discussed in the able manner in which it has been discussed by the Trial Court. In discussing the weight to be attached to a judgment of this Court (Ex. A-4), the lower Court has given expression to a legal opinion which seems to me amazing in a Judicial Officer of some standing. He appears to be of opinion that when there are several reversioners of the same degree one cannot sue or be sued in a representative character so as to make the judgment binding on the others. One would have thought it to be the very case in which representation may be presumed and given effect.

The learned Judge of the lower Court has entirely misunderstood the very cogent argument of adverse possession contained in the judgment of the Trial Court. He seems to have thought that adverse possession was pleaded against the mortgagee while really what the Trial Court rightly pointed out was that whatever the custom may be the daughter has acquired rights to the property of Musammat Gulaba by adverse possession as against the reversioners to Musammat Gulaba's husband. What the Trial Court decided was that as, after contest with her father's reversioners, Musammat Mahraja had obtained possession after her mother's death of all the property of her mother and had been in possession of that property for over 12 years, she must be presumed to be in adverse possession as against the reversioners (and not as against the mortgagee) of the equity of redemption also. This is a totally different argument from the argument which the lower Court has considered in an exceedingly slipshod manner.

For these reasons I do not consider myself bound by the findings recorded by the lower Appellate Court.

One think may be made clear at the outset because without a proper study of the record I had an impression that no reversioner of Musammat Mahraja's father had been proved to be in existence. It is clear that such reversioners do exist and one of them was a witness for the defence Shiam Behari Lal (D. W. No. 8). The records in the different wajib-ul-araiz are of different characters. If the words in the wajib-ul-arz of mouza Jalali are accepted as the correct record there can be no doubt that Musammat Mahraja would be excluded as against her father's reversioners if Musammat Gulaba was a life-holder and not an absolute owner. The wajib-ul-arz of Mouza Mangraulia is not so definite. What it says is that daughters are excluded in the majority of cases (alalamum) while widows are excluded if sons are in existence. I adopt here the reading as placed before the Court by the learned Counsel for the defence Mr. Niamat Ullah. This shows that the daughter is not invariably excluded. Out of other wajib-ul-araiz some follow the record made in the wajib-ul-arz of Jalali while others follow that made in the wajib-ul-arz of Mangraulia. We have, therefore, to inquire whether this particular daughter Musammat Mahraja should be excluded according to custom or not. To overcome her exclusion she points to the litigation which took place immediately after the death of her mother and says that hers is the case which should escape exclusion. This is a very strong argument. The mutation Courts held in her favour in competition with the reversioners and one litigation came right up to this Court where she sued one Musaheb Rai for redemption. This Musaheb Rai was one of the next reversioners to her father's estate on the death of her mother and he pleaded that she had no right to the equity of redemption. It was held by this Court (judgment Ex. 4) on 3rd January 1906, that she was owner of the equity of redemption.

Mr. Niamat Ullah rightly pointed out to the Court that the plaintiff had not obtained mutation of the equity of redemption. The reason for this will be found in the order of the Assistant Collector dated 25th April, 1922, (Ex. A-23). At the time of the last settlement the mortgagees were entered in the papers as proprietors in virtue of a clause in the mortgage-deed that the mortgage would turn into a sale-deed on the expiry of certain period of time, which time had expired prior to the last settlement. The original mortgagor herself Musammat Gulaba had failed to get her name entered in the papers as mortgagor. Naturally, therefore, the daughter had no better success. This was not a claim put forward by a daughter as against the reversioners. What effect these orders may have in support of the defendants' plea of absolute title I am not called upon to decide at present.

It is not necessary in view of my finding above to discuss the question whether in case of Musammat Gulaba being a full owner the custom entered in the wajib-ul-arz of Mouza Jalali would apply to her or not so as to prevent the plaintiff from inheriting her mother's property It appears that the property originally belonged to Musammat Gulaba's husband who had died prior to the first regular settlement. The first regular settlement, therefore, was made in favour of the widow. The question would then arise whether Musammat Gulaba became a full owner or only a life holder. The defence was that Musammat Gulaba had become full owner but, as rightly pointed out by Mr. Niamat Ullah, a Court should not insist on words used by a Pleader for a specific purpose of supporting a particular argument. I shall leave this matter open.

I hold that Musammat Mahraja succeeded to all the rights and interests of her father and mother in whatever property they held. She is, therefore, owner of the equity of redemption in the property in suit if one does exist.

This finding is further supported by the plaintiff's adverse title as against the reversioners of her father. This matter has been clearly explained in the judgment of the Trial Court and I agree with that opinion. More than 12 years ago Musammat Mahraja took possession of every item of property of which she could take possession on the death of her mother. I, therefore, hold her to have established her title to the property left by her mother by adverse possession.

The other findings of the lower Appellate Court are also set aside.

I set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and remit the appeal to it for a a proper decision of the other grounds of appeal. It may be pointed out that I have only decided grounds of appeal Nos. 1 and 2 of those submitted to the lower Appellate Court on behalf of the defendants. All the other grounds will have to be decided whether anew or over again by the lower Appellate Court.

Costs here shall abide the result. Other costs will be disposed of by the lower Appellate Court after trial of the appeal.

Z. K. Decree set aside.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 443 OF 1924.

February 2, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Baker, J. C.

VITHOBA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

VISHNU—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), ss. 12, 13—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Occupancy right, transfer of, whether void or voidable—Surrender—Lease to third person—Loss of possession by lessee—Suit to recover amount paid to landlord, whether maintainable.

A transfer of occupancy or ordinary tenancy rights is not unlawful within the meaning of s. 23 of the Contract Act. Such a transfer is only voidable in the manner and to the extent provided for by the C. P. Tenancy Act; it is not absolutely void.

Shaligram v. Narain, 45 Ind. Cas. 669, followed.

Where a tenant surrenders his tenancy right to the landlord and the landlord leases the land to a third person and the latter subsequently loses possession of the land leased to him, he is entitled to recover the sum paid by him to the landlord on the ground of failure of consideration.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Nagpur, dated the 4th August 1924, in Civil Appeal No. 21 of 1924.

Mr. W. H. Dhabe, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. R. Mangrulkar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts are fully set out in the judgments of the Courts below.

It has been found by the lower Appellate Court on a full consideration of the evidence that the plaintiff paid Rs. 1,000 to the defendants for the lease, of which Rs. 800 was to go to the tenants and Rs. 200 to the defendants as premium, but it is contended on behalf of the appellants that the plaintiff cannot recover the amount because the whole transaction is illegal. The learned Pleader for the appellants has quoted a number of cases from the Allahabad High Court and one case of this Court, Bhure v. Sheogopal (Second Appeal No. 530 of 1918), in support of this position, but all these are cases of attempted transfer of the cultivating rights in sir lands, without the intervention of the Revenue Authorities, which is expressly forbidden by law. The facts of the present case are different.

The present is a case of a surrender by a tenant to a landlord and a lease by the landlord to a third person, and this is not illegal.

The case is governed by the ruling of this Court, quoted by the District Judge, Shaligram v. Narain (1) where it was held that the view which has been taken in this Court regarding the prohibition of transfers of occupancy and ordinary tenant rights is that such transfers are voidable in the manner and to the extent provided for by the Act. It has never been held that such transfers are unlawful within the meaning of s. 23 of the Contract Act. The transfers are not absolutely void.

The plaintiff is, therefore, entitled to recover the sum paid on failure of the consideration. The decree of the lower Appellate Court must be confirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 45 Ind. Cas. 669.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION SUIT No. 1741 OF 1921.

November 27, 1924.

Present :—Mr. Justice Kemp.

JIVANLAL PANALAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

versus

BAI MANCHHA—DEFENDANT.

Bombay High Court Original Side Rules, rr. 529, 530—Practice—Taxation—Warrant to tax—Warrant to review—Procedure—Costs of Counsel attending before Taxing Master, whether can be allowed—Second warrant to review, whether competent—Res judicata.

The procedure on the taxation of a bill in the Taxing Office is that the bill is first taxed roughly by the clerks in the office and then more carefully by the Taxing Master. Thereupon the warrant to tax issues. On that the parties are heard and any party dissatisfied with the Taxing Master's decision can take out a warrant to review under r. 529. The parties are again heard by the Taxing Master and any party dissatisfied with his decision on the review can apply for a certificate. With this certificate the Taxing Master states the grounds for his decision on the points on which a certificate is asked for. The matter then comes before the Chamber Judge for a review of the taxation. [p. 1044, col. 2.]

On the warrant to tax the party taking the taxation must pay the costs of the proceedings of that warrant. But if the Taxing Master is of opinion that the party bringing in the bill has unnecessarily or vexatiously increased the costs he may report accordingly and the Chamber Judge will make such order as to those costs as he thinks fit. The proper procedure in such a case is by summons. [ibid.]

The costs of the warrant to review should follow the event on such review, and in a proper case the Taxing Master has power to award costs against the party taking out such a review. [ibid.]

It is not, however, the practice to allow costs of Counsel attending before the Taxing Master. [p. 1045, col. 1.]

Where a warrant of review is taken out but is subsequently abandoned, a second warrant of review is not competent as it is not contemplated by rr. 529 and 530 of the Bombay High Court Original Side Rules and would be barred by the application to these proceedings of the principles of res judicata. [ibid.]

Mr. B. J. Desai, (with him Mr. Coltman), for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Mulla, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application to review the Taxing Master's taxation of the defendant's bill of costs.

The suit was for possession of certain immoveable property, and on February 6, 1923 a consent-decree was passed directing the costs of both sides to be taxed between party and party. There was no order as to which side should pay the other party's costs, but it is admitted that there was an agreement by which the plaintiffs agreed to pay the defendant's costs of the suit. An order had been made prior to the decree directing the plaintiffs to pay the costs of a particular day including the fees for the attendance of witnesses on that day. The taxation before the Taxing Master lasted from October 4, 1922, to November 15, 1922. After the latter date there was a further taxation with regard to payments alleged to have been made to the witnesses amounting to Rs. 924 odd. The plaintiffs contended that the moneys had never been paid to the witnesses and, if any such payment had been made, that it had found its way back to the defendant's pocket. After no less than eleven meetings on this point before the Assistant Taxing Master and a large number of exhibits and books of account had been put in, he held on April 9, 1923, that the payments had not been made, or if they had, they were colourable payments and had come back to the hands of the defendant. The Assistant Taxing Master thereupon disallowed all the payments to the witnesses and ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiffs' costs after November 15, 1922. On April 16, 1923, the defendant applied for a review of the taxation. In that application she took no objection to the order against her for payment of costs. On April 27, 1923, the warrant to review the taxation was heard and adjourned to June 23, 1923. Prior to that date, however on June 22, 1923, the defendant's attorneys wrote to the Taxing Master and the plaintiffs saying that they withdrew the application for review. On June 23, 1923, the Assistant Taxing Master noted the withdrawal of the review and adjourned the warrant to review only on the question of costs. On September 13, 1923, the defendant took out a fresh warrant to review the original taxation and objected to the order for payment of costs made by the Taxing Master on April 9, 1923. On September 29, 1923, the Taxing Master heard the second review and considered that the defendant was not entitled to file a second review but nevertheless he held that he had no power to order the defendant to pay costs on April 9, 1923, and he directed the plaintiffs to pay the costs of the second warrant to review. The plaintiffs have come here on the Taxing Master's certificate of October 15, 1923, against that decision. They have also taken out a Chamber summons in respect of the costs disallowed to them on the original taxation of the bill.

Now the procedure on the taxation of a bill in the Taxing office is very simple. The bill is first taxed roughly by the clerks in the office and then more carefully by the Taxing Master. Thereupon a warrant to tax issues. On that the parties are heard and any party dissatisfied with the Taxing Master's decision takes out a warrant to review under r. 529. The parties are again heard by the Taxing Master and any party dissatisfied with his decision on the review applies for a certificate. With this certificate the Taxing Master states the grounds for his decision on the points on which a certificate is asked for. The matter then comes before a Chamber Judge for a review of the taxation.

Generally, it may be laid down that on the warrant to tax the party taking the taxation must pay the costs of the proceedings on that warrant. But if the Taxing Master is of opinion the party bringing in the bill has unnecessarily or vexatiously increased the costs he may report accordingly and the Court, i. e., the Chamber Judge, will make such order as to those costs as he thinks fit. The proper procedure in such a case is by summons.

The costs of the warrant to review should follow the event on such review. I really see no reason why the Taxing Master should not have power, in a proper case, to award costs against the party taking out such a review. It is conceded that he has power to make such a party, if he be the party bringing in the bill pay his own costs of the review. I see no reason why he should not have no power to make him in addition, in a proper case, pay the other party's costs.

In both cases it is equally an exercise of his discretion. If the party bringing in a bill is entitled to take out a warrant to review as part of the procedure necessary to the final taxation of the bill, then the Taxing Master has no more power to make him pay his own costs than he has on the warrant to tax. Nevertheless, as I have said, it is conceded the practice of the Taxing Office has been that the Taxing Master may make such party pay his own costs.

Applying these principles it is clear that in effect the Assistant Taxing Master has found on the warrant to tax that these alleged payments to witnesses were false. On that finding I see no reason why the defendant, whose bill it was, should not pay the plaintiffs' costs of the investigation on this point. It is only right and proper she should, and I accordingly make the summons absolute with costs except so far as the costs of bringing Counsel on the taxation are concerned. Counsel certified.

With reference to the second warrant to review I am of opinion it was not competent not only because no second warrant to review is contemplated by rr. 529 and 530 but also by the application to these proceedings of the principles of res judicata. It was open to the defendant to have applied to the Assistant Taxing Master to have the first warrant to review amended by inserting an objection to the order for costs passed regarding the proceedings on the warrant to tax. She did not do so but withdrew the first warrant to review. She cannot be allowed to harass the plaintiffs by taking out a second review. The Assistant Taxing Master, it appears from his reasons, was also of opinion that the second review was not competent. The order made on that second review including the order as to costs of it will, therefore, be set aside.

The costs of the first warrant to review have not been dealt with. There is no doubt that the defendant having taken out that warrant and abandoned it must pay the costs of it. I make an order accordingly. Costs of this review to be borne by defendant. Counsel not certified.

It is not the usual practice to allow costs of Counsel attending before the Taxing Master and a careful check should be kept on the further accumulation of costs in taxation. I see no reason here to depart from the usual practice and the costs of Counsel will, therefore, be disallowed on all appearances in this matter before the Taxing Master.

This litigation has resulted in a species of vendetta between the parties which accounts for the bitterness with which they have contested every step in the taxation proceedings and before me.

Z. K. Summons made absolute.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 473 OF 1922.

January 23, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

FAKIRA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAMKISAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), ss. 46, 47—Occupancy holding—Trees, interest in, nature of—Trees, whether transferable—Transfer of holding—Revenue Officer, jurisdiction of, to put next heir in possession, extent of—Order of Revenue Officer, whether can be questioned.

Trees of all kinds standing on an agricultural holding are part and parcel of the holding, at least in those cases where the property in them has not been expressly severed from the property in the soil on which they stand. [p. 1048, col. 1.]

In order that there should be a valid severance of the interest or property in the trees, the trees must become the separate property of a person other than the owner of the soil on which they stand, and the interest in the trees as also in the soil must be of a nature transferable under the law applicable to the land. [p. 1049, cols. 1 & 2.]

Inasmuch as, in trees standing on occupancy holdings the tenants hold analogous rights, and the interest of occupancy tenants in their holdings has by law been made non-transferable, the property in the trees is also non-transferable and is not capable of being validly severed or parted with, apart from the soil of the holding in which the trees stand. [p. 1049, col. 2.]

Section 47 of the C. P. Tenancy Act does not restrict the jurisdiction of the Revenue Officer to the giving of possession to the next heir of only that part of the holding which was sought to be transferred. The very idea of letting in the next heir and putting him in possession of the holding by avoidance of the transfer assumes that the transferring tenant was dead at the date of the transfer. He cannot, consequently, be treated as only partially dead and partially alive. Once the matter is decided under s. 47 of the C. P. Tenancy Act and possession of the holding is transferred to the claimant, no power is given to any outside authority to revise the decision of the Revenue Officer and to divest the claimant of the right vested in him under the order. [p. 1050, col. 1.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal against a decree of the Additional District Judge, Khandwa, in Civil Appeal No. 17 of 1922, dated the 13th July 1922.

Mr. P. C. Dutt, for the Appellants.

Mr. W. R. Puranik, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit filed under the following circumstances.

One Ramchand Gujrati was an occupancy tenant of field No. 253 area 3-9 rent Rs. 12 of Mouza Adgaon in Burhanpur Tahsil. In that field there are 110 mango trees forming part and parcel of the holding. The tenant died about 18 years ago leaving behind a son Babaji, and a widow by name Rukhminibai and a daughter Kesharbai. His holding together with the trees devolved on his son Babaji but it appears it was recorded not in his name but in the name of his widow Rukhminibai, Babaji became a Sadhu and abandoned the world. Therefore, his son plaintiff Ramkisan claimed the succession to the holding. On 11th May 1917 Rukhmini for herself and on behalf of her minor daughter Kesharbai executed two deeds; one purported to be a surrender in respect of the aforesaid land, and the other a sale-deed in respect of the trees standing thereon but exclusive of the land, in favour of defendant No. 1 Fakira and of Sampat the deceased father of defendants No. 2-to 6 co-sharer-malguzars of the said mouza. Both these deeds were registered on the same day. The transferees took possession of the property covered by the two deeds.

On 15th July 1918 the present plaintiff Ramkisan who is still a minor made an application, Ex. D-7, through his next friend Narottamdas, and along with one Nathudas under ss. 36 and 47 of the C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898) for being placed in possession of the holding on the ground that the same was transferred in the guise of a surrender in contravention of the provision of s. 46 of the said Tenancy Act, to the present defendant No. 1 and deceased father of the defendants Nos. 2 to 6 who were not the sole landlords of the holding but only fractional co-sharers of the village. The Sub-Divisional Officer, Burhanpur, on 3rd October 1919 ordered the plaintiff to be put in possession of the holding. The appeal preferred by the transferees to the Court of the Deputy Commissioner, Nimar, was dismissed on 27th February 1920 as per Ex. P-2. Accordingly the plaintiff was put in possession of the occupancy holding bearing No. 253 area 3-9 and jama Rs. 12 of Mouza Adgaon on 22nd April 1920, as per Ex. P. 3. The name of plaintiff Ramkisan has been recorded in the jamabandi of the holding for Sambat 1977, Ex. P-1. He transferred the mango crop of the season 1920-21 but his lessee was obstructed by the defendants in the enjoyment of the crop, and consequently he, on 21st October 1921, filed the present suit for injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the enjoyment of the mango trees standing in the holding. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff was neither the owner nor the recorded occupancy tenant of the field bearing No. 253. They, however, admitted that the mango trees stood in the holding. They at the same time denied that plaintiff had any right to them. They also denied that the trees were part and parcel of the field No. 253, and urged that the property in them had been expressly severed from the soil on which they stood, by the aforesaid separate deeds of surrender and sale executed by Rukhminibai the same day. They also added that plaintiff was not in possession of the whole of the occupancy holding and urged that he was in possession of the land only and not of the mango trees, and disputed the plaintiff's right to sell or dispose of the mango crop. They alleged that plaintiff had never been in possession of the mango trees and that the claim was barred by limitation.

Their further contention was that Rukhminibai and her daughter Kesharbai were the occupancy tenants and that they were competent to and did surrender only the land by the surrender deed and transfer the trees by a separate sale-deed of the same date, in consideration of Rs. 300. They admitted that the plaintiff claimed as an heir of Rukhminibai and Kesharbai and made an application under s. 36 of the C. P. Tenancy Act alleging that the surrender was in evasion of the law and obtained possession through the Sub-Divisional Officer, and contended that what he thus got was the possession of the land only and not of the trees and that as he made no similar application to the Sub-Divisional Officer under either s. 36 or s. 47 of the C. P. Tenancy Act of 1898, for obtaining possession of the mango trees his remedy under the C. P. Tenancy Act became barred by limitation. It was further pleaded that the transfer of the trees was valid except for the prohibition contained in s. 47 and could, therefore, be avoided only in the manner and to the extent provided for by ss. 47 and 48 of the said Act and that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to grant that relief, the remedy given by the Tenancy Act itself not being availed of in time.

In the oral pleadings the plaintiff submitted that the surrender was set aside and he was given possession of the holding, and that, as the trees in question were part and parcel of the holding, the order operated to give him a right to and possession over the trees as well, that the trees could not be transferred apart from the land and their sale was, therefore, invalid, that it was unnecessary for him to apply under the Tenancy Act for setting aside the sale as the person executing it had no right to sell. The defendants also contended that neither Babaji nor the plaintiff ever held possession of the land and thus Rukhminibai, who was step-mother of Babaji, became the occupancy tenant and the title of Babaji and of the plaintiff, if any, was extinguished; and further that as the plaintiff applied for setting aside the surrender claiming to be the heir of Rukhminibai he was estopped from asserting that he was owner of the field and the trees not as heir of Rukhminibai but in his own right as heir of Ramchandra, his grandfather. On these pleadings issues were framed and the Court of first instance decreed the claim after giving the following findings.

That Rukhminibai was the recorded occupancy tenant of the holding in which the trees stood and as she had analogous occupancy rights in the trees as well, she had no transferable right in the field as also in the trees. That the sale was on that ground invalid. That as land included trees standing on it and it was not the case of the defendants that Rukhminibai held the field under one set of conditions and the trees under another, and as they together formed the occupancy holding bearing one No. 253, and as the Revenue Officer adjudged the holding to the plaintiff under s. 47 of the Tenancy Act, that order has the effect of giving not only the field but also the trees to plaintiff even though there was no express mention of the trees throughout the proceedings. The defendants' contention that the property in trees and of the soil was severed by two different documents was not accepted as correct inasmuch as it was held that the severance must be one effected at some antecedent date and not by a contemporaneous act of transfer. It was further found that the intention of Rukhminibai was clearly to give the field as also the trees to the defendants, but that a separate sale-deed of the trees was taken, presumably because, the parties considered, though erroneously that Rukhminibai had no analogous rights in the trees as she had in the land, but owned them as full owner with power to sell the same. That the transfer in question was intended to defeat the policy of the law enacted for prohibiting transfers of the tenant rights. That the registration of the sale-deed was, therefore, invalid and consequently no title passed to the defendants, and that they were not barred by Tenancy Act. That on the basis of the order of the Sub-Divisional Officer the plaintiff was entitled to sue for injunction. A decree was accordingly passed in plaintiff's favour. Against this decision an appeal was preferred to the Court of the Additional District Judge, Khandwa, by the defendants who confirmed the decree of the First Court and dismissed the appeal.

The Additional District Judge's findings were as under.

That the order of sequence as between the sale and the surrender was that the sale-deed was executed first and the surrender thereafter; that the trees could not be sold apart from the land. That the trees being situate in the occupancy holding were not transferable just as the occupancy right itself could not be. That the property in the trees could not even by implication be separated from the land of the holding, much less expressly by a separate sale-deed executed in respect thereof. That as the trees formed part and parcel of the tenancy holding there was no necessity for making a separate application for their possession. That the execution of two separate deeds was a mistake as the object could have been served by taking only one sale-deed. That the transaction amounted to a transfer, and the same having been avoided once for all through the Revenue Court, and the present suit not being one for avoiding it, was not barred by s. 47 of the C. P. Tenancy Act. That the Revenue Officer's order confirmed or recognized the title of plaintiff as an occupancy tenant as it were by succession, and the latter in that capacity obtained possession of the land which included the trees also through the Revenue Court. That plaintiff being placed in possession of the holding by the order of the Revenue Officer he has entitled to maintain a suit for injunction and the Civil Court had jurisdiction to grant the relief. Against this decision the defendants have now come up in second appeal urging as many as 9 grounds of appeal.

At the very outset I must say that I look upon the transaction evidenced by the surrender deed and the sale-deed as nothing short of a device or arrangement for contravening the policy of the Tenancy Law, and as such it is illegal and void. It can no longer be doubted for a moment that an occupancy tenant has the same analogous rights in the trees as he has in the holding, on which they stand. The law as stated in Raghunath Prasad v. Dhanraj Seth (1) and Sukhnandan v. Manakchand (2) is that the trees of all kinds, standing on an agricultural holding are part and parcel of land used for agricultural purposes, at least in those cases where the property in them has not been expressly severed from the property in the soil on which they stand. Here, down to the very day of the transfer, which although effected by two instruments was, in reality one transaction, Rukhminibai was and continued to be the owner or occupant of the trees as also of the soil on which they stood, and she had the same untransferable right in the trees as she had in the land. This necessarily brought both the land as also the trees standing thereon, under the prohibition contained in s. 46, sub-s. 3, of the C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898) which declares that no occupancy tenant shall be entitled to sell or otherwise transfer his right in his holding or in any portion thereof. Sub-section 5 of the said section further prohibits the Registering Officers from admitting to registration any document which purports to transfer the right of an occupancy tenant in his holding or in any portion thereof. Section 47 of the said Act enacts that if an occupancy tenant transfers any portion of his right in any land in contravention of the provisions of the last foregoing section the next heir, who will inherit his right in the holding, may on an application to a Revenue Officer be placed in possession of the holding.

In view of this legal position the appellants cannot, in my opinion, successfully contend that Rukhminibai had a transferable right or interest in the trees, independently of the soil on which they stood, which she could validly alienate for valuable consideration to another. The transfer by her of her right in the mango trees, or to the future enjoyment thereof was clearly a contravention of the provisions of the Tenancy Act, as has been held in Bhure v. Sheogopal (3) which was a case of simultaneous sale of the malguzari share reserving the right of the vendors to occupy the sir land, and an agreement to surrender the ex-proprietary occupancy right which accrued to the vendors in the sir land of their share by virtue of the sale. The vendee was put in possession of it for some time. The vendors ejected him from the land to which the surrender related. The vendee, therefore, claimed restoration to possession of the land surrendered. The defence was that the surrender amounted to an evasion of the law contained in s. 45 of the Tenancy Act and was, therefore, void. This plea was overruled by the Trial Court on the ground that a surrender of occupancy right was permissible under s. 25 and was not prohibited by s. 45 of the Tenancy Act. The District Judge, however, on authority of the decision of the Privy Council in Moti Chand v. Ikram Ullah Khan (4) and of the ruling in Mir Dad Khan v. Ramzan Khan (5) held that the sale and the surrender together constituted a single transaction the object of which was to avoid the necessity of obtaining the sanction prescribed by s. 45 (1), Tenancy Act and was, therefore, illegal and void. On the view, that s. 45 of the C. P. Tenancy Act of 1898 was identical in purport with s. 10 of the N. W. P. Tenancy Act, 1901, Drake-Brockman, J. C., applied the test laid down by Piggott, J., in Mir Dad Khan v. Ramzan Khan (5) above cited in the following words:—

"If a covenant to relinquish the sir lands is part of the transaction of sale or of mortgage, then the agreement to surrender

(1) 7 C. P. L. R. 7.
(2) 10 Ind. Cas. 473; 7 N. L. R. 63.
(3) 54 Ind. Cas. 794.
(4) 39 Ind. Cas. 454; 39 A. 173; 15 A. L. J. 150; 5 L. W. 388; 21 M. L. T. 267; 32 M. L. J. 383; 21 C. W. N. 616; 19 Bom. L. R. 433; 26 C. L. J. 24; (1917) M. W. N. 453; 44 I. A. 54 (P. C.).
(5) 44 Ind. Cas. 988; 40 A. 449; 16 A. L. J. 329.

will be void and unenforceable, no matter what ingenious devices may be employed to give colour to it". He held that in the case before him there was admittedly a design to evade the requirements of sub-s. 1 of s. 45 of the Tenancy Act, the two deeds of even date being executed not as separate transactions but as a part of a single design. He observed in the words of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Moti Chand v. Ikram Ullah Khan (4) that such a device was in contravention of the policy of the Act and contrary to law and, therefore, illegal and void. He also held that the mere fact that the plaintiff obtained possession did not suffice to separate the surrender from the sale. He, therefore, affirmed the dismissal of the vendee's claim for possession holding that the surrender in question before him was void just like the agreement for relinquishment coupled with the deed of relinquishment dated respectively the 2nd and 5th May 1903, which were considered by the Privy Council in Moti Chand v. Ikram Ullah Khan (4).

In view of this decision, the mere fact that the sale-deed purporting to deal with the trees apart from the soil was executed first and the surrender of the soil pure and simple, followed it (presumably a few minutes later) as found by the lower Appellate Court, does not prevent the transaction from being any the less a single design or device for contravening the policy of the Tenancy Act. The two deeds could not, therefore, be looked upon as separate transactions but formed part and parcel of one transaction. The argument based on the finding of the lower Appellate Court to the effect that the sale-deed was executed first, that as soon as the sale-deed was executed, there was a severance of interest so far as the trees were concerned, and that the property in the soil was surrendered by means of the surrender deed subsequently executed is of no value in view of the aforesaid decision of this Court in Bhure v. Sheogopal (3) based as it is upon the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Moti Chand v. Ikram Ullah Khah (4). In my opinion in order that there could be a valid severance of interest or property in the trees, the trees must themselves have already become the separate property of a person other than the owner of the soil on which they stand, by an independent transaction, and further the interest in the trees as also in the soil must be of a nature transferable under the law applicable to the land. Inasmuch as, in trees standing on occupancy holdings the tenants hold analogous rights and as the interest of occupancy tenants has by law been made untransferable, it follows that the property in the trees is also untransferable and is not capable of being validly severed or parted with, apart from the soil of the holding in which they stand. I have not been referred to any law or custom or to any entry in the village wajib-ul-arz which lays down that an occupancy tenant has a transferable interest in the mango trees standing on his land, although the tenure of the holding is itself untransferable. That even a mortgage of trees standing on occupancy land apart from the soil comes within the prohibition of s. 46 of the Tenancy Act, 1898, has been held by Prideaux, A. J. C., in Tukaram v. Narba (6). The mortgage was there held to be not validly registered and as such could not operate in respect of any part of the property transferred by it. That this a correct view of the law is clear from the fact that the Legislature has enacted in s. 95 sub-s. 1 of the new C. P. Tenancy Act of 1920, that a tenant other than a sub-tenant shall have, during the period of his tenancy, the same right in trees in the holding as he has in the holding itself, and by s. 97 they have also rendered the attachment and sale in execution of a decree or order of the Civil Court, of trees, standing on the land apart from the land itself impossible. The object of these provisions is to prevent there being different owners of trees and land respectively.

Under these circumstances the property in the trees cannot be considered as having been severed from the property in the soil of the occupancy holding of Rukhminibai, and to have become the separate property of the present appellants. This being the state of things on the date of the transfer, and presumably also on 15th July 1918, when the plaintiff Ramkisan made his application, Ex. D-7, to the Sub-Divisional Officer for being placed in possession of the holding, and also on 22nd April 1920 when as per Ex. P-3 the Revenue Officer put him in possession of the occupancy holding, I do not see any force in the argument of the appellants that the property in the trees did not pass to the plaintiff Ramkisan, but that it remained in their hands in spite of the order. Even if, for the sake of argument it be conceded that the transfer of trees only was possible under law, and was in fact effected by the sale-deed, so as to make the appellants owners of the trees, and that the surrender was a surrender of only that portion of the holding which consisted only of the soil, even then, each document purported to be a transfer of a right in the holding or in some portion thereof, and under s. 47 of the Tenancy Act, 1898, each such transfer gave to the next heir a right to be placed in possession of the holding meaning the entire holding. The wording of s. 47, C. P. Tenancy Act, 1898, does not militate against this view. Nor does it restrict the jurisdiction of the Revenue Officer to the giving of possession of only that part of the holding which is transferred. The very basic idea of letting in the next heir and putting him in possession of the holding by avoidance of the transfer, is to treat as if the transferring tenant were dead at the date of the transfer. He could not be treated as only partially dead and partially alive. This succession to surrendered holding was creation of the Tenancy Act of 1898. It is a succession by virtue of the act of the Revenue Authority: compare Ghanya v. Ukund Rao (7). As observed by Bose, A. J. C., in Jagannath v. Khuba (8) it did not exist under the ordinary law, which is to the effect that on a valid surrender by the tenant the tenant-right entirely disappears (from the surrenderor) and nothing remains which can go to the next heir. In derogation of this ordinary law, the Statute gives the Revenue Officer the power to revive as it were the surrendered right and then give it to a person filling a certain character as therein specified. Once the matter is decided and the possession of the land transferred from the landlord to the claimant, no power is given to any outside authority to revise the decision of the Revenue Officer and divest the claimant of the right vested in him under the order. If the intention had been to preserve the right of any party to the proceedings, to question the scope of the order and re-open all the proceedings of the Revenue Officer that intention would have been expressed in clear terms in the Act itself. These principles very fittingly apply to the case of transfers of occupancy holdings or of portion thereof and, therefore, to the facts of the case before me. I have no hesitation to hold that the matter in dispute in this suit was entirely within the jurisdiction of the Revenue Authorities.

(6) 70 Ind. Cas. 34; (1922) A. I R. (N.) 252.

I may even say that under s. 95 of the C. P. Tenancy Act, 1898, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is clearly barred in respect of the matter on which the appellants seek adjudication and it is no longer open to them to reagitate that question now before any other forum. It was their duty if they wanted to have their so-called rights to the trees reserved to themselves as not coming within the scope of the proceedings before the Revenue Officer, to have urged that plea specifically as a defence in those proceedings; this they not having done, the matter is no longer open to treatment in the Civil Court. The jurisdiction conferred on the Revenue Officer being an exclusive jurisdiction neither the order passed in exercise of such jurisdiction, nor the scope of that order or of the proceedings taken for putting the heir into possession of the transferred holding, was in view of the provisions of s. 95, C. P. Tenancy Act, 1898, liable to be overriden by a decision in the Civil Court. To uphold the arguments of the appellants that they are entitled to possession of the trees apart from the land and that the plaintiff is entitled to enjoy the land portion of the holding, is to introduce a radical change in the construction of the tenant-right itself. It is inconceivable how the appellants would be entitled to keep their trees on land which does not belong to them. Even if a partition by metes and bounds were permissible without the landlord's consent and were made, it would be impossible to work it out on any tangible basis as regards the respective interests of plaintiff and the defendants, inter se, or in relation to the landlord, as also the apportionment of the rent payable to the latter. The nature of the original tenancy itself would be gone and altogether new tenancy would take its place this could never have been the intention of the Legislature.

The principle which underlies the ruling reported in Narbadapuri v. Bholamath Kasturchand (9) that if an order for foreclosure is made the mortgagee is entitled to possession of the crops on the land of the mortgagor which is based on the maxim Quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit, whatever is affixed to the soil becomes in contemplation of law a part of it and is consequently subjected to the same rights of property as the soil itself, applies to cases of this kind. This maxim is amplified under s. 8 of the Transfer of Property Act and I have, therefore, no doubt that when the Revenue Officer ordered the plaintiff to be put and actually put him in possession of the holding, it did and could legally put him in possession of the trees standing upon the holding. That trees go with the land is thus clear even from this point of view a proposition which is established beyond doubt, and it is no longer open to appellants to say that they did not go to the plaintiff in this case.

(7) 4 N. L. R. 9 at p. 13.
(8) 4 Ind. Cas. 795; 5 N. L. R. 176 at p. 178.
(9) 15 C. P. L. R. 141.

Under these circumstances I hold that the Courts below were right in decreeing the claim of the plaintiff against the appellants. The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs. The costs in Courts below will be paid as already ordered.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION SUIT No. 2407 OF 1924.

October 13, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Taraporewala.

GORDHANDAS KALYANJI BHAT —PLAINTIFF

versus

GAUTAMCHAND RUPCHAND— DEFENDANT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXX, rr. 1, 3—Suit against firm—Service of summonses—Dissolved partnership—Individual liability of partners—Proviso to r. 3, scope of.

Where a suit is, under O. XXX, r. 1, of the C. P. C., properly filed against a partnership firm in the firm's name, service on any one or more of the partners or on the manager must be deemed good service upon the firm. There is no difference at all as to the mode of effecting service whether the firm is going on or has been dissolved at the date of the service of the summons. If the service is effected as provided by r. 3 of O. XXX, the suit can be proceeded with against the firm and the plaintiff is entitled to obtain a decree against the firm. In the case of partnerships, which are going concerns at the date of the institution of the suit, the decree which is obtained against the firm is binding on all the partners in the firm, whether they have been served individually or not. In the case of a firm which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, an exception is made as to the liability of the partners in the firm under the decree passed against the firm by the proviso to r. 3 of O. XXX to the effect that in the case of such a firm the plaintiff must serve each and every person whom he wants to make liable personally in respect of the decree passed against the firm, and if he has not done so, he cannot execute the decree against the partner whom he had not served personally. The right to execute the decree against the firm is, however, in no way affected by the proviso. [p. 1052, col. 2.]

Mr. Jinnah, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. B. J. Desai, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—This is a Rule taken out by one Gautamchand Rupchand, a partner in the defendant firm, calling upon the plaintiff to show cause why the decree passed in this suit on August 19, 1924, should not be set aside. The Rule is taken out on the basis that the said decree was obtained ex parte.

The defendant firm, according to the said Gautamchand Rupchand, consisted of two partners, Gautamchand Rupchand and Dwarkadas Premji. The plaintiff is the tenant of a shop in the Mulji Jetha Market. He sub-let a portion of the shop to the defendant firm and filed this suit to recover from the defendant firm the arrears of rent for the said portion of the shop. The summons was served upon the said Dwarkadas Premji. He appeared at the hearing and admitted the plaintiff's claim. A decree was thereupon passed in favour of the plaintiff.

In his affidavit in support of the Rule the said Gautamchand Rupchand alleges that the partnership was dissolved in November 1923, and further that the plaintiff was aware of the said dissolution and with the knowledge of such dissolution he served the summons on the said Dwarkadas Premji, that the said Dwarkadas Premji in collusion with the plaintiff did not inform the said Gautamchand of the filing of the suit and allowed the decree to be passed ex parte; and that the said Gautamchand did not come to know of the decree till after the same was passed.

The question as to whether the said Gautamchand is entitled to have the decree set aside turns upon the fact whether there was proper service of the summons on the defendant firm. If there was, then the decree was not passed ex parte as Dwarkadas Premji, an admitted partner of the firm, appeared at the hearing and admitted the plaintiff's claim. If the service of the summons was not proper, then the said Gautamchand would be entitled to have the decree set aside.

Mr. Jinnah, who appeared for the said Gautamchand, argued that under O. XXX, r. 3, in the case of a partnership, which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, the service of the summons must be effected upon all the partners in the firm who are resident within British India. Order XXX, r. 3, provides for the service of the summons in cases where suit is filed against a partnership firm in the firm's name. The service may be effected upon any one or more of the partners, or at the principal place at which the partnership business is carried on within British India upon any person having, at the time of service, the control or management of the partnership business there; and it is provided that such service should be deemed good service upon the firm so sued, whether all or any of the partners are within or without British India. Then, there is a proviso that in the case of a partnership which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, the summons shall be served upon every person within British India whom it is sought to be made liable. The said Rule, to my mind, is quite clear and capable of only one construction, namely, that where a suit is, under O. XXX, r. 1, properly filed against a partnership firm in the firm's name service on any one or more of the partners or on the manager shall be deemed good service upon the firm. There is no difference at all as to the mode of effecting service whether the firm is going on or has been dissolved at the date of the service of the summons. If the service is effected, as provided by r. 3, the suit can be proceeded with against the firm and the plaintiff is entitled to obtain a decree against the firm. In the case of partnerships, which are going concerns at the date of the institution of the suit, the decree which is obtained against the firm is binding on all the partners in the firm, whether they have been served individually or not. In the case of a firm, which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, an exception is made as to the liability of the partners in the firm under the decree passed against a firm by the proviso to O. XXX, r. 3, and it is this, that in case of such a firm the plaintiff must serve each and every person whom he wants to hold liable personally in respect of the decree passed against the firm, and if he has not done so he cannot execute the decree against the partner whom he has not served personally. The right to execute the decree against the firm is in no way affected by the proviso.

Mr. Jinnah argued that it would mean great hardship where a partner in a dissolved firm colluded with the plaintiff and allowed the decree to be passed against the firm in case the firm had assets which would be liable under the decree, as the share of the partner, who has not been served, in such assets would be liable for the payment of the decree and would thus be lost to such partner.

In the present case Gautamchand had alleged that he was the financing partner, that Dwarkadas Premji was only a working partner, that all the assets of the partnership belonged to him, Gautamchand, and if the decree was executed against the partnership assets it meant that he, Guatamchand, would be the sufferer and not Dwarkadas Premji. No doubt in cases like the present one, assuming that the allegations of the said Gautamchand are correct, there would be hardship; but in such a case the partner in the position of Gautamchand has a remedy by filing a substantive suit for setting aside the decree on the ground of fraud and collusion between the plaintiff and the partner who accepted service and submitted to the decree. If there is no such collusion, no doubt the capitalist partner would have to bear the whole loss; but that is the necessary consequence of the provisions allowing suits to be filed against partners in firm's name even after the dissolution of partnership provided that the cause of action accrued when the partnership was carried on. The construction which Mr. Jinnah asks me to put upon O. XXX, r. 3, would make the provisions of the whole order nugatory with regard to a firm which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff. To my mind, if the object of the Legislature was to omit dissolved firm from the operation of the Order, the rules under the Order would have been differently worded. If further the Legislature intended that in the case of dissolved firms the service should be different from the service in the case of a firm which is being carried on at the date of the institution of the suit, the Legislature could have very well made a clear provision for such different service. The fact that there is only one provision for service in the case of a suit filed against a partnership firm shows that the intention of the Legislature was that in the case of such suits the service should be in the same way whether the partnership was dissolved or not dissolved at the date of the institution of the suit.

Admittedly here the summons was served on Dwakadas Premji. Therefore, in my opinion, there was good service against the defendant firm under O. XXX, r. 3.

Then Dwarkadas Premji appeared at the hearing, as he was entitled to do, as a partner in the defendant firm. The decree, therefore, passed in the suit was not ex parte.

That being the case the said Gautamchand is not entitled to the relief prayed for by him under this rule. The Rule, must, therefore, be charged with costs.

Z. K. Rule discharged.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 19 OF 1924.

January 27, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

CHANDRA PAL SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BISHAN SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 120—Partition of mahal*—Tank situated in* mahal allotted to plaintiffs—Order declaring defendants entitled to use water of tank for irrigation—Injunction, suit for—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

On the partition of a mahal, a tank situated within the mahal was allotted to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs represented to the partition Court that the defendants who were co-sharers in the mahal before partition had no longer any right to irrigate their fields from the tank which had been allotted to the plaintiffs. The partition officer passed an order that the defendants had right to continue the irrigation from the tank in question as they used to do under the terms of the wajib-ul-arz previous to the partition. Plaintiffs thereupon instituted a suit in the Civil Court for an injunction restraining the defendants from irrigating their fields from the water of the tank:

Held, (1) that the tank must be taken to have been originally made for the benefit of the whole mahal as it stood prior to the partition and could be availed of for the benefit of those lands by virtue of the provisions of s. 120 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act; [p. 1054, col. 1.]

(2) that the order of the partition officer was covered by the provisions of that section and that the Civil Court had consequently no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. [ibid.]

Second appeal from a judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge, Unao, dated the 8th December 1923, reversing that of the Munsif, South Unao, dated the 28th April 1923.

Mr. Puttu Lal, for the Appellants.

Mr. Raj Narain Shukla, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is the defendants' appeal. The plaintiffs-respondents brought the suit out of which this appeal arises in the Court of the Munsif, South Unao, for the relief that a perpetual injunction be issued against the defendants-appellants restraining them from irrigating their fields from the water of tank No. 52 situate in village Chilaula, Pargana Sikandarpur, in the District of Unao. The suit was dismissed by the Court of first instance. The plaintiffs preferred an appeal from the decree of that Court to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Unao, who reversed the decree of the Court of first instance and decreed the suit.

Within the village mentioned above was a mahal called Mahal Nanda Khera. This mahal comprised several pattis. The plaintiffs and the defendants were co-sharers in the mahal. Within the mahal is situate the tank about the water of which this controversy arose. When the present suit was instituted the village was undergoing a partition at the hands of the Court of Revenue under the provisions of the Land Revenue Act of 1901. Mahal Nanda Khera has been sub-divided by the partition just now mentioned and tank No. 52 has been allotted to the lot of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs on the strength of the title they thus acquired to the tank in dispute represented to the partition Court that the defendants had no longer any right to irrigate their fields from that tank. The partition officer considered the matter at several stages of the proceedings and finally passed an order that the defendants had a right to continue the irrigation from the tank in question as they used to do under the terms of wajib-ul-arz previous to the partition. It was added as a rider to this order that if the plaintiffs thought that they had the sole right to the use of the water of the tank by virtue of their being the proprietors of it under the partition their remedy was to seek a declaration to that effect from the Civil Court. Obviously this rider was of no consequence if the operative part of the order was within the jurisdiction of the partition Court to pass. The learned Subordinate Judge is of opinion that the partition Court had no jurisdiction to pass the order which it did in respect of the use of the water by the defendants. In support of that opinion the learned Judge refers to the provisions of s. 120 of the Land Revenue Act, 1901. In my judgment the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge is erroneous. The first part of the section is as follows:—"Tanks, wells, watercourses, and embankments shall be considered as attached to the land for the benefit of which they were originally made." It is quite clear that the defendants had the right to irrigate their fields from the tank in question previous to the partition under the terms of the wajib-ul-arz, the tank being in the mahal in which the parties were co-sharers. It follows that the tank must be taken to have been originally made for the benefit of the whole mahal as it stood prior to the partition and it should continue to benefit the same lands by force of the provisions of s. 120, which I have already quoted. The order of the partition Court was, therefore, wholly covered by that provision. The Civil Court consequently had no jurisdiction to interfere with that order.

The appeal is allowed, the decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside and that of the Court of first instance restored with costs throughout.

Z. K. Appeal allowed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 230 OF 1923.

October 23, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

MADHORAO—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

LAXMANRAO—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Land Revenue Act (II of 1917), ss. 78, 80, 106—Order of Deputy Commissioner declaring customary rights of tenants—Declaration, suit for, by Malguzar, maintainability of—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Defendants, who were the tenants of the plaintiff malguzar, complained to the Deputy Commissioner that the plaintiff was interfering with their rights and the Deputy Commissioner passed an order declaring that the tenants had the right to take water from the village tank for building purposes and to remove earth and that they could take fuel and timber from the malguzari jungle and were entitled to graze a number of cattle therein. He also ordered that the excess grazing dues recovered by the plaintiff should be refunded to the defendants and warned the plaintiff against molesting the defendants in the exercise of their rights. Plaintiff, thereupon, brought a suit for a declaration that the order of the Deputy Commissioner was erroneous and for a declaration of the proper rights of the defendants and for an injunction against them:

Held, that the order of the Deputy Commissioner fell within the purview of s. 78 of the C. P. Land Revenue Act, and that the plaintiff's suit was, therefore, maintainable under s. 80 of the Act. [p. 1055, col. 2.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Wardha, dated the 29th March 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 70 of 1922.

Mr. D. T. Mangalmurti, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. C. Ghosh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This judgment also disposes of Second Appeal No. 239 of 1923. Both appeals arise out of the same case.

The dispute is as regards village customs and was brought by the malguzar of Mauza Keljar against 13 tenants. These tenants had complained to the Deputy Commissioner that the plaintiff was interfering with their rights; that they were entitled to bring fuel from the malguzari jungle; that they were entitled to take stones for bhandis and take water from the village tank for building purposes; and that they were entitled to take wood and also take earth for building purposes. It is stated that the Deputy Commissioner passed an order declaring that the tenants had the right to take water and earth free, and that they could take fuel and timber and also that they were entitled to graze a number of cattle. The Deputy Commissioner also ordered that the excess grazing dues taken by the plaintiff should be refunded to the defendants. Plaintiff asks for a declaration that the order complained of is erroneous and for a declaration of the proper rights of the defendants and for an injunction against them.

One of the contentions raised was that the Deputy Commissioner's order was passed under s. 201 of the Land Revenue Act and a civil suit could be brought to have that order set aside, but the lower Appellate Court writes:—

"Now s. 201 simply says that any person bound by a rule or custom entered in the village administration papers who contravenes or fails to observe such rule or custom shall be liable to a fine, and a civil suit can be brought so as to have that order (of fine) set aside on the ground that no rule or custom was contravened. Now strictly speaking the plaintiff has not been fined at all, but he has been ordered to refund grazing dues, which has the same effect as if he had been fined, the fine given as a compensation. But this is with reference to the right of grazing only, and it is only in that respect that I can hold that the Deputy Commissioner's order is passed under this section. With regard to the other matters the Deputy Commissioner's order is simply: 'He should further be strictly warned against molesting the raiyots in the different ways he does. Should he violate the terms again, he should be strictly dealt with.' This order of warning is not one which can be set aside by a Civil Court under this section."

The Court further thinks that the Deputy Commissioner was acting under s. 106 (h) of the Act, and that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to question the decision of the Deputy Commissioner is barred by s. 220 (e) of the Land Revenue Act. The lower Appellate Court proceeded to determine the only part of the case which it considered maintainable, viz., free grazing.

The First Court's finding on this point was that the tenants were entitled to graze two bullocks, one cow, one calf and one she-buffalo per 20 acres, and this finding was confirmed in the lower Appellate Court. I may say at once that I do not think this number of animals excessive. Two bullocks are certainly required for agricultural purposes, one cow for the breeding of future bullocks, one calf which represents the coming bullock or a cow, and a she-buffalo which the tenants want for milk and manure. I confirm this finding and it will not be re-opened.

As regards the rest of the case, it seems to me that the contentions of the appellant malguzar have considerable force, and the learned Counsel for the tenants has been obliged to admit that he thinks the case as regards the other heads does lie. Section 106 of the Act gives the Deputy Commissioner powers of a Settlement Officer when a settlement is not in progress in his district. Section 78 deals with the village customs which the Deputy Commissioner ascertains and records. Section 80 gives any person aggrieved by an order or entry under s. 78 the right to go to a Civil Court within one year. It can hardly be said that though a Settlement Officer is restrained in this way, the Deputy Commissioner, when acting as a Settlement Officer, is not. Section 220 relied on by the lower Appellate Court commences with the words "Except as otherwise provided," and it does not mention s. 78. The present suit is filed within a year, and as the Deputy Commissioner's order coupled with that of the Sub-Divisional Officer's recommendations comes under s. 78, I think, the Court has jurisdiction to decide the questions left undecided. I must, therefore, remand the case to the lower Appellate Court for a consideration and decision of these questions. Costs will abide the result. There will be only one set of costs.

Z. K. Case remanded.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 153 OF 1923.

December 10, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

BULAQI DAS—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

JUGAL KISHORE—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. VI, r. 17, O. XXIII, r. 1—Pleadings—Inadvertent omission—Amendment—Withdrawal of suit, leave for—Illegality—Revision.

Amongst other pleas in answer to a suit the defendant set up one of estoppel which was stated and elaborated in three paragraphs of the written statement. In his replication the plaintiff denied two of these paragraphs and in answer to the third paragraph by inadvertance omitted the word "not" before the word "admitted". The mistake was discovered when the trial was about to be concluded and the plaintiff made an application to amend the replication but the application was refused. The Court, however, granted the plaintiff leave to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. In revision:

Held, (1) that the order permitting the withdrawal of the suit was wholly illegal and must be set aside;

Muhammad Ejaz Rasul Khan v. Mubarak Husain, 79 Ind. Cas. 1033; 1 O. W. N. 388; 10 O. & A. L. R. 685; 11 O. L. J. 613; 27 O. C. 231; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 291, followed.

(2) that the only reasonable and just course to adopt in the circumstances of the case was to accept the plaintiff's application for amendment of his replication and to permit the amendment to be made.

Civil revision, under s. 115, C. P. C., against the judgment and decree of the Munsif, North Lucknow, dated the 2nd September 1924.

Messrs. Bisheshar Nath and Mahesh Prasad, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—This is an application under s. 115 of the C. P. C. made by the defendant in a suit for the recovery of possession of a piece of land brought by the plaintiff-opposite party. Amongst other pleas the defendant set up one of estoppel which was stated and elaborated in paras. 14, 15 and 16 of the written statement. The plaintiff filed a replication to this statement. In this replication he denied para. 14 and also para. 16 of the written statement but so far as para. 15 was concerned it was admitted. The suit proceeded to trial and when the end was in sight the plaintiff discovered that the replication in answer to para. 15 of the written statement omitted by mistake to insert the word 'nahin' (not) between the words 'taslim' and 'hai.' With a view to correct this error an application to amend the replication was made. Considering the substance of the paragraphs not admitted, that is, 14 and 16, it is perfectly clear and indeed is not seriously disputed that the word 'nahin' was left out by inadvertent omission. The learned Munsif rejected the application for amendment on the ground that the effect of the amendment would be to start the trial of the case de novo. A second attempt was made for the same amendment. That attempt met no better fate. The plaintiff then applied for leave to withdraw his suit with permission to bring the same suit afresh. This was readily granted by the learned Munsif.

I refrain from commenting in any strong language on the somewhat startling procedure adopted by the Court below. I would, however, say that the learned Munsif refused to permit the amendment for the reason that the suit would have to be tried de novo if the amendment were allowed. I wonder whether it occurred to him when he accepted the application for withdrawal that the permission to the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit would entail a greater waste of public time if the second suit were brought. Be that as it may, the order permitting the withdrawal with liberty to sue again is on the face of it wholly illegal. The view I have explained at some length in the case of Muhammad Ejaz Rasul Khan v. Mubarak Husain (1) and the attention of the learned Munsif may well be drawn to that decision. I am happy to observe that Mr. Sen, Counsel for the opposite party, as well as Babu Bisheshar Nath, Advocate for the applicant, are agreed and I agree with them that the most reasonable and just course to adopt in the circumstances of the case will be to accept the application for amendment and set aside the order against which this application has been made. I accordingly do so. The record of the case is returned to the Court below with directions that the suit be restored to its original number in the register of suits, that the amendment prayed for by the plaintiff be made in his replication and that the suit be decided according to law. No order as to costs in this Court.

Z. K. Record be returned.

(1) 79 Ind. Cas. 1033; 1 O. W. N. 388; 10 O. & A. R. 685; 11 O. L. J. 613; 27 O. C. 231; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 291.

END OF VOLUME 87.

GENERAL INDEX.

VOLUME 87—1925.

Accomplice, evidence of—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 216A, applicability of.

The evidence of an approver, who owns himself to be a scoundrel and is also a traitor must be received with caution but not rejected totally. It is enough if after considering such evidence and the general corroborative evidence the Court is of opinion that the whole body of evidence put together proves the guilt of the accused person.

To attract the penalty of section under s. 216A, Penal Code, it is not enough that a person should be harbouring dacoits in general but the section renders it penal to harbour persons who intend to commit a particular dacoity. S EMPEROR v. SUNDERDAS 26 Cr. L. J. 1028 916

Acts—General.

Act 1850—XXI. See CASTE DISABILITIES REMOVAL ACT.
—— 1860—XLV. See PENAL CODE.
—— 1865—X. See SUCCESSION ACT.
—— 1870—VII. See COURT FEES ACT.
—— 1870—XXI. See HINDU WILLS ACT.
—— 1871—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
—— 1871—XXIII. See PENSIONS ACT.
—— 1872—I. See EVIDENCE ACT.
—— 1872—IX. See CONTRACT ACT.
—— 1877—I. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT.
—— 1878—VII. See FOREST ACT.
—— 1878—XI. See ARMS ACT.
—— 1879—XVIII. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT.
—— 1881—XXVI. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT.
—— 1882—II. See TRUSTS ACT.
—— 1882—IV. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.
—— 1882—V. See EASEMENTS ACT.
—— 1887—VII. See SUITS VALUATION ACT.
—— 1887—IX. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT.
—— 1890—VIII. See GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT.
—— 1890—IX. See RAILWAYS ACT.
—— 1894—VIII. See TARIFF ACT.
—— 1898—V. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1899—II. See STAMP ACT.
—— 1899—IX. See ARBITRATION ACT.
—— 1903—XV. See EXTRADITION ACT.
—— 1908—V. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1908—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
—— 1908—XV. See PORTS ACT.
—— 1908—XVI. See REGISTRATION ACT.
—— 1909—III. See PRESIDENCY TOWNS INSOLVENCY ACT.
—— 1912—IV. See LUNACY ACT.
—— 1920—V. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT.
—— 1922—XI. See INCOME TAX ACT.

Acts—Bengal.

—— 1858—XXXI. See BENGAL ALLUVIAL LAND SETTLEMENT ACT.
—— 1870—VI. See VILLAGE CHAUKIDARI ACT.

Acts—Bengal—concld.

Act 1880—VI See BENGAL DRAINAGE ACT.
—— 1880—IX. See CESS ACT.
—— 1885—VIII. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT.
—— 1895—I. See PUBLIC DEMANDS RECOVERY ACT.
—— 1897—V. See ESTATES PARTITION ACT.
—— 1899—III. See CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1920—III. See CALCUTTA RENT ACT.

Acts—Bombay.

—— 1879—XVII. See DEKKHAN AGRICULTURISTS' RELIEF ACT.
—— 1888—III. See CITY OF BOMBAY MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1888—VI. See GUJARAT TALUKDARS' ACT.
—— 1901—III. See BOMBAY DISTRICT MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1902—IV. See BOMBAY CITY POLICE ACT.
—— 1918—II. See BOMBAY RENT (WAR RESTRICTIONS) ACT.

Acts—C. P.

—— 1898—XI. See C. P. TENANCY ACT.
—— 1917—II. See C. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1920—I. See C. P. TENANCY ACT.

Acts—Madras.

—— 1920—V. See MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT.
—— 1920—XIV. See MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS ACT.

Acts—Punjab.

—— 1887—XVI. See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.
—— 1918—VI. See PUNJAB COURTS ACT.

Acts—U. P.

—— 1876—XVIII. See OUDH LAWS ACT.
—— 1886—XXII. See OUDH RENT ACT.
—— 1901—II. See AGRA TENANCY ACT.
—— 1901—III. See U. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1903—II. See BUNDELKHAND LAND ALIENATION ACT.
—— 1916—II. See U. P. MUNICIPALITIES ACT.
—— 1922—XI. See AGRA PRE-EMPTION ACT.

Regulations.

—— 1819—VIII. See BENGAL PATNI TALUKS REGULATION.
—— 1827—V. See BOMBAY REGULATION.

Statutes.

1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61). See GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT.

Adverse possession. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, SCH. I, ARTS. 144, 148 188

——— Death of owner—Brother of deceased managing property—Adoption by widow of deceased.

On the death of a Hindu his widow continued to live with his brother, who also obtained possession of the property of the deceased. The widow subsequently made an adoption, and the adopted son sued to recover the property from the brother of the deceased:

Held, that under the circumstances it must be presumed that the defendant managed the property on behalf of his brother's widow intending merely to help her and that his possession was not adverse either to the widow or to the plaintiff. B KALLAPA MALLAPPA HOSMANI v. KALAPPA NINGAPPA, 26 Bom. L. R. 494; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 469 705

——— Mortgagee—Equity of redemption, whether can be acquired—Physical possession, whether necessary.

A possessory title to a property can only be acquired by physical possession which ripens into ownership by the failure of the true owner to take steps to recover possession.

Though a trespasser by holding possession against a mortgagor can bar the mortgagor's right to redeem, it cannot be said that an equity of redemption can be acquired by adverse possession unless the person claiming adversely is in physical possession of the mortgaged property. In the case of a possessory mortgage where possession has been delivered to the mortgagee a trespasser obtaining possession may hold adversely to the mortgagee but not to the mortgagor. B TARABAI RAMRAO PATANKAR v. DATTARAM GOVINDBHAI GUJAR, 27 Bom. L. R. 441; 49 B. 539 765 ——— Possession of Hindu widow, nature of.

Where the widow of a deceased co-parcener in a joint Hindu family took possession of certain plots of sir land and a house belonging to the joint family, set up her own independent title thereto, was continuously shown in the village records as sir holder, realized rents and made transfers:

Held, that the possession of the widow was adverse to her deceased husband's co-parceners.

Under certain circumstances the possession of a Hindu widow may be adverse to the reversioners of her deceased husband to the extent only of a widow's estate, but where she has no right to a widow's estate when she takes possession and there is no allegation on the other side that she is holding property on a widow's estate, and she makes transfers of the property as absolute owner thereof, her possession must be regarded as that of an absolute owner and not as that of a Hindu widow. O LAL BAHADUR SINGH v. MATHURA SINGH, 1 O. W. N. 740 164 ——— Redemption, equity of, whether can be acquired by.

A right of redemption can be acquired by adverse possession but whether it has been so acquired would depend upon the amount of evidence produced by the parties. O ANPURNA KAUR v. JAGESHAR MISRA, 1 O. W. N. 842 208

Agra Pre-emption Act (XI of 1922), ss. 14, 15—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115—Pre-emption—Notice to person entitled to pre-empt—Refusal to pre-empt—Estoppel.

It is not compulsory for a vendor to give a notice under s. 14 of the Agra Pre-emption Act. He may, by word of mouth, or in any other way, inform a person having a right of pre-emption of his intention to sell. If the person to whom that communication is made states there and then that he refuses to purchase the property, he is disqualified from subsequently maintaining a suit for pre-emption. The case is really one of estoppel under s. 115 of the Evidence Act. A person to whom a notice has been given having intimated his refusal and the sale having been made after that refusal, he cannot be allowed to turn round and seek to enforce his right of pre-emption through the Court. Section 15 of the Agra Pre-emption Act has nothing to do with such a case. A OON MOHAMMAD v. BINT ZOHRA, L. R. 6 A. 300 Civ. 414

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 10 (1)—Gift of sir land—Ex-proprietary rights, whether created—Ejectment of sub-tenant, suit for—Co-sharers in mahal, whether necessary parties.

Under s. 10 (1) of the Agra Tenancy Act no ex-proprietary rights are created where there is an alienation by gift and it is immaterial whether the gift is between co-sharers or in favour of a stranger. In the case of a gift the sir must retain its character in the hands of the donee.

Where certain plots of land have been the exclusive sir and khud kasht of a co-sharer from more than twelve years and are let out to a sub-tenant who is the exclusive tenant of such co-sharer, the latter is by himself entitled to eject the sub-tenant and it is not necessary for him in a suit for ejectment to implead persons who though co-sharers in the khewat or the mahal have no interest in the particular plots of land to which the suit relates. A DUNGAR v. JAHANGIR, L. R. 6 A. 87 Rev. 698

——— s. 22. See HINDU LAW—SUCCESSION 668

——— s. 32—Suit by co-tenant for damages or profits, whether maintainable.

Section 32 of the Agra Tenancy Act bars a suit for partition of a holding. It does not bar the maintenance of a suit for damages or profits where one of the parties entitled to a holding is kept out of possession by his co-tenants. A MUNSHI RAM v. BHAGWANT, L. R. 6 A. 90 Rev. 782

——— s. 34, applicability of—Suit against person who came into occupation with consent of landlord.

Section 34 of the Agra Tenancy Act refers to suits brought against persons whose occupation began without the consent of the landlord. It has no application to a suit in which it is found that the defendant was initially in occupation with the consent of the landlord. A MATA DIN v. ANAND MADHO, L. R. 6 A. 89 Rev. 590

——— s. 51. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 11 789

——— s. 88—Occupancy tenant, whether entitled to plant trees—Trees planted on occupancy holding, whether can be alienated—Appeal, second—Inference of law from admitted facts, whether can be questioned.

Trees are mere improvements, but an occupancy tenant cannot plant trees on his holding without the consent of the zemindar. Even when he plants trees with the permission of the zemindar he is not entitled to sell them.

Where a grove is planted on an existing occupancy holding the character of the holding is not thereby affected and the tenant is not entitled to mortgage or sell the trees.

Where an inference of law drawn by a lower Appellate Court from admitted facts is erroneous, it is liable to scrutiny by the High Court in second appeal. A PEERJI MOHIB ALI SHAH v. RAM CHANDER, L. R. 6 A. 104 Rev. 64

Agra Tenancy Act—concld.

——— s. 167—Mortgagee — Recorded co-sharer — Joint possession, decree for—Mesne profits, whether can be recovered—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Where a mortgagee of zemindari plots is entered as such in the khewat, he is a recorded co-sharer, and if he is obstructed in the collection of rents he is entitled to a decree for joint possession against the other co-sharers but he is not entitled to a decree for mesne profits. Being a recorded co-sharer he can only obtain his share of the profits by a suit in a Rent Court. Section 167 of the Agra Tenancy Act bars the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in the matter. A MAHADEO PRASAD v. BASANT LAL, L. R. 6 A. 125 Rev. 444

——— s. 193 (g)—Rent, suit for—Decree against landlord paid off by tenant, whether can be pleaded as set-off.

Under cl. (g) of s. 193 of the Agra Tenancy Act it is only a decree held by the defendant himself that can be pleaded as a set-off.

Where a sub-tenant under an ex-proprietary tenant pays off a decree for rent obtained by the zemindar against the ex-proprietary tenant, he is not entitled to plead the payment as a set-off in answer to a suit for rent brought against him by the ex-proprietary tenant. A BIRJ LAL v. MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM, L. R. 6 A. 113 Rev. 713

——— s. 194—Lambardar, right of, to sue for arrears of rent—Record of Rights, entry in, effect of.

In the absence of a clear indication to the contrary, the lambardar is the person who is entitled to recover the rent.

Where a Record of Rights gives the lambardar a right to recover the rent, the lambardar must be deemed to be appointed as agent of the co-sharers within the meaning of s. 194 of the Agra Tenancy Act.

Where a lambardar is not entitled to bring a suit to recover arrears of rent he is not entitled to a decree even with regard to his own share of the rent. A MUHAMMAD ABDULLAH KHAN v. KUNDAN, L. R. 6 A. 118 Rev. 197

Appeal, second. See HINDU LAW, WIDOW 315

——— Finding of fact—Evidence not weighed, effect of—Finding, whether binding.

A finding of fact arrived at by an Appellate Court without correctly appreciating the point for determination and without properly weighing all the evidence on the record, is not binding in second appeal. O MAHARAJA v. BAJRANG BALI 1040 ——— Finding of fact, interference with.

Even where the evidence in support of a finding of fact is doubtful the High Court will not in second appeal interfere with the finding until strong reasons either of injustice or of misapprehension of evidence by the lower Court are indicated. O ANPURNA KUAR v. JAGESHAR MISRA, 1 O. W. N. 842 208 ——— New point of law.

The High Court will, in second appeal, allow a point of law, which arises on the issues as framed and on the evidence led in the Trial Court, to be taken for the first time. But if the point sought to be taken is such that it cannot be decided without remanding the case for further evidence the High Court will not allow it to be raised. B KALLAPA MALLAPPA HOSMANI v. KALAPPA NINGAPAP, 26 Bom. L. R. 494; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 469 705

——— Parjaut land — Finding of fact— Jamabandi, entry in, value of.

Appeal, second—concld.

Where the question is whether the land in dispute is or is not parjaut land, an entry in a jamabandi showing that the land is parjaut land is admissible in evidence and is of great value.

A finding that certain land is parjaut land is a finding of fact and is binding on the High Court in second appeal. A SRI LAL GOAIKA v. KESHO DAS, L. R. 6 A. 93 Rev. 368 ——— Partner or agent—Mixed question of law and fact.

The question whether a person is a partner with or agent of another is a mixed question of fact and law, which the High Court is entitled to consider in second appeal. M CHOCKALINGA CHETTIAR v. MUTHUSAWAMI CHETTIAR, 43 M. L. J. 518; 21 L. W. 541; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 768 663 Arbitration—Arbitration proceedings—Suit filed—Proceedings, whether invalidated—Award, filing of —Procedure—Stay of suit—Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s 19.

The fact that an act is done contrary to a contract does not necessarily render the act invalid.

Thus a party may have contracted to submit his dispute to arbitration, but nevertheless may, if so disposed, break his contract, and submit his dispute for decision to the public tribunal, if no statutory bar exists.

But the mere filing of the suit does not invalidate the arbitration proceedings, and the arbitrators are at liberty to proceed.

Arbitration proceedings pending suit, however, though not invalid, remain in abeyance, and the award cannot be filed, until a stay of the suit is obtained by an application under s. 19 of the Arbitration Act.

If the application for stay of the suit is refused, or the party applying waives his right by pleading in the suit, the arbitration proceedings and any award made therein are invalidated, and the Court alone is seized of the dispute.

Therefore, where an application for filing an award is made during the pendency of a suit relating to the same subject-matter, the correct procedure for the Court is not to order that the award be taken of the file absolutely as invalid, but to postpone the consideration of the application to file the award, or to direct its return to the applicant with liberty to be presented after the Court has disposed of the application under s. 19 of the Arbitration Act or has ceased to be seized of the suit without adjudication on the merits. S MITSUI BUSSAN KAISHA LTD. v. TOTARAM-BHAGWANDAS, 17 S L. R. 228; (1924) A. I. R. (S.) 146 83

Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 19. See ARBITRATION 83

Arms Act (XI of 1878), ss. 14, 19 (f)—Empty cartridge cases, whether ammunition—Possession—Offence.

The possession of empty cartridge cases which are incapable of being re-loaded in India does not amount to an offence under s. 19 (f) of the Arms Act. A AMIR v. EMPEROR, 23 A L. J. 455; L. R 6 A. 127 CR.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 498; 26 Cr. L. J. 10 9 927

——— ss. 14, 19 (f)—Gun fired by brother of license-holder—Illegal possession of arms.

The brother of a person who held a license for a gun took out the gun at a time when riots were taking place in different parts of the town and fired shots in the air so that people mischievously inclined might know that it was not safe for them to do any mischief to the people living in the house:

Arms Act—concld.

Held, that the possession of the gun by the person who fired it was on behalf of and with the express or implied permission of the license-holder and that, therefore, the person firing the gun was not guilty of an offence under s. 19 (f) of the Arms Act. A BABU RAM v. EMPEROR, 23 A. L. J. 356; L. R. 6 A. 121 CR.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 396; 47 A. 606; 26 Cr. L. J. 987 523

——— s. 19 (e)—"Going armed," meaning of—Intention to use weapon.

The expression "going armed" within the meaning of cl. (e) of s. 19 of the Arms Act indicates, first, an intention to use the weapon as a fire-arm, and secondly, the possibility of using it. For the purpose of a conviction under cl. (e), there must be some clear evidence of intention on the part of the accused to use the weapon.

Where in a prosecution under the section, it was found that the accused had only one empty cartridge in his fire-arm and no cartridges at all were found on the person of the accused and there was no proof of the accused having ever previously used the fire-arm:

Held, that the accused could not be convicted of an offence under s. 19 (e) of the Arms Act. M In re SONAI MUTHU AMBALAM, 48 M. L. J. 502; (1925) M. W. N. 217; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 585; 26 Cr. L. J. 1028 916

Benami—Burden of proof. See HINDU LAW—MITHILA SCHOOL 849

Bengal Alluvial Land Settlement Act (XXXI of 1858), s. 2. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT, 1885, CH. X, s. 52 442

B. & N. W. R. Provident Fund Rules, r. 14 (4)—Railway servant, dismissal of—Fine deducted from Provident Fund—Suit to recover amount of fine, whether maintainable—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Power to withhold bonus, exercise of.

Plaintiff, who was an employee of the B. & N. W. Railway Company, was dismissed from the service of the Company and was fined a certain sum which was ordered to be realized from his Provident Fund. Plaintiff thereupon brought a suit for recovery of the amount of the fine from the defendant Company on the allegation that his dismissal was wrongful and that the fine should not have been imposed upon him. It was found that the dismissal of the plaintiff was wrongful:

Held, (1) that the matter was of a civil nature and that any agreement entered into by the plaintiff which empowered the Company to impose a fine did not take away the plaintiff's right of action in a claim of this sort and did not deprive the Civil Courts of jurisdiction to determine such a claim;

(2) that in inflicting a fine upon plaintiff the defendant Company purported to exercise their legal powers to fine their servant under the terms of the agreement between them and their servant and did not purport to exercise any arbitrary powers over the bonus portion of the servant's Provident Fund under the Provident Fund Rules, and that, therefore, r. 14 (4) of the defendant Company's Provident Fund Rules had no application to the case;

(3) that as soon as it was held that the fine had been wrongly imposed upon the plaintiff the latter was entitled to a decree for a refund of the amount. Pat BENGAL N.-W. R. Co. v. SUKHDEO PRASAD, 3 Pat. L. R. 84; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 487 739

Bengal Drainage Act (VI of 1880), s. 37. See PUBLIC DEMANDS RECOVERY ACT, 1895, s. 7 339

Bengal Patni Taluks Regulation VIII of 1819, s. 11—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 25—Patni sale—Occupancy tenants—Purchaser, whether entitled to evict tenants.

The policy of the law at the time of the enactment of the Patni Regulation was to protect from eviction those actually on the land and cultivating it.

At the time of the enactment of the Patni Regulation occupancy tenants did not exist, those cultivating the lands were either khudkasht raiyats, that is, raiyats of the village cultivating the lands, or paikast raiyats who were cultivators who came from outside the village. Consequently, s. 11 of the Patni Regulation of 1819 extended protection to the only cultivating raiyats of the village then known, viz., khudkasht raiyats or resident and hereditary cultivators. Since the enactment of Patni Regulation another class of cultivating raiyats has grown up, whose occupancy rights after twelve years' possession are recognized and protected by the Bengal Tenancy Act. These tanants also are entitled to protection from eviction under s. 11 of the Regulation.

Per Chakravarti, J.—Section 11 of the Bengal Patni Taluks Regulation VIII of 1819 provides that the purchaser at a sale for arrears of rent under the Regulation should get the patni in the same condition which existed at the time of its creation.

The substantive rights created in favour of the raiyats by the Bengal Tenancy Act do not in any way affect the provisions of the Patni Law.

The right of a patnidar is primarily to collect rents from raiyats and that right is in no way affected by s. 25 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

A raiyat with a right of occupancy now occupies the same position as a khudkasht raiyat and should, therefore, have the same protection as a khudkasht raiyat had when the Patni Regulation of 1819 was passed. C JNANENDRA MOHUN BHADURI v. HARENDRA KRISHNA DE 32 ——— s. 11—Village Chaukidari Act (VI B. C. of 1870), s. 50—Putni taluq—Chaukidari chakran lands, resumption of—Sale of putni taluq for arrears of rent—Purchaser of taluq, whether entitled to resumed chaukidari chakran lands.

A putni taluq was created in favour of one H in 1820. The chaukidari chakran lands situated within the putni taluq were resumed under the Village Chaukidari Act and transferred to the zemindar under s. 50 of the Act subject to the payment of the amount of assessment made on those lands. Subsequently the zemindar settled those lands with one S, who had become the owner of the putni taluq by purchase in putni settlement. The pattah contained a clause that if, in future, any other person or persons besides the holder of the putni taluq should be proved to have putni interest in the taluq, he or they would acquire putni interest in the chakran lands also in the same manner and to the same extent as they may be found to have in the taluq and that if, in future, the putni interest in the taluq be transferred for arrears of rent or extinguished for any reason then the putni interest of the grantee in the chakran lands would also be transferred or extinguished along with the original putni. Later on S sold his putni interest in the resumed chaukidari chakran lands to the defendants. Thereafter the putni rent of the taluq fell into arrears and the taluq was sold under the Bengal Patni Taluks Regulation VIII of 1819 and was purchased by the plaintiff. The plaintiff then obtained possession of the taluq but not of the resumed chakran lands. She subsequently brought a suit for possession of those lands:

Bengal Patni Taluks Regulation—concld.

Held, (1) that the interest of the zemindar in the chaukidari chakran lands passed to the putnidar under the putni grant of 1820 and that the putnidar was entitled to possession of those lands on resumption under the Village Chaukidari Act by virtue of that grant;

(2) that far from separating the resumed chaukidari lands from the original putni the intention of the parties to the pattah granted to S was that the chaukidari chakran lands should be considered as part and parcel of the putni;

(3) that consequently the plaintiff was entitled to the putni as it was created in 1820 and was, therefore, entitled to possession of the chaukidari chakran lands as being part of the putni. C KANCHAN BARANI DEBI v. UMESH CHANDRA ROY, 41 C. L. J. 295; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 807 529

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 3 (3)—Landlord and tenant—Failure to pay rent—Tenant, whether becomes owner.

It is possible for a raiyat to hold lands without paying rent to the landlord but he does not thereby become the proprietor of the soil. He may be a tenant under s. 3 (3), Bengal Tenancy Act, and yet under a special contract may not pay rent to the landlord. C ASWINI KUMAR GUPTA v. KAMINI KUMAR DE 798

——— s. 25. See BENGAL PATNI TALUKS REGULATION, 1819, s. 11 32

——— s. 29—Enhancement of rent—Jama amalgamated with fictitious jama, whether can be recovered—Estoppel—Burden of proof, importance of.

There cannot be any estoppel against a Statute, nor can the parties contract themselves out of any Statute.

The language of s. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is imperative and provides that rent must not be enhanced so as to exceed by more than two annas in the rupee the rent previously payable by the raiyat. This prohibition is not qualified by any provision calculated to save a contract or agreement between the parties.

A kabuliyat purported to enhance the jama of a holding within the limit permitted by s. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and then purported to amalgamate with it the jama of another piece of land which had no existence and the jama of which was entirely fictitious. The jamas relating to certain other holdings were also enhanced and then the total of all the jamas was described. The total of all the jamas including the fictitious jama exceeded the amount to which the rent of the holdings could be enhanced under the provisions of s. 29. In a suit to recover the jamas mentioned in the kabuliyat:

Held, (1) that the landlord was entitled to treat the jamas of those holdings which were not amalgamated with the fictitious jama as separate and his suit with regard to the recovery of those jamas must succeed;

(2) that the amount of the jama which was amalgamated with the fictitious jama being in excess of the amount which could be recovered under the provisions of s. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the suit with regard to the amalgamated jama was not maintainable.

The question of onus ordinarily becomes of very little importance when the whole evidence is considered by the Appellate Court. C JNANENDRA NATH ROY v. NALINI MOHAN GHOSE 565

——— s. 60—Cess Act (IX of 1880), s. 41—Landlord and tenant—Recorded proprietor of mahal—Suit to recover rent—Tenant, whether can set up right of third person—Third person, whether necessary party—Road-cess—Liability of tenant.

Under the provisions of s. 60 of the Bengal Tenancy Act a recorded proprietor of a mahal is the only person to whom the tenants of the mahal are entitled to pay rent for lands lying within the mahal, and in answer to a suit by such a proprietor to recover rent from the tenants in respect of such lands, the latter cannot be permitted to set up the title of the proprietor of another mahal to recover the rent. The proprietor whose right is set up by the tenants is not a necessary party to a suit by the recorded proprietor to recover rent.

Under the provisions of s. 41 of the Cess Act every cultivating raiyat is liable to pay to the person to whom his rent is payable one-half of the amount of road-cess. Pat KESHO PRASAD SINGH v. RAMDEAL KUER, 6 P. L. T. 214; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 473 439

——— s. 67—Rent, arrears of—Tenancy created before Act—Interest, rate of—Undue influence, proof of—Construction of document—Lease—Heir, mention of, whether makes lease heritable.

Where a contract is challenged as providing a very high rate of interest, it is necessary to prove that one party had undue advantage over the other in the matter of the settlement of the rate of interest.

A lease creating a raiyati tenancy without any fixed period, before the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act, is to be treated as a lease from year to year and a claim for rent under such a lease is governed by the provisions of that Act. Interest on arrears of rent due under such a lease cannot, therefore, be recovered at a rate higher than that fixed by s. 67 of the Act.

The use of the word 'heir' in a lease restricting the right of transfer of the "tenant and his heirs," does not necessarily mean that the lease is a heritable one. C ANNADA CHARAN RAY v. GRINDRA KUMAR BANDAPADHAYA, 41 C. L. J. 453; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 722 178 ——— ss. 93, 99—Common manager, appointment of—Restoration of estate, when can be refused.

The most essential condition requisite to justify a Judge in appointing a common manager of an estate under s. 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, is the existence of a dispute between the co-owners. When, therefore, the question arises as to the restoration of the estate under s. 99 of the Act, and it is alleged that the dispute is no longer existing, what the Judge has to consider is whether it has been really and effectively settled in such a way that the management will be conducted by the co-owners without inconvenience to the public or injury to private rights. If he is satisfied that the dispute has been effectively settled he cannot refuse to make an order directing the restoration of the estate, merely because there is apprehension that the co-owners will oppress the tenants or that there will be a breach of the peace as the result of such oppression. C ABDUD AZAHAR CHOWDHURY v. COLLECTOR OF BACKERGANJ 815

——— Ch. X, s. 52—Bengal Alluvial Land Settlement Act (XXXI of 1858), s. 2—Diara proceedings—Settlement of rent for accreted lands—Tenants, whether bound to pay rent settled—Suit to recover rent in respect of lands comprised in lease—Failure to include claim for increased rent in respect of accreted lands, effect of.

Bengal Tenancy Act—concld.

A suit to recover rent in respect of lands let out under a lease of which the proper description is given in the plaint is not liable to dismissal owing to the fact that the plaintiff might have asked for increased rent for an accretion to the tenure.

In order to make a tenant liable for additional rent for accretions to his tenure, such rent must be settled under Ch. X to the Bengal Tenancy Act or the landlord must take proper proceedings so as to bring into operation s. 52 of the Act or any other appropriate provision of the law.

Where a diara officer does not work under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, he is required only to ascertain and record the rights of, and not to settle the rents payable by, under-tenants, and the latter are not bound to pay the rent determined by the diara officer under s. 2 of the Bengal Alluvial Land Settlement Act of 1858. C DHIRENDRA CHANDRA RAI v. HABIB ULLAH, 29 C. W. N. 505; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 758 442 ——— ss. 102 (e), 103B—Record of Rights, entry in—Presumption of correctness—Rebuttal—Landlord and tenant—Suit for rent—Entry in Record of Rights proved incorrect—Procedure.

Section 102 (e) of the Bengal Tenancy Act requires a Revenue Officer to determine the existing rent and not to settle a fair rent in respect of a tenancy.

After a Record of Rights has been finally published a presumption arises under s. 103B of the Bengal Tenancy Act that the entry therein with regard to the rent of a tenancy is correct; in other words in respect of an entry of rent, the presumption arises that what has been recorded is a correct statement of the existing rent. This presumption may, however, be rebutted and the entry may be proved by evidence to be incorrect. This evidence may be either evidence external to the settlement proceedings, or evidence of matters apparent on the face of those proceedings. Where, for instance, the very statement of his reasons for his conclusions given by the Revenue Officer shows that he did not determine the existing rent but an imaginary rent, the presumption with regard to the correctness of the entry in the Record of Rights is sufficiently rebutted.

Where in a suit for rent the landlord relies upon the relevant entry in a finally published Record of Rights, but the entry is proved to be incorrect, the only course open to the Court is to make a decree on the basis of the admission of the tenant. C RAMA NATH SAUT v. OFFICIAL TRUSTEE, 29 C. W. N. 517; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 799 1014

——— s. 173—Order setting aside sale—Appeal; whether lies.

No appeal lies at the instance of the auction-purchaser against an order setting aside a sale under s. 173 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. C SURENDRA NATH v. LAKSHAN CHANDRA RAY 744 Bombay City Police Act (IV of 1902), s. 33 (g).

See EXTRADITION ACT, 1903, ss. 10 (4), 23 100

Bombay District Municipal Act (III of 1901), ss. 59, 60, 71—Water supplied by Municipality through private connection—Charge leviable, whether "tax"—Rules regulating supply of water and payment therefor—Procedure.

Bombay District Municipal Act—concld.

Where it is optional with the owner of certain premises to have water supplied to him by the Municipality by means of a private connection and the water is so supplied to him under an arrangement with him, the payment which the owner is required to make in respect of the supply of water cannot be regarded as a "tax" which has been "imposed" upon the owner. It is merely the price of water supplied to him by the Municipality. Such a charge does not constitute a tax imposed within the meaning of s. 59 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, but is only a payment due under s. 71, sub-s. (1), cl. (b) of the Act. The rules relating to the levy of such a charge cannot, therefore, be regarded as ultra vires and illegal merely because they have not been made in accordance with the provisions of s. 60 of the Act. S COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT v. RAMCHAND ZOWNKIRAM, (1923) A. I. R. (S.) 1; 16 S. L. R. 98 258 ——— ss. 96, 174—Reference to Collector—Advice by Collector, whether order—Order passed on application of person not owner, whether binding on owner—Application for permission to build—Municipality, power of, to refuse application.

Where before deciding a matter a Municipality refers it to the Collector for his advice and the Collector advises that a previous order passed by him should be adhered to, the advice given by the Collector cannot be treated as an order under s. 174 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, which only gives the Collector power to suspend an order which a Municipality has actually made.

Where a person who is not the owner of a piece of land makes an application to the Municipality for permission to build upon the land an order passed on such application is not binding on the real owner, and it is not necessary for the latter to have the order set aside.

A Municipality has no power on an application to build to pass an order which practically amounts to a refusal. It is entitled to direct, that the proposed building should be set back to a certain distance from the street but it is not entitled to order that on each side of the proposed building open spaces should be left with the object of preventing the applicant from building at all. Such an order is ultra vires of the Municipality and cannot be brought within its powers under s. 96 of the Bombay District Municipal Act. B AHMED SULEMAN JIVA v. RANDER TOWN MUNICIPALITY, 27 Bom. L. R. 429; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 345 948 ——— ss. 131, 150—Notice to occupier to put land in sanitary condition—Occupier, liability of—Disobedience—Landlord, responsibility of, whether can be pleaded in defence.

Where a notice is served on the occupier of a plot of land under s. 131 of the Bombay District Municipal Act calling upon him to put the plot in a sanitary condition, as provided by the rules of the Municipality, and the notice is disobeyed, it is not open to the occupier to plead that as between himself and the landlord, it was the latter's duty to comply with the notice. S HAJI UMER v. EMPEROR, 18 S. L. R. 104; 26 Cr. L. J. 952 104

Bombay High Court Original Side Rules, rr. 529, 530—Practice—Taxation—Warrant to tax—Warrant to review—Procedure—Costs of Counsel attending, before Taxing Master, whether can be allowed—Second warrant to review, whether competent—Res judicata.

Bombay High Court Original Side Rules—concld.

The procedure on the taxation of a bill in the Taxing Office is that the bill is first taxed roughly by the clerks in the office and then more carefully by the Taxing Master. Thereupon the warrant to tax issues. On that the parties are heard and any party dissatisfied with the Taxing Master's decision can take out a warrant to review under r. 529. The parties are again heard by the Taxing Master and any party dissatisfied with his decision on the review can apply for a certificate. With this certificate the Taxing Master states the grounds for his decision on the points on which a certificate is asked for. The matter then comes before the Chamber Judge for a review of the taxation.

On the warrant to tax the party taking the taxation must pay the costs of the proceedings of that warrant. But if the Taxing Master is of opinion that the party bringing in the bill has unnecessarily or vexatiously increased the costs he may report accordingly and the Chamber Judge will make such order as to those costs as he thinks fit. The proper procedure in such a case is by summons.

The costs of the warrant to review should follow the event on such review, and in a proper case the Taxing Master has power to award costs against the party taking out such a review.

It is not, however, the practice to allow costs of Counsel attending before the Taxing Master.

Where a warrant of review is taken out but is subsequently abandoned, a second warrant of review is not competent as it is not contemplated by rr. 529 and 530 of the Bombay High Court Original Side Rules and would be barred by the application to these proceedings of the principles of res judicata. B JIVANLAL PANALAL v. BAI MANCHHA, 27 Bom. L. R. 532; (1925) A. 1. R. (B.) 355 1043

Bombay Regulation V of 1827, s. 14. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, 1882, ss. 60, 72, 83, 84 129

Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act (II of 1918), s. 10A—Proceedings for restoration and compensation—Expiration of Act, effect of—Proceedings, whether can be continued—Temporary Statute, expiration of, effect of, on pending proceedings.

Civil proceedings which only arise by virtue of a temporary Statute cannot be continued after the expiration of the Statute.

Proceedings which it is permissible for a tenant to take under s. 10A of the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, are not primarily proceedings to recover either an ascertained sum or liquidated damages. They must be instituted in the first instance for the purposes of getting an order for restoration from the Court, and it is only when the Court is of opinion not only that the tenant in the circumstances of the case is entitled to restoration but also that the landlord has not acted bona fide, that the Court can direct the payment of compensation to be made to the tenant by the landlord.

Where, during the pendency of proceedings under s. 10A of the Bombay Rent (War Restrictions) Act, for restoration to possession and compensation the Act expired:

Held, that the proceedings could not be continued and were ipso facto determined. B R. K. MODY & Co. v. MAHOMEDBHAI ABDOOL HOOSSEIN & Co., 27 Bom. L. R. 595; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 378 793

Buddhist Law, Burmese—Adoption—Kittima adoption—Apatittha adoption—Surrounding circumstances—Relationship of parties—Amendment of plaint—Alternative claim.

Among the Burmese, the kittima and the apatittha forms of adoption are quite distinct. The former is an adoption with a view to inherit and the latter merely for bringing up the child out of pity.

The Burmese expression for the English word "adopted" does not clearly give the idea of adoption as one's own child. The expression is used in connection both with the kittima form of adoption and the apatittha form. Therefore, the use of the expression by an alleged adoptor without the necessary amplifying words is not a sufficient proof of a kittima adoption.

The treatment of a niece by his alleged adoptive father somewhat like a daughter does not raise any presumption of an adoption with a view to inherit, especially when she is an orphan child. If the parties were strangers the fact would be very important.

A plaint based on a kittima adoption cannot be amended in appeal by an alternative claim of an apatittha adoption, as the two forms of adoption are entirely different. L B SHWE KIN v. MAUNG SIN, 10 L. B. R. 376 673 ——— Adoption—Kittima form, essentials of—Wife, whether can adopt without knowledge or consent of husband—Public declaration—"Shinbyu", effect of—"Mwe-za-de", significance of.

A kittima son or daughter should be adopted with the intention, publicly signified, of taking the adoptee as a son or daughter who will inherit. The intention may be expressed at the time of the taking or later; or may be inferred from a long course of conduct making such intention public. It may happen that a child is at first taken casually and without any intention that it should ultimately occupy the same legal position as that of a natural-born child, but later on, for a variety of reasons, the adoptive parents may come to look upon the son or daughter as their own and invest the child with privileges and duties which clearly show the subsequent formation of the required intention.

The use of the word "mwe-za-de" by the witnesses in describing an adoption is not sufficient to establish a kittima adoption.

When the donor of an image, or a religious or other charitable building, sets up a public record of a gift and in it mentions the names of his or her relatives, both dead and living, it can safely be assumed that the relationship between the donor and those whose names are thus included is definitely admitted and proclaimed, and where one of them is an adopted son, but is referred to simply as a son, it must be taken that a kittima adoption was intended.

Among Burman Buddhists, when a person undertakes to be the sponsor of a boy, who is going to enter the monkhood as a novice, he generally acts in loco parentis to that boy; but the fundamental idea in his doing so is that he is himself acquiring merit therefrom, and hence it is a universal custom for well-to-do persons to shinbyu not only their own sons, but also the sons of others whenever opportunity offers. Thus, though the act of performing the ceremony is, in some cases, prima facie evidence that the donor of the feast regarded the novice as his son, it is by no means a clear indication in every instance that anything more than a charitable intent, sometimes coupled with a love of display, was in the donor's mind. Where several boys are shinbyued at the same time, and none of them is a natural-born son, no presumption in favour of adoption can properly arise in the absence of a direct and public declaration of relationship at or about the time of the ceremony.

Buddhist Law, Burmese—concld.

One of a Burman Buddhist couple cannot legally adopt an heir without the knowledge or consent of the other. The plaintiff lost his mother while still an infant and his father was unable to rear him. M. N. with her husband's subsequent approval, gave the child a home, fed and clothed him, and took some interest in his education. While he was still a little boy, she made statements and allowed it to be known that she had adopted a son, and many people in the village looked upon the plaintiff as the adopted son of M. N. When he grew to adolescence, she took part in his shinbyu along with six other boys, and, later, finding that he was not inclined to study, utilized his services in field work. She took no interest in his marriage, or in his wife and children, and, beyond permitting his wife to use a vacant house belonging to her as a maternity shelter, did not provide any place of residence for them. In return for his labour during many years, the plaintiff was allowed to work a small area of paddy land on payment of rent, and his name was included as joint owner of a piece of land bought by her and two others:

Held, that on the state of facts proved it could not be held that there had been a kittima adoption of the plaintiff by M. N. and her husband. R MAUNG PO KAN v. DAW AT, 1 R. 102; (1923) A. I. R. (R.) 189 686

Bundelkhand Alienation of Land Act (II of 1903), ss. 2, 16—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 102—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 25—Execution of decree of Small Cause Court on Regular Side—Appeal, second, whether lies—Revision—Trees constituting grove, whether land.

Appellant obtained a decree from the Court of Small Causes against the respondent. The decree was transferred to the Court of the Munsif in order to enable the decree-holder to attach immoveable property. The appellant sought the attachment of certain groves held by the judgment-debtor in an area to which the Bundelkhand Alienation of Land Act applied. The respondent objected that under s. 16 of the Act the groves were not saleable in execution of the decree. The objection was allowed by the Executing Court and its order was upheld on appeal. Appellant came up to the High Court in second appeal:

Held, (1) that a second appeal was barred by the provisions of s. 102 of the C. P. C.;

(2) that the order of the lower Appellate Court was, however, subject to revision under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act;

(3) that the trees which constituted the groves, apart from the land on which they stood, were not "land" within the meaning of the definition laid down in s. 2 of the Bundelkhand Alienation of Land Act, and that, therefore, s. 16 of the Act was not a bar to the sale of the trees appertaining or belonging to the groves held by the respondent in execution of appellant's decree. A PANCHAITI AKHARA v. BENI BAHADUR SINGH, L. R. 6 A. 277 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 587 262

Burden of proof. See CUSTOM—PRE-EMPTION. 298

——— See SALE OF GOODS 218

——— Contract, suit on—Minority, plea of.

Where in a suit to enforce a contract, the defendant asserts that he was a minor at the date of the contract, the burden to prove the same lies on him.

Where a plaintiff wishes to enforce a contract it is for him to prove the validity of the contract on which he relies. But the age of a person entering into a contract with him is not such an essential part of the contract as must be proved by a plaintiff.

When a person enters into a contract as a major he really makes an admission that he is of age. If in spite of such an admission he asserts that he was not of age at the date of the contract the burden of proof is on him to establish the fact. A KANDHAI LAL v. DEBI PRASAD, L. R. 6 A. 219 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 399 778 ——— Grant by Government—Presumption of ownership—Burden of proof.

Merely because Government has issued a patta of certain land to some body there is no presumption that Government are entitled to the land of which they have purported to make a grant, and it is always for the grantee to make out that the grantor had a title to the property and was entitled to make a grant of it. M ADINARAYANA v. KALAMALLA VENKATA SUBBAYA, 48 M. L. J. 411; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 752 46

C. I. F. contract, incidents of—Obligations of buyer and seller—Documents of title, delivery of—Insurance—Bill of lading and delivery order, difference between—Repudiation, what is—Refusal to take delivery on wrong ground—Valid ground, whether can be subsequently urged—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Written contract—Evidence to vary incidents of contract, admissibility of—Conduct of parties.

Under an ordinary contract on C. I. F. terms the seller has, firstly, to ship at the port of shipment goods of the description contained in the contract; secondly, to produce a contract of affreightment, under which the goods will be delivered at the destination contemplated by the contract; thirdly, to arrange for an insurance upon the terms current in the trade which will be available to the buyer; fourthly, to make out an invoice and finally to tender these documents to the buyer so that he may know what freight he has to pay and obtain delivery of the goods, if they arrive, or recover for their loss if they are lost on the voyage.

The bill of lading represents the goods in law and in fact and its possession places the goods at the disposal of the purchaser.

While a transfer of a bill of lading operates as a delivery of the goods a transfer of the delivery order or a dock warrant operates only as a token of authority to take possession and not as a transfer of possession.

But it is open to the parties to a C. I. F. contract to substitute by agreement a delivery order for a bill of lading. Such a variation, however, does not affect the essentials of a C. I. F. contract so as to relieve the seller from the obligation of tendering a policy of insurance to the buyer.

The goods comprised in a C. I. F. contract must be covered by an effective policy of insurance; an open cover taken out by the seller protecting all goods shipped by him is not sufficient and the policy must be tendered even if the goods arrive safely.

A C. I. F. contract is not a mere sale of documents. It is still a contract for the sale of goods, though it is to be performed by transfer of proper documents.

The documents must be tendered as soon as possible after the seller has destined the cargo to the buyer. If there is a mail, the seller must transmit the documents by mail. The contract is performed in fact, and the date of its performance is the date, when the documents would come forward, the seller making every reasonable effort to forward them. In case of non-delivery, the contract is broken at the time when the documents ought to have been tendered, and not when the goods arrive, and damages must be estimated accordingly.

The buyer is bound to pay on tender of the shipping documents, and he is not entitled to refuse payment until he is given an opportunity for inspecting the goods.

Where in a contract for the sale of goods, the buyer clearly shows his intention not to be bound by and to repudiate the contract, it amounts to a breach of the contract. In such a case the seller may treat the notice of intention as inoperative, in which case he keeps the contract alive for the benefit of the seller as well as his own; or, he may treat the repudiation as a wrongful putting an end of the contract, and may at once bring his action as on a breach of it. In the latter case, the repudiation operates as a waiver of conditions precedent to be performed by the seller; the buyer cannot, after repudiation, set up as a defence to the action for damages that the goods were not in conformity with the contract. Nor can he, in the case of a C. I. F. contract, raise the defence that the seller had not the proper documents to tender. But the repudiation which absolves the seller from the performance of conditions precedent must have been made before the due date for the performance of the contract. This date, in the case of a C. I. F. contract, is the date on which the documents ought to have been tendered. A repudiation made after that date does not operate as a waiver of the performance of conditions precedent on the part of the seller.

A buyer who rejects goods on a wrong ground is not thereby precluded from relying on a valid ground which in fact exists. Thus a buyer under a C. I. F. contract who refuses to take delivery on the ground that the goods are of an inferior quality is not precluded from proving at the trial of the action that the proper documents were not tendered to him by the seller.

To constitute a repudiation, one of the parties to the contract must make quite plain his intention not to perform the contract.

Incidents which are impliedly contained in a written contract, whether by construction of the terms or by implication of law, cannot be varied by extrinsic evidence.

Evidence of former transactions between the same parties can be received for the purpose of explaining the meaning of the terms used in their written contract, where such meaning is doubtful, but not where the meaning is plain: nor is it admissible to enlarge or vary the terms of the contract.

Evidence of the course of previous dealings between the parties to show that though the contract between the parties was on C. I. F. terms the buyer was not entitled either to a bill of lading or to a policy of insurance, and was bound to pay against the delivery telegram, is inadmissible under s. 92 of the Evidence Act, as its effect would be to vary the incidents of a C. I. F. contract. B STEEL BROS. & CO. LTD. v. DAYAL KHATAV & Co., 25 Bom. L. R. 1063; 47 B. 924; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 247. 67

Calcutta Municipal Act (III of 1899), s. 228, construction of—Rate assessed on building and land, whether charge on holding—Interpretation of Statutes.

In the interpretation of a Statute it is sometimes necessary to read the conjunctions "or" and "and", one for the other.

The policy of s. 228 of the Calcutta Municipal Act is to make the holding primarily responsible for the rates assessed on it. When the Act speaks of the rates on any building or land it includes a tax which has been assessed on the land and the house taken together. The expression "building or land" in the section includes the case of a rate assessed on a building and land and arrears of such rate become a charge on the land and the house. C NAYAN MANJURI DASI v. CHAIRMAN, HOWRAH MUNICIPALITY 229

Calcutta Rent Act (III of 1920), s. 15—Application for fixing standard rent—Premises originally let as part of larger premises—Rent Collector, power of, to make enquiry determining proportionate rent of premises in dispute.

Where an application is made for fixing the standard rent in respect of premises which were originally let as part of larger premises, the Rent Collector has power to make an enquiry as to what portion of the rent originally payable in respect of the entire premises can be allocated to the premises in respect of which the application is made, so as to determine the question whether he has jurisdiction to entertain the application at all. C HURSUK DAS THAKUR DAS v. GOURI CHARAN LAW 796

Carriage of goods—Charter party—"Advance freight," what is—Advance, payment of, for voyage—Voyage impossible—Suit for refund, maintainability of—Substitution of ship, when enforceable.

Under a contract of charter party plaintiff paid a sum of money to defendant, a ship-owner, as advance for carrying certain cargo for two voyages, but no voyage was made as the vessel was stranded on its way to load the cargo for the first voyage. In a suit for the refund of the advance:

Held, that the payment was purely an advance and not in the nature of "advance freight" at all and was, therefore, recoverable.

Per Phillips, J.—Advance freight must connote freight, and the idea of freight does not arise until the voyage has actually begun, or at any rate until the goods for which the freight is payable have been loaded on the ship or accepted by bills of lading.

Per Odgers, J.—A ship-owner is only entitled to compel the acceptance of a substituted ship after the voyage in the ship contracted for has begun. M SIVANADIAN CHETTIAR v. BATCHU SURAYYA, 48 M. L. J. 413; 21 L. W. 445; (1925) M. W. N. 303; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 727; 48 M. 459 127 ——— Risk Note Form "A," execution of—Burden of proof—Liability of Railway Company—Company when can insist on Risk Note being executed.

Risk Note Form "A" is to be used when articles intended for carriage are either already in a bad condition or so defectively packed that they are liable to damage, leakage or wastage in transit. When goods are carried under this Risk Note, the obligation of the carrier is simply to deliver them to the consignee at destination; he is not responsible for the condition in which the goods are delivered, Carriage of goods—concld.

If a consignor consents to execute a Risk Note in Form "A" he must be bound by it unless he shows that he was compelled to execute it by fraud or mis-representation.

In a suit to recover damages in respect of goods consigned to a Railway Company for carriage under Risk Note Form "A" the burden is on the plaintiff to show that the consignor was compelled by force, fraud or mis-representation to execute the Risk Note, when, as a matter of fact, the goods were properly packed and not damaged.

It is open to a Railway Company to require that perishable articles consigned to it for carriage should be packed securely.

Tobacco is a perishable article and as single bagging is not sufficient to keep out rain when a consignment of tobacco in single bagging is made over to Railway Company for carriage, the Company is entitled to require the consignor to execute a Risk Note in Form "A." N MADRAS & SOUTHERN MARATHA RY. Co. v. RAMNATH, (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 333 1031

Caste Disabilities Removal Act (XXI of (1850) —Hindu widow, conversion of, to Islam—Claim to succeed to property under Will, whether affected.

Where a Hindu widow becomes a convert to Islam her conversion does not affect her right to property to which she is entitled under the Will of her father. M GANSHAMDOSS NARAYAN DOSS v. SARASVATHI BAI, 21 L. W. 415; (1925) M. W. N. 285; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 861 621

C. P. Land Revenue Act (II of 1917), ss. 78, 80, 106—Order of Deputy Commissioner declaring customary rights of tenants—Declaration, suit for, by Malguzar, maintainability of—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Defendants, who were the tenants of the plaintiff malguzar, complained to the Deputy Commissioner that the plaintiff was interfering with their rights and the Deputy Commissioner passed an order declaring that the tenants had the right to take water from the village tank for building purposes and to remove earth and that they could take fuel and timber from the malguzari jungle and were entitled to graze a number of cattle therein. He also ordered that the excess grazing dues recovered by the plaintiff should be refunded to the defendants and warned the plaintiff against molesting the defendants in the exercise of their rights. Plaintiff, thereupon, brought a suit for a declaration that the order of the Deputy Commissioner was erroneous and for a declaration of the proper rights of the defendants and for an injunction against them :

Held, that the order of the Deputy Commissioner fell within the purview of s. 78 of the C. P. Land Revenue Act, and that the plaintiff's suit was, therefore, maintainable under s. 80 of the Act. N MADHORAO v. LAXMANRAO 1054

——— s. 80—Settlement entry recording villagers' right—Suit for cancellation of entry, whether maintainable—Order passed by Settlement Officer—Presumption—Burden of proving contrary—Order not produced—Presumption, whether arises.

A suit for the cancellation of the Settlement entry of a mouza in respect of the right, recorded therein of the villagers, to water their cattle at the plaintiff's tank, and for an injunction against the villagers to prevent their doing so is maintainable under s. 80 of the C. P. Land Revenue Act.

C. P. Land Revenue Act—concld.

Every order passed by a Settlement Officer must be presumed to have been passed after due enquiry, and the burden of proving that it was not so passed lies on the person who alleges it.

Where, however, the order has not been produced, no presumption arises as to whether it does or does not contain any reference to any particular matter as being passed after enquiry. N RAGHO v. R. M. DOYE, 8 N. L. J. 36; (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 324 81

C. P. Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s. 45, cls. (1) and (5), Exp.—Sir land—Lease—Transfer by malguzar, without sanction of Deputy Commissioner—Position of lessee—"Lessee," meaning of.

The rights of an ordinary tenant in sir land held by him remain unaffected by the accrual of the occupancy tenant right in the sir land under s. 45 (1) of the C. P. Tenancy Act.

The occupancy rights in sir land of the original proprietor are compatible with the existence of ordinary tenants on the same land.

In other words sir rights and occupancy rights may often exist side by side.

The Tenancy Act contemplates leases to ordinary tenants of sir lands apart from transfers of the kind provided for in s. 45 (1), which applies only to leases or other transfers of proprietary rights in sir fields and does not apply to agricultural leases which do not affect the proprietary rights and, therefore, do not require Deputy Commissioner's sanction.

A "lease," within the meaning of the Explanation to s. 45 of the C. P. Tenancy Act, is a transfer of only the proprietary rights in the sir lands and does not as such require the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner. N DURGAPRASAD v. THAKURPRASAD 72

——— ss. 46, 47—Occupancy holding—Trees, interest in, nature of—Trees, whether transferable—Transfer of holding—Revenue Officer, jurisdiction of, to put next heir in possession, extent of—Order of Revenue Officer, whether can be questioned.

Trees of all kinds standing on an agricultural holding are part and parcel of the holding, at least in those cases where the property in them has not been expressly severed from the property in the soil on which they stand.

In order that there should be a valid severance of the interest or property in the trees, the trees must become the separate property of a person other than the owner of the soil on which they stand, and the interest in the trees as also in the soil must be of a nature transferable under the law applicable to the land.

Inasmuch as, in trees standing on occupancy holdings the tenants hold analogous rights, and the interest of occupancy tenants in their holdings has by law been made non-transferable, the property in the trees is also non-transferable and is not capable of being validly severed or parted with, apart from the soil of the holding in which the trees stand.

Section 47 of the C P. Tenancy Act does not restrict the jurisdiction of the Revenue Officer to the giving of possession to the next heir of only that part of the holding which was sought to be transferred. The very idea of letting in the next heir and putting him in possession of the holding by avoidance of the transfer assumes that the transferring tenant was dead at the date of the transfer. He cannot, consequently, be treated as only partially dead and partially alive. Once the matter is decided under s. 47 of the C. P. Tenancy Act and possession of the holding is transferred to the claimant, no power is given to any outside authority to revise the decision of the Revenue Officer and to divest the claimant of the right vested in him under the order. N FAKIRA v. RAMKISAN, (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 277; 21 N. L. R. 25 1045

C. P. Tenancy Act—1898—concld.

——— s. 49—Lease, permanent—Lessee, whether "proprietor"—Determination of lease—Lessee, whether occupancy tenant of sir lands.

A lessee whether permanent or not is not a "proprietor" within the meaning of s. 49 of the C. P. Tenancy Act and does not retain any interest as an occupancy tenant in the sir land comprised within his lease on the determination of the lease. N BALWANTRAO v. FARID SAHEB, 8 N. L. J. 44; (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 274 253

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), ss. 12, 13—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23—Occupancy right, transfer of, whether void or voidable—Surrender—Lease to third person—Loss of possession by lessee—Suit to recover amount paid to landlord, whether maintainable.

A transfer of occupancy or ordinary tenancy rights is not unlawful within the meaning of s. 23 of the Contract Act. Such a transfer is only voidable in the manner and to the extent provided for by the C. P. Tenancy Act; it is not absolutely void.

Where a tenant surrenders his tenancy right to the landlord and the landlord leases the land to a third person and the latter subsequently loses possession of the land leased to him, he is entitled to recover the sum paid by him to the landlord on the ground of failure of consideration. N VITHOBA v. VISHNU 1043

——— ss. 12, 13, 35—Occupancy holding—Relinquishment by tenant in favour of co-sharer, effect of Lambardar, right of, to let out holding—Abandonment, what amounts to—Notice—Publication—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 43, applicability of, in case of doubtful title.

A relinquishment of his holding by a tenant in favour of a co-sharer for a private debt due to him is a transfer and not a surrender, and is governed by the provisions of s. 12 of the C. P. Tenancy Act. Such a transfer is liable to be set aside by the lambardar under s. 13 of the Act, and until steps are taken to have the transfer set aside under that section the lambardar has no right to let out the holding to a third person.

When a tenant transfers his occupancy holding and abandons possession of the same he must be taken to have abandoned his holding. But the landlord is not entitled to enter on the holding unless he files a notice in the office of the Tahsildar, under s. 35 of the C. P. Tenancy Act, stating his intention to treat the holding as abandoned and such a notice is duly published under the section.

A lease by a lambardar of a holding which is in the actual possession of a tenant, and on which the lambardar has no present right to enter, is absolutely illegal and void.

Semble.—Section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act cannot operate on a doubtful title. N DHEKAL v. RAGHU, 8 N. L. J. 52; (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 259 115 ——— ss. 12 (1) (ii), 13—Occupancy tenant—Transfer of holding—Ejectment suit—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Test.

Where the transfer of an occupancy tenant right would be valid between the parties thereto except for the prohibition contained in s. 12 of the C. P. Tenancy Act, 1920, it can only be avoided in the manner and to the extent provided by s. 13 thereof. No suit to avoid it can be maintained in the Civil Court.

In other words no landlord can sue in a Civil Court to evict a person to whom an occupancy tenant has made over his holding unless that person is one of those persons mentioned in s. 12 (1) (ii) of the C. P. Tenancy Act of 1920 or holds under a lease for not more than one agricultural year granted not more than two months before the beginning of that year, without any covenant to renew being attached to it; in all other cases he must apply to a Revenue Officer under s. 13 of the Act. N TIJAU v. GOPI 826

C. P. Tenancy Act—1920—concld.

——— Sch. II—Landlord and tenant—Surrender—Licensee from tenant, position of—Suit by fresh grantee to eject licensee of former tenant—Limitation, commencement of.

On the surrender of a tenancy a license granted by the former tenant expires and the licensee becomes a trespasser from the date of the surrender, and his possession becomes adverse to a fresh grantee of the tenancy rights from the zemindar, from the date of the grant, and limitation for a suit to eject the licensee by such grantee begins to run from the date of the grant under Sch. II of the C. P. Tenancy Act. N MAHAMAD NIYAJUDDIN KHAN v. JETHU 823

Cess Act (IX of 1880), s. 41. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT, 1885, s. 60 439

City of Bombay Municipal Act (III of 1888), ss. 3 (z), 394, 515—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 45—Stables—License, refusal of—Municipal Commissioner, discretion of—High Court, power of, to interfere—Court prohibiting issue of license on ground of private nuisance—Abatement of nuisance—License, whether can be granted under changed circumstances—Public and private nuisances, distinction between—Remedies.

Where a Municipal Commissioner has acted illegally in refusing to exercise his discretion in granting a license under s. 394 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, the High Court would interfere under s. 45 of the Specific Relief Act and order him to exercise his discretion and issue the license.

Section 515 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act is designed to empower a Magistrate to give summary relief by way of prevention or otherwise, not only in respect of a public nuisance but in respect of any nuisance as defined by s. 3 (z) of the Municipal Act which includes both private and public nuisances.

Where in proceedings under s. 515 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act relating to certain stables the Court thinks that the nuisance complained of relates to the whole locality, the nuisance is a public nuisance, but if it relates only to one or two houses it is a private nuisance. The relief which the Court can give in both cases under s. 515 is, inter alia, abatement of the nuisance by ordering the Municipal Commissioner not to grant the license for the stables. But it does not follow from the Court making an order on the Commissioner that he should not grant a license that that order is to govern all circumstances and all cases at all times.

Where the order of the Court proceeds on the assumption that a private nuisance exists, the Commissioner is at liberty to grant a license when he finds that the private nuisance complained of in the proceedings under s. 515 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act has ceased to exist, owing to the residents of the particular houses affected by the nuisance having vacated those houses.

City of Bombay Municipal Act—concld.

With regard to a private nuisance each individual has his remedy in civil law by way of injunction and damages. He has further his remedy under s. 515 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act. It is necessary for the protection of the health and comfort of the inhabitants of a big city like Bombay that any resident who is affected by the nuisance in the manner mentioned in s. 3 (z) of the Act, should have a right to go to a Magistrate over the head of the Commissioner or the Corporation that the Commissioner should be restrained from exercising his powers so as to affect the complainant's individual right as a resident by the creation of a private nuisance. If the private nuisance affects two or three houses only, the inhabitants of the houses might either join in a civil suit or a complaint before a Magistrate and ask the Magistrate to decide specifically that a particular nuisance is a private nuisance affecting the residents of those particular houses. With regard to a public nuisance also, any resident can ask for an order under s. 515, and if the Court finds a public nuisance proved, the order of the Court would give relief to the public of the locality as against the nuisance and the vacating of any one or more houses would not mean abatement of the nuisance, as the nuisance is in respect of the public. In the case of a public nuisance no particular limits need be defined. B ALIMAHOMED SALEMAHOMED v. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER, BOMBAY, 27 Bom. L. R. 581 771

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2 (2), 47, 151, O. IX, r. 13—Execution of decree—Objection by legal representative of deceased judgment-debtor—Objection allowed ex parte—Application to set aside ex parte order, maintainability of—Inherent power of Court.

In execution of a mortgage-decree, the legal representative of the judgment-debtor, who had been brought upon the record of the execution proceedings after the death of the judgment-debtor, filed certain objections under s. 47 of the C. P. C. On the date fixed for the hearing of the objections the decree-holder did not appear and the Court passed an ex parte order allowing the objections. The decree-holder put in an application for setting aside the ex parte order alleging that he had no notice of the date of hearing:

Held, (1) that the objector having set up his own right to the property his objections must be taken to have come under s. 47 of the C. P. C.;

(2) that the order allowing the objections, although an ex parte order, amounted to a decree under the provisions contained in sub-cl. (2) of s. 2 of the C. P. C.;

(3) that, therefore, O. IX, r. 13 of the Code was applicable to the matter and it was competent to the Court to set aside the ex parte order on being satisfied that there were sufficient reasons for the absence of the decree-holder on the date of hearing;

(4) that in any case the Court had inherent jurisdiction to review its ex parte order provided sufficient cause was shown. A JHUNNI LAL v. NATHA RAM, L. R. 6 A. 278 Civ. 287

——— s. 2 (11), O. XXII, r. 4, O. XXXIV, r. 3—Foreclosure suit—Preliminary decree—Death of judgment-debtor—Legal representatives, one of several, brought on record—Decree absolute, whether binding on other legal representatives.

Where a Court issues a notice to a person supposed to be the only legal representative of a deceased defendant or judgment-debtor who alone is in possession of the estate of the deceased, and holds that the service of notice was sufficient, any decree passed in the suit or proceedings taken in execution, will be considered sufficient to cover the entire estate of the deceased, including the shares of those heirs of the deceased who were not brought on the record and who had not received any notice. In this respect no distinction can be made between the estate of a deceased Hindu and that of a deceased Muhammadan inasmuch as under the Muhammadan Law suits and claims can be effectively brought by a creditor against those legal representatives of the deceased who are in actual possession of his assets so as to make the decrees in such suits binding on all the legal representatives including those who are not made parties to the suits.

In a suit for foreclosure a preliminary decree was passed but the judgment-debtor died before the decree could be made absolute. At the instance of the decree-holder a notice was served on the widow of the deceased who was in sole possession of the entire estate of the deceased and the decree was made absolute and the decree-holder obtained possession of the property:

Held, that the widow of the deceased effectively represented the estate of the deceased in the suit for foreclosure subsequent to the preliminary decree so as to make the absolute decree binding on all the legal representatives of the deceased.

Per Dalal, J. C.—By the definition of "legal representative" given in the C. P. C., 1908, the Legislature possibly desired to bring the procedure in India in conformity with that prevailing in England.

Per Ashworth, A. J. C.—The alteration of the definition of "legal representative" in the Code of 1908 by the addition of the words "and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased" was merely designed to draw attention to the fact that in some cases a mere intermeddler may sufficiently represent the estate of the deceased person.

It cannot be laid down that one out of several heirs of a deceased defendant or judgment-debtor, although in sole possession of the entire estate of the deceased, can in no circumstances be deemed to have sufficiently represented the estate, so as to make a decree binding on other heirs of the deceased who are not parties to it. O KANIZ ABBAS v. BALADIN, 12 O. L. J. 37; 2 O. W. N. 34; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 330; 28 O. C. 177 892 ——— ss. 10, 11, 47, O. XXXIV, r. 8—Mortgage—Redemption suit by co-mortgagor—Subsequent suit by another co-mortgagor, whether barred—Res judicata—Continuation of proceedings by co-mortgagor—Extension of time for payment.

A suit for redemption by a co-mortgagor must be treated as a representative suit on behalf of all the co-mortgagors and operates as a bar to a subsequent suit for redemption by any of the other co-mortgagors.

Where, however, no proceedings are taken in the previous suit for redemption after the preliminary decree, the suit must be regarded as still pending and a subsequent suit for redemption by another co-mortgagor would be barred not under s. 11 but by virtue of the provisions of s. 10 of the C. P. C. In such a case another co-mortgagor can apply to continue the proceedings and the Court would have power to extend the time for payment under the proviso to r. 8 (4) of O. XXXIV of the C. P. C. O NARAIN v. GAYA DEEN, 1 O. W. N. 910; 28 O. C. 212 290

——— s. 11—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 51—Res judicata—Decision on question of law—Ejectment suit.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

A decision on a point of law does not operate as res judicata if the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from that in the former suit, as often happens in cases of recurring liability or even in ejectment suits. On the other hand, if the cause of action is the same, the decision would operate as res judicata

The right to eject a tenant accrues afresh every year and a previous decision in an ejectment suit between the parties that the suit is not maintainable in a Revenue Court does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit, it being open to the Revenue Court in a subsequent suit to say that on a correct view of the law it has jurisdiction to entertain the suit. A GANGA v. MAMMUD-UN-NISSA BEGAM 789

——— s. 11—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 74—Res judicata—Question of law—Interest, high rate of—Penalty.

A case must be decided upon the law as it stands when the judgment is pronounced and not upon what the law was at the date of a previous suit, and if the law has been altered in the meantime and the effect of the law has been differently interpreted by judicial decision or altered by Statute, a decision on a point of law in an earlier suit will not operate as res judicata with regard to the same question in a subsequent suit. For instance, where a stipulation as to the payment of interest contained in a kabuliyat is held to be penal and, therefore, unenforceable, and the law is subsequently altered by judicial pronouncements, the decision as to the penal nature of the stipulation will not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit to recover rent on the basis of the same kabuliyat.

In the absence of anything to prove undue influence or to show that there was an unconscionable bargain, a mere high rate of interest is not to be treated either as penal or unconscionable. C NABIN CHANDRA SAHA PODDAR v. DUDU MIA 767

——— s. 11—Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), s. 15D—Mortgages, several—Suit for account on one mortgage—Plea by mortgagee that account should be taken on all mortgages—Subsequent suit to enforce other mortgages, whether maintainable—Res judicata.

Where a mortgagor executes several mortgages on the same property and asks for an account on one of those mortgages under s. 15D of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, although the mortgagee can ask that an account should be taken of all the mortgages existing on the property, so that the mortgagor would not be entitled to redeem except on paying what is due on all the mortgages, yet, if the Court takes an account of the one mortgage in which it decides nothing with regard to the validity or the existence of other mortgages at the time when the account is taken, the mortgagee would be entitled to enforce the other mortgages against the mortgagor. The decision in the suit under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act will not operate to bar a subsequent suit by the mortgagee to enforce the other mortgages, on the ground of res judicata. B MAHADEV NARAYAN JOSHI v. SHRIDHARBHAT GOPALBHAT JOSHI, 27 Bom. L. R. 488; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 311 716

——— s. 11—Res judicata—Competency of Court.

Competency in s. 11, C. P. C., has reference to the value of the suit and not to territorial jurisdiction. M In re AYISHA BIBI AMMAL 705

——— s. 11—Res judicata—Landlord and tenant—Suit for rent—Ex parte decree—Ejectment suit—Decree, whether operates as res judicata.

Where a plaintiff, alleging himself to be the landlord of the defendant sues the latter for rent and obtains an ex parte decree against him, which is subsequently satisfied by the defendant, the decree operates as res judicata on the question of the relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties in a subsequent suit for ejectment. C UMEDALI MUNSHI v. GOYJADDI MOLLA 672

——— s. 11—Res judicata—Mixed question of fact and law—Question of title.

A judgment operates as res judicata with regard to all the findings that are necessary and essential to the judgment.

A finding on a mixed issue of law and fact stands on the same footing as a decision on a question of fact and operates as res judicata.

Plaintiff brought a suit for declaration of his title to and recovery of possession of two plots of land, on the allegation that he had purchased the plots in dispute, along with other lands, from a co-sharer of the defendant. His title was declared but it was held that he could not recover possession from a co-sharer and that his remedy lay in a suit for partition. He subsequently brought a suit for partition of the plots which were in dispute in the previous suit and some others, having been deprived of possession by the defendant:

Held, that the question of the plaintiff's title to the plots in dispute in the subsequent suit must be held to be res judicata by virtue of the decision in the previous suit, inasmuch as in order to decide that suit it was necessary to decide his title to the whole of the land purchased by him from the co-sharer of the defendant. C RAJENDRA NATH DUTTA v. BHABINI DASI 811

——— s. 11—Suit by Hindu widow to challenge adoption—Decision, whether binding on reversioners—Res judicata—Arbitration, reference to—Award, evidentiary value of.

A suit brought by a Hindu widow to challenge an adoption alleged to have been made by her late husband must be regarded as a representative suit and the decision arrived therein is, in the absence of collusion, binding upon the reversioners and operates as res judicata between them and the adopted son.

Where the question of the factum and validity of an adoption is referred to arbitration, the award made by the arbitrators is, apart from its being res judicata, a weighty piece of evidence in a subsequent suit between the parties in which a dispute arises as to the alleged adoption. A SHIB DEO MISRA v. RAMPRASAD, 22 A. L. J. 690; 46 A. 637; (1925) A. I. R. (A) 79 938

——— s. 11, cl. (4)—Mortgage—Redemption suit—Properties not included in mortgage included in suit—Delivery of possession—Suit to recover possession of properties wrongly delivered, maintainability of—Res judicata.

Where in a suit for redemption, the mortgagor includes certain properties as comprised in the mortgage and obtains delivery thereof in execution of the redemption decree, it is not competent to the mortgagee to bring a subsequent suit on the ground that some of the properties so delivered were not comprised in the mortgage and were wrongly delivered. Such a suit is barred by s. 11, cl. (4), C. P. C. M UTTARAVELLI PEDA APPALANAIDU v. UTTAR VELLI APPALANAIDU 711

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— s. 11, O. II, r. 2—Res judicata—Inconsistent suits.

Where a claim made in a subsequent suit, if added to the claim in a previous suit, would have been likely to embarass the trial of the suit or to place the plaintiff in a false position, it must be held that it was not incumbent upon the plaintiff to ask for that relief in the former suit, and a suit to enforce such relief cannot, therefore, be barred by the operation of the rule of res judicata.

The mere fact that the parties to a subsequent suit are the same as those to a previous suit and that some allegations are common to both the suits, does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the second suit is barred by res judicata.

Plaintiff brought a suit to set aside a sale-deed on the ground that it was fictitious, was not made to pass title and that she had received no portion of the consideration money. It was found that she was entitled to avoid the sale but that she had received a portion of the consideration and a decree was granted in her favour for recovery of possession of the property dealt with by the sale-deed on payment of the sum held to have been received by her as consideration for the sale. She failed to pay the amount and to execute the decree. Subsequently she brought a suit to recover the balance of the consideration money:

Held, that the relief which was claimed in the subsequent suit was entirely inconsistent with the position taken up by the plaintiff in the previous suit and that, therefore, she could not have asked for the relief in the previous suit and that consequently her suit was not barred by res judicata. A KANDHAIYA SINGH v. KUNDAN, 23 A. L. J. 461; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 486; 47 A. 561 257

——— s. 11, O. IX, rr. 8, 9. See SUCCESSION ACT, 1865, ss. 50, 187 621

——— s. 11, Expl. IV—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 96—Mortgage—Payment made by mortgagor to one of several mortgagees—Suit on mortgage—Decree for sale—Suit, by mortgagor to recover money paid by him—Res judicata—Limitation—Hindu Law—Money received by father—Pious duty of sons to re-pay amount received.

B, L, and S were joint mortgagees of certain property. The mortgagor remitted the mortgage-money to the names of the three mortgagees by Money Order, but the amount was received by S alone who did not pay their share of the mortgage-money to the other mortgagees. L and S having died the sons of L and S and B subsequently brought a suit for sale on foot of the mortgage in which the mortgagor put forward the defence of payment but the Court held that payment to S alone did not amount to satisfaction of the mortgage-deed and made a decree. Thereupon the mortgagor brought the present suit against the sons of S to recover from them the amount received by S together with interest:

Held, (1) that with regard to one-third of the amount in suit the plaintiff's claim was barred by the doctrine of res judicata inasmuch as in the previous suit he should have put forward the claim that at least one-third of the amount received by S should be given credit for to him as against the sons of S;

(2) that the claim with regard to the remaining two-thirds was not barred by res judicata as the Court in the previous case could not have given a decree to the mortgagor against the sons of S for that amount;

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

(3) that the suit was governed by Art. 96 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act and that limitation began to run from the date of the judgment in the mortgage suit when the mortgagor discovered his mistake that S alone had been paid the money by the Post Office;

(4) that the mere keeping of the money by S or delay in distributing it did not amount to mis-appropriation on the part of S and that the sons of S were, therefore, under a pious duty to re-pay the money received by their father;

(5) that the present suit was not premature inasmuch as a decree for sale had been passed against the plaintiff and the plaintiff had been damaged by the threat of the sale of his property. O GANESH PARSHAD v. JOT SINGH 1017

——— s. 11, Expl. IV—Mortgages, simple and usufructuary—Suit to redeem usufructuary mortgage—Failure of mortgagee to set up simple mortgage in defence—Res judicata.

Plaintiff held two mortgages in respect of a house, the earlier mortgage being a simple one and the later a usufructuary one. Defendant, who was the purchaser of the equity of redemption of the house, sued plaintiff for possession of the house by redemption of the later mortgage, which was a usufructuary mortgage, and obtained a decree. Subsequently plaintiff brought a suit to recover the amount of the simple mortgage from the defendant and the latter pleaded that as the plaintiff had not set up the simple mortgage in his defence to the prior suit he was barred by the 4th Explanation to s. 11 of the C. P. C., from suing on it:

Held, that as the earlier mortgage which was the subject-matter of the present suit was a simple mortgage and defendant could not in that suit have been compelled to pay the amount due thereon before he could obtain possession of the house, the failure of the plaintiff to set up the mortgage in defence to the earlier suit did not operate as res judicata so as to debar him from suing to recover the amount due under that mortgage. L RELU MAL v. MASITI, (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 516 237

——— s. 11, Expl. VI—Hindu Law—Alienation by widow—Suit by reversioner—Subsequent suit by another reversioner, whether maintainable—Res judicata.

The reason of allowing a reversioner to challenge an alienation by a Hindu widow in the lifetime of the widow is that the reversioner sues not on his own behalf but on behalf of the entire body of reversioners, or the persons who would be the actual reversioners on the death of the widow. In other words, such a suit by a reversioner comes within the purview of Expl. VI to s. 11 of the C. P. C., and the decision in such a suit is binding on the entire body of reversioners.

A reversioner of a deceased Hindu brought a suit to challenge an alienation effected by the widow of the deceased. It was held that a portion of the property alienated had become the absolute property of the widow by adverse possession and the suit was decreed with regard to the rest of the property. Subsequently another reversioner brought another suit to challenge the same alienation on the same grounds on which it was challenged in the previous suit:

Held, that the suit was barred by res judicata and the mere fact that the widow was holding a portion of the property in dispute not as a representative of her husband but in her own right was immaterial. A BANSIDHAR v. DULHATIA, 23 A. L. J. 329; L. R. 6 A. 303 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 483; 47 A. 505 235

——— ss. 11, 100—Gujarat Talukdars' Act (VI of 1888), ss. 11, 15, 16—Talukdari Settlement Officer, order of—Appeal, second, whether competent—Order, whether operates as res judicata.

The Talukdari Settlement Officer is not a Court exercising original jurisdiction, and it cannot be said that because s. 16 of the Gujarat Talukdars' Act gives a right of appeal to the District Judge from the decision of the Talukdari Settlement Officer under s. 15 of the Act, that decision is a decree within the definition in s. 2 (2) of the C. P. C. The District Court hears the appeal as if it were an appeal from a decree of a Court from whose decision the District Court is authorized to hear appeals, but that is a specific right of appeal based on an analogy and the analogy cannot be extended further so as to entitle a party who is dissatisfied with the decision of the District Judge to take a second appeal to the High Court.

The Talukdari Settlement Officer is an administrative officer and not a Court. An order passed by him, therefore, under s. 15 of the Gujarat Talukdars' Act does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties in the Civil Court.

In considering the question of res judicata the Court must look to the powers of the Court in which the previous suit was instituted and not to the powers of the Court by which that suit was decided on appeal. B AMARSANGJI DUNGARJI JHALA v. DEEPSANGJI KAVABHAI JHALA, 27 Bom. L. R. 345; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 241; 49 B. 442 588

——— s. 21—Territorial jurisdiction, transfer of —Pending suits, effect on—Jurisdiction of Court to pass final decree—Waiver of objection—Suit to set aside decree, maintainability of.

Section 21 of the C. P. C. enacts an exception to the general rule that parties by mutual consent cannot confer upon a Court jurisdiction where it has not, is one of territorial jurisdiction the plea may be waived.

Where an objection to territorial jurisdiction is cured by waiver, it is cured not merely for the purpose of the Appellate or Revisional Court but cured entirely and for all purposes, whether there was want of jurisdiction at the institution of the suit or at any stage during the progress of it.

In a suit on a mortgage, the preliminary decree was passed by the Kumbakonam Sub-Court. Subsequently in virtue of a Government Notification, the territorial jurisdiction over the place wherein the mortgage property was situated was transferred from the Kumbakonam Sub-Court to the Mayavaram Sub-Court, but nevertheless the former Court passed the final decree in the suit. In a suit by one of the mortgagors-defendants to set aside the decree as being absolutely void for want of jurisdiction:

Held, that the objection to want of jurisdiction had been waived and s. 21, C. P. C., cured it and the decree could not, therefore, be challenged as being without jurisdiction even in collateral proceedings.

Per Phillips, J.—When a case has been properly instituted in a Court and is pending, the mere transfer of territorial jurisdiction affecting that case does not transfer the proceedings which were actually pending in the Original Court.

The jurisdiction of a Court consists in its power to entertain suits. Once the suit has been entertained, the remaining proceedings taken therein are not taken by reason of any particular territorial jurisdiction, but in the exercise of the powers vested in the Court to try suits generally and consequently the only time at which the territorial jurisdiction comes into operation is at the time of filing the suit. M CHOKKALINGHA PILLAI v. VÉLAYUDA MUDALIAR, 47 M. L. J. 448; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 117 152 ——— ss. 21, 38, 39—Territorial jurisdiction, transfer of—Case decided without objection by either party—Waiver—Appellate Court, whether will entertain objection.

On an application for the appointment of a Receiver in a pending suit before a Judge, arguments were heard and the petition was adjourned for orders to a particular day, and meanwhile the Local Government acting under ss. 10 and 11 of the Civil Courts Act, by notification, transferred the territorial jurisdiction of the area in which the suit properties were situate to another Court. The Judge, however, heard the petition without objection by any party and pronounced his order appointing a Receiver. On an appeal against the order objection was raised that the territorial jurisdiction having been transferred, the order was without jurisdiction:

Held, that s. 21 of the C. P. C. was applicable to all cases of want of territorial jurisdiction, and the appellant not having objected to the Judge passing the order and no failure of justice having been caused, the appellant must be held to have waived all objections on the ground of want of jurisdiction and the order was a good and valid one.

When a particular local jurisdiction of one Court is transferred to another by notification under ss. 10 and 11 of the Madras Civil Courts Act, such transfer carries with it automatically all pending suits and proceedings of any and every sort arising out of that local jurisdiction, so that the Court in which they were originally filed loses jurisdiction and the Court to which the local jurisdiction is transferred assumes it. M RAMANI v. NARAYANSAMI AIYAR, 47 M. L. J. 192; 20 L. W. 467; (1924) A. I. R. (M.) 697 341

——— s. 24. See GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915, (5 & 6 GEO. V, c. 61), s. 107 170

——— ss. 39, 50, 68, 99, O. XXI, r. 22, Sch. III, Para. 1—Execution of decree—Transfer to another Court—Death of judgment-debtor—Execution against legal representative—Procedure—Failure to apply to Court passing decree—Irregularity—Duty of Court —Proceedings transferred to Collector—Civil Court, power to interfere.

Courts in India have to be careful to see that the process of the Court and the law of procedure are not abused by judgment-debtors in such a way as to make Courts of law instrumental in defrauding creditors, who have obtained decrees in accordance with their rights.

Where a Court passing a decree transfers it to another Court for execution under s. 39 of the C. P. C., and while the proceedings are being carried on in the Court of transfer, the judgment-debtor dies, the Court of transfer is not divested of jurisdiction over the execution proceedings by the death of the judgment-debtor. On the application of the decree-holder the Court of transfer, which is executing the decree, must issue a notice under O. XXI, r. 22 of the C. P. C. to the person against whom execution is applied for as legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. Where such notice is issued and the person against whom execution is applied for acquiesces in the proceedings and submits to the jurisdiction of the Court of transfer by putting forward objections to the execution, the mere fact that no application has been made under s. 50 of the Code to the Court which passed the decree will not vitiate the proceedings.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Paragraph 1 of Sch. III to the C. P. C. puts the Collector in charge of the income of the property as well as of the property itself, and his powers over the income of the property cannot be interfered with by the Civil Court so long as he is in a position to exercise the powers conferred on him by the Schedule. O JANG BAHADUR v. BANK OF UPPER INDIA LTD. 2 O. W. N. 73; 12 O. L. J. 146; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 448 21

——— s. 47. See JURISDICTION 313

——— s. 47—Execution of decree—Sale—Dispute as to extent of property sold, whether must be decided by separate suit or in execution proceedings.

When a question arises between an auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor as to what was the property that was sold, the matter is one to be investigated by a separate suit and not by an application in the Execution Court. The fact that the decree-holder is himself the auction-purchaser makes no difference. A JAI SINGH v. CHIRANJI LAL, L. R. 6 A. 282 Civ. 641

——— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 2—Execution of decree—Agreement prior to decree not to execute decree against particular judgment-debtor, effect of.

Section 47 of the C. P. C. is wide enough to permit any valid objection to be taken by a judgment-debtor to the execution of a decree by the decree-holder or his legal representative.

Any pre-decretal agreement between parties to a suit, by the terms of which the passing of the decree is not to be objected to but execution of the decree is not to be taken out against a particular judgment-debtor, can be pleaded and given effect to in execution proceedings and O. XXI, r. 2, C. P. C., is no bar to the entertainment of an objection based on such an agreement. M VELU THEVAN v. KRISHNASWAMI REDDI, 48 M. L. J. 277; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 591; 21 L. W. 725 297

——— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 58—Suit dismissed as against some defendants—Execution of decree—Attachment—Objection by defendant against whom suit dismissed—Appeal—Appeal, second, whether lies.

Parties to the suit within the meaning of s. 47 of the C. P. C. include parties against whom the suit has been dismissed.

Where, therefore, a suit is dismissed as against some defendants but is decreed as against others, and in execution of the decree certain property is attached, and an objection is preferred to the attachment by a defendant against whom the suit had been dismissed, on the allegation that the property attached belongs to him and not to the judgment-debtor, the determination of the objection is a matter which falls within the purview of s. 47 of the C. P. C., and the order of the Execution Court thereon is subject to appeal and second appeal. Pat KALOO v. BHOLANATH, 3 Pat. L. R. 90; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 482 743

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— s. 47, O. XXI, rr. 66, 90—Execution of decree—Sale, application to set aside—Notice of sale proclamation—Under-valuation—Appeal, second, whether lies.

An application by a judgment-debtor to set aside a Court sale on the ground that he had no notice of the proclamation of sale and that there was an under-valuation of the property falls under O. XXI, r. 66, C. P. C., and a second appeal lies against an order therein, although the application purported to have been filed under r. 90 of O. XXI. M KAMANA VENKATASWAMI v. GODAVARTI NAGAYYA 413

——— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 71—Execution of decree—Sale—Non-payment of purchase-money—Re-sale—Order directing payment of deficiency—Suit to set aside order, whether lies.

An order under O. XXI, r. 71 of the C. P. C., directing a defaulting purchaser to pay the balance of the original purchase-money comes within the provisions of s. 47 of the Code and a separate suit to set aside the order is not maintainable. O MATHURA PRASAD v. BAHADUR SINGH, 2 O. W. N. 141; 12 O. L. J. 80; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 360 284

——— s. 47, O. XXI, r. 90—Mortgage-decree—Sale—Objection by judgment-debtor, dismissal of—Legal representatives, whether can maintain suit to recover property. See HINDU LAW—MITHILA SCHOOL 849

——— s. 47, O. XXI, rr. 97, 99, 100—Decree for possession—Obstruction—Subsequent suit for possession, whether maintainable.

Plaintiff obtained a decree for possession against defendant No. 1. He subsequently brought another suit for possession on the allegation that in execution of the previous decree he had recovered possession of the property but that he had been subsequently dispossessed by defendants Nos. 1 and 2. It was found that the plaintiff had not obtained possession in execution of the previous decree and that he had been unable to prove a title as against defendant No. 2:

Held, that plaintiff's suit was barred as against defendant No. 1 by the provisions of s. 47 of the C. P. C., and was liable to be dismissed as against defendant No. 2 for want of proof of better title. Pat SOVANI JENA v. BHIMA RAY, (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 407; 1 Pat. 157 251 ——— ss. 47, 151, O. XXI, r. 90—Execution of decree—Sale—Permission given to decree-holder to bid at auction—Restriction placed on permission without notice to decree-holder—Irregularity—Purchase by clerk of decree-holder's lawyer—Fraud—Inherent power of Court to refuse to confirm sale.

In execution of a decree the Court granted an unconditional permission to the decree-holder to bid at the auction-sale of the judgment-debtor's property. Subsequently the Court made an order, without giving any notice to the decree-holder, fixing the minimum amount of the decree-holder's bid. As a result of this restriction the property was sold at a grossly inadequate price:

Held, that the action of the Court in placing a restriction upon the permission given to the decree-holder to bid at the auction-sale, without giving notice to the decree-holder, amounted to an irregularity within the meaning of O. XXI, r. 90, or of s. 47 of the C. P. C.

The clerk of a lawyer retained by a decree-holder stands in a position of active confidence towards the decree-holder, and if in execution of the decree, the clerk proceeds to purchase the property of the judgment-debtor which has been put up for sale, without informing the decree-holder of his intention to bid, his conduct amounts to a gross abuse of confidence and fraud on the decree-holder, and the Court has inherent power in such a case to refuse to confirm the sale. O ALI ABBAS v. NARAIN DASS, 2 O. W. N. 297; 12 O. L. J. 321; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 381 997

——— s. 47, Sch. II, paras. 1, 15, 16—Dispute, what amounts to—Execution of decree—Reference to arbitration, validity of—Award whether can be enforced—Appeal, whether lies—Jurisdiction, whether can be conferred by consent.

Any question on which the parties join issue, whether or not the Court can legally enquire into it, is a dispute within the meaning of para. 1 of Sch. II to the C. P. C.

The Second Schedule to the C. P. C. does not apply to execution proceedings and, therefore, a reference to arbitration made by an Executing Court is without jurisdiction and an award made thereon is illegal and unenforceable.

Paragraphs 15 and 16 of the Second Sch. to the C. P. C. depend for their operation on a valid reference under para. 1 of the Schedule. Where, therefore, a reference is made to arbitration by an Executing Court and an award is passed thereon, the entire proceedings must be regarded as without jurisdiction and must be totally ignored and the only question which is left for consideration, namely, whether the award should or should not be enforced is one relating to the satisfaction and discharge of the decree under s. 47 of the C. P. C., and on this question an appeal and second appeal are competent.

Parties cannot by consent confer jurisdiction where it does not exist. C WANG v. SONA WANGDI, 52 C. 559; 29 C. W. N. 886; 42 C. L. J. 26; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 812 633

——— s. 48, whether retrospective—Mortgage-suit—Instalment decree—Default—Limitation, commencement of.

Section 48 of the C. P. C. is retrospective and governs an application for the execution of a mortgage-decree passed before that Code came into force. Therefore, such an application if presented 12 years after the date of the decree is barred.

In a mortgage-suit redemption was allowed on payment of Rs. 2,000 by annual instalments of Rs. 50 and it was directed that if there was a default in payment of an instalment, the plaintiff was entitled to take out execution for the whole amount. The decree was passed in 1899. There was default in conforming to the terms of the decree in 1901. Various attempts were made to recover the decretal amount by execution and the last application was made in 1922:

Held, (1) that on the occurrence of the first default in 1901 the decree-holder obtained the right to execute his decree for the whole amount and that time began to run against the decree-holder from the date of the default;

(2) that, therefore, the execution application was barred under the provisions of s. 48 of the C. P. C. B GULABRAO YESHVANT HARPHALE v. MAGAN GHELLABAI GUJRATHI, 27 Bom. L. R. 461; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 326 769

——— s. 60 (c)—Agriculturist, who is—Person subsisting on agriculture—Person who has ceased to cultivate land, whether agriculturist.

If a case comes within the language of s. 60 (c) of the C. P. C. the exemption therein mentioned must be granted.

Where it appears that the only means of livelihood of a judgment-debtor is agriculture and that he has no other means of livelihood and he occupies the house which is sought to be attached by the decree-holder, the case comes within the purview of s. 60 (c) of the C. P. C. and the house is exempt from attachment.

Per Mukerji, J.—Although a person has lost his agricultural land he does not cease to be an agriculturist if he continues to cultivate soil for remuneration.

Per Daniels, J.—Where it is proved that a judgment-debtor has no cultivation at all, his house would not be the house of an agriculturist within the meaning of s. 60 (c) of the C. P. C., merely because he had a fixed rate holding up to a few years of the date when the objection in execution was taken. A BHUTA v. BISHESHAR SINGH, L. R. 6 A 217 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 432 564

——— s. 60 (n)—Execution of decree—Maintenance, right of, whether liable to attachment and sale—Procedure—Receiver, appointment of.

A right of maintenance is not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree by virtue of the provision contained in cl. (n) of s. 60 of the C. P. C.

The proper remedy of a decree-holder, however, lies, in a fitting case, in the appointment of a Receiver for realising the rents and profits of the property, paying out of the same a sufficient and adequate sum for the maintenance of the judgment-debtor and his family, and applying the balance, if any, to the liquidation of the judgment-creditor's debt. P C RAJINDRA NARAIN SINGH v. SUNDER BIBI, 41 C. L. J. 383; 3 Pat. L. R. 142; 27 Bom. L. R. 849; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 176; 23 A. L. J. 634; 47 A. 385; 49 M. L. J. 244; 22 L. W. 284; L. R. 6 A (P. C.) 138; (1925) M. W. N. 630 (P. C.) 295 ——— ss. 63, 73—Assets, when can be regarded as realized—Rateable distribution—Decrees of inferior Courts stayed by superior Court—Decree-holders in inferior Courts, whether entitled to rateable distribution—Procedure—Practice, uniformity in, desirability of.

Where a sale of property belonging to the judgment-debtor is held in execution of a decree, the mere deposit of the earnest money cannot be said to be assets realized by the sale, within the meaning of s. 73 of the C. P. C., until the balance of the purchase-money is deposited and the sale becomes a concluded transaction. Where, however, separate properties belonging to the judgment-debtor are sold separately and their sale-proceeds are realized separately, the sale of each lot must be regarded as having been completed when the whole of the balance of the purchase-money in respect of that lot is deposited in Court.

The duty of a superior Court under s. 63 of the C. P. C. is to consider and determine the rights of the attaching creditors in all the cases to which that section applies, whether they have applied to the superior Court or not. There is nothing in that section which requires that before an attaching creditor can have his claim to rateable distribution determined he must obtain a transfer of the decree to the superior Court and apply to that Court for execution. The holders of decrees of inferior Courts, therefore, whose execution has been stopped by a superior Court under s. 63, are entitled to rateable distribution under that section read with s. 73 without any further application.

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

In matters of practice uniformity is of great practical importance and when a practice has been established it should not be departed from even if there may be some doubt as to its strict soundness. C GIRINDRA NATH RAY v. KEDAR NATH BIDYANTA, 29 C. W. N. 575 783

——— s. 73—Execution of decree—Realisation of assets—Subsequent application for rateable distribution, maintainability of.

Under s. 73 of the C. P. C. every person who has applied, previous to the realisation of assets, to the Court for execution of the decree obtained by him is entitled to rateable distribution. The section is not rendered inapplicable merely because the application for rateable distribution is presented subsequent to the realisation of assets. M KARPAGA NIDHI LTD. v. VANIA VILASA NIDHI LTD., (1925) M. W. N. 173; 48 M. L. J. 459; 21 L. W. 518; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 587 390

——— s. 73, O. XXI, rr. 11, 30—Rateable distribution, when can be ordered—Application for rateable distribution—Application for execution, absence of, effect of—"Otherwise as the nature of the relief granted may require", scope of.

Before a person is entitled to rateable distribution under s. 73 of the C. P. C., a formal and regular application for execution must be made. Rateable distribution cannot be ordered where there is only a prayer for rateable distribution of the assets, but there is no regular application for execution.

Under O. XXI, r. 11, sub-r. (2), cl. (j) of the C. P. C., an application for execution must specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, the modes of execution of a money-decree being given in r. 30 of the Order. Rateable distribution is not one of the modes of execution of a money-decree, and an application which merely contains a prayer for rateable distribution cannot, therefore, be treated as an application for execution.

The words "otherwise as the nature of the relief granted may require" in cls. (j) (v) of r. 11 (2) of O. XXI of the C. P. C. refer to the nature of the relief granted by the decree and have no reference to the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required. N ALI MAHAMMAD v. MAHAMMAD NOOR 1025

——— s. 91—Nuisance—Encroachment on public street—Private person, suit by, whether maintainable—Special damage, proof of.

Plaintiff brought a suit for a declaration that certain land was street land and for an injunction directing the defendant to remove an otla made by him on the land:

Held, that the plaintiff could not sustain the suit in the absence of evidence to show that as a consequence of the encroachment he was unable to use the road, nor could he seek the assistance of the Court to get the otla removed, merely because he wanted to walk over that portion of the street occupied by the otla unless he proved special damage. B MANILAL JIBHAI v. ISHWARBHAI SAMALBHAI, 27 Bom. L. R. 421; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 367 934 ——— ss. 92, 115—Trust—Scheme suit—Trustee, whether can be plaintiff—Revision—Interference in pending suit.

——— s. 92. See COURT FEES ACT, 1870, SCH. II, ART. 17 vi 25

A trustee is a person interested in the trust within the meaning of s. 92 of the C. P. C., and there is nothing in the section to prevent his being one of the plaintiffs in a suit brought under the section, or even to prevent both the plaintiffs being trustees. The real plaintiff in such a suit, by whomsoever it may be represented, is the trust, and the representation may be either by the interested public or by a trustee and so long as the plaintiffs, whether trustees or not, are vindicating a public and not an individual right, the suit is maintainable.

Interference with findings in a suit not yet disposed of is not a matter which the High Court will view with favour and it will require very strong proof of want of jurisdiction or irregular exercise of jurisdiction to warrant interference. Where, however, it appears that a suit is not maintainable at all, it might in some cases be advisable for the High Court to interfere in revision and thus to prevent further waste of time and money, the ground of interference being that a Court has no jurisdiction to proceed with a suit which is not maintainable in law. M BALKRIEHNA ODAYAR v. JAGANNADA CHARIAR, 48 M. L. J. 531; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 820 194

——— s. 95, O. XXXVIII, r. 5—Attachment before judgment, order for—Attachment not actually levied—Damages, suit for, whether maintainable.

Section 95 of the C. P. C. which provides for compensation in the case of wrongful attachment of the goods of a party is applicable only where the attachment is in fact effected, and does not apply to a case where the attachment is applied for but is not in fact levied. Where the aggrieved party claims a larger compensation than Rs. 1,000 the remedy by way of a suit is allowed, but that does not make the basis of the suit in any way different from the basis on which compensation is allowed in the suit itself where the process has been wrongly put into effect, except that in a suit something more is required than under s. 95, that is to say, that under s. 95 it is sufficient to prove that the attachment was applied for on insufficient grounds while in a suit the plaintiff has to show not merely that it was applied for on insufficient grounds but that it was so done maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause. In both cases it must be proved that the attachment was actually levied.

It is an essential part of the cause of action in a suit to recover damages for wrongful attachment that the plaintiff must show that the order under which the process was enforced to his detriment was set aside in the original suit.

Where an attachment before judgment is ordered but the actual levy of the attachment is avoided by payment of the amount required as security for the decree, the person against whom the order for attachment was made can have no cause of action for a suit to recover damages for wrongful attachment. B KEDARNATH TULSHIDAS v. BIHARILAL JAGAMAL, 27 Bom. L. R. 525; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 357 1026

——— s. 96, O. IX, rr. 7, 13—Ex parte proceedings—Remedy—Appeal from final decree—Objection to ex parte proceedings, whether can be taken.

A party against whom proceedings are taken ex parte and who has failed to avail himself of the remedy given by r. 7 or r. 13 of O. IX of the C. P. C. is not entitled, on an appeal from the decree passed against him under s. 96 of the C. P. C., to urge that the Trial Court was wrong in proceeding to hear the suit ex parte against him. The remedy provided by rr. 7 and 13 of O. IX and that provided by s. 96 of the C. P. C. are not cumulative.

Where an application to set aside an ex parte trial is dismissed under r. 7 of O. IX of the C. P. C., the aggrieved party is not bound to take proceedings under r. 13 of O. IX inasmuch as such a course would be futile. The order refusing to set aside the ex parte proceedings, however, may, in such a case, be challenged in an appeal filed against the decree under s. 96 of the C. P. C. O MAZHAR HUSAIN v. RAFIQ HUSSAIN, 10 O. & A. L. R. 1142; 1 O. W. N. 835; 28 O. C. 85. 222

——— s. 99, O. I, rr. 1, 9, O. II, r. 3—Suit by several plaintiffs against same defendant on one cause of action—Suit really arising out of several causes of action—Misjoinder of causes of action—Procedure.

Plaintiffs, five in number, sued to recover a certain sum from the defendant as the balance alleged to be due from the defendant on account of a certain contract for the sale of cotton jointly entered into by the plaintiffs with the defendant. It transpired during the trial of the suit that there was not one contract for the sale of cotton by all the plaintiffs but that each plaintiff had contracted to supply a certain quantity to the defendant:

Held, (1) that the plaintiffs having based their claim against the defendant on a single contract, their suit was liable to be dismissed when it was discovered that the cause of action alleged by them did not exist and that there were five separate contracts entered into by the plaintiffs with the defendant;

(2) that the case was not one of a misjoinder of parties or of a misjoinder of causes of action and that any one of the plaintiffs could not be allowed to change the suit which was brought in the name of all into a suit brought by one of them. B CHANDULAL SUKLAL SHET v. DAGDU MAHADU CHAUDHARI, 27 Bom. L. R. 472; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 342 435

——— s. 102. See BUNDELKHAND ALIENATION OF LAND ACT, 1903, ss. 2, 16 262

——— s. 102—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 23—Suit to recover balance of consideration for sale of crops, nature of—Small Cause Court, jurisdiction of—Appeal, second, whether lies—Question of title raised by defendant, effect of.

The question whether a suit is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes or not must depend on the nature of the suit and not on the nature of the defence set up.

Plaintiffs sued to recover the sum of Rs. 149 from the defendants on the allegation that they were the owners of certain groves and had sold the crop of the groves for a particular season to the defendants who had failed to pay the balance of the consideration for such sale:

Held, that the suit was based on an allegation of pure contract and was cognizable by a Court of Small Causes and that the value of the suit being below Rs. 500 a second appeal was not competent in the case.

When an intricate question of title to property arises in the course of a small cause suit the Court of Small Causes is authorized, by s. 23 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, to return the plaint for presentation to a regular Court, but the character of the suit is not changed merely because a question of title has been raised by the defendant and a suit of the nature of a small cause is not thereby exempted from the operation of s. 102 of the C. P. C. A SAMIR KHAN v. BASI RAM 659

——— s. 102—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 28—Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 43, 187—Suit by heir to recover share in intestate's property—Small Cause Court, jurisdiction of—Will, whether can be set up in defence—Succession—Husband's share in deceased wife's property.

Plaintiff, as the heir of his wife, brought a suit to recover a certain amount of money from the defendant. The defendant put forward a Will alleged to have been executed by the plaintiff's wife the effect of which was to defeat the plaintiff's claim to the property:

Held, that the suit fell within the purview of Art. 28 of Sch. II to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and was not, therefore, a suit of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court.

Section 187 of the Succession Act does not stand in the way of a defendant putting forward the existence of a Will in answer to a plaintiff's claim to a share in the intestate's property.

Under s. 43 of the Succession Act, a husband can only succeed to half of his wife's property in case the wife dies intestate leaving no lineal descendant. In the absence of the next-of-kin, however, the husband would be entitled to the whole of the property as his wife's heir. M GANTA DANIYELU v. GUNTI YESU RATNAM 354

——— s. 105, O. XXII, r. 9—"Affecting the decision of the case," meaning of—Order setting aside abatement, whether can be challenged in appeal from final decree.

The expression "affecting the decision of the case", in s. 105 of the C. P. C., means affecting the merits of the case.

Section 105 of the C. P. C. allows a party who is not entitled to appeal against an interlocutory order, to challenge that order when he is appealing against the decree in the case. But unless such interlocutory order affects the merits of the case it cannot be so challenged. An order setting aside an abatement is not an order which affects the merits of the case and cannot, therefore, be challenged in an appeal from the final decree passed in the suit. A BABU RAM v. BANKE BEHARI LAL, 23 A. L. J. 444; L. R. 6 A. 297 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 426; 47 A. 555 211

——— s. 107 (2), O. I, r. 9—Appeal—Non-joinder of necessary party, effect of—Limitation, period of, expiry of, effect of.

Order I, r. 9 of the C. P. C., read with s. 107 (2) of the Code, does not permit the non-joinder of any party being condoned by an Appellate Court, when such non-joinder makes it impossible for the Court to deal equitably and sufficiently with the matter in controversy between the parties to the appeal.

Where a decree was granted against several defendants and one of the defendants preferred an appeal against the decree so far as it affected him, and took up a position which, if accepted, would enhance the liability of the other defendants, but they were not made parties to the appeal:

Held, (1) that the plea urged by the appellant could not be entertained as it could not be disposed of in the absence of the other defendants whose liability would be enhanced as a consequence and who had had no opportunity of contesting the appeal;

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

(2) that the period of limitation for the appeal having expired, the Court could not permit the other defendants to be made parties to the appeal at a late stage. O PARMESHWAR DEEN v. CHHAB NATH 904

——— s. 115. See MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT, 1920 113

——— s. 115—Revenue Court, order of—Revision—High Court, power of.

The High Court has no power to interfere in revision under s. 115 of the C. P. C. or otherwise, with any order that has been passed originally, or in appeal, by a Revenue Court, or by a District Judge, in reference to questions decided under the provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act, even where a question is raised as to the jurisdiction of the District Judge to pass the order complained of. A MANOHAR v. MANGAL DAS, L R. 6 A. 124 Rev. 351 ——— ss. 115, 152—Amendment of decree, application for—Decree signed by Pleader of applicant, effect of—Refusal to consider application on merits—Revision.

A judgment-debtor made an application under s 152 of the C. P. C. for amendment of the decree passed against him, by excluding from the amount of the costs allowed to the opposite party, a certain sum which represented expenses incurred in summoning witnesses by the decree-holder, on the ground that none of the witnesses had appeared on behalf of the decree-holder. The Trial Court refused to consider the application on its merits for the reason that the decree as prepared had been signed by the judgment-debtor's Pleader. On revision:

Held, that the Trial Court in refusing to consider the application on its merits had failed to exercise the jurisdiction vested in it by law and that its order must be set aside and the case remanded to it for disposal according to law. O SHEO BALAK v. AMBIKA SAHAI, 12 O. L. J. 141; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 373 333

——— s. 115, O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of pleading—Power of Court—Interlocutory order—Revision.

The powers of amendment of pleadings conferred on the Courts are very wide and all amendments should be allowed as would enable the Court finally to determine all matters in controversy between the parties.

The High Court has power to interfere with interlocutory orders in a pending suit but it is only in extraordinary circumstances that such interference would be justifiable.

Where an application for amendment of a plaint, so as to include a claim which was omitted by inadvertance or ignorance is rejected by the Trial Court, the High Court would be justified in interfering in revision and directing that the amendment should be allowed in order to avoid trouble, expense and delay which would be occasioned if the amendment was not carried out immediately. M KARIYA GOUNDAN v. TIRUKKAIVELU CHETTY, 48 M. L. J. 349; 21 L. W. 639; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 585; (1925) M. W. N. 469 90

——— s. 115, O. VI, r. 17, O. XXIII, r. 1—Pleadings—Inadvertent omission — Amendment—Withdrawal of suit, leave for—Illegality—Revision.

Amongst other pleas in answer to a suit the defendant set up one of estoppel which was stated and elaborated in three paragraphs of the written statement. In his replication the plaintiff denied two of these paragraphs and in answer to the third paragraph by inadvertance omitted the word "not" before the word "admitted". The mistake was discovered when the trial was about to be concluded and the plaintiff made an application to amend the replication but the application was refused. The Court, however, granted the plaintiff leave to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. In revision:

Held, (1) that the order permitting the withdrawal of the suit was wholly illegal and must be set aside;

(2) that the only reasonable and just course to adopt in the circumstances of the case was to accept the plaintiff's application for amendment of his replication and to permit the amendment to be made. O BULAQI DAS v. JUGAL KISHORE 1055

——— s. 115, O. VI, r. 17, O. XLI, r. 23—Remand, when can be made—Amendment of pleadings—Power of Court.

A remand should be made when a preliminary point only is decided or where the Trial Court has not understood the case and a new trial is desired.

The discretion of the Court under O. VI of r. 17 of the C. P. C. to allow amendment of pleadings is very wide. O RAGHURAJ SINGH v. MAJID-UN-NISSA 950

——— s. 115, O. XIII, rr. 1, 2—Madras Civil Rules of Practice, r. 64—Petition to admit documents—Delay—Dismissal—Revision.

Rule 64 of the Madras Civil Rules of Practice requires that the Court should call upon the parties to produce the documents relied upon by them on or before a fixed date.

Where after the settlement of issues but at an early stage of the trial of a suit, the defendant applied to the Court to receive certain documents produced by him in evidence, and alleged in his affidavit in support of the petition that he was unable to find the documents earlier, and there was no counter-affidavit by the plaintiff, and the Judge summarily rejected the application on the ground that the "reasons given for non-production earlier could not be accepted:"

Held, that the order was improper and was liable to be set aside in revision by the High Court. M CHIDAMBARA CHETTIAR v. PARVATHI ACHI, (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 744 351

——— s. 115, O. XXI, r. 58—Execution of decree—Attachment—Objection, disposal of—Possession, question of, not gone into—Revision.

In a case under O. XXI, r. 58 of the C. P. C., the Court is bound to decide the question of possession, and if a case is disposed of without deciding such a question, the High Court ought to interfere under s. 115 of the C. P. C. to set the matter right. M APPASWAMY CHETTIAR v. BALAKRISHNA PILLAI, 21 L. W. 230; 48 M. L. J. 603; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 583; (1925) M. W. N. 590 189

——— s. 115, O. XXI, r. 90—Execution of decree—Sale of non-transferable occupancy holding—Purchaser of portion of holding, whether can apply to set aside sale—Collusion—Sale set aside—Revision.

A purchaser without the landlord's consent of a portion of a non-transferable occupancy holding has an interest in the holding sufficient to entitle him to apply after an execution sale of the holding, as a representative of the tenant, to have the sale of the holding set aside under O. XXI, r. 90 of the C. P. C. on the ground of fraud.

Where a Court finds that there was collusion between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder, and that there was a material irregularity in the sale proclamation, and that the value of the property as stated in the sale proclamation was grossly inadequate, and that the price fetched at the sale was also inadequate, it has jurisdiction to set aside the sale and its order cannot be questioned in revision. Pat SURAJ NARAIN MISSER v. HARDWAR SINGH, 6 P. L. T. 295; (1925) A. I. R (Pat.) 461 381

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— s. 115, O. XXII, r. 9, O. XLIII, r. 1 (k)—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 171—Abatement, order setting aside—Appeal, whether lies—Limitation, period of, failure to take into consideration—Revision.

No appeal lies from an order setting aside an abatement.

Where a Court in dealing with an application to set aside an abatement fails to take into consideration the period of limitation fixed by law for a party to apply to set aside an order of abatement, the order is bad and is liable to be set aside in revision. C HEM KANTA GHOSE v. MONOJ PROVA SINGHA 173

——— s. 115, O. XXXIII, r. 5—Application for leave to sue in forma pauperis—Cause of action—Allegations in plaint—Order granting leave—Revision.

Per Suhrawardy, J.—Where on the allegations contained in an application for leave to issue in forma pauperis the application discloses a cause of action, however weak it may be, the order of the Court granting leave to sue cannot be upset in revision on the ground that the application does not disclose a cause of action, under O. XXXIII, r. 5 of the C. P. C.

Per Cuming, J.—Where on an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis the Court comes to the conclusion that there is a cause of action, the High Court cannot interfere with the order in revision on the ground that no cause of action is disclosed. The Court has jurisdiction to decide rightly or wrongly and a wrong decision even though on a question of law can by no stretch of imagination be considered to be illegal exercise of jurisdiction or exercise of jurisdiction with material irregularity within the meaning of s. 115 of the C. P. C. C SOURENDRA NATH MITRA v. JATINDRA NATH GHOSE 737

——— s. 115, O. XLVII, rr. 1, 4, 7—Review—Appeal, grounds for—Revision.

An order granting an application for review may be objected to in appeal under O. XLVII, r. 7 of the C. P. C. only on the grounds that the application was (a) in contravention of the provisions of r. 2 of the Order; (b) in contravention of the provisions of r. 4 of the Order; and (c) was made after the expiration of the period of limitation.

Where there is a mistake apparent on the face of the record and an application for review is granted on the ground of such mistake and an appeal against the order granting review is dismissed, the order of the lower Appellate Court is not open to revision by the High Court. O RAM LAL v. RAM DHANI, 10 O. & A. L. R. 832; 11 O. L. J. 700; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 223; 1 O. W. N. 349 204

——— s. 115, Sch. II, para. 15—Appeal—Reference to arbitration—Misconduct of arbitrator—Objection, decision of—Revision, whether lies.

During the pendency of an appeal the parties agreed to refer their dispute to certain arbitrators. The arbitrators made an award but the award was attacked on the ground that the arbitrators had made secret enquiries and the Court before whom the appeal was pending gave effect to the objection and entertained and decided the appeal without reference to the arbitration;

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

Held, that the question of the misconduct of the arbitrators having arisen for decision by the Appellate Court and the Court having jurisdiction to decide it, it could not be said that the Court had acted without jurisdiction or had acted illegally or with material irregularity in deciding the question and that, therefore, its order was not open to revision. A RAM LAL SINGH v. BEHARI SINGH, (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 761; L. R. 5 A. 367 Civ. 371

——— s. 115, Sch. II, para. 16—Award, decree on—Revision, whether lies—Interference by High Court—Discretion of Court.

It cannot be laid down that an application under s. 115 of the C. P. C. can under no circumstances be entertained against a decree passed in terms of an award. If the action of the lower Court can be brought within the purview of s. 115, an application for revision would be competent.

There is no obligation on the High Court to interfere with an application made under s. 115 of the C. P. C., even if facts are proved which bring the application within the section. It is purely a matter of discretion and no rules can be laid down as to how such discretion is to be exercised. Whether the Court will interfere or not is entirely for the Court which hears the application to decide on the particular circumstances of the case before it. B BHIKHALAL GIRDHARLAL v. ACHARATLAL LALLUBHAI, 27 Bom. L. R. 423; (1925) A I. R (B.) 341; 49 B. 535 910

——— s. 129, O. XLI, r. 10—Madras High Court Original Side Rules, rule 354—Original Side appeal—Security for costs.

The effect of s. 129 of the C. P. C. is that if the Rules of the High Court on the Original Side and the rules contained in the Code are inconsistent, the Rules of the High Court prevail.

Order XL, r. 10 of the C. P. C. may be read along with r. 354 of the Rules of the Madras High Court, Original Side. The effect of the two rules is that the manner of applying on the Original Side must be by notice of motion and to that extent the Original Side Rules modify the provisions in the Code. As to what the Court should do on such application, the Original Side Rules are silent.

The proviso to O. XLI, r. 10 of the C. P. C. applies to Original Side appeals. M VIRUPAKSHA RAO NAIDU v. RANGANAYAKI AMMAL, 21 L. W. 662 346

——— s. 144—Payment into Court—Decree set aside—Restitution—Interest, whether can be claimed.

In a suit for specific performance of a contract of sale plaintiff having got a decree for the return of the earnest-money and damages for breach of contract proceeded to appeal on the ground that he was entitled to specific performance of the contract. Pending the appeal the defendant paid into Court the amount which had been awarded to the plaintiff. The plaintiff was successful in appeal and defendant applied for return of the money paid by him into Court and also claimed interest on it:

Held, that the plaintiff having retained the benefit of the payment into Court made by the defendant during the whole time when his appeal was pending and having failed to give notice to the defendant to take his money out, could not be allowed to say that he had derived no benefit from the payment and that consequently he was liable to pay interest on the deposit. B HIRABHAI DAHYABHAI v. MANEKLAL RANCHHOD, 27 Bom. L. R. 485; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 313 713

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— s. 146, O. XXII, rr. 3, 10—Death of plaintiff—Legal representative not brought on record—Assignee from legal representative, whether entitled to continue suit.

Rule 10 of O. XXII of the C. P. C. contemplates cases of devolution of interest from some original party to the suit, whether plaintiff or defendant, upon some one else, and applies only to cases not covered by r. 3 of the Order.

Where on the death of a plaintiff his legal representative does not bring himself on the record within the time prescribed by law, an assignee from such representative is not entitled to make an application under O. XXII, r. 10, of the C. P. C., to be allowed to continue the suit. Section 146 of the Code cannot be availed of in support of such an application inasmuch as the applicant is not claiming under any one who might himself have put in a valid application under r. 10 of O. XXII. M KALLIAM KUTTI AMMA v. KALLINGAL TARVAD KARUNAWAN 402

——— s. 148, O. IX, r. 9—Dismissal of suit for default—Application to set aside dismissal—Dismissal set aside subject to payment of costs within period fixed—Failure to pay costs within period—Extension of time—Power of Court.

Section 148 of the C. P. C. is applicable to proceedings antecedent to the passing of a decree.

Where an order requiring a party to do something within a certain period fails to mention the consequences resulting from the failure to obey the order, the Court has power under s. 148 of the C. P. C. to extend the period for compliance with the order.

Where an order dismissing a suit for default was set aside and the suit was restored on condition of the plaintiff paying a certain sum to the defendant within a certain period by way of costs, but the plaintiff failed to make the payment within the period mentioned :

Held, that the Court had power under s. 148 of the C. P. C. to extend the time mentioned in the order for the payment of costs. N BULAKICHAND v. AMIRALI, 21 N. L. R. 111 12

——— s. 151—Pre-emption decree—Mistake in stating amount payable by decree-holder—Payment of correct amount—Amendment of decree after date fixed for payment—Inherent power of Court.

Under s. 151 of the C. P. C. the Courts have very wide powers to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court.

By a clerical mistake the decretal amount entered in a decree for pre-emption was in excess of the amount which the Court had declared to be payable. The decree-holder paid the correct amount of the decree within the time specified in the decree and obtained possession of the property. After the expiry of the period fixed in the decree for payment the judgment-debtor filed an objection to the effect that the decree had not been complied with and prayed that possession should be restored to him. Thereupon the decree-holder made an application for amendment of the decree and the Court amended the decree and corrected the mistake as to the amount payable by the decree-holder :

Held, that the Court had power to make the correction under s. 151 of the C. P. C. and that the power had been properly exercised. O SURAJ BAKHSH SINGH v. BANS BAHADUR SINGH, 12 O. L. J. 216; 2 O. W. N. 218; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 418 987

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— s. 151, O. IX, r. 9—Execution of decree, application for—Dismissal in default—Restoration, grounds for—Duty of Court.

An application for execution of a decree was dismissed in default and the decree-holder put in an application for restoration under s. 151 of the C. P. C. Without issuing any notice to the judgment-debtor and without considering the merits of the case the Court granted the application and restored the application for execution. On revision :

Held, that the order of restoration could not be maintained and that the case must be remanded to the lower Court for a proper trial after issuing notice to the judgment-debtor.

Where a Court acts under s. 151 of the C. P. C., in restoring execution proceedings dismissed in default, it ought to state in what manner the ends of justice require the revival of the proceedings and at least as strong grounds should be required to justify an application under s. 151 as would be required on an application for review. O SITAPAT RAM v. MAHABIR PRASAD, 1 O. W. N. 747 438 ——— s. 151, O. XXXIV, r. 5—Mortgage suit—Preliminary decree—Application for final decree, dismissal of, for default, legality of—Inherent power of Court to rectify mistake.

A preliminary decree for sale on foot of a mortgage was passed in favour of the appellant and as the judgment-debtor failed to make the payment directed by the decree the appellant made an application to the Court to pass a final decree. Notice was issued to the judgment-debtor and when the case was ripe the appellant happened to be absent, and the Court passed an order dismissing the suit in default. The appellant thereupon made an application pointing out that as nothing further remained to be done by him, the Court should not have dismissed the suit in default but should have proceeded to pass a final decree. The judgment-debtor objected that this last application made by the appellant must be treated as a fresh application for the passing of a final decree and that as it was barred by time it should be dismissed :

Held, that the order passed by the Court dismissing the suit for default of the decree-holder owing to his absence was erroneous, and that the Court had inherent power to rectify its own mistake by setting aside that order and by proceeding to pass a final decree on the original application of the decree-holder which must be regarded as still pending. A JODHA SINGH v. PANDEY GOKARAN DAS, 23 A. L. J. 405; 47 A. 546 225

——— s. 151, O. XLI, r. 23, O. XLIII, r. 1 (u)—Remand, when can be made—Inherent power of Court—Appeal—Pleadings—Issues, framing of—Amendment of issues.

The right of appeal should not be curtailed except on very clear proof of circumstances justifying such curtailment.

Where an order of remand does not specify under what provision of law it is made, the Court should be slow to hold that the order is not made under the provisions of O. XLI, r. 23 of the C. P. C. The order will ordinarily be open to appeal under O. XLIII, r. 1 (u).

The powers of an Appellate Court to remand are not restricted to the case specified in O. XLI, r. 23 of the C. P. C. The Court may by reason of its inherent jurisdiction vested in it by s. 151 of the Code, make an order of remand in any case other than the case specified in O. XLI, r. 23 if it be necessary for the ends of justice to do so.

An issue may be framed not merely by reference to the pleadings but also by reference to other matters, and so long as any amendment that is made does not prejudice the parties, it cannot be said that the trial held upon the amended issue was not a proper trial. C UMSH NARAIN CHOWDHURY v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA 575 ——— O. I, r. 3—Parties—Joinder of defendant against wishes of plaintiff, whether permissible—Power of Court—Practice.

Ordinarily the plaintiff who comes into Court is the dominus litis and it must always be left to him to choose his opponent against whom he has to claim relief in the suit, and it is not the lookout of the Court or of any other third person, to see whether somebody else must be allowed to intrude into the case as a co-defendant, against the plaintiff's will, simply because he represents to the Court that he is a person who would be affected by the decision.

Nobody is bound or affected by a decision to which he is not properly made a party, and it is not the intention of the law to let third persons ventilate their own grievances in, and thus derive profit from, a suit commenced by another man at his own cost and for his own benefit. N VITHOBA v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA 988

——— O. I, r. 9. See HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY 180

——— O. II, r. 2—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 56 (1)—Contract for sale of land—Agreement to sell to third person—Injunction, suit for—Specific performance, subsequent suit for, whether maintainable.

The usual mode of proceeding in case of a breach of contract for the sale of land is to bring a suit for specific performance of the contract. The party aggrieved by the breach is not entitled to two reliefs in respect of the breach of such a contract, one by way of injunction restraining the defendant from selling the property to a third person and the other by way of specific performance. He is entitled only to one relief, namely, a suit for specific performance in which he can add a claim for compensation. The dismissal, therefore, of a suit for an injunction restraining the vendor from selling the property to a third person does not operate as a bar to the maintainability of a subsequent suit for specific performance. L LACHHA MAL v. HIRDE NATH, (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 459; 6 L. 384 994

——— O. VI, r. 11, scope of—Signature to plaint, object of—Omission to sign, whether can be amended.

The object of the signature to a plaint is to prevent as far as possible disputes as to whether a suit was instituted with the plaintiff's knowledge and authority or not. This authority may be established by other means besides the signature.

The provisions of O. VI, r. 11, C. P. C., relate to a mere matter of procedure and any mistake or omission in the signature may be amended at any time subsequent to the institution of the suit. S SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. DINSHAW NAVROJI 1002 ——— O. VI, r. 15—Plaint—Verification, absence of—Subsequent verification, effect of.

A plaint which does not contain the verification clause as required by r. 15 of O. VI of the C. P. C. is not void. The omission to verify the plaint is a mere irregularity which can be cured at a later stage, and a subsequent verification does not amount to an amendment of the plaint. A SHIB DEO MISRA v. RAM PRASAD, 22 A. L. J. 690; 46 A. 637; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 79 938

——— O. VI, r. 17. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 115 90

——— O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of plaint—Alternative case.

Where a plaintiff relies on a special custom, an amendment of the plaint setting up alternatively that he would be entitled to succeed even if the custom were not proved, should be allowed. O MOHAMMAD GHAFOOR v. MEHDI HASAN KHAN, 12 O. L. J. 253; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 523 356

——— O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of plaint at late stage—New cause of action, whether can be allowed to be introduced.

An amendment of a plaint should not be permitted at a late stage of a suit which would have the effect of introducing a new cause of action which has become time-barred. C MCLEOD & Co. v. IVAN JONES & Co. 218

——— O. VI, r. 17—Amendment of pleadings—New cause of action, whether can be put forward.

The most important rule relating to the amendment of a plaint is that a plaintiff cannot by amendment be allowed to substitute one plaint for another. However leniently the rules regarding the amendment of pleadings in this country should be construed to prevent a failure of justice, it would impede the administration of justice if this particular rule were not strictly observed.

Plaintiff sued as a principal on a contract alleged to have been made with him by the defendants for the import of certain goods on c. i. f. terms. During the course of the trial the plaintiff wanted to sue as the defendants' agent who had on the receipt of the shipping documents cleared and delivered the goods to the defendants:

Held, that the claim which the defendants wanted subsequently to put forward was based on an entirely new cause of action and that the plaintiff could not be allowed to put forward that claim in the suit as originally brought and that consequently the suit must be dismissed. B KOKAMAL MADHGRAM v. GULABSING GURUDATSING, 27 Bom. L. R. 277; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 248 481

——— O. VI, r. 17—Plaintiff suing as shebait of an idol—Omission to describe in the cause title—Amendment.

Where a suit is brought by a plaintiff to recover possession of certain properties belonging to an idol, as shebait of the idol, the omission to describe the plaintiff in the cause title of the suit as shebait of the idol is a misdescription which may be cured at any stage by amendment of the cause title without any hardship being caused to the defendant. C DYAMOYI v. SANKAR NATH MUKHOPADHAYA, 42 C. L. J. 30 159

——— O. VII, r. 10, O. XLI, r. 25, O. XLIII, r. 1 (a)—Order returning plaint for presentation to proper Court—Appeal—Remand order, legality of—Procedure.

The plaint in a suit was returned by the Subordinate Judge for presentation to the proper Court on the ground that the relief had been overvalued and that the suit was cognizable by a Munsif. An appeal was preferred against this order to the District Judge before whom it was admitted by both parties that the Trial Court's decision on the question of valuation was erroneous. The District Judge accepted the appeal and remanded certain issues to the Subordinate Judge for findings under O. XLI, r. 25 of the C. P. C.:

Held, (1) that the order of remand was entirely illegal as the appeal which was preferred to the District Judge was not an appeal from a decree but an appeal from an order;

(2) that the proper order for the District Judge to pass was an order setting aside the order of the Court below and directing the Subordinate Judge to re-admit the suit to its file and dispose of it on the merits. O KANDHAI LAL v. ANANTU, 12 O. L. J. 277: 2 O. W. N. 239; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 393 172

——— O. VII, r. 11, O. XLIII, r. 1 (a)—Order directing payment of deficit Court-fees, failure to comply with—Rejection of plaint—Appeal; valuation of—Appellate Court, duty of.

A plaint was rejected under O. VII, r. 11, of the C. P. C., owing to the failure of the plaintiff to pay the deficit Court-fees directed to be paid by the Court. The plaintiff appealed against the order and valued his appeal at the original valuation put by him upon his claim and questioned the finding of the Trial Court as to the valuation of the suit. The Appellate Court rejected the appeal on the ground that the memorandum of appeal was insufficiently stamped:

Held, that it was the duty of the Appellate Court to decide the question as to what the real value of the suit was, and what the Court-fees payable upon that finding should be, and that after deciding that question the Appellate Court should have given an opportunity to the plaintiff to pay the deficit Court-fees and then remanded the case to the First Court for trial on the merits after the payment of proper Court-fees by the plaintiff. C AMARTA LAL KUMAR v. SISIR KUMAR BASU 651

——— O. VIII, r. 6—Contribution, suit for—Defendant, also entitled to contribution—Set-off, whether can be allowed.

Plaintiff and defendant were joint owners of a zemindari. The zemindari was let out in patni and was brought to sale by the zemindars for arrears of patni rent and was purchased by a third party. The sale was subsequently set aside at the suit of the patnidars and the zemindars were held liable for the costs of the patnidars and the patnidars recovered these costs from the plaintiff The defendant was compelled to pay the costs of the auction-purchaser in the patnidar's suit. Plaintiff brought a suit against the defendant for contribution in respect of the costs which had been paid by the plaintiff:

Held, that the defendant was entitled to set-off against the plaintiff's claim the amount which he had paid to the auction-purchaser to the extent to which it represented the liability of the plaintiff in respect of the auction-purchaser's costs. C RADHIKAPRASAD DATTA v. PANCHANAN CHOUDHURY 788

——— O. IX, rr. 6, 13—Bona fide belief that case would not be taken up on date fixed for hearing—Adjournment, whether should be granted—Ex parte decree, application to set aside.

On the date fixed for the hearing of a suit the defendant's Counsel applied for an adjournment and on the adjournment being refused he stated that he had no instructions and the Court thereupon passed an ex parte decree against the defendant. It appeared that the defendant and his Counsel bona fide believed that owing to the pendency of a certain application the case would not be heard on the date to which it was posted. Defendant made an application to set aside the ex parte decree, but the application was rejected. On appeal:

Held, that under the circumstances of the case the adjournment prayed for by the defendant should have been granted and that, therefore, the ex parte decree must be set aside and the case remanded for trial to the lower Court. M BALAMANI AMMAL v. K. N. RAMA IYER, 48 M. L. J. 273; (1925) M. W. N. 163; 21 L. W. 528; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 786 57

——— O. IX, r. 8—Dismissal of suit for default—Bar of fresh suit—Test—Mortgage-suit—Misjoinder of plaintiffs, effect of.

Order IX, r. 8 of the C. P. C., prohibits the filing of a second suit on the same cause of action. Where, however, there is even a slight discrepancy arising out of a single fact among many other facts common to the two causes of action, that single fact alone makes them different causes of action.

The misjoinder of plaintiffs in a mortgage-suit, to some of whom the relief claimed cannot be granted is a mere defect of form which is not fatal to the suit. N UDARAM v. GONDU 35

——— O. IX, rr. 8, 9, O. XVII, rr. 2, 3—Adjourned date of hearing—Default of plaintiff—Procedure.

On the date fixed for the hearing of a suit the plaintiff's Pleader asked for an adjournment undertaking to produce his witnesses without summonses. The adjournment was granted but on the adjourned date of hearing the plaintiff was absent. The Court proceeded under O. XVII, r. 3 of the C. P. C., to decide the suit and rejected the plaintiff's claim:

Held, that the procedure adopted by the Trial Court was wrong and that it should have proceeded under O. XVII, r. 2 of the Code and that the plaintiff was entitled to be heard on the question of his non-appearance at the adjourned date of hearing by the Trial Court. B BASAYYA AYAPPA SARGHNACHAYAR v. ALLAYYA MAHARUDRAYYA, 27 Bom. L. R. 477; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 328 710

——— O. IX, r. 9. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 148 12

——— O. IX, r. 9—Dismissal for default—Restoration, application for—Sufficient cause—Duty of Court.

It is the business of the Courts to decide the rights of the parties and not to deprive them of their rights by the mere exercise of discipline, but to use their discipline for the purpose of visiting neglect upon them and removing the results of such neglect.

Where a suit was dismissed for default and on an application for restoration it appeared that the plaintiff had started with his witnesses in time to catch the last train which would bring him to the Court before the suit was called on, but had missed that train and was thus prevented from arriving in Court till after the suit had been dismissed:

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the suit restored as there was sufficient cause for his failure to appear at the time when the suit was called on for hearing. A ANRUDH SINGH v. RUPA KUNWAR, L. R. 6 A. 221 Civ. 118

——— O. XVI, r. 1—Application for summons made at late stage, refusal of—Duty of Court—Procedure.

The circumstance that an application for the issue of summonses on a party's witnesses is made at a late stage is no ground for refusing the application, though the Court may, when the case is heard, refuse to adjourn the hearing if the witnesses have not been served owing to the delay in making the application for summonses. Except in cases of manifest abuse of procedure, the Court has no discretion to refuse an application for summonses. C KANDRU HALDAR v. TARAPRASANNA ROY CHOWDHURI 355

——— O. XVI, r. 1—Summoning of witnesses—Application for summonses, whether can be refused on ground of delay.

Under O. XVI, r. 1 of the C. P. C., a party to a suit is entitled as of right to obtain summonses at any time before the date fixed for the disposal of the suit, and on an application being made for the issue of summonses the Court is bound to issue the summonses and cannot refuse to do so on the ground that the application is made at too late a stage in the suit and that it would not be possible to get the summonses served upon the witnesses in time. If owing to the delay in the making of the application the witnesses are not served and an adjournment is asked for at the hearing it would then be open to the Court to consider whether an adjournment should or should not be granted. B SAIBAI GOVIND LAVLEKAR v. BALKRISHNA PANDURANG BANE, 27 Bom. L. R. 471; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 368 702

——— O. XX, r. 12, O. XXII, r. 4—Decree for possession and mesne profits—Death of judgment-debtor—Substitution of legal representatives—Order declaring liability of legal representatives for mesne profits—Appeal, whether lies.

Respondent obtained a decree for possession of certain property which also directed that an account should be taken of the dealings of the judgment-debtor with the disputed property and of the rents and profits arising therefrom and that the judgment-debtor must pay to the decree-holder what may be found due to him on the taking of accounts. The judgment-debtor died and his legal representatives were substituted on the record in his place. The latter objected that they were not liable for mesne profits. The Court went into the matter and made an order declaring that they were liable to render accounts of the mesne profits which the deceased had appropriated and then proceeded to direct the method in which the accounts should be taken. On appeal:

Held, that the preliminary decree which directed the taking of accounts was not capable of execution and the question which had been actually determined by the lower Court was merely a question relating to the substitution of the names of the appellants in the place of the deceased judgment-debtor and their liability to render the accounts directed by the decree as such legal representatives, and that no question relating to the execution, satisfaction or discharge of the decree had been decided and that s. 47 of the C. P. C. had, therefore, no application to the case and the order of the lower Court was not appealable.

An order by which the Court determines the principle whereupon mesne profits are to be assessed and directs their ascertainment by a Commissioner is an interlocutory order in a pending suit and is not appealable as a decree.

The effect of the change introduced by O. XX, r. 12 of the C. P. C. is that the Court which hears the suit is the Court which is eventually to ascertain the mesne profits and pass a final decree for such profits and that till such final decree is passed there is no decree for mesne profits capable of execution.

A RUDRA PRATAP SINGH v. SARDA MAHESH PRASAD SINGH, 23 A. L. J. 458; L. R. 6 A. 359 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 588; 47 A. 543 322

——— O. XXI, r. 1—Compromise decree—Decree directing payment of money by certain date—Court closed on last date for payment—Payment on first date of re-opening, whether compliance with decree.

Where under the terms of a decree, money is to be paid by a party, O. XXI, r. 1 of the C. P. C. gives the party, who is liable to make the payment, the option of making the payment to the other party in person or of making a deposit in Court.

A party who is prevented from doing a thing not by any default of his own but by the Court itself, is entitled to do that thing at the earliest subsequent opportunity available to him.

Where under the terms of a decree a party is bound to make a payment to the other party and the last date fixed for the payment happens to be a date on which the Court is closed, the decree is sufficiently complied with if the money is deposited into Court on the first day on which the Court re-opens. M SANKARAN UNNI v. RAMAN, 21 L. W. 469; 48 M. L. J. 596; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 743; (1925) M. W. N. 566 560

——— O. XXI, r. 2—Execution of decree—Adjustment pleaded after expiry of period prescribed for certification—Court, whether can go into question of adjustment.

Where in execution of a decree an adjustment is pleaded after the expiry of the period of limitation prescribed for the certification of the adjustment, the Executing Court cannot go into the question whether there has or has not been any adjustment. L MULCHAND v. CHAMPA 635

——— O. XXI, r. 15—Execution of decree—Attachment—Claim petition, whether can be heard after sale.

An application for the release of certain property from attachment cannot be heard after the property has been sold. C KALI CHARAN GHOSE v. SARAJINI DEBI 168

——— O. XXI, r. 16—Execution of decree—Assignment of decree—Notice to judgment-debtor—Order declaring that execution can proceed—Objection, subsequent, that decree cannot be executed—Res judicata.

Under O. XXI, r. 16 of the C. P. C., when the assignee of a decree applies for execution of the decree a notice has to be issued to the judgment-debtor to show cause why the execution should not be granted. The Court is directed not to execute the decree till the objection of the judgment-debtor has been heard. If the judgment-debtor has any objection as to why the execution should not be granted, for instance, on the ground that the decree is a nullity, the objection must be put forward at the time when the notice is served upon him. Once the Court holds that the execution can proceed, the matter becomes res judicata and the judgment-debtor cannot at a subsequent stage object that the decree is not executable. A RAM CHARAN SAHU v. SALIK RAM SAHU, L. R. 6 A. 295 Civ. 436

——— O. XXI, r. 22—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182 (6)—Execution of decree—Notice to judgment-debtor, when to be issued—Limitation, extension of.

In every case where an application for execution of a decree is made more than a year after the date of the decree or more than a year after the date of the last order made against the judgment-debtor in any previous execution, a fresh notice must be issued under O. XXI, r. 22 of the C. P. C. An order directing the issue of such a notice falls within the purview of cl. (6) of Art. 182 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act and operates to extend limitation for execution and the order is not bad merely on the ground that the application in respect of which it is issued was not made in accordance with law. Pat ADAYA PRASAD SINGH v. RAM NARAYAN DAS, (1925) Pat. 121; 6 P. L. T. 290; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 474 531

Civil Procedure Code—1908—contd.

——— O. XXI, rr. 22, 23. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, SCH. I, ART. 183 61

——— O. XXI, r. 50 (2), O. XXX, scope of—Suit against firm, nature of—Deceased partner, whether party—Legal representatives, whether can be proceeded against.

Order XXI, r. 50 (2), C. P. C., is limited in its operation to the case of a partner, who is living at the date of the decree and the estate of a deceased partner in the hands of his legal representatives, as such, cannot be proceeded against under this rule.

Order XXX of the C. P. C. is not intended to recognize a firm as a legal entity but to provide, subject to certain limitations, a convenient mode of describing the partners who compose the firm in the plaint and in the summons.

A suit against a firm is in effect a suit against the individual partners of the firm and a dead partner cannot be assumed to be a party to the action. S GOKALDAS KHATAOO v. VASSUMAL WADHUMAL 992

——— O. XXI, r. 52—Insolvency—Dividend payable to creditor of insolvent, whether can be attached by person holding decree against creditor.

Moneys in the hands of an Official Assignee which are payable to a judgment-debtor who is a creditor of the insolvent by way of dividend declared by the Official Assignee, are attachable under O. XXI, r. 52, of the C. P. C. B HARDAYAL SHIVLAL v. ADAM GOOLMAHOMED, 27 Bom. L. R. 545; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 344 1011

——— O. XXI, rr. 57, 58, 63—Execution of decree—Attachment—Claim petition, dismissal of—Subsequent dismissal of execution petition, effect of—Claimant, whether bound to sue under r. 63.

An order on a claim petition is final against the claimant only in so far as the rights worked out in pursuance of the particular attachment are concerned.

A claim petition against an attachment of certain properties was disallowed, and subsequently the execution petition itself was dismissed as the decree-holder was unwilling to proceed with it:

Held, (1) that the original attachment ceased to exist under O. XXI, r. 57 of the C. P. C.;

(2) that the claimant was not bound to set aside the order on the original claim petition. M KUMARA GOUNDAN v THEVARAYA REDDI, 48 M. L. J. 616; (1925) M. W. N. 406 635

——— O. XXI, r. 60, O. XXXVIII, r. 9. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, SCH. I, ART. 11 756

——— O. XXI, r. 66—Bombay High Court Civil Circular No. 69 (6), (7)—Hindu Law—Joint family—Decree against father as manager of family—Execution of decree—Sale of family property—Interest of sons, whether passes to purchaser.

A decree was passed against a Hindu father carrying on business in the name of the family as manager, and certain family property was sold in execution of the decree. In a suit by the sons of the judgment-debtor for a declaration that their interest in the property had not passed to the auction-purchaser:

Held, that the decree having been passed against the father as manager of the family the whole of the family property was liable for the family debt and that the whole interest of the family had passed to the purchaser. B AMOLAKCHAND LADURAM v. MOTILAL AGIARIRAM, 27 Bom. L. R. 437 953

——— O. XXI, r. 71—Execution of decree—Sale—Failure to pay purchase money—Re-sale—Liability to make up deficiency in price—Proclamation of sale—Omission to mention time and place of sale—Date of sale not specified in proper place—Irregularity—Illegality.

There is no general rule for distinguishing between an illegality and an irregularity in a Court sale. The decision in every case must rest on the special facts of the case.

Where an auction-sale is held in the Court premises and within the usual office hours, the mere omission to mention the time and the place of the sale in the sale proclamation does not amount to an illegality, in absence of proof that such omission caused a low price to be fetched.

The omission to mention the date of sale in the sale proclamation in its proper place is an irregularity, but in the absence of evidence to show that any possible bidder was kept away owing to his not knowing the exact date of the sale as a result of the date not being entered in its proper place, the sale is not vitiated.

The provision contained in O. XXI, r. 71 of the C. P. C. is a salutary one intended to minimise the hardship resulting from the purchaser's default and there is no reason why the Court should refuse to give effect to it, unless the defaulting purchaser would be substantially prejudiced. M SANKARA NARAYANA PILLAI v. GANGAMMAL, 21 L. W. 232; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 631 1

——— O. XXI, r. 89—Execution of decree—Sale—Deposit of decretal amount—Application to set aside sale, absence of, effect of.

An application either in writing or oral for setting aside the auction sale is necessary before the Court can be called upon to act and set aside the sale under the provisions of O. XXI, r. 89 of the C. P. C. The mere deposit of the required amount unaccompanied by an application is not sufficient to enable the Court to set aside the sale. M PECHIAYEE v. VALLAMUTHU VELAN, (1925) M. W. N. 175; 48 M. L. J. 405; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 639 437

——— O. XXI, r. 89—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5, Sch. I, Art. 166—Execution of decree—Sale—Deposit—Application to set aside sale, absence of; effect of—Limitation—Extension of time.

An application either written or oral is necessary for the setting aside of a sale under O. XXI, r. 89 of the C. P. C. and such an application must be made within the period of 30 days laid down by Art. 166 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. Where no application to set aside the sale is made, the deposit of the necessary amount required under O. XXI, r. 89, even if rightly made in the Civil Court, will be of no avail.

Semble:—The provisions of s. 5 of the Limitation Act do not apply to an application under O. XXI, r. 89 of the C. P. C. O RAM AUTAR v. SHEO PIAREY LAL PANDEY, 12 O. L. J. 137; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 411 722

——— O. XXI, r. 89—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 72—Execution of decree—Sale of mortgaged property—Mortgagee, whether entitled to apply to set aside sale on deposit—Deposit, amount of, whether can be added to mortgage-money.

The question whether a person holds an interest in property sold in execution of a decree by virtue of a title acquired before such sale, within the meaning of r. 89 of O. XXI, of the C. P. C., is not one of pure law but must always be decided with reference to the particular circumstances of each case.

Where a mortgaged property is sold in execution of a decree against the mortgagor with merely a note at the foot of the proclamation that the property is incumbered with a charge up to a certain amount, the mortgagee is a person holding an interest in the property by virtue of a title acquired before the sale within the meaning of r. 89 of O. XXI of the C. P. C., and is entitled to make an application under that rule to set aside the sale, and by virtue of s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act is entitled to add the amount of the deposit to his mortgage-money with interest at the rate payable on the principal amount of the mortgage. O JAGANNATH SINGH v. JAG JIWAN DAS, 12 O. L. J. 289; 28 O. C. 221; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 429 829

——— O. XXI, r. 90—Execution of decree—Sale, application to set aside—Person who has sold his interest, whether can apply.

A person whose interests are affected by an execution sale at the time of the sale is entitled to make an application under O. XXI, r. 90 of the C. P. C. to set aside the sale. It is not necessary to show that the interest of the applicant was affected by the sale at the time of the application. A person who has, since the date of the sale, parted with his interest in the property sold is, therefore, entitled to maintain such an application. C SHUNDI BIBI v. MOBARAK ALI 94

——— O. XXI, r. 90—Execution of decree—Sale—Auction-purchaser, whether entitled to apply to set aside sale—Substantial loss, meaning of—Misrepresentation as to quality of property, effect of.

The expression, "a person whose interests are affected by the sale" in r. 90 of O. XXI of the C. P. C., is wide enough to include the auction-purchaser. An auction-purchaser is, therefore, entitled to make an application under this rule to set aside the sale and is consequently debarred from bringing a separate suit for that purpose.

Where an auction-purchaser makes an application under O. XXI, r. 90 of the C. P. C., to set aside the auction-sale, the principle of caveat empter does not apply where it is shown that there has been a misdescription or a concealment amounting to a substantial misrepresentation affecting the quality and value of the property.

The expression "substantial loss" in r. 90, O. XXI of the C. P. C., is not confined to pecuniary loss.

An auction-purchaser at a Court auction is entitled to make his own choice, and he is entitled to know what it is for which he is asked to pay, and when he discovers that he is burdened with some charge of which he was ignorant, he is entitled to say "the amount of this charge is not in itself a matter of great consequence to me, it is its existence which stamps the property with a character I do not like, and I should not have purchased, or, at any rate, I was not prepared to pay a substantial price for the property if it was charged in any way."

A decree-holder who even honestly misdescribes the subject-matter of the sale by misrepresentation, such as the description "free from encumbrances," when there is an encumbrance, cannot be heard in a Court of Law to complain that the purchaser should have known what he was buying. A RAVI NANDAN PRASAD v. JAGAR NATH SAHU, 23 A. L. J. 233; L. R. 6 A. 229 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 459; 47 A. 479 278

——— O. XXI, r. 90, O. XLIII, r. 1 (j). See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, s. 18, SCH. I, ART. 166 555

——— O. XXII, r. 3, O. XLI, r. 4—Appeal—Death of one appellant before hearing—Appeal allowed—Application by legal representatives of deceased appellant to be brought on record, whether can be allowed.

An appeal was filed by two appellants who were members of a joint Hindu family. A few days before the hearing of the appeal one of the appellants died and the appeal was heard and allowed in ignorance of his death. Subsequently the legal representatives of the deceased appellant made an application that the cause title of the decree may be amended and that they may be brought on the record in place of the deceased appellant:

Held, that having regard to the provisions of r. 4 of O. XLI of the C. P. C. the decree passed in appeal in favour of the surviving appellant must enure for the benefit of all the members of the appellant's family and that as the remaining members wished to be formally brought on the record as legal representatives of the deceased appellant, the application should be allowed. M GUNTUKU APPANNA v. JELLEPALLI GAVARAPPADU, 48 M. L. J. 601; 22 L. W. 142 748

——— O. XXII, r. 4, O. XXXIV, rr. 2, 3—Foreclosure suit—Preliminary decree—Death of judgment-debtor—Substitution of representative of judgment-debtor—Final decree—Co-representative of judgment-debtor, whether entitled to redeem.

Where in a foreclosure suit the judgment-debtor dies between the passing of the preliminary decree and before the final decree and the decree-holder honestly substitutes in his place the person whom he believes to be his sole representative and that person accepts the position and a final decree for foreclosure is passed, any other person who has a right to be a co-representative of the judgment-debtor's estate and has, as such, a right to redeem the property, cannot enforce such right after the passing of the final decree. A DIP NARAIN RAI v LACHHMAN UPADHIYA, 23 A. L. J. 332; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 479; 47 A. 466 799

——— O. XXII, rr. 4, 9—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5, Sch. I, Arts. 171, 177—Appeal—Death of respondent—Application for substitution made after expiry of limitation—Order permitting substitution, effect of.

One of several respondents died during the pendency of a suit and an application was made after the expiry of the period of limitation for substitution of his legal representatives on the record. The application was allowed ex parte and the substitution was made. On the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal the Judge, in ignorance of the order for substitution, decided that the appeal had abated. On second appeal:

Held, that an order having actually been passed permitting substitution and the substitution having been made and the order not having been objected to at the hearing by the other respondents, it must be held that time had been extended and that the legal representatives of the deceased respondent had properly been brought upon the record. L CHARAN SIGH v. RAMDAYAL 632

——— O. XXII, rr. 4, 10—Accounts, suit for—Preliminary decree—Death of defendant—Abatement.

The provisions of O. XXII, r. 4 of the C. P. C., are applicable as well before as after a preliminary decree in a suit for accounts. Therefore, where after a preliminary decree in a suit for accounts, one of the defendants dies and no application is made to bring his legal representatives on the record under O. XXII, r. 4, the suit abates. C MANUJENDRA DUTT CHOWDHURY v. JNAN RANJAN SOMADDAR 818

——— O. XXII, r. 8, O. XXXIII, r. 5—Application for leave to sue as pauper—Insolvency of petitioner, effect of—Procedure—Cause of action, meaning of.

The grounds on which an application for leave to sue as a pauper can be rejected are stated in O. XXXIII, r. 5 of the C. P. C., and the subsequent insolvency of the petitioner is not one of such grounds. Where it appears that after making an application for leave to sue as a pauper the petitioner has become insolvent, the proper procedure is for the Court to enquire whether the petitioner is or is not a pauper and if he is and his allegations show a cause of action, leave should be granted. When the leave is granted the application would be numbered as a suit, and the provisions of O. XXII, r. 8 of the C. P. C. can then be applied and the Official Receiver can make himself a party to the suit.

Clause (d) of r. 5 of O. XXXIII of the C. P. C. only requires that the allegations contained in a petition for leave to sue as a pauper must show a cause of action, the clause has no reference to subsequent events, for instance the insolvency of the petitioner. M CHIDAMBARAM CHETTIAR v. KOTHER MYTHEEN ROWTHER, 48 M. L. J. 491; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 791 720

——— O. XXIII, r. 1—Application for leave to withdraw suit—Formal defect, absence of—Order granting leave—Revision.

Where, on an application for leave to withdraw a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, which merely alleges that there is a formal defect in the plaint but does not specify what the defect is, the Court, without applying its mind to the question at all and without considering what the alleged formal defect is, grants leave for the withdrawal of the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, it acts with material irregularity and its order is liable to be set aside in revision. A GANGA PRASAD v. KISHNI, L. R. 6 A. 155 Civ.; 47 A. 319; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 466 175

——— O. XXIII, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit with liberty to bring fresh suit—Order directing payment of costs, non-compliance with, effect of—Fresh suit, dismissal of, as non-maintainable—Third suit, whether maintainable.

Where a plaintiff is allowed to withdraw a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit on condition that before instituting a fresh suit he pays the costs of the defendant, and he institutes a fresh suit without complying with the condition and that suit is dismissed as non-maintainable, he has no further right to bring a suit after payment of costs to the defendant, for the permission granted in the first suit would only extend to the filing of one fresh suit and not to the filing of any number of fresh suits which might be dismissed each in its turn without any trial on the actual merits of the case between the parties, for failure of the plaintiff to pay the costs of the first suit. B AMBUBAI HANMANTRAO v. SHANKARSA NAGOSA, 27 Bom. L. R. 243; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 272 807

——— O. XXIII, r. 3—Compromise—Order recording compromise—Decree—Appeal against order recording compromise, whether competent.

Where a preliminary decree or order is followed by a final decree an appeal does not lie against the former after the final decree is passed.

Where an order recording a compromise under O. XXIII, r. 3, of the C. P. C. is followed by a decree, all proceedings previous to the decree, including the order recording the compromise, merge in the decree and no appeal lies against the order recording the compromise. C BENGAL COAL CO. LTD. v. APCAR COLLIERIES LTD., 29 C. W. N. 928 248 ——— O. XXIII, r. 3, O. XLIII, r. 1 (4)—Order recording compromise followed by decree—Appeal, whether lies.

An order recording a compromise under O. XXIII, r. 3, C. P. C., is appealable at the instance of the party denying the factum of compromise, even though the order has been followed by a decree passed in terms of the compromise. M SATYANARAYANAMURTHI v. JAYANTI BUTCHEYYA, 48 M. L. J. 249; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 606 124

——— O, XXVI, r. 11—Accounts, suit for—Order for taking accounts, whether can be made before determination of defendant's liability.

The proper course in a suit for accounts is to try the suit in order to determine the liability of the defendant to render accounts and after this liability has been established to make an order for the taking of accounts. An order for taking accounts cannot be made, notwithstanding the provisions of O. XXVI, r. 11 of the C. P. C., before the liability of the defendant has been established. C J. C. DAS v. CACHAR NATIVE JOINT STOCK CO., LTD. 764

——— O. XXX, rr. 1, 3—Suit against firm—Service of summonses—Dissolved partnership—Individual liability of partners—Proviso to r. 3, scope of.

Where a suit is, under O. XXX, r. 1, of the C. P. C., properly filed against a partnership firm in the firm's name, service on any one or more of the partners or on the manager must be deemed good service upon the firm. There is no difference at all as to the mode of effecting service whether the firm is going on or has been dissolved at the date of the service of the summons. If the service is effected as provided by r. 3 of O. XXX, the suit can be proceeded with against the firm and the plaintiff is entitled to obtain a decree against the firm. In the case of partnerships, which are going concerns at the date of the institution of the suit, the decree which is obtained against the firm is binding on all the partners in the firm, whether they have been served individually or not. In the case of a firm which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, an exception is made as to the liability of the partners in the firm under the decree passed against the firm by the proviso to r. 3 of O. XXX to the effect that in the case of such a firm the plaintiff must serve each and every person whom he wants to make liable personally in respect of the decree passed against the firm, and if he has not done so, he cannot execute the decree against the partner whom he had not served personally. The right to execute the decree against the firm is, however, in no way affected by the proviso. B GORDHANDAS KALYANJI BHAT v. GAUTAMCHAND RUPCHAND, 27 Bom. L. R. 541; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 331 1051

——— O. XXXII, r. 4—Guardian ad litem, appointment of—Presumption—Consent of guardian, whether necessary—Negligence of guardian—Minor, whether bound by decree.

The presumption that judicial acts have been regularly performed applies to the acts of the Court alone. Where, therefore, it appears from the record of a suit that a minor defendant was represented by a guardian ad litem it might be presumed that the necessary notices were issued and that a formal order appointing the guardian ad litem was drawn up, but there can be no presumption that the person who was named as the guardian ad litem of the minor defendant was a fit person to be appointed guardian.

Where a question arises whether a minor is bound by the result of a previous suit or not, it is open to the Court which is investigating the point to enquire as to whether the person who was named as the guardian ad litem of the minor in the previous litigation was or was not a fit person to be appointed guardian.

Sub-rule (3) of r. 4 of O. XXXII of the C. P. C. lays down that no person shall, without his consent, be appointed guardian ad litem for a minor defendant. A person who is named as guardian ad litem of a minor defendant but does not appear in the suit cannot be said to have consented to be appointed guardian.

A minor is as much bound by a judgment in his own action as if he were a person of full age unless he can establish gross laches or fraud and collusion on the part of his guardian.

The omission of a guardian ad litem to raise a defence on behalf of his ward which he might and ought to have raised does not preclude the ward from raising that defence in a subsequent suit. O RAMESHWAR BAKHSH SINGH v. RIDH KUER, 1 O. W. N. 775 238

——— O. XXXII, rr. 4, 9—Hindu Law—Joint family—Partition, suit for—Father, whether competent to act as next friend of minor son.

A member of a joint Hindu family is competent to act as the next friend of his minor son in a suit for partition brought by him on behalf of himself and the minor inasmuch as the interests of the father and the minor in such a suit are identical and not adverse. M LINGA REDDI v. CHENGALRAYA REDDI, 48 M. L. J. 417; 21 L. W. 659; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 734 42

——— O. XXXII, r. 9—Minor—Appeal filed by minor through next friend dismissed for default—Negligence of next friend—Minor, whether entitled to re-hearing.

An appeal filed on behalf of a minor was dismissed for default of appearance and thereupon another relative of the minor made an application to the Court for removing the next friend of the minor, for appointment of himself as next friend and for an order directing that the appeal should be re-heard. The Appellate Court dismissed the application without taking any evidence. In the meantime the minor had attained majority and adopted the proceedings taken on his behalf by the relative who had made the application:

Held, (1) that the minor having become a major it was no longer necessary to remove the next friend as the latter had ceased to be such by the mere efflux of time;

(2) that the lower Court should have taken evidence as to whether the next friend of the minor had been guilty of gross negligence in allowing the appeal to be dismissed in default and if such negligence was established the minor was entitled to re-hearing of the appeal. M RAMAPPA NAYUDU v. SAMBOORANATHACHI, 21 L. W. 325; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 774 117

——— O. XXXIII, r. 9—Suit in forma pauperis—Death of plaintiff—Legal representative, whether can be dispaupered—"Plaintiff," whether refers to physical person—Court-fee, levy of, on dispaupered plaintiff.

When a plaintiff in a suit instituted in forma pauperis dies, his executor is not liable to be dispaupered because personally he is not a pauper.

The expression 'plaintiff' in r. 9 of O. XXXIII of the C. P. C., when applied to the legal representative of a deceased pauper plaintiff refers not to the physical person before the Court but to the legal person in his representative capacity as the legal representative of the deceased pauper plaintiff.

The mere fact that a right to sue in forma pauperis is a personal right is no reason for holding that the legal personal representative of a pauper plaintiff loses that right.

Obiter.—There is no provision in O. XXXIII of the C. P. C. giving retrospective effect to an order dispaupering a plaintiff. A dispaupered plaintiff cannot, therefore, be required to pay the Court-fee in respect of a plaint which has been by the order of the Court admitted to be filed without any fees. M SIVAGAMI AMMAL v. GOPALASWAMI ODAYAR, (1925) M. W. N. 176; 48 M. L. J. 390; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 765 372

——— O. XXXIV, r. 1—Mortgage by adult members of joint Hindu family, suit on—Minor member of family, not made party, effect of—Suit, whether maintainable.

In the case of a mortgage executed by the adult members of a joint Hindu family it is open to the mortgagee, in a suit for sale on foot of the mortgage, to ask the Court to grant him a decree against the persons who borrowed the money from him and who had executed the mortgage, for they cannot be allowed to plead want of authority to make the mortgage. Such a suit is not liable to dismissal merely on the ground that a minor member of the joint family of the mortgagors has not been impleaded as a party to the suit. The decree, however, passed in such a suit would not affect the interests of the minor who has not been made a party to the suit. A NATHU v. RAM SARUP, 23 A. L. J. 246; 47 A. 427; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 335 700

——— O. XXXIV, r. 5. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, s. 20, SCH. I, ART. 181 746

——— O. XXXIV, r. 5—Mortgage-decree, preliminary—Final decree, application for, whether maintainable—Application, whether must be in writing—Presumption—Suit to set aside decree, whether maintainable.

Where a Court has jurisdiction to decide a matter but in the exercise of such jurisdiction it acts illegally or with material irregularity, its judgment is voidable but not void and can be vacated in an appropriate proceeding by way of review, appeal or revision. A separate suit to set aside the judgment is not maintainable.

A judgment vitiated by fraud is void but a judgment affected by an illegality or irregularity is merely voidable.

An application under O. XXXIV, r. 5 of the C. P. C., to make a decree final is not required to be in writing.

Where the law does not require an application to be in writing an oral application satisfies its requirements, and where an order is such that the Court would not have made it without an application by the judgment-creditor, it may be presumed that due application had been made for it.

Where the parties agree by compromise to a decree being passed in the form of a preliminary mortgage-decree, an application under O. XXXIV, r. 5 of the C. P. C., will lie to make the decree final, irrespective of the fact that the preliminary decree was framed as a decree in a mortgage suit merely as a matter of convenience. N SITARAM v. LAXMANRAO 820

——— O. XXXIV, r. 5—Mortgage—Lease to mortgagor—Suit for arrears of rent and ejectment—Decree for sale of property on non-payment, whether preliminary decree—Final decree, whether necessary.

A usufructuary mortgagee of certain properties leased them to the mortgagor himself on a kychit by which the latter agreed to pay rent and which provided that any arrears of rent which fell due would be a charge on the equity of redemption. The rent fell into arrears and the mortgagee brought a suit for rent and ejectment and obtained a decree which directed that the plaintiff should deposit a certain sum of money into Court on account of the improvements effected by the defendant and that the defendant should surrender possession of the properties and pay up the arrears of rent, the amount decreed in respect of improvements to be set off in execution against the arrears, and that after three months from the date of the decree the plaintiff should recover any deficit which remained unpaid after the set off by sale of the property:

Held, that the direction in the decree with regard to the sale of the property was not in the nature of a preliminary decree requiring a separate final decree before it could be executed, but was in the nature of a money-decree which the decree-holder was authorized to execute against the property in the event mentioned in the decree. M MACHULLATHIL CHANDU KUTTY v. KURUVATHANCHEI KEEZANA 557

——— O. XXXIV, r. 7—Redemption, suit for—Decree, construction of—Costs, whether charge on mortgaged land—Payment of decretal amount without costs, whether compliance with decree.

The decree of an Appellate Court in a suit for redemption increased the amount of money declared to be payable to the mortgagee by the First Court by a certain sum and went on to state that a certain specified sum was payable by the plaintiff to the defendant on or before a certain date. The decree further stated that certain costs were payable by the plaintiff to the defendant and continued that if the plaintiff paid the "sum aforesaid" to the defendant within a certain date, etc.:

Held, per Mukerji, J.—That it was not the intention of the Court to make the costs as stated in the decree a charge on the property and that if the plaintiff paid the sum mentioned in the earlier portion of the decree as payable by him to the defendant it was a sufficient compliance with the decree.

Per Daniels, J.—That the operative part of the decree clearly directed that the plaintiff must pay the sum mentioned in the decree and the costs and that if the plaintiff failed to pay the costs along with the mortgage-money within the time limited by the decree, the decree was not satisfied.

Per Mukerji, J.—It is open to an Appellate Court in a mortgage suit either to pass a personal decree for costs against the unsuccessful party or to make the costs payable out of the mortgaged property. In every case it is a matter of interpretation what was intended by the Appellate Court.

Per Daniels, J.—Under O. XXXIV, r. 7 of the C. P. C. the Court must direct that an account be taken of what is due to the defendant for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit, if awarded to him. The form of the decree prescribed by the Code under the rule contemplates that the costs of the suit shall be a charge on the mortgaged property and shall be regarded as such. A SHEODARSHAN SINGH v. BENI CHAUDHRI, L. R. 6 A. 225 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 492 585

——— O. XXXVIII, r. 5—Attachment of immoveable property before judgment—Small Cause Court, power of.

A Court exercising the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court has power to attach immoveable property before judgment under O. XXXVIII, r. 5 of the C. P. C. M KOSHANARAMA CHETTIAR v. ANNAMALAI PILLAI, (1925) M. W. N. 169; 48 M. L. J. 406; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 589; 22 L. W. 103; 48 M. 488 399

——— O. XLIV, r. 1, proviso—Leave to appeal in forma pauperis—Principles applicable—Respondent, locus standi of, to be heard.

On an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis under r. 1 of O. XLIV of the C. P. C., all that is required under the proviso to the rule is that the Court before admitting the appeal should be satisfied that it is not merely a frivolous appeal, and that there are reasonable grounds for doubting the correctness or justness of the decision of the lower Court.

It is not necessary that the Court must go through the whole case and admit the appeal only if it is satisfied that it would reverse the decision of the lower Court there and then if no appearance were entered for the respondent.

Where such an application comes on for admission the respondent has no locus standi to be heard. M MERUVA PARASURAMADU v. MANDAVILLIRAMANNA, 22 L.W. 23; 49 M. L. J. 353 960

——— O. XLVII, r. 1 (1)—Review—Mistake of law—Decision wrong on merits—Authoritative precedent, whether discovery of new and important evidence—Ground for review—Practice—Reference to Full Bench—Decided case, whether can be referred.

A case already decided cannot be referred to a Full Bench.

A judgment cannot be reviewed under O. XLVII, r. 1 (1) of the C. P. C., on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, where the alleged mistake or error is a wrong exposition of law, for instance, where the judgment is based on a precedent which has been modified by a subsequent decision.

Even assuming that the discovery of an authoritative precedent by which a precedent relied on in the judgment has been modified amounts to the discovery of new and important evidence within the meaning of O. XLVII, r. 1 (1) of the C. P. C., such a discovery is not a ground for review without strict proof that the subsequently relied on authority was not within the knowledge of the applicant or could not be produced by him when the decree or order was passed or made.

A review which is really an attempt to re-argue the appeal cannot be ordered on the ground that the decision was wrong on the merits. N ATMARAM v. PUNJABRAO 1029

——— O. XLVII, r. 1 (1)—Review—Mistake of law or merits, whether ground for review—"Any other sufficient reason," scope of—Judgment based on precedent subsequently modified—Discovery of new evidence.

A review cannot be granted on the ground of a mistake of law or on the merits.

Order XLVII, r. 1 of the C. P. C. must be read as in itself definitive of the limits within which review of a decree or order is permitted and the words "any other sufficient reason" in the rule mean a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously.

A judgment cannot be reviewed under O. XLVII, r. 1 (1), C. P. C., on account of some mistake apparent on the face of the record, where the alleged mistake or error is a wrong exposition of law, as for instance where the judgment is based on a precedent which has been modified by a subsequent decision.

Even assuming that the discovery of an authoritative precedent, by which a precedent relied on in the judgment has been modified, amounts to the discovery of new and important matter or evidence within the meaning of O. XLVII, r. 1 (1), C. P. C., such a discovery is not a ground for review without a strict proof that the subsequent authority was not within the knowledge of the applicant when the decree or order was passed or made. N RAMCHANDRA MAHADEORAO v. GOVINDRAO, 8 N. L. J. 31; (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 266 125

——— O. XLVII, rr. 1, 4—Review—Discovery of new and important matter—Want of knowledge, strict proof of—"Other sufficient case," whether can be relied on.

On an application for review under O. XLVII, r. 1, C. P. C., on the ground of discovery of new and important matter, the Court has no power to grant a review without calling for strict proof that the new matter was not within the knowledge of the petitioner at the time of the original hearing. Nor can in such a case the Court grant a review "for other sufficient reason" and evade the requirements of r. 4 (2) by adopting as its own reason, without any inquiry, the petitioner's reason for seeking review. M VELOVOLU POTHURAJU v. MATTA ADISESHU, 21 L. W. 276; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 578 391

——— O. XLVII, rr. 1, 4, 7—Review, grounds for—Evidence, re-consideration of, whether ground for review—Appeal—Appellate Court, whether can examine grounds for review—Procedure.

When an application for review is granted the party dissatisfied with the order may, under r. 7 of O. XLVII of the C. P. C., appeal against that order or may take the same objection in an appeal filed against the final decree, and on such an appeal it is open to the Appellate Court to examine the ground upon which the review was admitted, and if the ground for review does not come within the words of r. 1 of O. XLVII, then the Appellate Court is competent to hold that the review was improperly admitted and should have been rejected under r. 4 of the Order.

A review cannot be granted for re-consideration of the evidence in the case or for re-examination of a finding of fact. C NRITYA GOPAL MITRA v. JOEIT MONJARI DASI 770

——— O. XLVII, r. 7. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 115 204

——— Sch. II, paras. 1, 15, 16. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 47 633

Company—Mortgage of shares—Issue of new shares—Redemption—New shares, whether accretion.

The question whether an accretion to mortgaged Company shares by the issue of fresh capital can be treated as belonging to the corpus depends on whether accumulated profits are distributed as dividend or converted into capital. If a sum that is entered in the Balance Sheet to the credit of the Reserve Fund is transferred from the Reserve Fund to the Capital Account and new shares are issued to the existing share-holders, it may be said that there is a distribution of capital and the mortgagee is only entitled to interest on the new shares, but if the share-holders prefer that instead of getting dividends paid to them in cash, the amount to the credit of Profit and Loss Account available for payment of dividends in a particular year should be transferred to the Capital Account and new shares issued in respect thereof, there is a distribution of dividends and the mortgagee would be entitled to retain the new shares.

Plaintiff's father was the owner of certain Company shares but was entitled to retain only a certain sum out of the dividend, the balance being payable to A and G during their lifetime. Subsequently he mortgaged some of the shares with A. In the meantime the capital of the Company was increased by the issue of new shares called B shares, each of the original share-holders being allotted one B share for each old share held by him, and the B shares were to be paid for out of the dividends payable on the original shares, such dividend being payable to the share-holders at a certain rate and the balance being credited towards the calls on the B shares. After the death of A and G, plaintiff, who had become entitled to the shares, brought a suit to redeem them from the trustees of the estate of A. The plaint did not specifically mention the B shares but claimed to redeem the original shares "together with the issues thereof." The trustees of the estate of A filed a statement showing the dividends received in respect of the original shares as well as in respect of the B shares. The decree eventually passed in the suit allowed redemption of "the mortgaged shares together with the issues mentioned in the suit" and the decree was confirmed on appeal. In execution the question arose whether the mortgagor was entitled to the B shares or whether the B shares merely represented the dividend on the original shares and consequently belonged to the mortgagee:

Held, that having regard to all the circumstances of the case it was a fair inference that the profits of the Company were capitalized and that the new shares were allotted to the holders of the old shares as part of the capital and did not represent the dividends on the old shares and that consequently the plaintiff was entitled to the B shares. B MOTILAL HIRABHAI v. BAI MANI, 23 Bom. L. R. 1279; 46 B, 529; (1922) A. I. R. (B.) 370 269

Compound Interest. See CONTRACT ACT, 1872, s. 74 129

Construction of deed. See HINDU LAW—MITHILA SCHOOL 849

Construction of document—Mortgage by way of conditional sale—Sale, out and out—Principles applicable.

Where a question arises as to whether a document is a deed of mortgage by conditional sale or a deed of sale with the condition of re-purchase attached to it, each case must be decided upon the intrinsic evidence afforded by the terms of the document and upon the consideration of surrounding circumstances.

A deed which purported to be a deed of sale conferred full proprietary rights on the vendee in the first part, but towards the end of the document there was a clause to the effect that if within a period of seven years the consideration mentioned in the document was not re-paid to the vendee, then the vendor would have to give up the land, and in that case the sale would become valid like an absolute sale and it would then divest the vendor of his title and confer upon the vendee the right to make sale or gift with effect from the expiry of the aforesaid period. The consideration money mentioned in the deed represented the actual price of the land at the date when the deed was executed. More than forty years after the date of the deed the vendor brought a suit for redemption on the allegation that the deed was a deed of mortgage by conditional sale :

Held, that the deed was a deed of an out-and-out sale with a condition of re-purchase and the plaintiff's suit must, therefore, fail. C CHANDRA KUMAR KRITIRATNA v. ALAM KHAN 546 ——— Will, or authority to adopt—Principles applicable.

It is not proper to interpret one document in the light of words used in another document. Each document must be considered with reference to words and expressions used in it and where the question is whether the document is a Will or an authority to adopt, and the document when read as a whole gives an impression that the executant intended to dispose of his property by it and that it should take effect after his life, then whatever may be the words used in the document, the general intention should not be overlooked. In construing the terms of the document the main thing to be considered is whether the executant had an intention to devise his properties to any one, in other words, whether the document contains clear words as to a testamentary intention on the part of the executant.

A Hindu executed a document giving his wife authority to make an adoption after his death and the document contained the following clause "my whole property shall be divided into two equal shares, one share being enjoyed by the adoptive mother and the other share by the adopted son. During her lifetime, the mother shall enjoy the said property to her own liking. After her death the whole property in respect of the said share shall pass to the adopted son" :

Held, that from the words of the document the intention to devise the property to the wife could be clearly gathered and that, therefore, the document was a Will and not an authority to adopt and consequently did not require registration. M SUBBAMMA v. PAPAYYA, 48 M. L. J. 425; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 748 187

Contract—Sale of goods—"Force majeure", meaning of—War conditions—Vessel commandeered by Government—Performance of contract, whether excused—Impossibility of performance—Vendor, liability of.

It is not reasonable to ask a person who has entered into a particular contract to supply goods, to break his other contracts or to make others to break their contracts in order to perform that particular contract. If a party to a contract cannot perform his part without breaking other contracts, then the existence of those other contracts might be deemed to hinder or prevent him from performing the contract in question.

It is not sufficient for a party to a contract to point to something in the nature of a force majeure and seek to escape liability in respect of the contract. It is necessary to go further and establish by satisfactory evidence that the circumstance or occurrence which is called force majeure was the real cause which prevented the performance of the contract.

Where a contract to supply goods is entered into during a period when there is to the knowledge of the parties difficulty in securing tonnage for the cargo, such difficulty or even the impossibility of procuring tonnage cannot be aptly described by the expression force majeure.

Where a commercial man finds himself face to face with an upsetting of his plans and calculations brought about by force majeure, he is not bound to prove more than that he made his best endeavours as a man of ordinary prudence would and should, who was anxious to procure some tonnage for himself under the prevailing conditions.

Where in a contract for sale and delivery of goods the manner of the performance of the contract is not indicated or included as necessarily being in the contemplation of the parties, the difficulty or even impossibility of performing the contract in the manner contemplated by one of the contracting parties would be no excuse for non-performance. But if the manner of performance is indicated in the contract or otherwise comes to be included as a term in the contract then the force majeure clause would apply to any case of force majeure preventing the performance of the contract in that manner.

Whenever the possibility of performance is referred to in commercial contracts, what must be considered and contemplated is the possibility in a commercially reasonable sense and not a suppositious possibility.

Defendant, a merchant in Madras, contracted in November 1916 with the plaintiffs, a firm in Marseilles, to ship 400 tons of groundnut kernels to Marseilles in December-January 1916-1917 on C. I. F., terms, the goods to be of a particular brand. The defendant booked the necessary tonnage on S. S. Seapool but the vessel was commandeered by the Government on 14th November for purposes connected with the War. In spite of his best endeavours the defendant was unable to obtain accommodation for this cargo on any other steamer. The contract contained force majeure clauses discharging the parties from performance of the contract in cases of war, revolution, etc. In a suit by the plaintiffs for damages :

Held, (1) that the defendant was not liable for non-performance of the contract ;

(2) that the contract being a C. I. F. contract, under which the defendant had to tender Bills of Lading for goods of a particular brand, a tender of goods of some other brand would not have been a strict compliance with the terms of the contract, such as the plaintiffs were bound to accept and that, therefore, the defendant could not have bought groundnuts at Marseilles or London and supplied them to the plaintiffs. M EDMUND BENDIT v. EDGAR RAPHAD PRUDHOMME, 48 M. L. J. 374; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 626 681

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 11—Suit on mortgage-bond—Plea of minority—Burden of proof.

Where in answer to a suit for sale on foot of a mortgage-bond the defence is that the defendant was a minor at the time of the execution of the bond, the burden lies on him to prove his minority at the date of the execution of the document and not on the plaintiff to prove that the defendant was a major on that date. A SURJA v. JOTI PRASAD, L. R. 6 A. 283 Civ.; 47 A. 493 445

——— ss. 20, 65—Inam, resumption of—Ryotwari patta, grant of—Resumption declared illegal—Revenue, recovered from holder of patta, refund of—Mistake.

Government resumed a devadayam inam attached to a temple and granted a ryotwari patta in respect of it to the trustee of the temple and thereafter to a purchaser from him. Subsequently at the instance of third parties the resumption was declared illegal. In a suit by the purchaser from the trustee for refund of the assessment levied from him by Government during the whole period of litigation:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff when he accepted the patta was aware that the right of resumption by Government was being questioned and that, therefore, there was no mistake so as to render s. 20 of the Contract Act applicable;

(2) that the issue of a ryotwari patta by Government to the plaintiff not only did not convey the land from Government to the grantee but did not even create a contract in respect of the land between them, and that plaintiff was consequently not entitled to any relief. M SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. YELLEPEDDI JANAKIRAMAYYA PANTULU, 48 M. L. J. 440; (1925) M. W. N. 481; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 859 644

——— s. 23. See C. P. TENANCY ACT, 1920, ss. 12, 13 1043

——— s. 23—Excise licensee—Partnership contract, legality of.

Where a licensee for sale of intoxicating drugs takes another person as partner in the business, without obtaining the approval of the Collector, as required by the terms of the license, the partnership contract cannot be recognised by a Civil Court, as the object of the contract is illegal, being a violation of the ordinary law under which no person is allowed to sell intoxicating drugs without permission of Government. S DEWANDAS KIMATMAL v. KISSUMAL PAHLUMAL, (1925) A. I. R. (S.) 55; 18 S. L. R. 16 353

——— s. 43. See EXECUTION OF DECREE 47

——— s. 74. See TARIFF ACT, 1894, s. 10 119

——— s. 74—Interest, high rate of—Penalty. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 11 767

——— s. 74—Compound interest, whether penal—Compound interest, award of, circumstances—Waiver of right, when can be presumed.

The Courts do not lean towards compound interest, they do not award it in the absence of stipulation, but where there is a clear agreement for its payment, it is, in the absence of disentitling circumstances, allowed.

A stipulation in a mortgage deed that if any of the monthly instalments of interest is not paid on its due date, such unpaid instalment of interest should be capitalised and added to the amount of the principal loan and that all such additions by way of capitalised interest should be chargeable upon the mortgaged property, is not penal, so as to bring it under s. 74 of the Contract Act.

The general rule in regard to waiver is that there can be no waiver, unless the person against whom waiver is claimed had full knowledge both of his rights and of the facts which would enable him to take effectual action for their enforcement.

The mere receipt of interest by the mortgagee after such default by the mortgagor as would entitle the mortgagee to compound interest does not amount to waiver of his right to charge compound interest.

Every man may renounce a benefit or waive a privilege which the law has conferred upon him, so long as it does not prejudice the rights of third persons. B NADERSHAW SHERIARJI RABADI v. SHIRINBAI BAPUJI MUSA, 25 Bom. L. R. 839; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 264 129

——— s. 245—Liability by "holding out," extent of—Joint Hindu family—Manager entering into partnership—Family, whether becomes partner—Insolvency proceedings against partner—Partnership, whether dissolved.

Where the managing member of a joint Hindu family enters into a partnership with strangers he does not thereby make other members of the family partners in the business so as to clothe them with all the rights and obligations of a partner as defined by the Indian Contract Act. In such a case the family as a unit does not become a partner but only such of its members as in fact enter into a contractual relation with the strangers, will be governed by the Act.

The rule of liability "by holding out" contained in s. 245 of the Indian Contract Act can be relied on only by the persons to whom the representation has been made and who have acted on the faith of its being true.

Mere institution of insolvency proceedings against the partners of a firm, or even the adjudication of a partner as an insolvent, does not by itself effect a dissolution of a partnership. S HARNAMDAS v. MAYADAS LAKHMICHAND 905

——— ss. 253, 254—Partnership—Assignment of his share by partner, effect of—Assignee, position of—Suit for accounts by assignee, whether maintainable—Release of his rights by a partner before assignment, effect of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 6 (e)—Right to sue to set aside release, whether can be transferred.

An assignment by one of the partners in a firm of his share in the partnership, without the consent of the other partners, does not cause an immediate dissolution of the partnership, nor does the assignment give the assignee a right to an account of the profits. He must accept the account of the profits as agreed to by the partners. It is only when dissolution occurs that the right of the assignee arises to claim an account as from the date of the dissolution.

It is only a partner who can file a suit against the other partners for dissolution. Consequently, an assignment by one partner in favour of an outsider merely gives a right of action to the other partners to ask the Court to dissolve the partnership.

Plaintiff filed a suit for accounts of a partnership on the allegation that defendants Nos. 1 to 5 constitute a partnership together with defendant No. 6 whose right, title and interest in the partnership had been purchased by the plaintiff. Defendants Nos. 1 to 5 set up a release executed by defendant No. 6 before the assignment in favour of the plaintiff. Defendant No. 6 urged that the release was obtained from him by fraud and misrepresentation:

Contract Act—concld.

Held, (1) that if the release executed by defendant No. 6 in favour of the other defendants was valid, defendant No. 6 had ceased to have any right of action against his co-partners and that there was nothing left in him which he could have assigned to the plaintiff;

(2) that if the release executed by the defendant No. 6 was not binding on him on the ground that it had been obtained from him by misrepresentation or fraud, defendant No. 6 would have a right to have the release set aside, but that such a right, being a mere right to sue, could not be transferred to the plaintiff;

(3) that assuming that the defendant No. 6 succeeded in having the release set aside, the partnership would still be existing between defendants Nos. 1 to 5 and the plaintiff, as assignee of defendant No. 6, who was one of the partners, would have no right to sue for an account of the profits of the partnership;

(4) that in either view of the case the plaintiff's suit was liable to be dismissed. B DHANAJI JHELAJI v. GULABCHAND PANA, 27 Bom. L. R. 409; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 347 812

Co-owners—Party wall—Nature of wall built on party wall—Windows, whether can be opened in party wall—Trespass—Injunction, suit for—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 120.

Where one of two neighbouring owners raises a party wall with the consent or acquiescence of the other, the raised portion must assume the same character, as the old party wall on which it stands, and neither party can be allowed to commit a trespass on the party wall so increased in height. If either of the parties opens windows in the raised part of the party wall his action would amount to a trespass and would be liable to be restrained at the instance of the other party. A suit to restrain such action must, however, be brought within a period of six years under Art. 120 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. Failing such a suit, however, the party aggrieved would be entitled to block the windows from his own side of the premises. B IMAMBHAI KAMRUDIN v. RAHIMBHAI USMANBHAI, 27 Bom. L. R. 503; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 373; 49 B. 586 977

Co-sharers—Ejectment suit, when maintainable—Ouster, proof of.

Ordinarily one tenant-in-common cannot maintain an ejectment against another tenant-in-common, because the possession of one tenant-in-common is the possession of another and to enable the party complaining to maintain an ejectment, there must be an ouster of the party complaining. But where the claimant tenant-in-common has not been in participation of the rents and profits for a considerable length of time and other circumstances concur, it may be presumed that there has been an ouster.

Every case must, however, depend upon its own facts and the Court of fact is entitled to find whether a certain set of facts presented before it does or does not amount to ouster. C HANGSESWAR KUNDU v. SURJYA NARAIN MONDAL 336

Co-sharers—concld.

——— Exclusive possession—Ouster—Easement over joint property, whether can be acquired.

Exclusive possession by co-sharers of portions of undivided estates is a common thing. Such exclusive possession does not amount to an ouster of the other co-sharers. Every joint owner has a right to use any portion of the joint lands so long as he does not exclude the other co-sharers from it.

A person who alleges himself to be a co-sharer in certain property can have no right of easement in it. Pat KAMESHWAR NARAIN SINGH v. JANARDHAN PRASAD NARAIN SINGH, 3 Pat L. R. 81; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 492 736 ——— Joint possession, decree for.

Where a party is entitled to joint possession, he should be granted the relief, and to entitle him to it, it is not necessary that he should have been in possession before and should have been dispossessed later on. But from this it does not follow that in every case where there are joint claimants and joint owners it is the duty of the Court to grant a decree for joint possession. In certain cases a Court would be entitled to refuse a decree for joint possession, for instance, where a co-sharer has been in peaceful possession of certain plots of land as his khudkasht for a number of years before the suit is instituted, the other co-sharers will ordinarily be not entitled to a decree for joint possession. A GAJRAJ SINGH v. RAM ANJORE SINGH, L. R. 5 A. 286 Rev.; L. R. 6 A 47 Rev. 59

——— Khudkasht plots, dispossession from—Possession, decree for, whether can be obtained.

When a co-sharer in a village has rightfully acquired land as his khudkasht and is in separate physical possession of it, and another co-sharer forcibly dispossesses him, the former is entitled to a decree for physical possession of the land from which he has been dispossessed and not merely to a decree for joint possession. A BHAGWAT PRASAD v. BALDEO PRASAD, L. R. 6 A. 313 Civ. 679

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 5—Taxing Officer, whether has jurisdiction to determine valuation.

Held, per Curiam (Das, J., dissenting).—The Taxing Officer or the Taxing Judge, as the case may be, is under s. 5 of the Court Fees Act the proper person to determine the fee payable on a memorandum of appeal presented to the High Court, and for this purpose he may investigate the question of proper valuation of the subject-matter of the appeal and his decision on the point is final. Even if he should make a manifest mistake in the exercise of his jurisdiction his decision is not subject to an appeal to, or review by, the Court itself.

Per Miller, C. J. and Mullick, J.—It is desirable that the Taxing Officer in determining questions of valuation should not, as a rule, base his decision merely upon allegations in the plaint as to the annual profits of the property to be valued. In order to arrive at a proper decision of such questions it is better that the parties should be called upon to produce, in such manner as may be convenient, such documentary or other evidence as they may be prepared to tender to enable him to decide the question.

Per Mullick, J.—Where the High Court has delegated its jurisdiction to a Taxing Officer, it has no jurisdiction left to do any of the acts which it could otherwise have performed, and if the Taxing Officer cannot decide a question of valuation no other authority can discharge that duty.

Per Jawala Prasad, J.—In order that the decision of the Taxing Officer or Taxing Judge should be final there must be a contest between the officer whose duty it is to see that proper Court-fee is paid and the suitor, and an opportunity must be given to the parties to the contest, namely, the suitor and the Government, to be heard. The decision cannot be final if the question is determined ex parte and without giving an opportunity to the suitor to show, by adducing evidence or otherwise, what the value of the subject-matter of the appeal, and consequently the amount of Court-fee payable, should be.

Per Das, J.—The Taxing Officer has no jurisdiction to decide a question relating to valuation for the purpose of determining the amount of Court-fee payable by the appellant either on his plaint or on his memorandum of appeal, and if he assumes jurisdiction to decide such a question the Court may ignore his decision. Pat KRISHNAMOHAN SINHA v. RAGHUNANDAN PANDEY, (1925) Pat. 65; 6 P. L. T. 262; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 392; 4 Pat. 336 137

——— ss. 7 i, ii, 12—Maintenance, arrears of, suit to recover—Court-fee payable—Decision of First Court, whether final—Appeal, whether lies.

Section 12 of the Court Fees Act only applies to a decision as to the valuation of a suit which falls within a particular class, and not to a decision as to the particular class in which a suit falls, that is to say, if there is no doubt as to the class in which a suit falls and the section of the Court Fees Act which applies to it, the decision of the First Court, as to valuation, which depends on the value of the property in suit, is final; but if there is a dispute as to the class in which the suit falls, that is to say, the section of the Court Fees Act, which applies to it, an appeal will lie from the decision of the First Court.

A suit to recover arrears of maintenance, in which there is no prayer for declaration as to a right to future maintenance, falls within cl. 1 of s. 7 of the Court Fees Act. N GOBIND v. VITHABAI 911

——— s. 7 ii, iv (c)—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8—Suit for declaration as to ownership of annuity, valuation of—Court-fee payable—Value for purposes of jurisdiction.

A suit for a declaration that the plaintiff is the owner of the Toda Giras Hak, as the heir of a deceased recipient of the Hak, and is as such entitled to recover it, falls within the purview of s. 7 iv (c) of the Court Fees Act, and not within s. 7 ii of the Act, and Court-fee thereon is payable according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint. In such a suit the value for purposes of jurisdiction is under s. 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, the same as for Court-fees. B BHIMSANGJI CHHATRASANGJI v. DOLATSANGJI HAMIRSANGJI, 27 Bom. L. R. 247; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 282 801

——— s. 7 iv (c)—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8—Suit for declaration and consequential relief—Valuation of reliefs—Court-fee payable.

In a suit falling under s. 7 (iv) (c) of the Court Fees Act the valuation for purposes of Court-fees is to be determined first and that for the purposes of jurisdiction must follow on the same; but the plaintiff in such a suit cannot at one and the same time obtain the services of the highest Tribunal for the determination of his claim and evade the payment of ad valorem Court-fees. If for the purposes of jurisdiction he sets a high value on the relief by way of declaration and a merely nominal value on the relief by way of injunction, it is doing him no injustice to hold that the "relief sought", on which the Court-fee must be levied, is the sum total of the two reliefs.

Plaintiff brought a suit on behalf of two idols for a declaration that the defendant had no power to supervise and manage the properties of the idols and that he was the lawful manager of the idols, and for an injunction restraining the defendant from supervising and managing the properties of the idols and for recovery of the moveables belonging to the idols. He valued the declaratory relief at Rs. 25,000, the relief for injunction at Rs. 1,000 and the relief for recovery of the moveables at Rs. 500. He paid ad valorem Court-fees on the reliefs with regard to the injunction and the recovery of the moveables but paid only Rs. 10 with regard to the declaratory relief:

Held, that the suit was one for a declaratory decree with consequential relief and fell within the purview of s. 7 iv (c) of the Court-Fees Act, and that the plaintiff having valued the different reliefs at Rs. 26,500 he was bound to pay ad valorem Court-fees on that sum and that the Court-fees payable on appeal must also be determined on the same basis. A MANNI LAL v. THAKUR RADHEY GOPALJI, 23 A. L. J. 344; L. R. 6 A. 258 Civ.; 47 A. 501 190 ——— ss. 7 iv (c), 12, Sch. II, Art. 17 iii—Decision as to category of suit, whether final—Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation by co-parceners—Suit for declaration—Court-fees payable.

A decision as to the category to which a suit or appeal belongs is not final under s. 12 of the Court Fees Act.

The determination of the category to which a suit belongs must depend upon the relief which the plaintiff prays for, because Court-fees must be determined with reference to the prayer contained in the plaint. The Court must ascertain what the plaintiff actually asks for in his plaint and must not speculate what may be the ulterior effect of his success.

Where a plaintiff is bound to ask both for a declaration and the setting aside of a document but prays merely for declaration, the suit must be treated for purposes of Court-fee as one for a declaration. It is not for the Court to say that the plaintiff should have framed his plaint differently and that if he had done so a higher Court-fee would have been payable and that, therefore, the plaint before the Court should be treated as containing a prayer which it does not in truth contain. If a plaintiff contents himself with asking for a declaration, where he ought to ask for a declaration and consequential relief, the suit is liable to be dismissed not by reason of the improper valuation of the suit, but because it infringes the provisions of s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act.

A suit by a member of a joint Hindu family for a declaration that a mortgage executed by his undivided father and brother is not supported by consideration and not binding upon him falls within the purview of Art. 17 iii of Sch. II and not of s. 7 iv, (c) of the Court Fees Act. M VENKATA RAMANI IYER v. NARAYANASWAMI IYER, (1925) M. W. N. 276; 48 M. L. J. 688; 21 L. W. 649; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 713 660

——— s. 7 xi (e). See LANDLORD AND TENANT 1002

——— Sch. II, Art. 17 (6)—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 92, 115—Trust—Scheme suit—Relief for refund of misappropriations—Delivery of possession of properties to new trustees—Court-fee payable—Revision.

A suit under s. 92, C. P. C., praying that the defendant trustee should refund to the trust a specified amount misappropriated by him and also that certain properties should be handed over to the new trustees to be appointed under the scheme to be framed by the Court falls under Art. 17, cl. (6) of Sch. II to the Court Fees Act.

Where the Trial Court wrongly directs a higher fee to be paid on such a plaint, it is competent for the High Court to interfere in revision under s. 115, C. P. C., even though a remedy by way of appeal is open. M SUDALAIMUTHU PILLAI v. PERIA SUDARAM PILLAI, (1925) M. W. N. 104; 48 M. L. J. 514; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 722 25

Criminal case—Weakness of defence.

A conviction must stand or fall on the strength of the prosecution and not on the weakness of the defence. L NATHA SINGH v. EMPEROR, 6 L. L J. 579; (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 282; 26 Cr. L. J. 949 101

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 54 (7), 497. See EXTRADITION ACT, 1903, ss. 10 (4), 23 100

——— s. 107—Security proceedings—Assault case, evidence and judgment in, whether can be considered—Security, when can be demanded—Amount of security, how to be fixed.

Where a Magistrate is trying a security case and an assault case on the same day against the same persons, there is no harm if he uses his knowledge of the one to govern his judgment in the other, and makes such use appear in his judgment. The logical result, if the persons in both the cases are the same, ought to be that if the Magistrate convicts them in the assault case and thinks that they ought to be bound over he ought to bind them over as part of the decision of the assault case. The result of that would be that when the assault case is upset in appeal, the binding over would be upset too.

Where, however, the persons accused in the assault case are not identical with the persons against whom security proceedings are being taken, the proceedings and judgment in the assault case cannot be taken into consideration in arriving at a conclusion with regard to the security proceedings.

Where there are old standing feuds between two parties or two branches of a family which in the course of events have come to a head by a very serious and heavy litigation, it does not necessarily follow that a Magistrate ought to assume a possibility of a breach of the peace, and bind over one party or the other to keep the peace under s. 107 of the Cr. P. C.

Where orders under s. 107 of the Cr. P. C. are made against certain persons who have been acting on behalf of their masters, the amount of security required should not be fixed in such a way as to leave the masters no alternative except on the one hand to lose their servants by refusing to become sureties for them so that the men would have to go to jail or, on the other, to be bound hand and foot by very onerous securities for the conduct of men who might leave their masters the next day and pursue at the instigation of the other side a consistent course of legalized blackmail upon their former masters. A DIN DAYAL v. EMPEROR, 23 A. L. J. 300; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 443; 26 Cr. L. J. 981 517 ——— ss. 112, 117—Accused, admission by—Enquiry, whether necessary—Qualifications of sureties, whether can be altered.

Even where a person against whom an order under s. 112, Cr. P. C., has been made, on its being read over to him, admits the allegations in the said order, it is incumbent on the Court to proceed to make an inquiry as provided by s. 117 of the Cr. P. C.

A Magistrate has no right to introduce new qualifications while deciding on the suitability of sureties offered by the accused.

Quære.—Whether an order committing a person to prison on default of security being furnished, for a period to be specified later on is legal. S ALLAHDITO v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1041 961

——— s. 145—Order, whether binding on persons not parties—Remedy—Breach of peace, likelihood of, grounds for.

An order under s. 145 of the Cr. P. C. is not binding against persons who are not parties to the proceedings under the section and their remedy is not by an application for revision against the order.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction under s. 145 of the Cr. P. C. to make any enquiry as to possession still less any final order, unless and until he is satisfied of the likelihood of a breach of the peace and it is absolutely essential that the facts and the grounds of his being so satisfied should appear in his first order directing issue of notice and the ground must be such as to satisfy a Court of Revision. N RAMCHANDRA v. GANPAT, 26 Cr. L. J. 1035 923

——— ss. 145, 426—Dispute relating to immoveable property—Sale by one of the parties of his interest, effect of—Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Stay of proceedings by High Court—Matter brought to notice of Magistrate—Duty of Magistrate—Procedure.

Once proceedings pending in the Court of a Magistrate are stayed by the High Court and the matter is brought to the notice of the Magistrate before whom the proceedings are pending it is his duty to stay his hands and stop further proceedings. If in spite of such notice the Magistrate proceeds with the matter any order passed by him must be treated as passed without jurisdiction and cannot stand.

Where in a proceeding under s. 145 of the Cr. P. C. proper opportunity is not given to one of the parties to represent his case and to cross-examine the witnesses examined on behalf of the opposite party or to produce his documentary evidence, he is entitled to have the proceedings transferred to the Court of some other Magistrate.

Where a Magistrate receives information from any source that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace relating to the possession of immoveable property, he is entitled to initiate proceedings under s. 145 of the Cr. P. C., even although it appears that one of the parties has already sold the property provided he has not delivered possession to the purchaser and still claims to be in possession of the property. Pat GOURI SHANKER v. COLLECTOR OF MUZAFFARPUR, 6 P. L. T. 215; 26 Cr. L. J. 965; 3 Pat. L. R. 127 Cr.; (1925) A I. R. (Pat.) 553 421 ——— ss. 146, 438—Order under s. 146, operation of, extent of—Order when comes to end—Record of Rights, entry in, whether final adjudication by competent Court—Reference under s. 438, form of.

A reference under s. 438 of the Cr. P. C. should always be made in the form prescribed for such references by r. 139 of Chap. I of the General Rules and Circular Orders of the Calcutta High Court, Criminal Appellate Side.

Once an order under s. 146 of the Cr. P. C. has been passed by a Court it can come to an end only under one of two circumstances, the first being that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject-matter of the dispute, in which case the Magistrate would be competent to withdraw the order of attachment, and he can do so at any time at which he is satisfied that there is no further any such likelihood, and, secondly, it is competent for a Magistrate to release the subject-matter of the dispute from attachment if a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties to the proceedings or the person entitled to possession of the subject-matter of the dispute.

An entry in the Record of Rights cannot be regarded as constituting a final adjudication by a competent Court within the meaning of s. 146 (1) of the Cr. P. C. C KUTISWAR MONDAL v. JITENDRA NATH SEN, 26 Cr. L. J. 1055 975

——— ss. 192, 202, 203, 204—Cognizance taken by Magistrate—Order directing investigation—Transfer of case for consideration of report, validity of.

Sub-section (1) of s. 192 of the Cr. P. C. empowers a Magistrate to transfer a case for enquiry or trial, but it does not empower him to transfer a case simply for the purpose of considering the report of an investigation under s. 202 of the Cr. P. C., which he has himself ordered.

The provisions of s. 192 or of s. 202 of the Cr. P. C. do not entitle a Magistrate after he has proceeded under the latter section to make an order under the provisions of the former section transferring the case to another Magistrate for the purpose of being dealt with under s. 203 of the Code without a fresh investigation as contemplated by s. 202 of the Code. C MAHABIR SINGH v. GIRIBALA DASSI, 29 C. W. N. 508; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 742; 26 Cr. L. J. 990 526

——— s. 195 (1)—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 182, 211—Charge under s. 211—Alteration into one under s. 182—Complaint, absence of—Conviction, legality of.

The essence of an offence under s. 182 of the Penal Code is not the falseness of the information, as it is the essence of an offence under s. 211 of the Code, but the contempt of the lawful authority of the public servant, and unless and until the public servant concerned chooses to move in the matter, the Court has no authority to do so suo motu, by whatever process it reaches that result.

A Court taking cognisance of an offence under s. 211 of the Penal Code, does not ipso facto take cognisance of one under s. 182 of the Code.

Where, therefore, a charge against an accused person is altered from one under s. 211, Penal Code, into one under s. 182 a conviction under the latter section is bad in the absence of a complaint by the public servant concerned. M In re MUTHU GOUNDAN, (1925) M. W. N. 108; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 400; 21 L. W. 661; 26 Cr. L. J. 962 418

——— s. 195 (6)—Sanction, grant of—Refusal to revoke sanction—Period of six months, commencement of.

A sanction cannot be said to have been "given" within the meaning of cl. (6) of s. 195 of the Cr. P. C., by a Court which did not originally grant the sanction but which merely refused to revoke that sanction when it had been granted. The period of six months mentioned in the clause, therefore, begins to run from the date of the order granting the sanction and not from the date of the order of a superior Court subsequently refusing to revoke the sanction. O MAKHDUM THATER v. EMPEROR, 1 O. W. N. 752; 26 Cr. L. J. 995 595

——— s. 203—Discharge, whether bars second complaint—Procedure—Duty of complainant.

An order of discharge does not operate as an acquittal and leaves the matter at large for all purposes of judicial enquiry. There is jurisdiction still vested in all Magistrates including the one who made the previous enquiry, just as before, but all Magistrates, and especially the one who formerly discharged the accused, are bound to exercise due discretion to take that discharge into account in dealing with the case, and it is the duty of the complainant to inform the Magistrate before whom the case comes up on the second occasion that he had previously filed a similar complaint which has been dismissed, because when the Court to which the second complaint is made becomes aware that a similar complaint has already been dismissed it must exercise greater care in considering how to deal with the case. B In re MAHADEV LAXMAN SATARDEKAR, 27 Bom. L. R. 352; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 258; 26 Cr. L. J. 991 527

——— s. 247—Complainant, absence of—Acquittal, right of, when accrues—Revival of criminal case—Adjournments, frequent, undesirability of.

An application or order for revival of a criminal case can only be made on the supposition that the case is over and not pending. A case which is pending cannot be revived.

Under s. 247 of the Cr. P. C. the right to an order of acquittal accrues to the accused upon two conditions, and is dependent, firstly, on the absence of the plaintiff and, secondly on the Court not adjourning the case. If a case is not taken up at all, it cannot be said that the second condition is fulfilled, for there is no knowing in what way the Court's discretion would have been exercised if the case had been taken up.

Frequent adjournments of a case at the request of the prosecution disapproved. C RASH BEHARY KARURY v. CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA, 26 Cr. L. J. 1050 970

——— s. 250—Compensation, order directing payment of, when to be made—Vexatious charge—Falsity of charge, whether must be established.

In order to justify an order for payment of compensation to the accused person under s. 250 of the Cr. P. C. there must be a finding that the charge against the accused is false, besides being frivolous or vexatious. A vexatious charge may be partly true and the idea conveyed by the word is that the object of the person making the accusation should be primarily to harass the accused person. N BHAU v. SYED CHAND, 26 Cr. L. J. 1033 921

——— ss. 256, 257, 342—Examination of accused, when to be made—Cross-examination after charge, whether part of examination of prosecution witnesses.

The examination of a witness means his examination-in-chief, cross-examination and re-examination, and the expression "after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined", which occurs in s. 342 of the Cr. P. C, includes any cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution after the charge has been framed. It is, therefore, imperative for a Magistrate under this section to examine an accused person after the prosecution witnesses have been, if so desired by the accused, further cross-examined after the charge.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

The prosecution case does not close until all the prosecution witnesses have been discharged after their examination, cross-examination, further cross-examination, if so desired by the accused, and re-examination and it is only after the prosecution witnesses have been discharged that the stage for the obligatory examination of the accused under s. 342 of the Cr. P. C. arrives. N LOCAL GOVERNMENT v. MARIA, 20 N. L. R. 174; (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 44; 26 Cr. L. J. 971 427 ——— ss. 256 (2), 344—"Remaining witnesses," meaning of—"Remaining witnesses" not in attendance—Complainant's right to claim postponement—"Reasonable cause" for demand—Postponement discretionary.

The witnesses whom prosecutor may wish to examine, after the cross-examination and re-examination of prosecution witnesses already examined, are "remaining witnesses" within the meaning of s. 256 (1), Cr. P. C.

If the "remaining witnesses" are not in attendance the complainant has no right to insist on a postponement for their examination.

Even when there is a "reasonable cause," it is discretionary with the Court to postpone or adjourn a case. Therefore, a Magistrate is within his discretion if (being of the opinion that the complainant is unnecessarily wasting time and protracting proceedings) he refuses to postpone a case for the examination of "remaining witnesses." S ALI SHER v. MIR MAHOMED, 26 Cr. L. J. 958 110

——— s. 259—Dismissal of complaint—Fresh complaint, whether entertainable.

A complaint dismissed under s. 259, Cr. P. C., can be revived on a fresh complaint as the dismissal does not amount to an acquittal. The fresh complaint need not be filed before the same Magistrate who dismissed the previous complaint but may be entertained by any other Magistrate having jurisdiction to entertain it. N ASHGAR ALI v. AKBAR ALI, 26 Cr. L. J. 1040 928

——— s. 264—Summary trial—Notes of evidence, whether part of the record—Important matter—Magistrate, duty of—Proper procedure—Ports Act (XV of 1908), s. 54—"Disobedience", meaning of.

Under s. 264 of the Cr. P. C. the judgment is the one and the only record in cases which are tried summarily and in which appeal lies and the rough and incomplete notes of evidence taken by the Magistrate cannot and should not be transcribed and attached to the record.

Where owing to the bulk of evidence or the complication of the matters or owing to the difficult nature of points at issue, it is not possible for the Magistrate to keep in his mind without making exhaustive notes the evidence of important facts, then, even though the offence may be technical and be punishable only with a slight sentence, the Magistrate is not acting properly if he applies the summary procedure to such a trial and should he in so important a case apply the summary procedure, then, no doubt, the appellate or revisional Court will re-direct the re-trial of the case in a more appropriate form.

The word "disobey" in s. 54 of the Indian Ports Act does not mean "intentional disobedience." S RAHIMTULLAH IBRAHIM v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1026 914

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— s. 297—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 147—Rioting—Trial by Jury—Question of title to land, direction to ignore—Misdirection.

Where in a case of rioting the question of title to a certain property is of importance and the Sessions Judge in his charge to the Jury asks them to arrive at their verdict irrespective of that question, his action amounts to a misdirection which vitiates the trial. C AHED FAKIR v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 946 98

——— s. 297—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 368—Charge to Jury—Knowledge and suspicion of accused, distinction between—Misdirection.

Section 368 of the Penal Code requires "Knowledge" on the part of the accused and not merely suspicion or belief.

The proper way to charge a Jury in a case under s 368 of the Penal Code is to place before the Jury the direct evidence of the knowledge of the accused as to the abduction, to point out the strength and weakness of that evidence, to tell the Jury that this is the only evidence relating to knowledge, and then to place before them the circumstances, if any, which might raise an inference of knowledge on the part of the accused of the abduction and lastly to ask the Jury to draw their own conclusion on the question.

A charge which places before the Jury indiscriminately direct evidence as to the knowledge of the accused, the evidence as to suspicion having been aroused in the mind of the accused and evidence which shows that a suspicion should have arisen in the mind of the accused, without making any distinction, is defective on a crucial point and is likely to vitiate the verdict. C GADADHAR SARKAR v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1021 845 ——— ss. 297, 298—Sessions trial—Mixed Jury on communal basis, whether can be allowed—Vague allegation against Juror—Discharge of Jury—Charge to Jury, essentials of—Material omission—Misdirection.

The law does not provide for a mixed Jury on a communal basis and an accused person is not entitled to ask for such a Jury.

The Court has inherent jurisdiction to discharge a Jury on the ground of misconduct or necessity which must be established in fact; but a vague allegation unsupported by any affidavit alleging that a Juror has told an outsider that he has already formed an opinion regarding the case, without giving any details, is not such on which the Court ought to act.

The failure of the Judge in a Sessions trial to present in his summing up to the Jury the First Information Report in its true perspective, which affects the complicity of the different accused persons in the offence, as also the credibility of the evidence given by some of the important witnesses in the case, constitutes a serious misdirection sufficient to vitiate the verdict of the Jury.

The summing up contemplated by law is a fairly full and distinct statement of the evidence with such advice as to the legal bearing of that evidence and the weight which properly attaches to the several parts of it, as a sound judicial discretion would suggest. The Judge must formulate and specify simple issues for the consideration of the Jury, and collate the evidence pro and con bearing upon the issues in order to assist the Jury to arrive at a correct decision thereon Merely summarising the evidence, examination-in-chief, cross-examination and re-examination of the different witnesses who have deposed at the trial and putting before the Jury all that has been said by the witnesses or by the lawyers appearing on the two sides, and huddling together important facts as well as trivial points without any attempt at discrimination, instead of aiding the Jury only confuses them and does not comply with the object which the law has in view. Where there are several accused persons in a case the strength or weakness of the evidence of the witnesses as against each accused individually should be pointed out to the Jury. C JESSARAT v. EMPEROR, 29 C. W. N. 526; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 729; 26 Cr. L. J. 1009 833

——— ss. 307, 439—Trial by Jury—Disagreement between Judge and Jury—Reference to High Court, when to be made—Failure to make reference—Power of High Court to direct that reference should be made.

It is ordinarily a matter entirely within the discretion of the Sessions Judge as to whether he should or should not make a reference to the High Court under s. 307 of the Cr. P. C. This discretion, however, should always be exercised when the Judge thinks that the verdict is not supported by the evidence; it is the only way in which a miscarriage of justice by a perverse verdict of a Jury can be remedied by the High Court. It is not necessary that before making a reference the Sessions Judge should be satisfied that the verdict is perverse, it is sufficient that he should be clearly of opinion that a reference is necessary for the ends of justice If in a case in which for the ends of justice a reference is necessary the Sessions Judge fails to make the reference and thus deprives the High Court of an opportunity to deal with the case on its merits, he does something more than merely acting in the erroneous exercise of his discretion. He fails to exercise his jurisdiction and this failure operates to the prejudice either of the Crown or of the accused, and it is well within the power of the High Court under s. 439 of the Cr. P. C. to direct the Sessions Judge in such a case to submit the case to the High Court for its consideration under s. 307 of the Cr. P. C. C SARODA CHARAN MISTRI v. EMPEROR, 41 C. L. J. 320; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 795; 26 Cr. L. J. 1006 606

——— s. 337—Pardon—Offences exclusively triable by Sessions Court—Pardon relating to other offences, validity of—Commitment, whether can be quashed on ground of want of evidence.

A pardon can be granted under s. 337, Cr. P. C., by a Magistrate enquiring into a case exclusively triable by a Court of Session along with one not so triable, and the fact that there may be other offences which are not so triable will not invalidate the pardon granted in respect of the offence exclusively triable by the Sessions Court. But once the pardon is granted the approver is an approver with regard to the whole case and not with regard to some of the accused only.

A commitment can be quashed on a point of law only, and not on the ground that there is no evidence on the Committing Magistrate's record to sustain the charge. N ISMAIL v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1045 965

——— s. 342—Examination of accused, mode of.

It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to the nature of the examination of an accused person under s. 342 of the Cr. P. C. It is not necessary, nor is it desirable, to examine the accused in great deal or to force him to disclose his defence so as to enable the prosecution to take advantage of it when the witnesses for the accused are examined.

Where the act with which the accused is charged is of a simple nature and the accused is examined before the charge is framed, and, after the charge has been framed and prosecution witnesses have been further cross-examined, he is asked whether he has any further statement to make and he replies in the negative, it cannot be said that the requirements of s. 342 of the Cr. P. C. have not been complied with. Pat MOHAMMAD NASIRUDDIN v. EMPEROR, 4 Pat. 459; 26 Cr. L. J. 954; 6 P. L. T. 588 106 ——— ss. 342, 364—Examination of accused—Statement made by Pleader, whether compliance with section—Omission to comply with provisions of s. 364, effect of.

One of the essential points for which s. 342 of the Cr. P. C. provides is that the accused himself should have an opportunity of making his statement directly to the Court and not through the intervention of a Pleader. A statement made by the Pleader on behalf of an accused person does not constitute compliance with the provisions of that section.

The provisions of s. 364 of the Cr. P. C., are mandatory and an omission to comply with those provisions vitiates a trial. C MESER BEPARI v. EMPEROR, 29 C. W. N. 939; 26 Cr. L. J. 1032 920

——— ss. 345, 435—Record called by District Magistrate for transfer of case to another Magistrate—Magistrate, former whether has jurisdiction to record composition.

When a District Magistrate calls for the papers of a case under s. 435 of the Cr. P. C. with a view to withdraw the case from the file of the Magistrate before whom it is pending and to refer it for trial to another Magistrate, the case is no longer on the file of the former Magistrate and his jurisdiction over the case is suspended. An order made by that Magistrate recording a composition of the offence and acquitting the accused under s. 345 of the Cr. P. C. after the order of the District Magistrate calling for the record is void and of no effect. B In re MARCTI VITHU, 27 Bom. L. R. 350; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 247; 49 B. 533; 26 Cr. L. J. 996 596

——— s. 360—Deposition of witnesses read over by clerk, validity of—Failure to comply with provisions of section, effect of.

The depositions of the witnesses in a criminal trial, as soon as they were completed, were read over to the witnesses by the clerk and their signatures were taken, while the Court was recording the statements of other witnesses in the case:

Held, that the procedure was not warranted by law and did not amount to a compliance with the provisions of s. 360 of the Cr. P. C.

The omission to comply with the provisions of s. 360 of the Cr. P. C., vitiates a trial. C ADILADDI v. EMPEROR 26 Cr. L. J 1016 840

——— s. 360—Deposition read over by witness himself and admitted correct—Section, whether complied with.

The fact that the deposition of a witness is read over by the witness himself and is admitted by him to be correct, does not amount to sufficient compliance with the provisions of s. 360 of the Cr. P. C. C In re SAHORALI MOLLA, 26 Cr. L. J. 951 103

——— s. 403—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 120-B, 193, 467, 471—Trial for offence under s. 193

—Acquittal—Charge under ss. 467, 471 on identical facts, whether can be proceeded with.

Accused was charged with an offence under s. 193 of the Penal Code and was acquitted after a careful trial. He was subsequently charged under ss. 467 and 471 read with s. 120-B of the Penal Code upon facts which were wholly inseparable from the facts upon which the previous case against him had proceeded:

Held, that the present charge could not be proceeded with in view of the previous trial. C CHERAGALI BEPARI v. SATISH CHANDRA GHOSE, 26 Cr. L. J. 1023 847

——— s. 423—Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920), ss. 159 (1), 163 (1)—Conviction under s. 159—Appeal—Conviction, whether can be changed to one under s. 163.

Petitioner was convicted of an offence under s. 159 (1) of the Madras Local Boards Act. On appeal the Appellate Court found that the section under which the accused had been convicted had no application but it went on to convict the accused under s. 163 (1) of the Act. On revision:

Held, that the petitioner not having been charged with or tried for or convicted of an offence under s. 163 (1) of the Madras Local Boards Act, the Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to change the conviction to one under that section. M In re THIRUPPAL KADALNATHA PILLAI, 21 L. W. 520; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 706; 26 Cr. L. J. 1036 924

——— s. 423—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 147, 323—Charge and conviction under s. 147—Appeal—Conviction, whether can be altered to one under s. 323.

In the absence of a charge under s. 323 of the Penal Code framed against an accused person during the trial, a conviction under s. 147 of the Penal Code cannot be altered in appeal to one under s. 323 of the Code. C RAKHAL CHANDRA BISWAS v. JAMINI KANTA BANERJEE, 26 Cr. L. J. 1018 842

——— ss. 423, 439—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 302—Appeal, admission of—Enhancement of sentence, notice of, when to be given—Practice—Murder—Death sentence not inflicted by Sessions Judge—Revision—Interference by High Court.

Where a case comes to the knowledge of the High Court by an appeal being filed against a conviction it is not desirable, if the appeal is admitted, to issue a notice at the same time for enhancement of the sentence under s. 439 of the Cr. P. C. It is incongruous that the Court in the same breath should admit the appeal of the accused, and should issue notice calling upon him to show cause why the sentence should not be enhanced, especially where the sentence proposed to be inflicted in the notice to enhance is the sentence of death. The proper procedure is to deal first with the appeal and then to consider whether a notice to enhance should be issued.

If after an appeal has been heard on its merits and dismissed, a notice to enhance the sentence is issued, the accused has still the right under sub-s. (6) of s. 439 of the Cr. P. C. to show cause against his conviction, but any attempt to set aside the conviction would not have much chance of success.

It is only in very rare cases that the High Court will interfere with the order of a Sessions Judge sentencing a man convicted of murder to transportation for life because the circumstances of the case appear to him not to demand the sentence of death. The High Court will interfere only in cases in which the sentence of death is the only possible sentence to be inflicted. B MANGAL NARAN v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 968; 27 Bom. L. R. 355; 49 B. 450; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 268 424

——— s. 436—Discharge of accused—Further enquiry, when to be directed—Revision.

A District Magistrate or a Sessions Judge has power to order a further enquiry under s. 436 of the Cr. P. C., even when the Magistrate has recorded all the evidence for the prosecution.

Where a Sessions Judge after going carefully through the evidence comes to the conclusion that the finding of the Magistrate is either perverse or manifestly at variance with the evidence which he had recorded, and makes an order for further enquiry under s. 436 of the Cr. P. C., the order directing a further enquiry is not illegal, improper, and incorrect and cannot be interfered with in revision. O KARHLEY v. JAGANNATH PRASHAD, 10 O. & A. L. R. 576; 11 O. L. J. 611; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 180; 1 O. W. N. 302; 26 Cr. L. J. 959 111

——— s. 439. See PENAL CODE, 1860, s. 417 426

——— s. 476. See EVIDENCE ACT, 1872, s. 30 593

——— s. 476. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, s. 12 SCH. I. ART. 154 417

——— s. 476, applicability of—Statement made to Magistrate in his executive capacity—Magistrate, whether can take action—Intended bigamous marriage—Magistrate, whether can stop.

Section 476 of the Cr. P. C. applies only when a false statement is made in the course of judicial proceedings.

A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to stop an impending bigamous marriage. S SHAFI MOHAMED v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1044 964 ——— ss. 476, 476-B—Application for order directing prosecution—Appeal—Death of applicant pending appeal, effect of—Right, whether survives.

Where a private person moves a Court to take action under s. 476 of the Cr. P. C., but the Court refuses to take such action, and the applicant files an appeal but dies during the pendency of the appeal, the right to carry on the appeal does not survive to his legal representatives or to anybody else. A NEHAL AHMAD v. RAMJI DAS, L. R. 6 A. 85 Cr., 47 A. 359; 26 Cr. L. J. 1008 608

——— s. 488—Maintenance of wife and children—Neglect to maintain—Offer to maintain children effect of.

With regard to the maintenance which can be directed to be paid to a wife under s. 488 of the Cr. P. C. in case of her husband's negligence or refusal to maintain her, there is a special proviso to the section that if the husband offers to maintain his wife on condition of her living with him, and she refuses to live with him, the Magistrate may consider any grounds of refusal stated by her and may make an order under the section notwithstanding such offer if he is satisfied that there is just ground for so doing.

With regard to the maintenance of children, however, it is sufficient under sub-s. (1) of s. 488 of the Cr. P. C. if neglect or refusal to maintain them is proved. On such proof the Magistrate can make an order for the payment of a monthly allowance for the maintenance of each child to such person as the Magistrate from time to time directs. An offer to maintain the children in future is not sufficient of itself to debar the Magistrate from making the order. The Magistrate will be entitled to consider the circumstances in which the offer is made, and whether it is right and proper that the children, if not in the custody of the father, should be handed over to him. B DAVID SASSOON v. EMPEROR, 27 Bom. L. R. 359; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 259; 26 Cr. L. J. 975; 49 B. 562 431

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— s. 488 (3)—Maintenance order—Application for execution—Objection, whether can be considered—"Sufficient cause," meaning of.

The language of cl. (3) of s. 488 of the Cr. P. C. contemplates a person, against whom an order for maintenance has been made, coming into Court when execution of the order is applied for and showing cause why the order should not be executed. The Court is then bound to consider the sufficiency of the cause alleged by him and to refuse execution of the order if it is satisfied that the cause is sufficient and to grant execution if it is not so satisfied.

The Legislature has deliberately used the expression "sufficient cause" in cl. (3) of s. 488 of the Cr. P. C., intending that the Magistrate before whom the matter comes up should be in a position to use his judicial discretion having regard to all the circumstances and that such judicial discretion should not be fettered or limited by any definite rules. The expression is wide enough to include all possible considerations that may be submitted to the Magistrate in such circumstances. M THEETHARAPPA PILLAI v. MEENAKSHI AMMAL, 48 M. L. J. 494; 21 L. W. 702; 26 Cr. L. J. 953; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 715 105 ——— ss. 523, 524—Magistrate when can act on his own authority—Limitation, whether applies to possessor of property.

The period of six months prescribed by s. 523 of the Cr. P. C. applies only to a person other than the original possessor.

Under s. 523 the Magistrate to whom a report is made is competent to act on his own authority and it is only when action is contemplated under s. 524 that orders of a Magistrate of the class mentioned therein are to be obtained. S YARU v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1048 968

——— s. 526—Transfer of case—Hindu-Muhammadan case—European Magistrate, desirability of.

Where a Hindu-Muhammadan question is involved in a criminal case it is desirable that the case should be heard by a European Magistrate. L MANGAT v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1056 976

——— ss. 526, 528—Transfer application—Procedure.

The High Court will not ordinarily entertain an application for a relief which could equally well be granted by a subordinate Court until recourse has first been had to that Court. It will not, therefore, entertain an application for transfer unless the District Magistrate or the Sessions Judge has been moved in the first instance.

Where, however, notices have been issued and the matter has been argued the matter may be dealt with on the merits in order to avoid unnecessary repetition. A RAVI CHANDER SAHAI v. SUNDAR SINGH, L. R. 6 A. 87 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 960 112 ——— ss. 537, 540—Criminal trial—Additional evidence called by Court after close of defence case—Opportunity of rebuttal, absence of—Procedure.

After the close of the defence evidence in a criminal case the Magistrate called the Sub-Inspector of Police as a Court witness as he considered him a material witness to help him in the elucidation of the case. After recording the evidence of this witness in the absence of the Counsel of the accused, who were not asked as to whether they wished to rebut this additional evidence, the Magistrate proceeded to deliver judgment on the same day without hearing any further arguments:

Held, that the omission of the Magistrate to give an opportunity to the accused to call evidence in rebuttal of the additional evidence and to hear arguments thereon, was an illegality which was not curable under s. 537 of the Cr. P. C., and which vitiated the trial. L SHUGAN CHAND v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1035 923

Criminal trial—Charge, proof of—Liability for act of agent—Benefit of doubt—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 409—Criminal breach of trust—Intention—Proof.

An important principle of Criminal Law is that the guilt of an accused person must not only be proved beyond any reasonable doubt but that it must be proved strictly in accordance with the law. An accused person is on his trial in respect of a particular charge and to import matters into the trials not relevant to the charge is equivalent to trying him as to matters on which he has no opportunity to defend himself.

The criminal intention necessary to be proved in order to sustain a conviction under s. 409 of the Penal Code is a matter of inference from the facts proved.

There can be no criminal liability for the act of an agent.

Where the conduct of the accused is as much consistent with his guilt as with his knowledge of the guilt of another and the anxiety to protect him, the benefit of the doubt must be given to the accused. O BISHAMBHAR NATH BAJPAI v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1042 962 ——— Defence witness, evidence of, whether can be treated as evidence in support of prosecution.

The evidence of a defence witness cited by a co-accused cannot be treated as prosecution evidence against the other accused in the case. A BAHORU v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1018 842

Custom—Benares District—Haq chaharum, right to recover—Judgment in which right admitted, value of—Halat dehi, entry in, value of.

The District of Benares is a permanently settled District and there was no Regular Settlement in that District in 1883, but there was a revision of Settlement in that year and in substitution for a proper wajib-ul-arz a document called the halat dehi was prepared. In addition to the record of other matters it contains a memorandum of existing customs as ascertained by Settlement Officials during the course of the Settlement operations. An entry in such a record that haq chaharum was realised by the proprietor of a mahal on sale of houses is of considerable importance in proving the existence of the custom.

The mere fact that in a suit to recover haq chaharum the vendor confessed judgment and the vendee allowed the case to be decreed without contest does not establish that the judgment is of no weight as an instance in which the right to recover haq chaharum was held to exist. If the existence of the custom is well-known the vendor and the vendee may very well not think it worth their while to contest the case. A SRI LAL GOAIKA v. KESHO DAS, L. R. 6 A. 93 Rev. 368

Custom—contd.

——— Non-proprietor, sale of house by—Suit by some proprietors to recover possession—Decree, form of.

Where a non-proprietor sells his residential house in the village, and a suit is brought by some of the members of the proprietary body to recover possession of the site from the purchaser, the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree for possession of the site jointly with the other co-sharers in the village as against the purchaser, together with an injunction directing the latter to remove the materials of the house within a reasonable period. L JHANDU MAL v. SINGH RAM, (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 380 123

——— Partition, effect of—Wajib-ul-arz prepared in partition proceedings—Minor co-sharer, whether bound.

A custom of pre-emption recorded in a wajib-ul-arz is not necessarily abrogated by the partition of the village. It is open to the co-sharers to adopt that custom in its entirety or to modify it in order to adapt it to the altered constitution of the village.

It must be presumed that a minor co-sharer was duly represented during partition proceedings by some lawful guardian, who looked after his interests, and a wajib-ul-arz prepared in the partition proceedings must, therefore, be held to be binding on all the parties to the partition proceedings. A KHUDAYAR KHAN v. RAHAT KHAN, L. R. 6 A. 269 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 446; 47 A. 494 415 ——— Widow's estate—Succession, when opens.

It cannot be laid down as a general proposition that the right of a widow of a life-estate without power of alienation must mean that the succession opened at the date of the husband's death and not at the date of the widow's death. O MOHAMMAD GHAFOOR KHAN v. MEHDI HASAN KHAN, 12 O. L. J. 253; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 523 356

——— Gift—Collateral allowed to take possession of land with consent of other collaterals, effect of—Extinction of line of donee—Reversion of land to heirs of donors.

After the death of a proprietor his collaterals permitted one of themselves, who had married the widow of the deceased to take possession of the land belonging to the deceased, without receiving any consideration:

Held, that the transaction must be regarded as a gift by the collaterals in favour of the second husband of the widow of the deceased, and that, on the extinction of the latter's line, the property must revert to the heirs of the donors. L HARPHUL v. BHAG MAL 370

——— Landlord and tenant—Tenants, whether entitled to sell site of house—Mixed question of law and fact—Custom, whether reasonable—Village Pandauli, Ghazipur District.

The question whether by custom a tenant is entitled to transfer the site of his house in the village abadi is a mixed question of law and fact and in second appeal the question of sufficiency or insufficiency of the evidence in support of such a custom may be gone into.

Such a custom is really only a question of title and no question of the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the custom can arise.

Ordinarily in a pure agricultural village the zemindar is owner of every bit of land in the village and whoever asserts that a mere resident in the village, not being a co-sharer, is entitled to sell the site of his house must prove his case by weighty evidence.

In village Pandauli in the Ghazipur District the occupiers of village sites are entitled to sell their houses as they stand, viz., the sites as well as the materials thereof. A RAFIQ v. SHANKAR LAL, L. R. 6 A. 109 Rev 749 ——— Pre-emption—Mahal becoming property of single proprietor—Pre-emption, right of, whether can be enforced.

The "dastur dehi" of a village prepared at a certain settlement provided that if any co-sharer desired to transfer his property he must offer it first to co-sharers who were near relations and then to co-sharers in the patti, mahal or village, and that if none of these persons were desirous of acquiring the property he was at liberty to transfer to a stranger. At the time when the Settlement took place and for some years afterwards one of the mahals of the village was the exclusive property of a single proprietor, but subsequently it became divided among several proprietors. One of these proprietors made a sale in favour of a stranger and some of the other proprietors in the mahal brought a suit to pre-empt the sale:

Held, that the mere fact, that at one time the mahal was the property of a single owner, did not indicate the disappearance of the entire village community and that under the terms of the "dastur dehi" the plaintiffs were entitled to pre-empt the sale. A DALIP v KHAZAN SINGH, 23 A. L. J. 249; L. R 6 A. 256 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 362 340

——— Proof of custom — Wajib-ul-araiz, successive, entries in, value of—Presumption—Burden of proof—Period during which proof of custom necessary—Later entries, amplifying categories of pre-emptors, effect of—Partition, effect of—Suit brought at instigation of strangers, whether liable to be dismissed—Houses and buildings, whether appertain to zemindari.

A period of one hundred years, and even of fifty five years, is not necessarily too short for the growth of a custom of pre-emption in the United Provinces where such a custom is well-known to be very common.

A village was owned by a single proprietor between the years 1818 and 1820. The Wajib-ul-arz of 1833, however, contained an entry recognizing the existence of the custom of pre-emption in the village. The entry was repeated with fuller details in the Wajib-ul-arz of 1860 and again in the Wajib-ul-arz of 1885. The Wajib-ul-arz of 1833 recognized only one category of pre-emptors, but that of 1860 recognized three categories including the one mentioned in the earlier wajib-ul-arz, and the Wajib-ul-arz of 1885 recognized four categories, also including the one mentioned in the Wajib-ul-arz of 1833. In a suit for pre-emption brought by a person who belonged to the category of pre-emptors which was recognized in all the three wajib-ul-araiz as against a stranger:

Held, (1) that in order to prove the existence of a custom of pre-emption the plaintiff was entitled to rely on the entry in the wajib-ul-arz of the last Settlement of 1885, which raised a prima facie presumption that there was a custom of pre-emption existing in the village, and could supplement this evidence by the entries in the earlier Wajib-ul-araiz of 1860 and 1833 as corroborative evidence;

(2) that as the entries in these wajib-ul-araiz raised a prima facie presumption in favour of the plaintiff the burden lay on the defendant to show the contrary by producing evidence to rebut that presumption;

(3) that the mere fact that more than one hundred years prior to the suit and about fifty five years prior to the last Settlement the village was owned by a single proprietor was not sufficient to rebut the presumption arising from the entries in the successive wajib-ul-araiz;

(4) that the preferential right of the plaintiff having been recognized in all the wajib-ul-araiz, the addition of new categories of pre-emptors in the Wajib-ul-araiz of 1860 and 1885 did not negative the existence of a custom of pre-emption in favour of a person belonging to the category recognized in all the wajib-ul-araiz

The mere fact that an entry with regard to pre-emption in later wajib-ul-araiz is fuller than an earlier one does not raise a presumption that the wajib-ul-araiz do not constitute a record of custom, for the later wajib-ul-araiz may very well be mere amplifications of the previous wajib-ul-arz. The case may, however, be different where the entries in the later wajib-ul-araiz absolutely contradict the entries in the previous wajib-ul-araiz and cannot be reconciled with them.

An entry in the wajib-ul-arz of an exclusively Hindu village situate within the Gorakhpur District made in the Settlement of 1885, with regard to the existence of a custom of pre-emption, is entitled to special weight and the Court is entitled to presume that the Settlement Officer, before making the entry, was fully satisfied of a custom of pre-emption having existed in the village.

Where a fresh wajib-ul-arz is not prepared at a partition, it does not necessarily follow as a matter of law or principle that the custom or contract in force before the partition is no longer to have effect or operation. In the absence of a contract to the contrary the old custom would continue even after the partition. The partition, however would have the effect of confining the right to the new physical units created at the time of the partition. Under the pre-existing custom persons who were jointly liable for payment of Government revenue would have had a right of pre-emption as against a stranger. After the partition those proprietors whose shares are situated in another mahal are no longer under any joint liability to pay such a revenue. Owners of one mahal can, therefore, in no sense be called co-sharers of a vendor qua the share sold in another mahal. In order, therefore, to establish that a right of pre-emption exists in such a case it is not sufficient for a plaintiff to show merely that previous to the partition a custom of pre-emption existed in the village. It is necessary for him to show, either on the construction of the wajib-ul-arz or by other evidence, that the custom of pre-emption which obtained in the unpartitioned mauza had survived on partition of that mauza into separate mahals so as to give a sharer in one of the new mahals a right to pre-empt property in another of those mahals, in which he was not a sharer at the date of the sale.

The mere fact that a plaintiff has instituted a suit for pre-emption at the instigation of other persons would not by itself disentitle him from getting a decree. If the plaintiff has a legal right to pre-empt, it is unnecessary for the Court to consider from what source he is going to procure the pre-emption money. If after obtaining a decree he allows any stranger to come in or attempts to transfer the property to such stranger it would be open to the co-sharers of the village to bring a suit for pre-emption.

In the absence of evidence to the contrary houses or buildings situate within the area of a zemindari appertain to the zemindari and are included in and pass with it. A ABHAINANDAN PRASAD v. PASHPAT NATH PANDE, 23 A. L. J. 283; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 449; 47 A. 470 298 ——— Pre-emption -Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, construction of - Sale in favour of co-sharer in different thok—Co-sharers in same patti, whether entitled to pre-empt.

A wajib-ul-arz provided that a co-sharer desiring to sell his property must offer it first to his own brothers, then to his cousins and nephews, then to co-sharers in the same patti, then to co-sharers in the thok and then to co-sharers in the village, and that if none of these persons were desirous to take the property, the vendor would then be at liberty to sell to a stranger. A sale was effected by a co-sharer in favour of a co-sharer in a different thok, and a suit was brought to pre-empt the sale by persons who were co-sharers in the same khewat and patti with the vendor:

Held, that the entry in the wajib-ul-arz provided for pre-emption inter se between the various classes of pre-emptors specified therein and that the plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled to a preferential right of pre-emption as against the vendee. A KAMODA SINGH v. RAM CHAND, L. R. 6 A. 281 Civ. 434 ——— Succession—Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, construction of- Widow, whether owner or life-tenant—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 48—Custom, evidence of—Accepted interpretation of wajib-ul-arz, relevancy of.

A wajib-ul-arz laid down that on the death of a proprietor his widow would be entitled to his share whether the deceased was separate from his brother or joint, but that the widow would not have any right of transfer. The widow was not given a right to adopt which was given to male owners, and it was further provided that the share of the deceased would be obtained by that person who was nearer in degree:

Held, (1) that the widow having been specifically made a successor to her husband and it not being stated that she would only have the usufruct she must be regarded as a full owner with certain restraints put on her rights of ownership;

(2) that where a widow succeeded to her husband no property devolved on the other heirs of the deceased and succession to the deceased opened out on the death of the widow and that the person nearest in degree to the deceased at the time of the death of the widow was entitled to succeed to the exclusion of all other heirs.

Where the interpretation of a clause of a wajib-ul arz is accepted by certain members of a family, the fact is admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit between the members of the family to show how a custom applying to the family was interpreted by members of that family. O SHARFUDDIN v. NIAMAT ALI 8

Declaration of title and possession, suit for—Plea of tenancy—Title, proof of—Procedure—Form of decree.

In answer to a suit for declaration of title to and recovery of possession of a certain piece of land the defendant pleaded that he was in possession of the land in dispute under a lease granted to him by one of the co-sharers of the plaintiff's vendor, to whose share the land in dispute had fallen on a partition, and that he was, therefore, not liable to ejectment. It was found that the plaintiff had established his title to the land in dispute but his suit was dismissed on the ground that he had failed to prove that the defendant was not a tenant or that the tenancy had been lawfully determined:

Declaration of title and possession—concld.

Held, (1) that the plaintiff having established his title to the land in dispute it was the duty of the defendant who set up a tenancy from one of the co-sharers of the plaintiff's vendor to establish such a tenancy, and to show that the nature of the tenancy was such that it was binding upon the plaintiff;

(2) that if the defendant failed to prove the existence and the binding nature of his tenancy the plaintiff's suit must be decreed;

(3) that if the defendant was successful in establishing a tenancy which would be binding against the plaintiff, the plaintiff would still be entitled to a decree declaring his title to the property and the liability of the defendant to pay rent to the plaintiff. C ANU BISWAS v. GOPAL SHEIKH 642

Decree-holder, one of several, purchasing property at auction-sale in lieu of decretal amount—Purchase, whether on behalf of all decree-holders—Presumption.

Ordinarily if one of several decree-holders purchases property belonging to the judgment-debtor at the auction-sale in lieu of the decretal amount, the purchase, in the absence of anything positive to the contrary, must be deemed to have been made on behalf of all the interested decree-holders. The conduct of some of the decree-holders may, however, preclude such a presumption in a particular case. A MAKHAN LAL v. SOHAN LAL, 23 A. L. J. 257; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 331 665

Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), s. 15-D. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 11 716

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 4—Easement, definition of—Easement and freehold right, distinction between—Adverse possession—Projection over neighbour's land—Right acquired, nature of.

Where any part of the house of one owner projects over the soil of a neighbouring owner, the right acquired by the first owner is in the nature of possession of the column of air occupied by the said projection and the right is in the nature of the diminution of the freehold of the neighbouring owner and not merely in the nature of an easement.

The right of easement as defined by s. 4 of the Easements Act is something less than the right of freehold and that something can be acquired for the benefit of the freehold under certain circumstances as laid down in the Easements Act, but this does not mean that whatever is for the benefit of the dominant owner must necessarily be an easement and nothing else.

The shutters of the windows of the plaintiff's house opened on the defendant's land and the plaintiff also had certain weather-frames attached to his windows which projected over the defendant's land. The shutters and the weather-frames had existed for a period of over twelve years:

Held, that the plaintiff had acquired a right to maintain the shutters and the weather-frames by adverse possession and that he was entitled to restrain the defendant from building on his land so as to interfere with the right of the plaintiff to open Easements Act—concld.

the shutters on the defendant's land or to interfere with the weather frames. B BAHADARMAL GURMUKHRAI NEMNI v. MOHANLAL SUCHAND, 27 Bom. L. R. 536; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 335 1008 ——— ss. 22, 27—Easement, exercise of—Dominant and servient owners, duties of.

Although under s. 22 of the Easements Act, the dominant owner must exercise his right of easement in the mode which is least onerous to the servient owner, the owner of the servient tenement must not, under s. 27 of the Act, so deal with the servient tenement as to render the easement incapable, or more difficult, of enjoyment by the owner of the dominant tenement. N VENKATRAO v. BAPU 899

Estates Partition Act (V B C of 1897)—Batwara papers. See EVIDENCE ACT, 1872, ss. 11 694

——— ss. 5, 119—Proprietor in possession of fractional share in estate—Allotment on partition—Jurisdiction, meaning of—Error in mode of partition—Civil suit, whether maintainable.

Sub-clause (3) of s. 5 of the Estates Partition Act applies only to cases where a proprietor has an undivided share held in common tenancy in specific mouzas forming part of the parent estate but where he has no interest which extends over the whole estate; in other words, it applies only to proprietors who have an interest in some out of the total number of villages constituting the estate.

A proprietor of a mahal which is composed of two mouzas and who is in possession of a fractional interest in each is not entitled to claim an allotment in each mouza representing his assets in that mouza.

A Court is said to exercise jurisdiction when it exercises its power to adjust any jural relationship between the parties before it.

A Court has jurisdiction to decide rightly as well as wrongly and if a Deputy Collector has, in making a partition, disobeyed the provisions of sub-cl. (3) of s. 5 of the Estates Partition Act and, instead of making an allotment under that sub-clause, has proceeded under sub-cl. (5), then that error cannot be remedied in a Civil Court. Section 119 of the Act would be a clear bar. Pat RADHAKANTO PARHI v. MATHURA MOHAN PARHI, 2 Pat. 403; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 187 274

——— ss. 7, 83, 99—Ejectment suit—Tenure, existence of—Burden of proof—Private arrangement, effect of.

Where after a partition under the Estates Partition Act a proprietor brings a suit for ejectment and the defendant pleads the existence of a tenure in answer to the suit and proves such existence, it is for the plaintiff to make out circumstances which would entitle him to a decree. That is to say, he must make out a case under s. 99 of the Act, and in order to do so he must prove that the estate that has been partitioned was held in common tenancy and that the tenure was not created by him. If he succeeds in proving this he will get a decree for khas possession or joint possession with the defendants to the extent of his share, according as he is the sole owner or only a co-sharer in the estate from which he seeks to eject the defendant. The fact that the estate was held in common tenancy has to be proved by the plaintiff. The existence of the tenure has to be proved by the defendant. The plaintiff has to prove that the tenure was not created by him. If the defendant can prove that it was created by any other proprietor of the estate, it will hold good as regards the land finally allotted to the share of such proprietor.

Estates Partition Act—concld.

There is no presumption in law that because an estate has been partitioned under the Estates Partition Act, it must necessarily have been held by the proprietors in common tenancy and not in severalty.

The private arrangement described in s. 7 of the Estates Partition Act is not necessarily the same private arrangement that would prevent the application of s. 99 of the Act. If it is found that the estate was held not in common tenancy but in severalty in pursuance of some private arrangement amongst the parties, s. 99 will not have any application.

Unless the plaintiff who is suing in ejectment can bring his case within s. 99 of the Act, he must take his estate subject to the tenure of the defendant. C BAMA CHARAN KAR v. PYARI MOHAN GANTAM 581 Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 11—Estates Partition Act (V B. C. of 1897)—Batwara papers, entries in, admissibility of, as against stranger to proceedings.

Entries in batwara papers are in no way binding upon strangers to the proceedings under the Estates Partition Act.

So far as a stranger is concerned the only way in which these papers can be treated as evidence would be under s. 11 of the Evidence Act. C RAHIMUDDIN SARKAR v. UMESH CHANDRA KHASNABISH 594 ——— ss. 11, 13, 21—Landlord and tenant—Suit for rent—Order for delivery of possession—Statement as to rent, admissibility of.

A statement contained in an order for delivery of possession as to the rent payable in respect of the land, is not admissible in evidence in a suit between the landlord and the tenant in which the rent payable is in dispute. C CHANDRA MOHAN TALUKDAR v. SHAIKH ELIM 512 ——— ss. 25, 26, 167—Confession made to Police Officer in foreign territory, whether admissible—Conviction—Appeal—Conviction, whether can be upheld.

For the purpose of applying the provisions of s. 26 of the Evidence Act it is immaterial whether the accused was in Police custody in British territory or in foreign territory at the time when he made the confession which is sought to be put in evidence against him.

Where a confession has been improperly admitted in evidence it is permissible for an Appellate Court under s. 167 of the Evidence Act to uphold the conviction, if independently of the confession the Court is of opinion that there is sufficient evidence on the record to justify the conviction, but where the Court is unable to say how far the judgment of the Trial Court and the opinion of the Assessors was influenced by the improper admission of the confession and where it is probable that if the Assessors had not known of the confession at all they might have looked at the rest of the evidence in an entirely different light, the conviction cannot be upheld.

Per Fawcett, J.—There is no qualification of the expression "Police Officer" in s. 25 or s. 26 of the Evidence Act and a confession made to a Police Officer whoever that Police Officer may be, and whether he is a Police Officer in British territory or a Police Officer in foreign territory, is inadmissible. B MHABLI RAMA SAIL v. EMPEROR, 26 Bom. L. R. 706; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 480; 26 Cr. L. J. 984 520

Evidence Act—contd.

——— s. 30—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 476, inquiry under—Confession made during inquiry, whether admissible against co-accused.

An enquiry was commenced under s. 476 of the Cr. P. C. with a view to ascertain whether a complaint should be lodged against an accused person with regard to a document produced by him in the course of certain judicial proceedings. In the course of the enquiry the accused made a confession, implicating himself and certain other persons in the commission of the offence. As a result of the confession the accused and the persons named by him were placed on their trial for forgery and cognate offences :

Held, that the confession made by the accused in the course of the enquiry under s. 476 of the Cr. P. C. was made by him while he was in the position of an accused person, and was admissible in evidence against him under s. 30 of the Evidence Act. B ANAJI VENKATESH MUJUMDAR v. EMPEROR, 26 Bom. L. R. 614; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 445; 26 Cr. L. J. 993 593 ——— ss. 35, 79—Death register, entries in, admissibility of—Official document—Certified copy—Presumption of correctness.

A death register kept at a Police station is an official book and the entries in it are admissible in evidence under s. 35 of the Evidence Act.

The correctness of a certified copy of an official document must be presumed under s. 79 of the Evidence Act.

Decrees of Courts are not to be lightly treated on a mere suspicion or on a mere supposition based on no special evidence that they are collusive. A SHIB DEO MISRA v. RAMPRASAD, 22 A. L. J. 690; 46 A. 637; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 79 988

——— ss. 41, 42, 43—Judgment not inter partes, admissibility of. See HINDU LAW—MITHILA SCHOOL 849

——— s. 48. See CUSTOM—SUCCESSION 8

——— s. 91—Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 35—Unstamped transfer deed—Secondary evidence, admissibility of.

No secondary evidence can be given of the contents of a letter of assignment of a debt which is admitted to have been unstamped. M DORAISWAMI MUDALIAR v. DORAISWAMI IYENGAR, (1925) M. W N. 180; 48 M. L. J. 432; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 753 382

——— s. 92. See C. I. F.. CONTRACT, INCIDENTS OF 67

——— s. 92—Deed executed by manager of joint Hindu family—Members of family, whether parties to deed.

Where a Hindu father, as manager of a joint family, executes a deed of transfer of family property as representing all the members of the family who are joint with him, such other members must be treated as parties to the document within the meaning of s. 92 of the Evidence Act. B RAMCHANDRA HANMANT DESHPANDE v. KASHINATH LAXMAN DESHPANDE, 27 Bom. L. R. 241; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 288 804

——— s. 92—Mortgage of several items of property—Sale of one item—Oral agreement between mortgagee and purchaser to release item purchased from mortgage, whether can be proved.

A mortgagee of several items of property agreed with a subsequent purchaser of one of the items to release that item from the mortgage security. In a suit by the mortgagee to enforce the mortgage against all the items mortgaged:

Evidence Act—contd.

Held, that the purchaser of the item released was not precluded by the provisions of s. 92 of the Evidence Act from giving evidence of the oral agreement between himself and the mortgagee whereby the latter agreed to release the item purchased by the former from the mortgage.

Section 92 of the Evidence Act has no application if only some of the representatives-in-interest of the parties to a document are parties to the later oral agreement. M NARRA SRI SALIM v. KOGANTI BHUSHAYYA, 48 M. L. J. 280; (1925) M. W. N. 214; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 775 246

——— s. 92—Registered deed, cancellation of, mode of—Oral evidence of agreement or conduct, admissibility of.

A registered deed has to be cancelled by a registered deed and evidence of an oral agreement to rescind it or of conduct relied on as showing that the parties considered the registered transaction at an end is shut out by s. 92 of the Evidence Act. N NARBADJI v. GOPAL 29

——— s. 92, proviso (3)—Agreement in writing—Condition suspending obligation, whether can be orally proved.

In answer to a suit on a promissory note the defendant pleaded that he had executed a mortgage in favour of the plaintiff and that the promissory note in suit was passed to secure the plaintiff against any claim that might be made by a prior mortgagee who had been paid off but from whom the defendant had failed to obtain a re-conveyance:

Held, that the alleged agreement was not one to postpone an existing liability, but amounted to a suspension of the obligation attaching under the note until the necessity for enforcing the indemnity arose and could be proved orally under proviso (3) to s. 92 of the Evidence Act. B AHMED SAHEB BAPU SAHEB KAPRE v. UBHAIYA HARSI, 25 Bom. L. R. 867; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 44 37

——— s. 115. See AGRA PRE-EMPTION ACT, 1922, s. 14 414

——— s. 115. See SUCCESSION ACT, 1865, ss. 173, 174, 175, 176 404

——— s. 115—Estoppel—Compromise of suit—Holding liable to sale in default of payment—Execution—Objection that holding is not transferable, whether can be taken.

A rent suit was compromised and one of the terms of the agreement was that in case of default of payment of the decretal amount by the judgment-debtor the decree-holder would be entitled to realise the amount by the sale of the judgment-debtor's holding. There was default in payment and the decree-holder proceeded to attach the judgment-debtor's holding. The judgment-debtor objected that the holding was not transferable and was, therefore, not liable to sale:

Held, that a representation having been made by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder that his holding was attachable and the decree-holder having acted upon that representation and having changed his position to his detriment, the judgment-debtor was estopped from contending that the holding was transferable and was not liable to attachment. Pat NIDHI PARIDA v. KARUNAKAR PADHAN, 1 Pat. 153; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 483 250

——— s. 115—Estoppel—Religious status, whether can be established by estoppel. See HINDU LAW—ADOPTION 357

Evidence Act—contd.

——— s. 115—Lease—Representation by lessor that lease conferred permanent rights upon lessee—Erection of buildings by lessee—Ejectment—Estoppel.

Plaintiff granted a lease to the defendant which contained the following clause:—"Whereas land is required by R. for the purpose of erecting buildings, putting up presses, etc., for trading, I agree to give a lease of 4 bighas of land to the aforesaid R. for the above purpose from year to year at an annual rental of Rs. 45 per bigha or total annual rental of Rs. 180." Some years afterwards defendant wanted to erect a substantial building on the land leased to him. He approached the plaintiff for the latter's express permission to put up the building. After certain negotiations the plaintiff informed the defendant that the lease granted to the latter was a permanent lease and gave him the right to erect buildings but that it did not entitle him to hold at a fixed rate and that the rent was liable to enhancement after proper legal notice. The defendant paid a nazarana for the permission to raise the structure and thereupon the plaintiff issued a "parwangi" to the defendant giving his sanction for the erection of the building. This document was in hindi, a language which the defendant did not understand, and contained a recital that the rights which were possessed under the lease would remain intact and that no other right would be created under the permit. The defendant put up the structure and the plaintiff subsequently sought to evict the defendant from the land leased on the allegation that the lease was only a lease from year to year:

Held, that the statement contained in the plaintiff's letter to the defendant, that the lease was a permanent one and gave the defendant the right to erect buildings, was a statement of fact and not merely an expression of opinion, and that the plaintiff was consequently estopped from seeking to evict the defendant from his holding, inasmuch as the defendant had been induced by the plaintiff's representation and conduct to believe that he had a fixity of tenure, although not of rent, in the land that had been leased to him.

If a man under a verbal agreement with a landlord for a certain interest in land, or under an expectation created or encouraged by the landlord that he shall have a certain interest, takes possession of such land with the consent of the landlord, and upon the faith of such promise or expectation, with the knowledge of the landlord, and without objection by him, lays out money upon the land, a Court of Equity will compel the landlord to give effect to such a promise or expectation. P C A. H. FORBES v. L. E. RALLI, 23 A. L. J. 548; 6 P. L. T. 404; 27 Bom. L. R. 860; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 146; 49 M. L. J. 48; 41 C. L. J. 543; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 119; (1925) M. W. N. 453 (P. C.) 318

——— s. 115—Transfer of non-transferable holding—Plea of non-transferability, whether can be taken by transferor—Estoppel.

Where the Legislature has declared an occupancy holding to be non-transferable, a tenant who has effected a transfer of such a holding is not estopped from setting up the plea of non-transferability of the holding as against his transferee. O PRATAB BALI v. SURESH DUTT, L. R. 6 A. (O.) 73; 2 O. W. N. 325; 12 O. L. J. 329; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 475 1030

——— s. 116—Landlord and tenant—Estoppel.

Evidence Act—concld.

A person who has been let into possession of premises as a tenant cannot deny his landlord's title however defective it may be, so long as he has not openly restored possession by surrender to his landlord. Even where the title to the premises rests with a third person if the defendant has been put into possession by the plaintiff the defendant would be estopped from denying the plaintiff's title. O DHANI RAM v. MAIKOO LAL, 1 O. W. N. 857 286

Execution of decree. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, s. 20, SCH. I, ART. 182 (5) 989

——— Decree against several defendants—Death of one defendant before decree, effect of—Decree, whether nullity—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 43.

Where a decree declares that the defendants are all jointly liable for the decretal sum, each defendant is liable by virtue of the provisions of s. 43 of the Contract Act for the whole debt, and it is open to the decree-holder to proceed against one judgment-debtor or all according as he pleases. The fact that one of the defendants happened to be dead at the time the decree was made does not affect the right of the decree-holder to recover the money in execution of the decree from all or any of the survivors.

Per Miller, C. J.—A decree passed against a deceased person is a nullity in so far as that deceased person is concerned. Where, however, one of several defendants happens to die before a decree is passed and no one is substituted in his place the whole decree passed in ignorance of his death is not a nullity. The decree is perfectly valid so far as the other defendants in the suit are concerned. Pat NATHUNI NARAYAN SINGH v. ARJUN GIR, (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 434; 4 Pat. 187; 6 P. L. T. 526 47 ——— Dismissal of proceedings for default, erroneous—Revival of proceedings—Sale—Private sale by judgment-debtor—Priority.

Certain property belonging to a judgment-debtor was attached in execution of a simple money decree. A sale proclamation was issued but before the sale could take place the execution proceedings were dismissed on the ground that the decree-holder had failed to pay the cost of the proclamation. But the order distinctly stated that the attachment would continue. Four days later the decree-holder again applied for execution and the Court, holding that its previous order dismissing the execution proceeding for default of the decree-holder was wrong, proceeded with the execution from the stage at which matters stood on the date of its previous order, and the property was sold in due course, being purchased by the decree-holder himself. In the meantime, that is to say, after the order passed on the second application of the decree-holder, but before the sale could be held, the defendant purchased the property from the judgment-debtor. In a suit by the decree-holder purchaser to recover possession of the property from the defendant:

Held, that the decree-holder had obtained a complete title to the property and that the defendant having purchased the property in the teeth of the orders of the Execution Court, stating that the attachment still subsisted and that the execution could proceed from the stage at which it had arrived on the date on which the proceedings were erroneously dismissed for default had obtained no title to the property at all and that, therefore, the plaintiff's suit must succeed.

Where an execution case is dismissed for default of the decree-holder an order directing the attachment to subsist is an improper order, but it is not a nullity and is binding on the parties to it. A MULAK v. BAL GOBIND, L. R. 6 A. 275 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 456 349 ——— Erroneous decree—Damages, action for.

No action will lie against any person for issuing execution or otherwise acting in pursuance of a judgment or order of a Court of Justice even though it is erroneous. A valid order, however erroneous in law or in fact, is a sufficient justification for any act done in pursuance of it. B BACHOO BHAIDAS v. VELJI BHIMSEY & Co., 25 Bom. L. R. 595; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 191 165 ——— Power of Executing Court to question decree—Interpretation of Statutes—New Act, whether can affect validity of decree passed before commencement.

An objection to the validity of a decree cannot be entertained by an Executing Court.

An Act cannot affect the validity of a decree passed before it came into operation, nor can an Act be made applicable to the case of such a decree, simply because an application for its execution is made after the commencement of the Act. N DURGAPRASAD v. THAKURPRASAD 72 ——— Sale of property together with arrears of rent—Decree for arrears of rent, whether included in sale.

An arrear of rent which is unpaid is still rent even though it has been merged into a decree. If money is still due, the mere obtaining of a decree does not change the nature of the arrear of rent, and the money due under the decree must still be regarded as an arrear of rent.

The applicant purchased certain property in execution of a decree "together with all moneys due from tenants in respect of arrears of rent and cesses or otherwise payable to the proprietors." Prior to the sale the judgment-debtors had obtained a decree for arrears of rent against certain tenants. The applicant sought to execute that decree by virtue of his purchase:

Held, that the decree represented arrears of rent and was included in the purchase of the applicant and that the applicant was, therefore, entitled to execute it. C JATINDRA NARAIN BHADURI v. CHANDRA NATH PRAMANIK 742

Extradition Act (XV of 1903), ss. 10 (4), 23—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 54 (7), 497—Bombay City Police Act (IV of 1902), s. 33 (g)—Arrest without warrant—Detention for purposes of extradition—Magistrate, jurisdiction of, to entertain application for bail.

Where a person is arrested in pursuance of the provisions of s. 54 (7) of the Cr. P. C. or under s. 33 (g) of the Bombay City Police Act, without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, and is detained under the provisions of s. 23 of the Extradition Act, the Magistrate under whose orders he is detained has jurisdiction to entertain an application for his bail.

Per Fawcett, J.—Section 23 of the Extradition Act covers the case of an arrest under s. 33 (g) of the Bombay City Police Act. B In re SHRIRAM SHAMBHUDAYAL, 26 Bom. L. R. 984; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 104; 26 Cr. L. J. 948 100

Forest Act (VII of 1878), s. 25 (d)—Berar Grazing Rules—Grazing license—Cattle belonging to licensee trespassing into reserve forest—Licensee, whether criminally liable.

There is nothing in the Grazing Rules for Berar framed under the Forest Act, that imposes criminal liability on a licensee for grazing for the acts of his servant.

A person who has obtained a grazing license under the Forest Act cannot be convicted of an offence under s. 25 (d) of the Act in the absence of evidence that he pastured the cattle in the reserve forest himself or permitted them by some overt act or negligent omission to trespass in the reserve forest. N FAKIRA SAMBHAJI v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1030 918

Fraud—Compromise signed by some of defendants—Decree against all defendants—Suit to set aside decree, whether maintainable.

A compromise was put in during the pendency of a suit signed by all the parties to the suit, except one of the defendants, but the Court proceeded to pass a decree on the basis of the compromise against all the defendants. The defendant who had not signed the compromise subsequently brought a suit for a declaration that the decree passed against him was void on the ground that it had been obtained by fraud:

Held, that it was the duty of the Court in the previous suit to satisfy itself that all the parties had consented to the compromise and that the failure of the plaintiff in the previous suit to inform the Court that one of the defendants had not joined in the compromise did not amount to fraud so as to entitle the defendant in the present suit to succeed. L PANNA LAL v. BALWANT, (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 431 250 ———Shares in Company, application for—Misrepresentation, nature of—Deception, proof of—Shares to be taken up by Directors, Agents, etc., meaning of—"Friend," meaning of.

In order to succeed in an action for deceit, a plaintiff must prove that he was actually deceived by the misrepresentation complained of.

Where the prospectus of a Company states that a certain number of shares are to be taken up by the Directors, Agents and their friends, the statement only means that the Directors, Agents and their friends are ready and willing to take up that number of shares, and not that at the date of the prospectus the stated number of shares has actually been taken up and allotted to the Directors, Agents and their friends. A person applying for shares in a Company on the assumption that the number of shares stated in the prospectus to be taken up by the Directors, Agents and their friends has actually been allotted to the Directors, Agents and their friends acts on a misreading of the prospectus and not on the faith of the representation which is actually made in the prospectus and cannot subsequently complain that he was induced to apply for the shares by a misrepresentation.

The word "friend" in such prospectus means not only a social but also a business friend. The business friend who applies for shares because in the course of his business dealing with the Directors he acquires a knowledge of the project, is correctly described in a prospectus as a "friend."

Where a certain number of shares are reserved for a particular person on the understanding that he will take up some of them himself and dispose of the rest among his friends, it is not a misrepresentation to state in the prospectus that the shares reserved for that particular person are to be taken up by him. B BANSIDHAR DURGADATT v. TATA POWER CO., LTD., 27 Bom. L. R. 330; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 272 547

Fraud—concld.

Gift—Muhammadan Law—Bonus to employee—Entry in account books, effect of—Contract—Implied consideration.

Plaintiff, a godown keeper in the employ of a Muhammadan firm, was credited with a bonus of a sum of money out of the profits of the firm in consideration of the good services rendered by him and of the profits made by the firm. Plaintiff alleged that the bonus was carried to his credit in the firm's books some years before and that in the following year he was allowed to draw out a portion of it, but that the defendant firm had since refused in spite of his demand to pay the balance:

Held, that on the facts stated the plaint disclosed a cause of action; there was a completed gift and a transfer of ownership in favour of the plaintiff; and, if ownership in the bonus was completely transferred and there was more than a mere promise without consideration to give the plaintiff a bonus, it was immaterial that the amount was originally of the nature of a bonus.

Per Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—It is well-known that apart altogether from the salary paid to the servants in Muhammadan firms the expectation is held out to them according to practice, that, if they should render exceptionally good service during the period of the settlement, they would be rewarded at the time of the settlement by the grant of a substantial bonus. If, in these circumstances, the servants put forth extra work which the masters find satisfactory and, in consideration thereof, a bonus is promised to them, it is really in law a promise for past consideration which is good under the Indian Law; and even apart altogether from any question of gift completed or not, the servant has a case on the footing of a contract which is clearly sustainable. M KANAKASABAPATHY MUDALIAR v. OOSMAN SAHIA, 47 M. L. J. 791; 20 L. W. 910; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 192; (1925) M. W. N. 279 760

Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61), ss. 79, 107. See U. P. MUNICIPALITIES ACT, 1916, ss. 19 to 27 51

——— s. 107—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 24—Transfer of case, application for—Dismissal by District Judge—High Court, power of.

The High Court has general powers of superintendence over all inferior Courts and in the exercise of such powers it can direct the transfer of a case, where a District Judge has refused to exercise the power vested in him by law under s. 24 of the C. P. C. C SOROJ BASHINI DEBI v. GIRIJA PROSHAD BHATTACHARJEE 170

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890)—Order appointing guardian—Order directing third person to make payment for minor's support, legality of.

There is nothing in the Guardians and Wards Act which entitles a Court when appointing a person guardian of a minor to order a third party, who is not in possession of any property belonging to the minor, to pay anything towards the minor's support. L MANSA RAM v. NAURATI, (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 427 650

——— s. 13—Application for appointment of guardian—Procedure—Evidence, opportunity to produce.

The appellant, who was one of the paternal uncles of a minor Muhammadan girl, made an application for appointment as guardian of the girl. The other uncles of the girl objected to the appointment on the ground that the minor's father had appointed the objectors guardians of the minor by Will, and that at the time of the application the appellant was prosecuting a suit against the minor in which he sought a decree that the minor had no share in her father's property. On the basis of these allegations, and without giving the appellant any opportunity of producing evidence, the Court dismissed the appellant's application. Under the Will relied upon by the objectors the whole of the property of the deceased had been left to them and nothing had been left to the minor. The appellant alleged that the Will was a forgery :

Held, (1) that the appellant should have been given an opportunity to prove his allegations and to rebut the allegations made by the objectors ;

(2) that if the Will was in fact a forgery it was not desirable to appoint the objectors as guardians of the minor ;

(3) that in any case the Court could not have made an order relying on the genuineness of the Will without taking evidence in support of the Will ;

(4) that, therefore, the order dismissing the appellant's application must be set aside and the case remanded to the lower Court for a fresh decision after giving parties an opportunity to produce evidence. L YUSAF ALI MAMOONJI v. ALIBHOY 646

——— s. 17—Guardian, appointment of -Litigious disposition, whether disqualification.

The mere fact that a person who is otherwise a fit and proper person to be the guardian of a minor is of a litigious disposition is not a sufficient cause for refusing to appoint him guardian of the minor. O SARWARJANG BAHADUR v. WAKAR ALI BEG, 12 O. L. J. 281; 2 O. W. N. 246; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 398 902 ——— ss. 19, 25—Father, whether can be appointed guardian—Custody of children, application for, whether maintainable.

By virtue of the provisions contained in s. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act, a father cannot be appointed the guardian of his minor children, but as their natural guardian he can take proceedings under s. 25 of the Act. O AHMAD AGHA v. ZOHRA BEGAM, 2 O. W. N. 242; 12 O. L. J. 441; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 421 1024

——— s. 30—Sale of minor's property by guardian —Sanction of Court, absence of, effect of—Subsequent sale in execution of decree—Priority.

The certificated guardian of a minor sold certain property which the minor had inherited from her father without obtaining the permission of the Court for the sale. Subsequently a person who held a decree against the father of the minor attached and sold the property in execution of his decree and the auction-purchaser obtained possession of the property. The successor-in-interest of the purchaser from the guardian thereupon brought a suit to recover possession of the property from the auction-purchaser :

Held, (1) that the sale by the guardian without the permission of the Court was voidable at the instance of the minor who would be entitled on coming of age to file a suit to get the unauthorised sale set aside, but that as long as such a suit was not brought and as long as no one obtained a better title to the property, the sale by the guardian in favour of the plaintiff would continue to be a valid sale ;

(2) that at the time of the auction sale the property could not be treated as the property of the minor which she had inherited from her father as it had already been sold and that, therefore, the auction-purchaser obtained no title under his sale ;

(3) that the right of the minor to sue to get the unauthorized sale set aside could neither be attached nor sold and that consequently the purchaser at the auction-sale could not resist the suit of the purchaser from the guardian or of his successor-in-interest, although the sale by the guardian was not sanctioned by the Court. B NARSINGACHARYA GOPALACHARYA v. TULSABAI RAMBHAT DANDAVATI, 27 Bom. L. R. 483; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 320 712

——— ss. 30, 47—Order cancelling alienation by guardian—Appeal, whether lies.

No appeal lies from the order of a District Judge, made under s. 30 of the Guardians and Wards Act, cancelling an alienation made by the guardian of a minor in contravention of the sanction of the Court. A LACHMI PRASAD v. BALDEO DUBE, 20 A. L. J. 390; 44 A. 458; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 14 251 ——— ss. 31, 48—Guardian, certificated, whether can alienate minor's property without sanction of Court—Benefit of minor—Natural guardian—Sanction of Court—Procedure, defective, effect of.

Once a person, whether he is a natural guardian or a stranger, is appointed guardian of a minor by order of the Court passed in accordance with the provisions of the Guardians and Wards Act, he is clothed with all the obligations imposed by that Act in dealing with the ward's property. It is not in his power to throw off those obligations by the exercise of his own volition and to pose as a natural guardian and act in that status.

An alienation of the minor's property by his guardian without the sanction of the Court cannot be upheld on the ground that the guardian happened to be the father of the minor and that the alienation was for the benefit of the latter.

An order passed by a Court in violation of such rules of procedure, however mandatory, as relate merely to the form of the order cannot be treated as a nullity. The omission to follow such rules of procedure can amount to no more than a mere irregularity or material irregularity in the circumstances of a particular case. On the other hand, an order passed by a Court in violation of such rules of procedure, the observance of which alone invests the Court with jurisdiction to pass the order, is a nullity.

The violation of the procedure prescribed by sub-s. (2) of s. 31 of the Guardians and Wards Act for recording an order granting permission to a guardian to alienate the minor's property, cannot be made the ground for brushing aside the finality of the order sanctioning the alienation which is provided for by s. 48 of the Act. The only condition by which the finality prescribed by s. 48 can be avoided is to establish that the order granting the permission was a nullity.

A transferee of a minor's property from the guardian of the minor cannot be made to suffer for defects in the procedure relating to the sanction of the alienation by the Court. The order of the Court granting the sanction is sufficient for his protection. O RAMESHWAR BAKSH SINGH v. RIDH KUER, 1 O. W. N. 775 238

Gujrat Talukdars' Act (VI of 1888), ss. 11, 15, 16.
See C. P. C., 1908, ss. 11, 100 588

Hindu Law, application of— Gonds — Raj-Gonds, whether governed by Hindu Law — Succession— Widow, estate taken by—Custom, proof of—Berar Waste Lands, Rules of 1865—Lease of village—Proprietary or patelki rights, acquisition of, mode of— Surrender by widow, whether can be challenged.

Gonds are not Hindus and as such are not governed by the Hindu Law.

Raj-Gonds are not the offspring of inter-marriages between Gonds and Rajputs, and though they have adopted the manners, customs and dress of the Hindus and worship Hindu deities, they are not governed by the Hindu Law.

On the death of a Raj-Gond his widow succeeds to his property as a full owner.

In order to establish a custom it must be shown to be ancient, certain and invariable.

It is open to a lessee of a village under the Berar Waste Lands Rules of 1865, to accept the proprietary or patelki rights under certain conditions, either during the continuance or at the expiry of the lease or to transfer the lease with the permission of the Deputy Commissioner. To constitute proprietary rights it is necessary that there should be an election by the lessee followed by an application and an agreement to abide by the conditions and the grant of a sanad conferring proprietary rights. The mere fact that on the expiry of a lease the assessment is raised and the lessee pays the enhanced assessment for some time is not enough to confer such rights on him.

An alienation by a widow can be challenged by her heirs only when it is an alienation of family property.

Where the widow of the lessee of a village under the Berar Waste Lands Rules elects not to apply for proprietary rights, but surrenders the lease for a consideration, that is not such an alienation as can be challenged by her heirs. N JANKUBAI v. PARVATI 1036

——— Berar — Stridhan — Property inherited by woman from father—Succession.

Under the Hindu Law prevalent in Berar a woman takes an absolute interest in property inherited by her from her father, and on her death it devolves on her daughter in preference to her son. N KRISHNA v. BAYAJI 1010

——— Money received by father—Pious duty of sons to re-pay amount received. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 11, EXPL. IV 1017

——— Adoption —Adoptive father and adopted son belonging to different sub-castes, effect of.

Under the Hindu Law for the purposes of inheritance each primary caste must adopt within its own limits and an adoption would not be invalid so long as the adoptive father and the adopted son belong to sub-castes of the same primary caste. A SHIB DEO MISRA v. RAMPRASAD, 22 A. L. J. 690; 46 A. 637; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 79 938

——— Brahmins—Adoptive father and son belonging to different gotras—Datta Homam, performance of, whether necessary.

Under the Hindu Law the ceremony of datta homam is essential to validate an adoption amongst Brahmins unless the adoptive father and son belong to the same gotra. B GOVINDAPRASAD v. RINDABAI, 27 Bom. L. R. 365; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 289; 49 B. 515 472 ——— by widow, effect of.

Under the Hindu Law the moment an adoption is made by a widow she is divested of her estate and the adopted son gets the whole of the property. M SUBBAMMA v. PAPAYYA, 48 M. L. J. 425; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 748 187

Hindu Law—contd.

——— Adoption of married person—Succession— Daughter of adopted son, rights of.

Where a married Hindu, who has a daughter, and is the sole owner of ancestral property, is adopted, his daughter does not pass into the adoptive family along with her father and is entitled to succeed to the property of her father as his heir, as in such a case the property goes to the heirs of the person adopted, as he was the last male holder, and not to the heirs of his father or any other ancestor. B MANIKBAI VISHNUDAS GUJJAR v. GOKULDAS RAMDAS KARADGI, 27 Bom. L. R. 414; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 363; 49 B. 520 816 ——— of orphan, validity of—Agarwallas, views of—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115—Estoppel —Religious status, whether can be established by estoppel.

Under the Hindu Law it is essential to the validity of an adoption that the adopted child should be "given" to the adopter by the father or, if he be dead, by the mother of the child. No other person has the right to give the child in adoption, nor can such right be delegated to anybody else. Therefore, a boy who has lost both his parents cannot be adopted.

Agarwallas generally adhere to Jainism and repudiate the Brahminical doctrines relating to obsequial ceremonies, the performance of shraddh and the offering of oblations for the salvation of the soul of the deceased, nor do they believe that a son, either by birth or by adoption, confers spiritual benefit on the father. An adoption among them is a mere temporal arrangement and has no particular spiritual object. Among them the qualifying age for adoption extends to the 32nd year; and the only ceremony consists in tying a turban round the head of the young man who is being adopted, in the presence of the principal men of the community and giving them a feast.

An Agarwalla Hindu purported to adopt an orphan and died shortly afterwards. His brother made representations to the effect that the adoption had taken place. Two years afterwards the brother also died. In a suit by the latter's daughter against the adopted son of her uncle to recover the property of her father, the defendant set up the plea that the plaintiff's father was estopped from challenging the defendant's adoption and that the plaintiff was consequently bound by the estoppel:

Held, that the representations of the plaintiff's father that the defendant had been adopted by his brother did not estop him or the plaintiff, who was his daughter, from challenging the validity of the adoption on the ground that the adoption being that of an orphan was invalid under the Hindu Law.

Quære:—Whether a status that rests on religious rules and religious sanctions and involves the performance of religious duties can be acquired by mere estoppel. P C DEARAJ JOHARMAL v. SONIBAI, 23 A. L. J. 273; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 118; 2 O. W. N. 335; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 97; 27 Bom. L. R. 837; 21 N. L. R. 50; 52 C. 482; 49 M. L. J. 173 (P. C.) 357 ——— Alienation by Hindu widow—Improvements by transferee—Transferee, whether entitled to value of improvements—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 51.

A person dealing with a Hindu widow would ordinarily be aware that she has only a life-interest, and he is expected to make enquiries, for instance, in the case of a mortgage, as to whether there is any legal necessity for the mortgage and any right in the widow to make the transfer. Section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act has no application to such a case. A RAJ RUP KUNWAR v. GOPI, 23 A. L. J. 207; L. R. 6 A. 206 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 261; 47 A. 430 44

——— Alienation by step-mother of minor, validity of—Subsequent alienation by minor after attaining majority—Mortgage by step-mother, whether antecedent debt.

A previous mortgage debt, if it created a good debt due from the mortgagor, would be an antecedent debt which would bind the estate and could form the consideration of a subsequent alienation.

The ordinary rule of Hindu Law is that no relation, except the parents, is entitled as of right to the guardianship of a minor and failing the parents another relative must derive his authority from the Court.

Under the Hindu Law the right of a bona fide encumbrancer who has taken from a de facto manager a charge on lands created honestly for the purpose of saving the estate or for the benefit of the estate is not, provided the circumstances would support the charge had it emanated from a de facto and de jure manager, affected by the want of union of the de facto with the de jure title.

A mortgage of property belonging to a Hindu minor executed by his step-mother who is not the de facto manager of the property is void, and cannot be subsequently ratified by the minor on attaining majority. If the minor subsequently alienates the property and the amount due under the mortgage executed by his step-mother is included in the consideration for the alienation, the amount represented by the previous mortgage cannot be regarded as an antecedent debt or as in any way justified by legal necessity. L CHANDU LAL v. MUKANDI, 26 P. L. R. 120; (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 503 40

——— ——— by widow—Necessity — Marriage of daughter.

The marriage of the daughter of a deceased Hindu is a duty cast on the estate of the deceased. Where the widow of the deceased has not in her hands enough money from her deceased husband's estate for the purpose of celebrating the marriage of her daughter, she is entitled to sell a sufficient portion of the estate of the deceased to provide funds for the marriage. Even though the widow has in her hands money of her own she is still entitled to employ the money of the estate for the purpose. She is not obliged to spend her own money and only to employ the money of the estate if her own is not sufficient. C SATISH CHANDRA NAG v. HARIPADA DE, 41 C. L. J. 209; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 689 43

——— ——— by widow—Widow, whether can challenge alienation.

The restrictions imposed by the Hindu Law on a widow's power of alienation of her husband's estate are inseparable from her estate and their existence does not depend on that of heirs capable of taking on her death. Therefore, a Hindu widow is entitled to restrain an alienation of immoveable property held by another widow on the usual life-tenure, where the former is entitled to succeed to the estate on the death of the latter. L SURJO v. DALELO, 2 L. C. 105 937 ——— Custom—Succession—Daughter-in-law, right of—Aroras of Kasur, Lahore District.

There is no custom among the Aroras of Kasur in the Lahore District whereby the widow of a predeceased son succeeds to the property left by her father-in-law in preference to the latter's reversioners, in contravention of the general rule of Hindu Law. L GOKAL CHAND v. NIHAL DEVI 3

——— Damdupat, rule of, applicability of. See MORTGAGE—SUIT 719

———, rule of, applicability of, to mortgage to which one party is non-Hindu—Assignment by non-Hindu debtor in favour of Hindu, effect of.

The rule of damdupat is not applicable to the case of a mortgage where only one of the parties thereto is a Hindu and the other is a non-Hindu. This rule cannot be let into the prejudice of a Hindu creditor by a non-Hindu debtor assigning his equity of redemption to a Hindu. N NARAYAN v. HAFIZ, (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 21 264 ——— Gift during illness, validity of—Marz-ul-maut, doctrine of, applicability of.

Under the Hindu Law, a deed of gift executed by a person during illness is not invalid. The principles of the Muhammadan Law of marz-ul-maut are not applicable to the Hindu Law. O SAT NARAIN v. KRISHNA DUTT, 12 O. L. J. 275; 2 O. W. N. 243; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 383 900 ——— Idol, nature of—Legal status — Shebait, position and powers of—Shebaitship, devolution of —Removal of idol, whether permissible.

A Hindu idol is a "juristic entity." It has a juridical status with the power of suing and being sued. Its interests are attended to by the person who has the deity in his charge and who is in law its manager, with all the powers which would, in such circumstances, on analogy, be given to the manager of the estate of an infant heir.

A person founding a deity and becoming responsible for the duties attached to its worship is de facto and in common parlance called shebait. This responsibility is discharged by a pious Hindu, either by the personal performance of the religious rites or by the employment of a Brahmin priest to do so on his behalf. The founder or his successor may confer the office of shebait on another.

Under the Hindu Law when the worship of a Thakur has been founded, the shebaitship is invested in the heirs of the founder, in default of evidence that he has disposed of it otherwise or that there has been some usage, course of dealing, or some circumstances to show a different mode of devolution.

There may be difficulties in adjusting the legal status of an idol to the circumstances and requirements of its protection and location and there may also be a variety of other contacts of such a "persona" with mundane ideas, but a family idol cannot be reduced to the position of a mere moveable chattel.

The Will of an idol in regard to its location must be respected. If in the course of a proper and unassailable administration of the worship of the idol by the shebait, it be thought that a family idol should change its location, the Will of the idol itself, expressed through his guardian must be given effect to. It is open to an idol acting through his guardian, the shebait, to conduct its worship in its own way, at its own place, always on the assumption that the acts of the shebait expressing the Will of the idol are not inconsistent with the reverent and proper conduct of its worship by those members of the family who render service and pay homage to it. P C PRAMATHA NATH MULLICK v. PRADYUMNA KUMAR MULLICK, 23 A. L. J. 537; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 139; 49 M. L. J. 30; (1925) M. W. N. 431; 41 C. L. J. 552; 2 O. W. N. 557; 27 Bom. L. R. 1064 (P. C.) 305

Hindu Law—contd

——Jains — Adoption by widow—Agreement between widow and adopted son, validity of—Direction to pay certain sum of money to widow's relative, whether can be enforced—Family arrangement, what amounts to—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 23—Persons not parties to agreement, whether can enforce agreement.

Per Mukerji, J.—A deed of adoption is more often than not executed after the ceremony of adoption has taken place. The law does not require that an adoption should be evidenced by a registered-deed. But as a precautionary measure, people do execute such deeds. In such a case any agreement that may have taken place before and as a consideration for the adoption between the adopter and the adoptee would find place in the deed of adoption and in any deed that the adoptee may himself execute.

Among Jains adoption is more a matter of custom than of spiritual necessity. Even a married man may be adopted among them.

Section 23 of the Specific Relief Act does not purport to be and is not exhaustive of the cases in which specific performance of a contract may be granted in favour of a person. The section itself simply says that specific performance of a contract may be obtained by the persons mentioned therein. It does not say that specific performance of a contract cannot be obtained by any person other than those mentioned in the section.

Per Lindsay, J.—There is no rule of general application in India which enables persons to bring suits upon contracts to which they are no parties. There could be no right of suit by a stranger to an agreement unless it can be shown that there has been a charge created in his favour or that under the agreement he is entitled to some beneficial interest as a cestui que trust.

A Hindu widow about to make an adoption to her husband cannot stipulate for gifts of her husband's estate to be made to her relations and to strangers by the adopted son after he is taken in adoption. An arrangement which makes the adoption conditional upon the adopted son agreeing to carry out the adoptor's directions to make such gifts cannot be recognised as valid. To allow an arrangement of this nature to be carried out would be to allow a Hindu widow to do indirectly what the law forbids her to do directly and such an arrangement cannot, therefore, be enforced. Any attempt to bind the adopted son by such conditions must fail; the conditions are void and the son takes the estate free from them.

In the United Provinces the consent of the husband is essential in order to enable a widow to make an adoption and while it might be conceded that consent so given would justify the widow in imposing reasonable conditions upon the adopted son for the protection of herself and the estate from which she is entitled to draw maintenance, it would not be assumed that the husband consented to arrangements made by the widow at the time of the adoption whereby extensive portions of his estate can be transferred by way of gift to members of his wife's family. The invalidity of such conditions cannot be cured by showing that the adopted son, a person of full age, assented to them. The invalidity arises out of the inherent disability of the widow under the Hindu Law to give away portions of her husband's estate and an attempt to impose conditions which would lead indirectly to such alienations being made is absolutely void as being ultra vires.

Hindu Law—contd.

Even if it can be assumed in such a case that the assent of the adopted son to such conditions creates a trust, the purpose of the trust being unlawful the trust cannot be enforced.

A family arrangement is an arrangement arrived at by members of the same family in settlement of doubtful claims, where there being uncertainty as to the rights of the various claimants, the dispute is composed by a settlement based upon acknowledgment of pre-existing title in the parties concerned. There must be a dispute, the parties must belong to the same family and the property which constitutes the subject-matter of the dispute must be the property of the family to which the parties belong.

A Jain widow adopted the defendant and shortly afterwards executed a deed of adoption wherein she directed the defendant to pay a certain sum of money to the plaintiffs, who were the brothers of the widow. The deed further provided that in case the defendant refused to pay the sum directed by the widow the money might be realized from her estate if necessary by the auction-sale of her property. Two days later the defendant himself executed a document in which he recited that he had been adopted in pursuance of instructions from the widow's deceased husband and that the widow had made certain arrangements concerning her property according to the directions of her husband. He declared that he would abide by all the conditions laid down in the deed executed by the widow and that his adoption was conditional on his acceptance of the stipulation contained in the deed. He bound himself to carry out the terms of the deed and declared that in case of his failure the conditions might be enforced in Court. In a suit by the plaintiffs to recover from the defendant the sum mentioned in the deed of adoption as being payable to them:

Held, Per Mukerji, J. (1)—that the agreement entered into by the defendant with the widow was supported by consideration and that the consideration was good and enforceable in a Court of Law;

(2) that the arrangement between the widow and the defendant might be regarded as a family arrangement and that the plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled under s. 23 of the Specific Relief Act to sue to enforce the arrangement as being beneficially entitled thereunder;

(3) that even if s. 23 of the Specific Relief Act was not applicable the plaintiffs were entitled to sue to enforce the arrangement inasmuch as the defendant had bound himself to carry out the arrangement and a trust had been created in favour of the plaintiffs;

(4) that the sum which was directed to be paid to the plaintiffs had been made a charge on the estate and that the plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled to a declaration that the estate in the hands of the defendant was charged with such payment.

Per Lindsay, J.—(1) that the arrangement between the widow and the defendant did not amount to a family arrangement;

(2) that the plaintiffs not being parties to the arrangement were not entitled to sue to enforce the arrangement;

(3) that the arrangement was void and ultra vires having regard to the provisions of the Hindu Law with regard to the power of a widow to make alienations of her husband's estate. A MITTAR SAIN v. DATA RAM 724 ———— Joint family—Alienation by co-parcener, whether can be challenged by successors-in-interest —Widow, decree obtained against, whether binding on reversioners—Collusion—Burden of proof.

A Hindu co-parcener has no absolute right to transfer family property without legal necessity. A transfer of family property by a co-parcener which is not supported by legal necessity is not binding on the estate and is liable to be challenged by the other co-parceners or by the successors-in-interest of the alienor.

A Hindu widow represents the estate for the time being though her rights are to a certain extent qualified. If she fights a case against a third party, she represents the estate and fights the case in a representative character on behalf of all the subsequent reversioners. A decree fairly and properly obtained against her in the absence of any fraud or collusion would be binding on the reversionary heirs. It is only when the decree relates to a matter personal to her, that it would not be so binding. It is immaterial, however, that the decree is an ex parte decree, unless there is anything special which would suggest that it was not fairly and properly obtained. In the absence of any such evidence an ex parte decree obtained against the widow would be binding on the reversioners.

A Hindu executed a simple mortgage of certain property. After his death the mortgagee obtained an ex parte decree on the mortgage against the widow of the deceased. Plaintiff, who was the next reversioner to the estate of the deceased, brought a suit for a declaration that the mortgage was without necessity and that the decree was not binding on him:

Held, that in order to succeed the plaintiff must prove not only that there was no legal necessity for the mortgage, but also that the ex parte decree obtained against the widow was not binding on him owing to collusion or some other circumstance which would take away its binding character. A SARJU PRASAD ROUT v. MANGAL SINGH, 23 A. L. J. 254; 47 A. 490; L. R. 6 A. 201 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 339 294 ———— Alienation by manager—Benefit to family—Alienation, whether can be challenged.

Under the Hindu Law a transfer of family property can be made by the manager of the family either for legal necessity or for the family benefit.

Where by an alienation of family property it is intended to get rid of an estate which is inconveniently situated, which has no sir land attached to it, and which is not sufficiently profitable, and to substitute for it something that is likely to yield a larger income by an extension of the family business then being carried on, the transaction cannot be challenged. A JAGMOHAN AGRAHRI v. PRAG AHIR, 23 A. L. J 209; 47 A. 452 27 ———— between daughter's son and maternal grandfather, whether possible.

There is no rule of Hindu Law under which a daughter's son and his maternal grandfather can be deemed members of a joint Hindu family. A DANGAR v. JAHANGIR, L. R. 6 A. 87 Rev. 698 ———— Deposit of title-deeds by manager—Suit to enforce mortgage—Receiver, appointment of —Discretion of Court.

The members of a joint Hindu family, along with others, formed a limited Company. The manager of the family made a deposit of title-deeds of property belonging to the family to secure an over-draft upon the banking account of the limited Company. The adult members of the family were aware of the deposit of title-deeds and a large portion of the over-draft was used for the purposes of the joint family business. In a suit to enforce the equitable mortgage created by the deposit of the title-deeds, a Receiver was appointed in respect of the mortgaged property. On appeal:

Held, that an inference could be drawn from the circumstances under which the deposit was made that the money was raised for legal necessity and that, therefore, it could not be said that the discretion of the lower Court in appointing a Receiver was exercised wrongly or in a manner which was not judicial. C RAM KUMAR LAL v. CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA & CHINA, 41 C. L. J. 203; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 664 375

———— Joint family—Eldest brother, whether represents minor brothers. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, s. 7, SCH. I, ART. 144 177

———— Mortgage by co-parcener—Minor co-parcener, whether bound by mortgage—Previous mortgage by father, paid off by subsequent mortgagee, effect of.

Plaintiff was a minor co-parcener in a joint Hindu family. His mother, acting in the capacity of his guardian, joined with his uncle in executing a mortgage of family property. The mortgagee redeemed a previous mortgage on the property which had been effected by the father of the minor. In a suit by the minor it was held that the mortgage executed by his mother and uncle was not binding on the minor, and it was not shown that the money borrowed under the mortgage effected by the minor's father, which had been paid off by the subsequent mortgagee, was borrowed for any legal necessity or to satisfy any antecedent debt:

Held, that the minor was not liable for the amount of the mortgage-money due under the mortgage effected by his father which had been paid off by the subsequent mortgagee. O PARTAB SINGH v. SHAMSHER BAHADUR SINGH, 10 O. & A. L. R. 1389; 1 O. W. N. 694 66

———— Mortgage by father — Necessity—Recital in mortgage deed, value of—Father, whether represents family in litigation—Suit against father —Sons, whether necessary parties—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 22—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 9.

The father of a joint Hindu family is competent to represent the family for purposes of litigation in suits.

A mortgagee of joint family property from the father brought a suit to recover possession of the property against the father. The Trial Court directed that the sons of the mortgagor should be brought on the record as defendants, and when they were so brought the suit was dismissed as barred by limitation on the ground that the sons were made parties to the suit more than twelve years after the date of the mortgage:

Held, (1) that the suit could be carried on properly against the father alone who represented the joint family for the purposes of the litigation and to whom it was open to raise the defence that though he admitted the execution of the mortgage deed the money due thereunder could not be recovered by sale of the joint family property unless the plaintiff proved legal necessity for the debt or payment of antecedent debts out of the loan;

Hindu Law—contd.

(2) that, therefore, the sons were not necessary parties to the suit and the suit could not be dismissed as barred by time.

A recital in a deed of mortgage executed by the father of a joint family that the money has been borrowed for family necessity is merely a piece of evidence and in the absence of any other evidence it does not amount to proof of family necessity. O RAJVANTA v. RAMESHAR, 12 O. L. J. 235; 2 O. W. N. 225; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 440 180 ——— Joint family — Mortgage by manager — Interest, high rate of—Necessity—Burden of proof—Appeal, second—Finding of fact.

Where money is borrowed by the manager of a joint Hindu family on the security of family property at an unusually high rate of interest, the burden lies on the mortgagee to prove that there was necessity to borrow at so high a rate.

Where in such a case the lower Appellate Court having rightly appreciated the question of the burden of proof arrives at the finding that the necessity was sufficiently urgent to account for the rate of interest charged, the finding cannot be interfered with in second appeal. O SAGAR SINGH v. MATHURA PRASAD 1035 ——— ——— Mortgage by manager—Mortgage-suit —Necessity, absence of—Prayer for personal decree made at late stage, whether can be entertained—Privy Council appeal—Respondent lodging case but failing to appear at hearing—Costs—Practice.

In a suit to enforce a mortgage executed by the manager of a joint Hindu family it was found that the money had not been borrowed for legal necessity and the suit was dismissed. In an appeal before the Privy Council it was contended that the manager who had executed the mortgage was liable on the personal covenant for the debt contracted by him and it was prayed that a simple money decree may be passed against him:

Held, that having regard to the fact that no such claim had been made in the Courts below the claim for a simple money decree against the manager could not be entertained, as the entertainment of any such claim would require an amendment of the plaint, and the case was not such in which their Lordships were prepared to exercise their discretion to allow an amendment.

In a Privy Council appeal, where the respondent lodges a case, but does not appear at the hearing, and the appeal is dismissed, the respondent is entitled to costs up to the lodging of the case. PC GAJADHAR MAHTON v. AMBIKA PRASAD TEWARI, 41 C. L. J. 450; 27 Bom. L. R. 853; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 169; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 126; 49 M. L. J. 238; (1925) M. W. N. 532; 22 L. W. 306; 47 A. 459 (P. C.) 292 ——— Person other than karta, whether can sue and be sued in representative capacity.

Even where a person is not the karta of a joint Hindu family there may be circumstances which would entitle a Court to hold that such person sued or was sued as representing the entire joint family. The question, however, whether the entire family was or was not represented by the person suing or the person who was sued is one of fact to be determined on the particular circumstances of each case. O ANPURNA KUAR v. JAGESHAR MISRA, 1 O. W. N. 842 208 ——— Property sold in execution of decree against father—Sons, whether bound—Immoral debts —Burden of proof.

Hindu Law—contd.

Where property belonging to a joint Hindu family has been sold in execution of a simple money-decree obtained against the father alone, the sons cannot get rid of the sale without proving that the debt in respect of which the decree was obtained in execution of which the property was sold had been incurred by the father for what the Hindu Law would call an immoral purpose. A RANJIT SINGH v. RAMMAN SINGH 654 ——— Joint family—Sale by co-parcener—Possession obtained by purchaser, whether wrongful—Mesne profits, liability for.

Although the purchaser of a particular portion of joint family property or of the interest of one of the members of the family in any particular item of joint property may not be entitled to possession, yet if he gets possession his possession cannot be considered as wrongful against the other members of the family and he is not liable to account for the mesne profits. All that the law allows is that a co-parcener is entitled to recover possession from an outsider of the joint family property or any portion of it. But if he stands by and allows an outsider to remain in possession, then although his share in that property or interest in that property is not thereby affected, he is not entitled to demand an account for the past profits. B GANGABISAN JEEVANRAM MARWADI v. VALLABHDAS SHANKARLAL, 26 Bom. L. R. 464; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 433; 48 B. 428 703 ——— ——— Stridhan, succession to—Property inherited, whether joint family property—Survivorship.

When the stridhan property of a woman devolves on her sons who form a joint Hindu family at the time of the mother's death, the sons take the property as co-owners or tenants-in-common without benefit of survivorship, and on the death of one of the sons the property so inherited by him goes to his widow and not to his surviving brothers. A JAMNA DAS v. KUNWAR BAI, L. R. 6 A 243 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 447 440

——— Lex loci in Berar — Mitakshara and Mayukha, priority between.

In Berar, following the Bombay Deccan, the Mitakshara is paramount and the 'Mayukha' is of secondary consideration, being only relied upon when the Mitakshara is silent or doubtful. N NARAYAN v. TULSIRAM, (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 329 979 ——— Maintenance—Wife living separately from husband, whether entitled to maintenance—Heirs of husband, liability of.

A Hindu wife left her husband's house on account of the ill-treatment and indignities to which she was subjected and, after several years, during which she made unsuccessful attempts to be received back into the house of her husband, she brought a suit for arrears of maintenance against her husband and the other members of his family. During the pendency of the suit the husband died:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff had not under the circumstances of the case become disentitled to maintenance on account of her voluntary separation from her husband;

(2) that the plaintiff's right to maintenance was not put an end to by the death of her husband pending the suit but survived against his heirs-at-law whether they succeeded by right of survivorship or by inheritance.

Hindu Law—contd.

Per Spencer, Offg. C. J.—The obligation of a Hindu husband to maintain his wife is one arising out of the status of marriage. It is a liability created by the Hindu Law in respect of the jural relations of the Hindu family. Where there is no contract between the parties to a marriage, as among the Hindus, a suit by the wife for maintenance is not a suit based upon contract but is a suit arising out of a civil relation resembling with a contract which is specially provided for in Art. 128 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. The heirs of a Hindu who is liable for maintenance are equally bound by the obligation which binds him.

Per Sirinivasa Iyengar, J.—Under the Hindu Law the wives of co-parceners are also members of the joint family, though they may not be entitled to shares in the estate of the family or to enforce partition thereof, and the family is bound to maintain all the members of the family. It is true that the Hindu Law imposes an obligation on a Hindu husband to support his wife without reference to any property or share possessed by him, but when the joint family is possessed of property a claim by a wife against her husband need not be regarded merely as a suit for enforcement of any personal obligation but may well be regarded as a suit against the family itself, represented by the husband through whom alone, so long as he is alive, she has to obtain the relief. On his death the true legal representatives in the action would be the surviving co-parceners of the family, if any, or else the personal legal representatives of the deceased husband.

The arrears of maintenance due and payable to a wife by her husband may be regarded as a debt within the meaning of the Hindu Law which is binding on the family. M BOMMADEVARA RAJA LAKSHMI DEVI AMMA v. B. NAGANNA NAIDU, 21 L. W. 461; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 757 571 ——— Marriage *in approved form—Presumption —*Asura form—Test—Marriage by exchange, whether asura*—Married sister, whether legal guardian—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 44, scope of —Alienation by person not* de jure guardian, how far binding on minor—Right to impeach void alienations, whether personal.

The presumption under Hindu Law is that a marriage is in an approved form.

The essence of the Asura form of marriage is the taking of a price for the bride.

In the case of a marriage by exchange, where a girl from one family is married to a boy of another family and vice versa, there being no question of the price for a bride, the marriage is in an approved form and not in the asura form.

Under the Hindu Law the married sister is not the guardian of her unmarried sister.

Article 44 of the Limitation Act has no application to a sale effected not by a guardian but by a wholly unauthorized person.

A person who is not a de jure guardian but purports to assume the guardianship of the estate of a minor Hindu is not in a better position than a stranger and has no authority to make any alienation.

The right of a minor to set aside an alienation which is void is not personal but is also available to the transferee or the heir of the minor. N PUNJABRAO v. ATMARAM 1018

——— Mitakshara family—Presumption of jointness—Separation—Agreement between co-parceners

Hindu Law—contd.

—Ascertainment of shares—Separation, whether can be inferred—Revision—Construction of document—Inference as to intention of parties.

A Mitakshara family is presumed in law to be a joint family until it is proved that the members have separated.

The co-parceners in a joint family can by agreement amongst themselves separate and cease to be a joint family, and on separation are entitled to partition the joint family property amongst themselves.

But the mere fact that the shares of the co-parceners have been ascertained does not by itself necessarily lead to an inference that the family had separated.

A member of such a joint family can separate himself from the other members of the joint family and is on separation entitled to have his share in the property of the joint family ascertained and partitioned off for him, and the remaining co-parceners, without any special agreement amongst themselves, may continue to be co-parceners and to enjoy as members of a joint family what remained after such a partition of the family property.

If a joint Hindu family separates the family or any members of it may agree to re-unite as a joint Hindu family, but such a re-uniting is for obvious reasons, which would apply in many cases under the law of the Mitakshara, of very rare occurrence, and when it happens it must be strictly proved as any other disputed fact is proved.

The fact that any member of a joint family has separated himself from his co-parceners may be proved by his suing for a partition of the joint family property, and if the suit is decreed the date of his severance from the joint family will, if nothing else is proved, be treated as the date when the suit was instituted.

In a suit for partition which proceeds to a decree which is made, the decree for a partition is the evidence to show whether the separation was only a separation of the plaintiff from his co-parceners or was a separation of all the members of the joint family from each other.

In construing documents the Court is entitled to draw all legitimate inferences as to the intention of the parties to them, and the inferences so drawn are findings of facts. P C PALANI AMMAL v. MUTHUVENKATACHALA, (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 49; 48 M. L. J. 83; 6 P. L. T. 133; 21 L. W. 439; (1925) M. W. N. 330; 3 Pat. L. R. 126; 27 Bom. L. R. 735; 29 C. W. N. 846; 23 A. L. J. 746; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 143; 48 M. 254 (P. C.) 333

——— Mitakshara—Inheritance—Sisters, contest between—Poor sister, priority of—Test.

In order to apply the rule of the Mitakshara that in succession to the estate of their father a sister who is "unprovided for" shall take precedence over a sister who is "enriched", each case must be looked at from the point of view of comparative poverty or wealth of the parties, and it is not essential that the poor sister should point to some definite acquisition of property by the rich sister. It is sufficient that her surroundings are such that she can be regarded as a rich woman, for instance, that she is married into a family of position and wealth. A MANKI KUNWAR v. KUNDAN KUNWAR, 23 A. L. J. 183; 47 A. 403; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 375 121 ——— Property acquired jointly, whether joint family property—Presumption—Intention.

Under the Hindu Law where the members of a joint family acquire property by or with the assistance of joint family funds or by their joint labour, such property is the joint property of the persons who have acquired it, whether it is an increment to ancestral property or whether it has arisen without any nucleus of descended property.

Hindu Law—contd.

If a single individual acquires a fortune by his own exertion, without any assistance from ancestral property, his issue would take no interest in such property. Where, however, several brothers acquire property by their joint exertions in the absence of any indication of an intention to the contrary, the property would be owned by them as joint family property, and in that case their male issue would necessarily acquire a right in it by birth, for under the Mitakshara system there can be no joint family property in respect of which the male issue of the joint owners do not take a share by birth. If there is satisfactory evidence of an intention to treat the property not as joint family property but as joint property only, i. e., as the joint self-acquisition of the acquirers, such intention will be given effect to. But the presumption is in favour of its being regarded as joint family property. N MOTILAL v. HAJIMAL 809 ——— Mithila School—Mitakshara, authority of —Gift by husband to wife—Estate taken by wife—Alienation, power of—Consent of husband, effect of—Construction of deed—Benami—Burden of proof—Grant of property ba farzandan naslan bad naslan, effect of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 2, 8, applicability of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O. XXI, r. 90—Mortgage-decree—Sale—Objection by judgment-debtor, dismissal of —Legal representatives, whether can maintain suit to recover property—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 41, 42, 43—Judgment not inter partes, admissibility of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 95, 142—Suit for possession—Plaintiff not bound by decree—Decree, whether must be set aside—Limitation—Muhammadan Law—Heba-bil-ewaz, whether gift or sale.

Plaintiffs' father executed a document described as a heba-bil-ewaz in favour of his wife transferring the property in dispute to her in consideration of a certain sum of money which he received from her and with which he paid off a decree which had been obtained against him and in execution of which the property in dispute was about to be sold. The document contained the following recital:—"Although I, the executant, tried to procure money from creditors, etc., for payment of the decretal amount to the said decree-holder, I could not get it and I see no means to safeguard my milkiat properties from sale as mentioned in the inventory. As the sale will entail loss of the said two milkiat properties on sale, belonging to me, the executant, my share of 7 annas $8\frac{3}{4}$ gandas situate in Taluka Laheri asli with dakhli, Pergana Jabdi, T. N. 1522 appertaining to Registration Office, District Darbhanga and Sub-District Madhubani and Thana Lockhe, with trees fruit-bearing and non-fruit-bearing and ahar; and pokhar and reservoir and tank and cucha and pucca wells, and sair, and salt sair and houses occupied by tenants, and all my zemindari rights which up to now have been in my possession without the co-partnership of any one to my wife Musammat Anuragin Bahuasin, having taken Rs. 41,532-6-8-16 cr. 16 ms. in cash, I have made of my free-will and accord, heba-bil-ewaz, and having with the said amount paid up the amount of the decree of the aforesaid decree-holder and got the property released from sale have put the aforesaid Musammat in possession of the subject of the heba. The aforesaid Musammat should by becoming possessed of the subject of the heba spend the produce of the property with sons generation after generation (ba farzandan naslan bad naslan). I, the declarant, or my heirs and representatives (quam moqaimain) shall have no right or concern in demanding the subject of the heba or the consideration money from the aforesaid Musammat or her heirs and representatives. Should I, the executant, my heirs and representatives make any claim or put forward any demand in respect of the gift properties or the consideration thereof the same will be deemed null and void. I have, therefore, given in writing these few words in the shape of a heba-bil-ewaz so that it may be of use when required." The donee obtained possession of the property under the deed of gift. Some years afterwards the donor and the donee together mortgaged the disputed property to the defendant to secure the re-payment of a certain sum of money which was then due by the donor to the defendant. The defendant obtained an ex parte decree against the donor and the donee upon his mortgage took out execution and purchased the property in execution of the decree. The judgment-debtors applied for setting aside the sale but the donee died during the pendency of the application and the plaintiffs were substituted in the record as her representatives. Eventually the application was refused and the sale was confirmed. On the death of their mother the plaintiffs entered upon possession of the disputed property and in 1906, they instituted a suit for confirmation of their possession on the ground that the mortgage-bond had been obtained from their mother without her knowledge and that the mortgage-decree was fraudulent. Their father was a pro forma defendant in the case. The cause of action was stated as having arisen a few months before the institution of the suit when the frauds therein stated had been discovered. That suit was withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit. The plaintiffs' father died shortly after. On the 24th July 1918 the plaintiffs instituted the present suit for recovery of possession of the disputed property from the defendant and for mesne profits on the allegation that the property belonged to their mother and that their father had no right to execute a mortgage-bond in respect of it and that the rights of their mother and of themselves were not affected by the mortgage-suit, the decree, the sale and the delivery of possession. The cause of action was stated to have arisen on the 10th of December 1906, when possession had been obtained by the defendant as auction-purchaser. It was admitted that the plaintiffs and their father and mother were governed by the Mithila School of Hindu Law:

Hindu Law—contd.

Held, per Das, J., (1) that it was not open to the plaintiffs, who had been substituted as the legal representatives of their mother in the application to set aside the auction-sale, to re-agitate the questions which could have been raised in that application in a regularly constituted suit between the parties;

(2) that inasmuch as the plaintiffs' mother in spite of the dismissal of her application to set aside the auction sale might still have maintained a suit for setting aside all the proceedings as a fraud upon her from start to finish, it was open to the plaintiffs to maintain such a suit, but that such a suit would be barred by time under Art. 95 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act;

(3) that it was not open to the plaintiffs' mother to object to the validity of the mortgage on the ground that the property was inalienable inasmuch as she could not claim adversely to her own deed, and that her failure to set up the inalienability of the property as an answer to the mortgage-suit did not operate as constructive res judicata so as to preclude the plaintiffs from setting up the inalienability of the property as a ground for the declaration that the mortgage and the decree and sale following upon it were not binding upon them, and that consequently the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain the suit and to show that the property in dispute was inalienable in the hands of their mother;

(4) that if the property in dispute was inalienable the plaintiffs were not bound by the decree and the sale and could treat those proceedings as a nullity without the intervention of any Court and that the suit was governed by Art. 142 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act and having been brought within twelve years of the date of the plaintiffs' dispossession was within limitation;

(5) that the application made by the plaintiffs' mother to set aside the auction-sale was one under O. XXI, r. 90 of the C. P. C., and not under s. 47 of the Code and that the latter section was not, therefore, a bar to the maintenance of the present suit;

(6) that the transaction of heba-bil-ewaz was a genuine transaction-and operated as a transfer of the property to the plaintiffs' mother;

(7) that the transaction was one of gift and not of sale;

(8) that under the Mithila School of Hindu Law the gift being one by the husband to the wife subsequent to marriage must be regarded as the stridhan of the wife and was a saudayica gift of the husband to the wife;

(9) that the plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled to succeed to the property after the death of their mother as her heirs and not as the heirs of her husband;

(10) that the property in dispute being immoveable property taken as a gift by the wife from her husband was heritable but was not alienable by the wife except for legal necessity and that there being no such necessity in the present case the donee had no power to alienate it;

(11) that the donee having acted in passive obedience to her husband's direction in joining in the execution of the mortgage-deed, the deed was not obtained with her consent and was not binding upon the plaintiffs;

(12) that under the deed of gift the plaintiffs' mother was not given any power of alienation which she did not possess under the Mithilá School of Hindu Law;

(13) that the property in dispute in the hands of the plaintiffs' mother was inalienable even with the consent of her husband, and that consequently the mortgage-bond, the decree and the sale were not binding upon the plaintiffs and that plaintiffs' suit must be decreed.

Per Foster, J. (1) that the heba-bil-ewaz was not a benami transaction and operated to transfer the property to the plaintiffs' mother;

(2) that the transfer was in substance a gift and conferred an absolute estate upon the donee;

(3) that the plaintiffs were the heirs and legal representatives of their mother and inasmuch as they claimed under her they were bound by the mortgage-decree and the sale which took place thereunder and they could not sue for possession unless they had cleared the way for such a suit by securing the annulment of the mortgage-decree and the sale;

(4) that a suit to set aside the decree being now barred by time the present suit was not maintainable.

Per Das, J.—An Appellate Court should allow a question of law to be argued before it which fairly arises on the allegations made in the plaint though it is not stated in that form in the plaint.

It is not necessary to set out an inference of law in the pleadings.

A grantor cannot dispute with his grantee his right to alienate the land to him.

Where a person is prima facie bound by a decree he cannot by suing ostensibly for possession ignore the decree and evade the operation of law; and where such a decree is an impediment in the plaintiffs' way in obtaining relief inconsistent with it, he must bring the suit within the period prescribed by law for setting aside a decree. Where, however, a person is not bound by a decree he can treat the decree as a nullity and can sue to recover the property affected by the decree without taking proceedings to set aside the decree.

An apparent transaction must be assumed to be real until the contrary is shown, and the onus is on the person who alleges that a transaction is not what it purports to be.

Judgments qua judgments or adjudications upon questions in issue and proofs of particular points therein decided are only admissible either as res judicata under s. 40 or as being in rem under s. 41 or as relating to matters of a public nature under s. 42 of the Evidence Act. Judgments, orders and decrees other than those admissible under ss. 40, 41 and 42 of the Evidence Act may be relevant under s. 43 of the Act. The cases contemplated by s. 43 are such as the section itself illustrates, namely, where the fact of any particular judgment having been given is a matter to be proved in the case.

A former judgment which is not a judgment in rem nor one relating to matters of a public nature is not admissible in a subsequent suit either as res judicata or as a proof of the particular point which it decided unless between the same parties or those claiming under them.

The decision of a Court should not rest upon suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony.

Benami transactions are very familiar in Indian practice and even a slight quantity of evidence to show that a transaction was a sham transaction may suffice for the purpose. A person, however, who impugns the apparent character of a transaction must not rely solely on probabilities; he must show something definite to establish that it is a sham transaction on the principle that the burden of proof lies upon a person who claims contrary to the tenor of a deed and alleges that the apparent is not the real state of things.

The most important test to be applied in such cases is the source whence the consideration came.

Where, however, from the lapse of time direct evidence of a conclusive or reliable character is not forthcoming as to the payment of the consideration, the case must be dealt with on reasonable probabilities and legal inferences arising from proved or admitted facts.

Hindu Law—contd.

Where a decree directs the sale of specific property, the Court executing the decree has no power to go behind the decree and to refuse to sell the property because the interest of the judgment-debtor in the property has come to an end.

A heba-bil-ewaz is a transaction made by mutual or reciprocal gifts between two persons each of whom is alternately the donor of one gift and the donee of the other.

In determining the real nature of a transaction it is not very material to consider how the parties described the transaction, if the Court knows what the transaction is, for it is the substance of the transaction and not the form of it to which it must have regard.

Under the Mithila School of Hindu Law a wife receiving a gift of immoveable property from her husband is incapable of alienating the gifted property except under circumstances which would enable a widow taking the property of her husband by inheritance to alienate it. In the absence of legal necessity or the consent of those persons who are entitled to succeed to property on her death, there is no power of alienation in a woman taking immoveable property by gift from her husband.

The Mitakshara is of authority in Mithila except in regard to those matters where there is a difference of opinion between Vijnaneswara and the Mithila commentators.

It is for the party founding title on an alienation by a limited owner to show necessity in respect of the alienation.

The consent of the husband who has gifted certain property to his wife and has thus parted with his proprietary interest in the property will not validate an alienation of the property by the wife, though the consent of the next heirs may raise a presumption of the existence of necessity.

The act of the husband in consenting to a transaction entered into by the wife for his benefit cannot be regarded as a consent which will validate the transaction. The control exercisable by the husband in regard to the dealings of the wife with property given to her by him is in no sense proprietary. It may be incidental to his status as the guardian of his wife; but if his control is to be put on that footing he is bound to exercise it for the protection of his wife and the preservation of his property. It is not within the power of a guardian to give validity to a transaction by the ward by consenting to it, when the transaction is wholly for the benefit of the guardian.

In construing a deed of gift executed by a Hindu in favour of his wife the Court must proceed on the assumption that a Hindu knows that as a general rule women do not take absolute estates of inheritance which they are enabled to alienate. This does not mean that where there are words of sufficient amplitude conveying in the terms of the gift in itself the fullest rights of ownership including the power to alienate, the Court will refuse to construe the deed of gift so as to deny to the donee the right to alienate. But in construing a deed of gift executed by a Hindu husband in favour of his wife, the Court would be right in leaning towards a construction which is in consonance with the ordinary notions and wishes of the Hindus with respect to devolution of property and in harmony with the law by which the parties are governed.

The words "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan" in the absence of anything showing a contrary intention, pass a general estate of inheritance according to

Hindu Law—contd.

Hindu Law. But the holder of such an estate might be prevented by personal incapacity from exercising the right of alienation; and a restraint on alienation might be imposed by family custom or local law. In other words, an estate of inheritance would not carry with it the right of alienation when such an estate is conveyed to a person suffering under a personal incapacity or subject to a family or local custom prohibiting alienation. Therefore, a right of alienation is not necessarily inherent in an estate of inheritance, and a grant of property to a person "ba farzandan naslan bad naslan" would not necessarily give that person the right to alienate the property though these words would confer upon him an estate of inheritance.

Gifts by a Hindu husband to his wife of immoveable property even though accompanied by express words of inheritance are not alienable unless distinctly declared to be so. It is the quality of such gifts that though they descend to the wife's heirs she cannot alienate them.

Section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act must be read subject to the provision in s. 2 of the Act which provides that nothing in the Second Chapter of the Act shall be deemed to affect any rule of Hindu, Muhammadan, or Buddhist Law. Section 8, therefore, does not affect the rule of Hindu Law, as understood in Mithila, that a gift by a Hindu to his wife does not carry with it the right to alienate.

Per Foster, J.—In determining the nature of the estate conveyed by a deed of gift executed by a Hindu in favour of his wife the Courts should examine the document of transfer with an eye to the ordinary Hindu's inclinations. He does not usually intend to make his wife absolute owner by a deed of transfer. If, however, by a construction of the document the grant of an absolute estate can reasonably be extracted; there is no need to insist on an express and distinct grant of an absolute estate. Express words are not essential, the fact that the donee is a Mithila wife is not fundamental; it is to be seen if the words are of sufficient amplitude to convey an absolute estate.

Under the Mithila School of Hindu Law a wife who has received immoveable property from her husband must preserve the corpus of the property while her husband lives, spending only the income subject to his permission, and after his death must preserve the property for her heirs. Pat HITENDRA SINGH v. RAMESWAR SINGH 849 ——— Partition—Grandsons, whether remain joint with their father—Presumption—Divided co-heirs, whether tenants-in-common or co-parceners.

In ordinary cases of partition between a Hindu father and his sons, the grandsons, though they take an interest in the family property as from their birth can only derive that interest through their father, with whom the presumption is that they remain joint after partition.

A Hindu father has no right to release his son's interest in the family property while the grandfather is alive. Where, however, the father obtains his share in the joint family property from the grandfather and is released of his liability in respect of the debts of the family, the arrangement amounts to a partition between the father and the grandfather and the grandsons must abide by it unless it can be set aside on the ground of fraud or for other good reason.

Where a Hindu is succeeded by heirs who have already separated from each other, the heirs take the property as tenants-in-common and not as coparceners. B JADAVBAI LAKHICHAND v. MULTANCHAND HARAKHCHAND, 27 Bom. L. C. 426; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 350 936 ——— Religious endowment—Deity, foundation of, worship of—Shebaitship, devolution of, rule of—Subsequent grant, effect of—Procedure—Person interested in worship of idol, whether can maintain suit for declaration.

A person who is interested in the worship of an ancestral idol can maintain a suit for a declaration that certain properties are the debuttar properties of the idol.

When the worship of an idol has been founded, the shebaitship is vested in the founder and his heirs, unless he has disposed of it otherwise or there has been some usage or course of dealing which points to a different mode of devolution. If a donor subsequent to the foundation makes a grant of any property to the idol, it becomes the property of the idol, and unless conditions are attached to the gift, the existing shebait of the idol would have the power to manage that property on behalf of the idol. C DAYAMOYI v. SANKAR NATH MUKHOPADHAYA, 42 C. L. J. 30 159 ——— Reversioner recognising life-tenant as absolute owner—Alienation by life-tenant—Estoppel.

Where a Hindu reversioner enters into an agreement with a female life-tenant whereby he recognizes the latter as the absolute owner of the property and entitled to deal with it as she pleases, he is estopped from subsequently questioning her power to alienate the property or the title of a transferee from her. A SAT NARAIN SAHU v. BINDESHRI PRASAD, L. R. 6 A. 210 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A) 453 787 ——— Succession—Bandhus—Maternal uncle's son and maternal aunt's son, priority between.

The rules to be applied for determining priority among the atma bandhus are

(1) that propinquity should be the governing factor;

(2) that if both are equal in degree the spiritual benefit conferred may be used as a test for preference.

A maternal uncle's son and a maternal aunt's son are bandhus in the same degree, but the former must be preferred to the latter on account of superior spiritual efficacy.

Rules relating to succession among bandhus explained. M RAMI REDDI v. GANGIREDDI, 21 L. W. 476; (1925) M. W. N. 335; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 807 609

——— Sons of pre-deceased son, whether entitled to succeed along with surviving sons—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 22.

On the death of a separated Hindu his property must be divided among his sons and his grandsons by a predeceased son, the latter being entitled to the share to which their father would have been entitled had he been alive. The same rule applies to the devolution of the tenancy rights possessed by the deceased by virtue of the rule laid down in s. 22 of the Agra Tenancy Act. A RAMRUP PANDE v. SARJU PANDE, L. R. 6 A. 122 Rev. 668 ——— Widow, alienation by—Legal necessity—Consent of reversioner, effect of—Appeal, second—Finding of fact.

Where a finding of lower Appellate Court with regard to the existence of legal necessity for an alienation made by a Hindu widow is based on a consideration of the evidence, coupled with the fact that the alienation was assented to by one of the reversioners, the finding cannot be challenged in second appeal. A ANANTOO v. RAM RUP TIWARI, L. R. 6 A. 284 Civ. 315 ——— Widow—Alienation by widow and next reversioner, effect of—Reversioner, whether can challenge alienation—Estoppel—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 43.

Where a Hindu widow and the next reversioner join in conveying a property by which they transfer the absolute interest in the property, the reversioner is estopped, after he comes into possession, from challenging the transaction.

There is no distinction between the reversioner giving consent to a transfer by a widow and the reversioner joining the widow in the transfer. There is not much difference, for practial purposes, between a consent given by word of mouth or conduct or by attestation of a document and by joining in the conveyance with the widow which is sufficient evidence of consent. C AMAR KRISHNA DE v. RAJENDRA KUMAR DE 790 ——— Compromise by widow, whether amounts to alienation—Reversioner, whether bound.

Whether a compromise entered into by a Hindu widow is bona fide and binding on the reversioners or amounts to an alienation depends upon the terms obtained by the widow in the compromise, i.e., whether she was surrendering any portion of her rights as ascertained with reference to the facts, and how much, whether she was reserving any benefit for herself personally as opposed to the estate, and whether the real facts were known to her. The fact that the widow obtains a benefit under the compromise which is peculiar to herself would be good proof of want of bona fides.

Where a Hindu widow obtains under a compromise a portion of her husband's estate absolutely for herself, the enlargement of her personal estate does not bind the reversioners, and the antecedent title with reference to which she obtains the property being that of her husband the rights of the reversioners with regard to that property are not destroyed.

Where a compromise by which a Hindu widow surrenders property to which she is entitled on the true facts is held to be not bona fide, it amounts to an alienation and is not binding on the reversioners. M BACHU CHINNA NAGAPPA v. BACHU NARANAPPA, 48 M. L. J. 461; (1925) M. W. N. 311; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 731 667 ——— Maintenance, arrears of, right to recover—Abandonment—Burden of proof—Rate of maintenance—Discretion of Court—Appeal, second—Interference by High Court.

In a suit for arrears of maintenance by a Hindu widow, if the defendants want to plead that the plaintiff is disentitled from claiming maintenance, they must plead and prove circumstances amounting to an abandonment.

Where a Hindu widow whose husband died 27 years ago made a demand for maintenance only three year prior to suit:

Held, that the Court had a discretion, while not disallowing totally the arrears claimed by the plaintiff, to cut down the period for which arrears may be granted, and that if the plaintiff was anxious to get the whole of the amount, it was for her to adduce evidence that she was in need of those arrears.

The rate of maintenance is entirely in the discretion of the lower Courts, and the High Court will not interfere in second appeal with the rate allowed by the lower Courts until it appears that the discretion has been perversely exercised by them. M LAKSHMAMMA v. VENKATASUBBIAH, 48 M. L. J. 266; (1925) M. W. N. 213; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 795 210 ——— Widow, possession of—Adverse possession by widow—Possession during lifetime of male holder, continuance of—Appeal, second—Possession, whether adverse or in lieu of maintenance—Finding, whether binding.

Where adverse possession in respect of property belonging to a male Hindu starts in his lifetime it will continue to run after his death during the tenure of his widow, but if adverse possession begins after the death of the last male-holder during the life-tenancy of the widow, the period of limitation against the reversioner would run from the date of the death of the widow.

Where a Hindu widow is entitled only to maintenance out of the estate of her deceased husband, her possession of the estate would be regarded as adverse to the reversioners unless they are able to prove that it was the result of some arrangement between the widow and the reversioners.

Whether the possession of a widow is only in lieu of maintenance or is adverse is a question to be decided by legal inferences drawn from documents, and where wrong conclusions have been formed from such inferences, they are open to be reversed in second appeal. O BHAGWAN DIN v. AJUDHIA 1021 ———, property acquired by, nature of— Stridhan—Property given to widow as maintenance—Alienation—Alienee, rights of.

Property acquired by a Hindu lady by adverse possession becomes her separate stridhan property. If, however, the property is acquired by a Hindu widow claiming as the widow of her deceased husband the property becomes an accretion to her late husband's estate and on her death passes not to her heirs but to the heirs of the deceased husband.

An alienation by a Hindu widow of property which is her stridhan is binding not only against the heirs of her deceased husband, who have no right to the property at all, but against the whole world.

Where, however, property is given to a Hindu widow for her lifetime by way of maintenance, the only interest which she has in the property and the only interest which she can alienate is her interest for life and the alienation would enure to the benefit of the alienee only during the lifetime of the widow. Pat. JAGMOHAN SINGH v. PRAYAG NARAYAN SINGH, 6 P. L. T. 206; (1925) Pat. 140; 3 Pat. L. R. 251; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 523 473 ——— Surrender, what amounts to—Gift in favour of reversioner, validity of—Family arrangement, scope of.

In order to make a surrender of her estate by a Hindu widow with the consent of the next heir valid, the surrender must be total, not partial, and it must be a bona fide surrender, not a device to divide the estate with the reversioner.

A gift made by a Hindu widow even in favour of the next reversioner if it does not amount to a complete surrender of the widow's estate, is not valid according to Hindu Law and does not pass any title to the donee. It may be operative during the life-time of the widow but after her death it ceases to have any legal effect.

A family arrangement requires some consideration and under the guise of a family arrangement a party cannot enter into a transaction which he is not under the law competent to enter into and which may be beyond his disposing power. C INDRA NARAIN MANNA v. SARBASONA DASI, 41 C. L. J. 341; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 743 930

Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870). See SUCCESSION ACT, 1865, ss. 50, 187 621

Inam—Karnam service inam — Enfranchisement— Patta, grant of, to occupants of land, effect of—Subsequent delivery of possession to office-holder—Title, divesting of.

Enfranchisement of a service inam confers full title on the grantee whether or not he was the actual holder of the office at the time of the enfranchisement.

Where at the time of enfranchisement, the actual holder of the office is refused the patta which is ordered to be issued in the names of persons in actual occupation of the inam land, the enfranchisement must be held to enure to the benefit not of the office-holder but of the grantees of the patta.

It is immaterial in such a case that after the enfranchisement proceedings are over, the holder of the office obtains possession of the lands. Such possession does not operate to divest a title which has been conferred by the grant of the inam patta. M VENKATA RAO v. MANGO RAO, 49 M. L. J. 376

Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 4 (3) (vii)—Income arising from business—Extraordinary transaction—Exemption from assessment.

In order to take a case out of the exemption provided for by s. 4 (3) (vii) of the Income Tax Act it is not necessary that the receipts should arise from a business continuously carried on during the year. Even if they arose from a single adventure in business they would be liable to be taxed. The mere fact that the receipts arise from an extraordinary transaction although connected with the business of the assessee, which has only occurred owing to exceptional circumstances, and which would not be likely to occur again for many years, would not place the receipts in the same category as receipts entirely disconnected with the business or the profession or vocation or occupation of the assessee which might be considered of a casual and a non-recurring nature and, therefore, exempt from assessment under s. 4 (3) (vii).

The assessee, a cotton merchant was appointed under a power-of-attorney to dispose of a certain quantity of cotton for and on behalf of a firm after deducting his remuneration and to distribute the sale-proceeds in a certain manner. The transaction was of an extraordinary nature and was brought about by a crisis in the cotton market:

Held, that the remuneration earned by the assessee from the transaction was income arising from "business" within the meaning of s. 4 (3) (vii) of the Income Tax Act and was consequently not exempt from assessment. B COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX v. PURSHOTTAMDAS THAKURDAS, 27 Bom. L. R. 478; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 318 706

——— s. 66, See LETTERS PATENT, (CAL.), CL. 15 653

Income Tax Act—1922—concld.

——— s. 66 (6)—Application to High Court for order directing. Commissioner to state case—Costs, award of—Discretion of Court—Procedure.

Under s. 66 (6) of the Income Tax Act costs are in the discretion of the Court and once the Court has exercised its discretion it is functus officio and cannot re-open the matter.

All questions relating to costs and all submissions in which costs are involved must be argued and decided at the time of the hearing and before a final order is drawn up. A RAM GOPAL-MOOL CHAND v. INCOME-TAX COMMISSIONER, L. R. 6 A. 218 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 403 797 Injunction, suit for—Possession—Title, proof of—Burden of proof.

A plaintiff who proves a prima facie title coupled with possession is entitled to be protected against disturbance by an outsider unless such an outsider proves that he has a better title than the plaintiff. B TUKARAM v. BALABAI, 27 Bom. L. R. 474; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 377 696

Interest—Deposit, return of—Date from which interest can be claimed.

Interest cannot be awarded by way of damages apart from the provisions of the Interest Act.

Plaintiff agreed to purchase a motar-car from the defendant and deposited a certain sum of money with him on account of the price of the car. The bargain fell through owing to the default of the defendant and plaintiff served a notice on the latter demanding a return of the deposit and intimating that if this was not done interest would be charged on the sum deposited from the date on which the deposit was made. The defendant failed to pay and plaintiff sued to recover the deposit with interest :

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to interest from the date on which notice was given to the defendant and not from the date on which the deposit was made. B CAMPBELL v. WILLIAMS CHARD & Co., 25 Bom. L. R. 837; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 131 122

Interpretation of Statutes—New Act, whether can affect validity of decree passed before commencement. See EXECUTION OF DECREE 72

——— Statutes limiting or extending common law rights—General words, construction of.

It is a general rule of construction that Statutes which limit or extend common law rights must be expressed in clear or unambiguous language, and that general words are not to be so construed as to alter the common law, or the previous policy of the law, if a sense or meaning can be applied to them consistent with the intention of preserving the existing policy untouched. B NADERSHAW SHERIARJI RABADI v. SHIRINBAI BAPUJI MUSA, 25 Bom. L. R. 839; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 264 129

Jurisdiction—Consent, whether can confer jurisdiction—Religious endowment—Scheme framed by Privy Council—Temple Committee, appointment of—Power to make rules—Power conferred upon High Court to modify rules—Appeal, whether lies—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47.

A scheme for the management of a Hindu temple was sanctioned by His Majesty in Council and it provided amongst other things for the appointment of a Temple Committee which was empowered to take the temple property into their custody and to make rules for the guidance of their business and for the management of the temple and for other purposes. It was further provided that the rules when sanctioned by the District Court should have the same force as if they were part of the scheme. One of the clauses of the scheme was as follows :—" The provisions of this scheme may be altered, modified or added to by an application to His Majesty's High Court of Judicature at Bombay." The Temple Committee having been duly appointed framed a body of rules which were, with certain alterations, sanctioned by the District Court. Certain persons who were interested in the management of the temple made an application to the High Court for modification of the rules sanctioned by the District Court under the clause which empowered the High Court to modify the rules. An appeal was also preferred to the High Court against the rules on the ground that the order of the District Court sanctioning the rules fell within the purview of s. 47 of the C. P. C. The High Court did not pass any orders on the application made under the clause of the scheme above referred to, but considered the appeal and passed orders thereon holding that the appeal was competent as no objection was taken thereto. On appeal to His Majesty in Council :

Held, (1) that the High Court had a power conferred upon it by the scheme, upon an application made to it with that object, to alter, modify or add to the rules sanctioned by the District Judge but that it had no other power in the matter ;

(2) that the High Court not having purported to act in the exercise of its power under the scheme and there being no jurisdiction in it to entertain an appeal from the order of the District Court, the appeal should have been rejected ;

(3) that there was no right of appeal to His Majesty in Council except on the ground that the judgment of the High Court was incompetent and should be set aside ;

(4) that the power given to the High Court under the scheme could, however, still be exercised by it upon an application properly made to it.

Parties cannot by acquiescence or consent confer upon a Court a jurisdiction which it does not possess. P C SEVAK JERNACHOO BHOGILAL v. DAKORE TEMPLE COMMITTEE, 23 A. L. J. 555; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 155; 49 M. L. J. 25; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 117; (1925) M. W. N. 474; 2 O. W. N. 535; 41 C. L. J. 628; 22 L. W. 246 (P. C.) 313

Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Partition—Allotment of lands, whether can be questioned in Civil Courts.

Where in a partition the directions given in the tarz taqsim are not complied with in the actual carrying out of the partition, the party aggrieved has a right of appeal. Subject to that, however, the final proceedings of the partition Court in the matter of the allotment of lands are conclusive and cannot be challenged in a Civil Court. O BHAWANI PRASAD DUBE v. BAIJNATH SINGH, 10 O. & A. L. R. 1140; L. R. 6 A. (O.) 1; 1 O. W. N. 658 416

Landlord and tenant—Construction of document— Kabuliyat—Raiyati interest or tenure.

A kabuliyat which was headed as a raiyati kabuliyat provided that the tenant shall plant 1000 betel-nut trees per kani of bhiti land belonging to the raiyati within five years and thereby reclaim the land. The total area of the land demised was a little over three kanis. The person who executed the kabuliyat did not belong to the cultivating class:

Landlord and tenant—contd.

Held, that the kabuliyat read as a whole indicated that the tenancy was raiyati and not a tenure and that the mere fact that the person who executed the kabuliyat did not belong to the cultivating class was not enough to prove that he was a tenure-holder. C NABIN CHANDRA CHAKRABARTI v. RUSTOM ALI 903

——— Construction of document—Nimhowla pattah —Enhancement of rent—Conduct of parties.

A zemindar holding under the Permanent Settlement has a right from time to time to raise the rent of all rent-paying lands within his zemindari at the current rate, unless he is precluded from the exercise of that right by a contract binding on him or by the law in force.

A contract in one case should not be interpreted in the light of the view taken with regard to another contract which is differently worded and under consideration in another case.

A nimhowla pattah contained the following clause: "When Survey and jamabandi are made in respect of (the lands of) the other howladars and nimhowladars of the said tappa, the nimhowla will be measured and you will get reduction of proportionate area (jigba rakba) according to the practice in respect of the other nimhowladars, and upon bandobast (Settlement) according to the rates paid for other nimhowlas. If the rent is greater you will pay the same into my office, and if it is less you will get reduction." The parties treated the pattah for a long period of time as creating a tenure the rent of which was not liable to enhancement:

Held, that the terms of the lease were ambiguous and that as the conduct of the parties showed that they had been understood by the parties as creating a tenure of which the rent could not be enhanced, the rent of the tenure was not liable to enhancement. C RADHA GOBINDA BANIKYA CHOUDHURY v. HEM CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTY, 42 C. L. J. 172 758 ——— Denial of landlord's title, proof of—Forfeiture of tenancy—Burden of proof—Duty of Court.

It is only in case of a tenant being inducted on the land by a landlord that the tenant cannot deny the title of his landlord at the inception of his tenancy. In cases where the landlord's title is merely derivative the tenant may, without incurring any forfeiture of his rights, put the landlord to proof of his title. In such a case it is the duty of the landlord who seeks to eject the tenant on the ground of forfeiture resulting from denial of the landlord's title to allege facts which would establish that the tenant had incurred forfeiture of his tenancy by such denial. This can only be done by proving the statement made by the tenant which is relied on as showing that he has denied the landlord's title. It is not enough for the landlord to bring forward merely a judgment pronounced in a former suit. It is necessary to prove the tenant's actual statement in order that the Court might judge what the tenant really meant to say and whether what he said amounted to a forfeiture. If such a statement is contained in a written document the primary evidence is the document itself which should be placed before the Court. The mere statement of the opinion of the landlord himself upon certain words used by the tenant that forfeiture has been incurred is no evidence at all for the purpose.

Courts of Equity do not usually lean towards giving relief on the ground of forfeiture. They will enforce a forfeiture only when the facts are clearly established that the forfeiture has been incurred. C MOHAMED GOLAM RABBANI v. TARANATH DEB 657 ——— Ejectment suit—Adverse possession, plea of—Entries in revenue papers describing defendant as tenant, effect of—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Where in a suit for ejectment the only evidence consists of entries in the revenue papers describing the defendant as tenant of the plaintiff, they must be deemed to represent correctly the relation between the parties to the effect that the defendant is the plaintiff's tenant and not in adverse possession by right of being a proprietor.

A tenant who claims to be in adverse possession of his holding can be ejected as a trespasser through the Civil Court. O NAGESHAR SINGH v. BALDEO SINGH, 2 O. W. N. 148; 12 O. L. J. 160; L. R. 6 A. (O.) 83; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 442 183 ——— —Encroachment by tenant—Determination of tenancy—Tenant, whether bound to give up encroached land.

At the determination of his tenancy a tenant is bound to give up to his landlord the land encroached upon by him and made part of his tenancy. C INDU BHUSAN BOSE v. ATUL CHANDRA BISWAS 630 ——— Lease deed, construction of—Kayamgeni chit —Provision as to surrender—Lease, whether permanent or terminable—Clause providing for re-entry, whether void for remoteness.

Where under the terms of a lease deed styled a "kayamgeni chit," the lessee was to enjoy the land from generation to generation and the rent was a fixed one, with a clause providing that if the landlord required the property, the lessee was to take the value of the trees and surrender the property to him:

Held, (1) that on a construction of the document the lease was not a permanent one notwithstanding it was styled a kayamgeni chit;

(2) that the clause as to surrender was neither void nor bad for remoteness;

(3) that the lessor was bound to pay the lessee compensation for the trees as provided for in the deed. M RAMA RAO v. THIMAPPA, (1925) M. W. N. 157; 48 M. L. J. 463; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 732 433

——— Occupancy holding, non-transferable, whether can be sold in execution of decree—Consent of landlord, whether necessary.

A non-transferable occupancy holding is liable to be sold at an execution sale at the instance of an ordinary creditor without the consent of the landlord. C GURUDAS SAHA v. HIRA GAZI 740 ——— Putni Taluq—Rent decree—Sale of properties, order of—Contract between parties, effect of.

In passing a decree for arrears of rent of a putni tenure the Court is not entitled, in the absence of any contract to the contrary, to direct that the defaulting tenure should first be sold and that the balance of the decretal amount, if any, be realised from other properties of the judgment-debtor. Where, however, the parties have expressly contracted that the properties belonging to the judgment-debtor should be sold in a certain order to satisfy a rent decree passed against him, and such contract is not contrary to the provisions of the law, the Court is bound to give effect to it. C MONMOHAN SAHA CHOWDHURY v. SARIFANNESSA CHOWDHURANI 120 ———, relations between—Tenancy, how can be terminated—Suit by tenant for possession—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (xi) (e)—Person inducted with land, whether necessary party—Overvaluing plaint, effect of—Costs, how assessed.

Where a tenancy has not terminated, or where on account of certain circumstances it is not open to a landlord to terminate a tenancy he cannot be allowed to dispossess his tenant without having recourse to law and then to retain possession which he could not obtain through a Court of Law. The tenant has a right apart from the provisions of s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act to sue to eject the landlord.

In India, the Common Law right of re-entry by a landlord does not exist, and even where a landlord has obtained possession of the premises let by him after the tenancy has been validly terminated, it is open to the tenant to institute a suit within six months of dispossession, under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act.

A suit by the Secretary of State for India under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act is governed by Art. 149 and not Art. 3 of the Limitation Act.

A suit for possession by a tenant against his landlord falls within cl. xi, sub-cl. (e) of s. 7 of the Court Fees Act.

A person inducted with land by the landlord is not in every case a necessary party to a suit between the dispossessed tenant and the landlord, but may be a proper party, and the fact that he is joined as a proper party does not take away the suit from the purview of cl. xi, sub-cl. (e).

The Court Fees Act being a fiscal enactment must in cases of ambiguity be construed in favour of the public.

Where a plaint is overvalued and excessive Court-fees paid, in the taxation of costs the plaintiff is only entitled to costs as taxed on the proper valuation. S SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. DINSHAW NAVROJI 1002 ——— Suit for ascertainment of fair and equitable rent and for recovery of arrears of rent—Plea of jus tertii*—Previous suit between landord and third person under whom tenant claims, decision in*—Res judicata*—Cause of action, accrual of.*

A certain taluk was sold for arrears of revenue and was purchased by the plaintiff. Some years afterwards the plaintiff brought a suit for possession of the lands in dispute against the owner of a neighbouring taluk and obtained a decree in execution of which he obtained symbolical possession of the lands. Subsequently he brought a suit against the defendants for ascertainment of fair and equitable rent and for recovery of arrears of rent. The defendants denied the title of the plaintiff and also denied the existence of the relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and themselves, alleging that the land belonged to the owner of the neighbouring taluk, against whom the plaintiff had already obtained a decree:

Held, (1) that the decision in the previous suit, irrespective of the fact whether it operated as res judicata against the defendants or not, was a strong piece of evidence as against the defendants on the question as to who was entitled to recover rent from them;

(2) that the plaintiff's cause of action as against the defendants arose when he took delivery of possession in execution of the decree obtained in the previous suit and thus became entitled to receive rent. C PURNA CHANDRA THAKUR v. RAMESH CHANDRA 753 ——— Suit for rent—Plea of jus tertii*—Procedure—Title, question of, whether can be investigated.*

In a rent suit where the defendant pleads th right of a third party, the Court ought not to make such a third party a party to the suit and thus convert a suit for rent into a complicated title suit.

Where, however, the plaintiff's title is a derivative one and the defendant denies the existence of the relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and himself there must be an enquiry into the plaintiff's title in order to determine this question. The relationship of landlord and tenant is not established merely because the plaintiff alleges that he derives his title from a person to whom the tenant had attorned. C INDRA NARAIN MANNA v. SARBASONA DASI, (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 743; 41 C. L. J. 341 930 ——— Tenancy, transer of—Recognition by landlord—Dakhilas granted to transferee as sarbarahakar, effect of.

In order to determine whether there has been recognition by the landlord of a transfer of tenancy, the Court should not look to the words used in the dakhilas, such as "sarbarahakar", etc., but has to consider whether in fact there has been a recognition. C JANENDRA NATH SINGHA ROY v. RAKHYAKALI DEBI 986

——— Under-proprietary title—Mortgage of tenancy rights—Acceptance of rent—Estoppel—Appeal, second—Finding of fact—Evidence, absence of, effect of.

Where there is an entire absence of evidence the High Court is entitled to interfere with a finding of fact in second appeal.

A landlord may accept rent from a mortgagee of tenancy land though the mortgage may be invalid under the law. The mere acceptance of rent in such a case does not indicate that the tenant was the owner of an under-proprietary holding, nor is the landlord estopped from contending that the tenant has no such title. O HARI KISHEN DASS v. MAIKU LAL 959

——— Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, describing groveholders as owners of groves, effect of—Ejectment suit, whether maintainable—Suit for assessment of rent—Finding that defendant holds adversely to plaintiff—Adverse possession.

The wajib-ul-arz of a village contained an entry that certain detached plots of land, which were stated to be groves or flower gardens, were in possession of persons other than the proprietors of the mahal, and that the possession of the owners was in their own right and that the zemindars had no right to interfere with them. The persons in possession of these plots were, however, entered in the village papers as occupancy tenants:

Held, (1) that the wajib-ul-arz recognized the full proprietary rights of the persons in possession of these plots and that they were, therefore, not liable to ejectment at the instance of the zemindars;

(2) that the mere fact that the owners of the groves were entered as occupancy tenants in the village papers did not override the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz and could not be pressed into service so as to put upon those provisions an interpretation which was contrary to the plain intention of the document.

Where a suit by a zemindar against certain persons for assessment of rent is dismissed on the ground that the defendants are not liable to assessment of rent as their possession has for many years been adverse to the zemindar, from the date of the decision at any rate, the possession of the defendants must be held to be adverse to the zemindar in the fullest sense of the word. A SAHU RAGHUNATH SINGH v. MAHABIR PRASAD, 23 A. L. J. 401; L. R. 6 A. 126 Rev.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 439 558

Landlord and tenant—concld.

——— Watan land—Fixity of rent, right of—Adverse possession.

A person who is in possession of watan lands as a tenant of the watandar, cannot acquire a right by adverse possession to fixity of rent, so as to deprive the watandar of his right to enhance the rent. It may be that a tenant can acquire a right of fixity of rent as against the immediate holder of the watan, but that would not prevail against the next holder, where the latter brings a suit for enhancement of rent within 12 years of his succeeding to the watan. B VISHNU RAMCHANDRA DESHPANDE v. TUKARAM GANU BOGAR, 27 Bom. L. R. 449; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 375; 49 B. 526 779

Lease—Premises used as brothel—Overdue rent, whether can be recovered.

If a landlord lets premises with the knowledge that they would be used as a brothel, the lease is void on the ground of public policy and the landlord cannot under those circumstances recover the overdue rent, but he can recover possession of the premises occupied by the tenant under a void lease. S GOBINDRAM UTTAMCHAND v. MAHOMED HUSSAIN 802

Legal practitioner—Duty of, in subordinate Courts—Production of all available evidence on facts emphasised.

In subordinate Courts the easy method of gripping a principle of law without much understanding is adopted by Counsel while the difficult method of collecting and carefully producing all the available evidence on facts is abandoned. It is enough in the subordinate Courts to ruin any case on facts only if some principle of law is dangled before the eyes of the learned Counsel. Every principle of law has to be applied to facts and there is no easy method of avoiding facts and deciding cases on easily available rulings. O ANPURNA KAUR v. JAGESHAR MISRA, 1 O. W. N. 842 208

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), s. 14—Petition filed by legal practitioner, alteration of, without leave of Court—Unprofessional conduct—Punishment.

A legal practitioner instituted certain proceedings under s. 144 of the Cr. P. C. with respect to a certain plot of land which belonged to him. In his petition the number of the plot was, owing to inadvertance, wrongly described. Instead of presenting to the Court a further petition for amendment of the first petition, he proceeded to effect an alteration in the petition which had been filed in Court and corrected the description of the number of the plot. On the alteration being discovered by the Court he was prosecuted for an offence under s. 466 of the Penal Code but was discharged. Thereafter proceedings were taken against him under s. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act:

Held, that his conduct fell within the purview of s. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act, but that inasmuch as there was no question of any dishonesty and he was guilty merely of a foolish act, the period of suspension already undergone by him was sufficient punishment for his conduct. C SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. JOGENDRA CHANDRA DAS, 26 Cr. L. J. 1019 843

Letters Patent, (All.), cl. 11. See U. P. MUNICIPALITIES ACT, 1916, ss. 19 TO 27 51

Letters Patent, (Bom.), cls. 15, 36—Division Bench, difference of opinion in—Appeal—Appellate Court, powers of.

Where an appeal is preferred under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent (Bom.), owing to a difference of opinion among the Judges of the Division Bench, under clause 36 of the Letters Patent, the whole decree lies open before the Appellate Court, and it is not restricted to the consideration of the point on which the Judges constituting the Division Bench have differed. B VELJI BHIMSEY & Co. v. BACHOO BHAIDAS, 26 Bom. L. R. 349; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 118; 48 B. 691 199

Letters Patent, (Cal.), cl. 15—Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), s. 66—Reference to High Court—Opinion, whether "judgment"—Appeal, whether lies.

The opinion pronounced by the High Court on a reference made to it under s. 66 of the Income Tax Act is merely advisory and is pronounced by the High Court in the exercise of its consultative jurisdiction and is not a "judgment", within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent of the Calcutta High Court. No appeal, therefore, lies against such an opinion under this clause. C PROBHAT CHANDRA BARUA v. EMPEROR, 29 C. W. N. 398; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 598; 52 C. 546 653 Limitation Act (IX of 1871), ss. 1, 29, Sch. II, Art. 148—Mortgage — Redemption — Acknowledgment made after expiry of period of limitation, whether extends limitation.

Plaintiff instituted a suit to redeem certain property situated in the Panch Mahals District said to have been mortgaged on 8th June 1761. The plaintiff relied upon an acknowledgment said to have been made by the descendants of the mortgagee in 1858. The Panch Mahals District became a part of British India in 1861 and the first Act of Limitation which applied to that District was Act IX of 1871:

Held, (1) that the suit not having been brought within two years of the coming into force of Act IX of 1871, the period of limitation applicable to it was that provided by Art. 148 of Sch. II to that Act;

(2) that limitation under Art. 148 of Sch. II to the Limitation Act of 1871 began to run from the date of the mortgage and that the suit was, therefore, barred by time;

(3) that the alleged acknowledgment made in 1858 having been made more than sixty years after the date of the mortgage did not operate to extend limitation. B INDURAI BHAURAI DESAI v. SHIVLAL NABHUBHAI, 27 Bom. L. R. 467; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 339 699

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Application filed beyond time—Extension of time—Ignorance of law, whether sufficient cause.

An application for leave to appeal as a pauper was filed beyond the period of limitation and the applicant alleged that he did not know what the prescribed period of limitation for the application was:

Held, that ignorance of law could not be accepted as sufficient cause for not filing the application within time. L RAMJI LAL v. LAKSHMI CHAND-HINGAN LAL 952

——— ss. 5, 14, applicability of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54—Sale in favour of joint vendees—Pre-emption, suit for, against one vendee—Vendee, other, impleaded after expiry of limitation—Limitation, extension of—Suit, whether maintainable.

The Limitation Act must be taken to be exhaustive as regards extension of the period of limitation, and no equitable principle can be introduced which is not expressly recognized by the provisions of the Act.

Section 5 of the Limitation Act applies only to those proceedings which are specifically mentioned in that section, or to which the section may be made applicable by or under any enactment for the time being in force. A suit is not specifically mentioned in s. 5 nor are the provisions of that section made applicable to a suit by any enactment. The section has, therefore, no application to a suit.

Section 14 of the Limitation Act excludes time taken in a proceeding bona fide in a Court without jurisdiction against the particular defendant against whom the previous proceeding was taken. The provisions of the section cannot be availed of against a defendant against whom no previous proceeding was taken.

Where a sale is effected in favour of two vendees jointly and the sale-deed does not show the shares taken by the vendees in the property sold and no attempt is made to prove the share taken by each vendee, a suit for pre-emption against one of the vendees alone is not maintainable. The provisions of s. 45 of the Transfer of Property Act are not applicable to such a case. O RAM PHER v. AJODHIYA SINGH, 2 O. W. N. 144; 12 O. L. J. 66; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 369 17

——— s. 5, Sch. 1, Art. 166. See C. P. C., 1908, O. XXI, R. 89 722

——— s. 5, Sch. I, Arts. 171, 177. See C. P. C., 1908, O. XXII, RR. 4, 9 632

——— ss. 6, 8—Suit for possession—Minor entitled to sue, death of—Representative of minor, suit by—Period of limitation available.

The effect of ss. 6 and 8 of the Limitation Act is that in the case of a suit for possession, where a minor dies before attaining majority, his representative would have either the total period of twelve years from the date of the accrual of the cause of action or three years from the date of the minor's death, whichever is the longer period. He is not entitled to claim the same period of limitation to which the minor would have been entitled if he had lived. Where, however, the representative is, at the date of the death of the minor, himself affected by any disability the rules contained in sub-ss. (1) and (2) of s. 6 must apply. A ANANTOO v. RAM RUP TIWARI, L. R. 6 A. 284 Civ. 315

——— s. 7, Sch. I, Art. 144—Hindu Law—Joint family—Eldest brother, whether represents minor brothers—Decree against father—Sale of family property in execution of decree—Suit by sons to set aside sale—Limitation.

Where several Hindu brothers constitute a joint family, the eldest brother represents the entire family and can give a valid discharge within the meaning of s. 7 of the Limitation Act on behalf of his minor brothers.

After a decree was passed against a Hindu the latter died and his minor sons were brought on the record as his legal representatives. In execution of the decree property belonging to the family was attached and sold. More than twelve years after the sale of the property but within twelve years of the delivery of possession, the sons brought a suit to have the sale set aside on the ground that they were not properly represented in the execution proceedings and that the property could not be sold because the father having died as a member of a joint Hindu family, the property had become the sole property of the sons by survivorship. At the date of the institution of the suit the eldest brother had attained the age of twenty-one years, while the youngest was just over eighteen years of age:

Held, that the suit was barred by limtation. A SHIAM LAL v. MOOL CHAND, L. R. 6 A. 299 Civ. 177

——— s. 12—Appeal—Limitation—Time spent in obtaining copies of decree and judgment, deduction of—Copies, when to be applied for.

Having regard to the provisions of s. 12 of the Limitation Act an appellant would be within time, if his appeal is filed within the total amount of periods granted to him, viz., the initial period granted by Sch. I to the Act, plus the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree, plus the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment. If, however, any of the two periods requisite for obtaining copies overlap each other, one of the overlapping periods will have to be left out of account.

Under the provisions of s. 12 of the Limitation Act it is open to an appellant to make an application for obtaining a copy of the judgment within the period of limitation as extended by the time spent by him in obtaining a copy of the decree and vice versa, and in such a case he is entitled to deduct from the period of limitation prescribed for the appeal the time spent in obtaining a copy of the judgment as well as the time spent in obtaining a copy of the decree. A RAMZAN BAKSH v. MUHAMMAD ISHAQ, 23 A. L. J. 342; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 436; 47 A. 509 484

——— s. 12—Appeal, period of limitation for, computation of—Periods for obtaining copies of judgment and decree—Separate periods, whether can be excluded.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for filing an appeal, the period spent in obtaining a copy of the judgment and the period spent in obtaining a copy of the decree appealed against must both be excluded under s. 12 of the Limitation Act, where the two periods are quite distinct from each other. B TIMAPPA GANPAT GUDGAR v. MANJAYA SUBRAYA HEBBAR, 26 Bom. L. R. 332; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 425; 48 B. 433 545

——— s. 12—Copies of judgment and decree—Different applications—Exclusion of time—Reasonable and proper steps.

Under s. 12 of the Limitation Act an appellant is entitled to a deduction of the aggregate of the time taken in obtaining a copy of the judgment as well as of the decree, after deducting therefrom any overlapping period.

In order to get the benefit of s. 12 of the Limitation Act reasonable and proper steps to obtain a copy of the decree must be taken. This requirement is satisfied if the application is made within the time allowed by law for appealing. B MACMILLAN & CO. LTD., v. K. & J. COOPER, 25 Bom. L. R. 1309; 48 B. 292; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 185 93

——— s. 12, Sch. I, Art. 154—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 476—Application for order directing prosecution, dismissal of—Appeal—Limitation—Time spent in obtaining copy of order appealed against, whether can be excluded.

Petitioner was plaintiff in a civil suit which was decreed. He subsequently made an application under s. 476 of the Cr. P. C. for an order to prosecute the defendants. The Trial Court rejected the application. Petitioner filed an appeal under s. 476 (B) of the Code, and attached a copy of the order of the Trial Court rejecting his application to the appeal. His appeal was dismissed on the ground that it was barred by time and that he was not entitled to deduct from the period of limitation prescribed, the time spent by him in obtaining a copy of the order appealed against:

Held, that under the rules of the Court the petitioner was bound to file along with his appeal a copy of the order appealed against and that, therefore, under s. 12 of the Limitation Act he was entitled to deduct the period spent by him in obtaining a copy of that order from the period of limitation prescribed for the appeal and that consequently his appeal was within time and must be decided on the merits. A DAULAT RAM v. KANHAIYA LAL, 23 A. L. J. 297; L. R. 6 A. 109 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 961; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 419; 47 A. 462 417

——— s. 18, Sch. I, Art. 166—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 90, O. XLIII, r. 1 (j)—Execution of decree—Sale, application to set aside—Limitation—Fraud—Burden of proof—Appeal, second, whether lies.

When a judgment-debtor makes an application to have an execution sale set aside under r. 90, of O. XXI of the C. P. C., after the expiry of 30 days, he must bring his case within s. 18 of the Limitation Act, and to enable him to do so it is not enough for him to show that the execution proceedings were irregular and fraudulent, but he must carry the fraud further and show that the existence of his right to set aside the sale had been kept concealed from his knowledge by the fraud of the decree-holder or the auction-purchaser. Where, however, such fraud is proved it is for the opposite party to show that the judgment-debtor has had clear and definite knowledge of the fact constituting the fraud at a time which is too remote to bring the application within limitation. C NABIN CHANDRA HALDAR v. BIPAN CHANDRA HALDAR 555

——— s. 19—Acknowledgment of liability, what amounts to—Letter admitting existence of running account—Precedents, value of.

In every case in which the plaintiff claims exemption from the bar of limitation on the basis of an acknowledgment of liability made by the defendant, the document relied on as constituting the acknowledgment must be interpreted by its own language and it is not very helpful to cite rulings as to the meaning to be attached to a document in another case unless the wording of the documents, in both cases, is the same.

In a suit for accounts the plaintiff relied upon a letter written by the defendant in which the latter admitted the existence of a running account between himself and the plaintiff and went on to say that his representatives would compare the accounts and pay what was found to be due:

Held, that the letter contained an acknowledgment of liability within the meaning of s. 19 of the Limitation Act and gave a fresh start of limitation. A SANT LAL v. BANI PRASAD, 23 A. L. J. 248; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 340; L. R. 6 A. 301 Civ. 985

——— ss. 19, 20, Sch. I, Art. 132. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, 1882, s. 101 264

——— s. 20—Part payment—Payment by cheque—Date of payment, determination of—Partnership—Goods supplied on inspection—Dissolution of partnership—Return of goods rejected—Suit to recover price of goods retained—Liability of partners.

Where goods are sent to a partnership on inspection at a time when the partnership is subsisting, the fact of the subsequent dissolution of the partnership cannot have the effect of absolving the members of the firm at the time when the goods were sent, from liability in respect of the price of the goods, though the cause of action for a suit to recover such price may not have accrued until the return of the goods which were not required, which return takes place after the dissolution of the partnership.

When a payment is made by cheque and the cheque is received as payment by the payee it operates as a payment from the date on which it is delivered to the payee though this is subject to a condition subsequent that if upon due presentation the cheque is not paid the original debt revives.

Where a payment by cheque is relied upon as an acknowledgment or part payment within the meaning of s. 20 of the Limitation Act, the date of the acknowledgment or part payment must be taken to be the date on which the cheque was delivered to the payee and not the date on which the cheque was cashed. C MAURICE MAYAHAS v. W. MORLEY, 29 C. W. N. 496 508

——— s. 20, Sch. I, Art. 181—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 5—Payment towards interest, what amounts to—Mortgage-decree—Application for final decree—Limitation, commencement of—Application barred—Subsequent application by defendant to set aside preliminary decree, whether revives right of decree-holder to apply for final decree.

In order to save limitation under s. 20 of the Limitation Act, a payment towards interest must be made "as such;" that is, it must be expressly made towards interest. The section has nothing to do with the general right of the creditor of appropriating a payment either towards interest or towards principal.

An application for a final decree under O. XXXIV, r. 5 of the C. P. C. is governed by Art. 181 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, and the limitation begins to run from the expiry of the period for payment allowed by the decree. After the right of the decree-holder to make an application for a final decree has become barred by time, an application by one of the defendants to set aside the preliminary decree does not revive the right of the decree-holder to make an application for a final decree. C MAHAMAD KAMEL v. AHMAD ALI 746

——— s. 20, Sch. I, Art. 182 (5)—Execution of decree—Deposit of money to credit of suit—Application for payment by decree-holder, whether step-in-aid of execution—Mortgagee from judgment-debtor—Direction to pay decree-holder—Payment into Court long after—Limitation, fresh start of.

In order that an application for payment out of money in Court by a decree-holder may amount to an application to take a step-in-aid of execution under Art. 182 (5) of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, the money must have been realised in execution of the decree.

Where an amount of money is in Court to the credit of a suit and such amount has not been the proceeds of execution, an application for payment out cannot be said to be an execution application or an application in aid of execution. In such a case the plaintiff has only to apply to the Court for payment and the Court makes the payment without reference to the judgment-debtor in the suit. By asking for payment of the amount in Court, the plaintiff does not do anything to aid the execution of the decree.

An agent who can give the creditor the benefit of s. 20 of the Limitation Act has to act within the terms of his authority. If he exceeds his authority or does something which is not actually covered by his authority, he cannot bind the principal so as to give the creditor the benefit of s. 20.

Where a judgment-debtor executed a mortgage and directed the mortgagee to pay the mortgage amount immediately to the decree-holder and get a receipt but the mortgagee paid the money into Court more than a year thereafter and the decree-holder withdrew it:

Held, that the mortgagee was not a person duly authorized and that the payment by him did not fall under s. 20 of the Limitation Act so as to save the bar of limitation. M BALAGURUSWAMI NAICKEN v. GURUSWAMI NAICKEN, 48 M. L. J. 506; (1925) A. I. R. (M). 703 989

——— s. 22. See HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY 180

——— s. 23, Sch. I, Art. 115. See VENDOR AND PURCHASER 804

——— s. 26—Easement, proof of—User, nature of—Pleadings—Claim of ownership and in alternative of easement, whether can be made.

In order to establish a right of easement under s. 26 of the Limitation Act it is enough for a plaintiff to prove that he has been exercising the right without interruption, without express or implied permission of the owner of the servient tenement and without secrecy or stealth.

It is not inconsistent for a plaintiff to claim ownership in certain property and in the alternative a right of easement over the same. C BEHARI LAL MUKHERJEE v. ASUTOSH BANERJEE, 41 C. L. J. 379; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 788 19 ——— Sch. I, Art. 11—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 60, O. XXXVIII, r. 9—Attachment before judgment—Claim, dismissal of—Dismissal of suit, effect of—Appeal—Reversal of dismissal—Attachment—Fresh claim—Title suit—Limitation.

It is obligatory upon the Court to withdraw an attachment before judgment upon the dismissal of a suit, and the reversal of the judgment of dismissal on appeal does not operate to revive the cancelled attachment.

Certain property was attached before judgment, and the plaintiff put in a claim under O. XXI, r. 60 of the C. P. C. which was disallowed. The claim under which the attachment was made was subsequently dismissed but was decreed in appeal. Defendants, who were the decree-holders, thereupon again attached the property which had been attached before judgment and the plaintiff put in another claim against the attachment. That claim was also disallowed and within one year of the order disallowing the claim but after more than one year of the date of the previous order by which the plaintiff's claim was disallowed, the plaintiff brought a suit for declaration of his title to the property in dispute:

Held, that the attachment before judgment disappeared as soon as the claim was dismissed and that the reversal of the order of dismissal on appeal did not revive the attachment, and that when in the execution proceedings started after the decree of the Appellate Court a fresh attachment was effected the plaintiff had a right to prefer a fresh claim, on the dismissal of which he was entitled to bring a suit for declaration and that his present suit was, therefore, not barred under Art. 11 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. C SAILESH CHANDRA DUTTA v. JOY CHANDRA ROY 756

——— Sch. I, Arts. 30, 31—Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 56—Goods consigned to Railway Company for carriage—Suit for compensation for non-delivery—Limitation, commencement of—Delivery refused by Railway Company—Sale of goods—Plaintiff, whether entitled to recover market value—Company, whether can dispute title of consignor—Estoppel.

On 4th November 1922 plaintiff consigned certain goods in nine bags to the defendant Railway Company for carriage. When the goods arrived at their destination it was found that two of the bags were missing. On 5th December 1922 the consignee who went to take delivery of the goods and discovered the loss of the two bags offered to take delivery of the seven bags but the Station Master refused to allow this. Later on the higher Railway Officials agreed to let the consignee have delivery of the seven bags but delivery was again refused by the Station Master. Subsequently, the plaintiff was called upon to take delivery of the goods but he failed to do so and the goods were consequently sold by the Railway Company. On 3rd December 1923, plaintiff brought a suit to recover from the Company the market value of the goods:

Held, (1) that the suit was governed by Art. 31 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act and that the limitation began to run from the 5th December 1922, when the Station Master refused to deliver the goods to the plaintiff and consequently the suit was within time;

(2) that even if it were assumed that with regard to the value of the two bags which were missing the suit was governed by Art. 30 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, as there was nothing to show that the two bags, which were missing on the 5th of December 1922, had really been lost earlier than that date, the suit was still within time, the burden of proof being on the defendants to prove when the actual loss took place as the matter was within their peculiar knowledge;

(3) that the defendants having twice refused to give delivery to the plaintiff, the plaintiff was not bound to take delivery on the 3rd occasion when called upon by the defendant Company to do so, and that, therefore, he was entitled to recover the market value of the goods and not merely the price fetched by the sale held at the instance of the defendant Company.

Section 56 of the Railways Act does not apply where a consignee, at the request of the Railway Company itself, wanted to remove the goods but was not allowed by the Railway Company to do so.

In a suit for recovery of compensation for the non-delivery of goods consigned to a Railway Company for carriage, the Company cannot, as between themselves and the consignor, dispute the title of the consignor to the goods. A G. I. P. RAILWAY v. RADHDEY LAL MANNI LAL, 23 A. L. J. 398; 47 A. 549 579 ——— Art. 31—Suit against Railway Company for compensation of non-delivery of goods—Limitation, commencement of.

On 27th July 1922, certain goods were consigned to the defendant Company for carriage and delivery to the plaintiff. On 21st August 1922, plaintiff sent his man to take delivery of the goods who paid the freight, handed over the Railway receipt and obtained permission to remove the goods. The goods could not, however, be found and the plaintiff consequently instituted a suit on 10th December 1923 for recovery of compensation for non-delivery of the goods consigned:

Limitation Act—1908—contd.

Held, (1) that the suit was governed by Art. 31 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act and that limitation began to run from the date when the goods ought to have been delivered;

(2) that as in this case the parties expected that the goods would be delivered on the 21st August 1922, limitation began to run from that date and the suit having been filed more than one year after that date was barred by time. A DURGA PRASAD-BADRI PRASAD v. B. B. & C. I. R., L. R. 6 A. 414 Civ. 763

——— Sch. I, Art. 44. See HINDU LAW—MARRIAGE 1018

——— Arts. 44, 144—Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation by eldest brother—Suit to challenge alienation—Limitation.

Where several brothers constitute a joint Hindu family, though undoubtedly the elder brother is the manager of the family yet he is not the guardian either de facto or de jure of his minor brothers. Even assuming that he might be styled the de facto guardian of his younger brothers that would not make him a guardian within the meaning of Art. 44 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. A suit, therefore, by one of the younger brothers to challenge an alienation of family property by the eldest brother would not be governed by Art. 44 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. B DNYANU YESU JAGDARE v. VISHNU PARSHARAM CHITNIS, 27 Bom. L. R. 495; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 372 721 ——— Art. 75—Instalment bond—Stipulation to pay total amount on default in payment of one instalment—Suit to recover amount of bond—Limitation, commencement of—Waiver, what amounts to.

An instalment bond contained a stipulation that in case of default in the payment of any instalment the obligor would pay the entire amount due on the bond irrespective of the instalments. None of the instalments were paid. In a suit to recover the amount of the bond:

Held, (1) that the suit was governed by Art. 75, Sch. I to the Limitation Act and that limitation for the suit began to run from the date of the default in payment of the first instalment;

(2) that the mere omission of the creditor to sue the debtor on the occurrence of a default in payment of an instalment did not amount to such waiver as was contemplated by Art. 75 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. A KANHAI v. AMRIT, 23 A. L. J. 424; L. R. 6 A. 265 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 499; 47 A. 552 162 ——— Art. 85—Employee engaged on annual salary—Advances taken from time to time—Suit for recovery of excess drawings—Limitation applicable.

A suit for the recovery of excess drawings by an employee who was engaged on an annual salary and used to draw advances against such salary is governed by Art. 85 of Sch. I, to the Limitation Act, and limitation begins to run from the end of the year in which the last item is entered in the accounts.

Limitation Act—1908—contd.

It is not necessary for the applicability of Art. 85 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act that the accounts should give rise to independent obligations or mutual demands or that the balance should shift from one side to the other, it is sufficient if the amount to the credit of the plaintiff varies from day to day and might exceed the amount due by him. N MOTIRAM v. GAMBHIR PRASAD, (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 295 832

——— Sch. I, Arts. 95, 142—Suit for possession—Plaintiff not bound by decree—Decree, whether must be set aside—Limitation. See HINDU LAW—MITHILA SCHOOL 849

——— Art. 96. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 11 EXPL. IV 1017

——— Art. 120. See CO-OWNERS—PARTY WALL 977

——— Art. 120. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT, 1877, s. 42 647

——— Ar .123—"Deliverable," "payable," meaning of—Will construction of—Legacy, suit to recover—Limitatio commencement of.

A share in the property of an intestate does not become "deliverable" within the meaning of Art. 123 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act until the administrator, to whom Letters of Administration have been granted, has in his hands the share to be delivered, and similarly, a legacy or a share in a legacy does not become "payable," within the meaning of the Article, until the executor or other person liable to pay it has in his hands money with which it can be paid.

The intention of a testator, when not expressly and unambiguously stated in his Will, may be inferred by a Court from other facts stated or referred to in the Will, that legacies bequeathed by the Will should not be paid until the conclusion of a litigation in which the testator was engaged when he made his Will.

A Hindu lady who had brought a suit contesting a certain adoption and who would be entitled to certain moveable property in the custody of the Court if her suit were successful, made a Will stating that she had spent the greater part of her jewellery and valuables in fighting the suit and directing that certain legacies should be paid out of the property which was in the custody of the Court and to which she was entitled:

Held, that the testatrix intended that the legacies should be payable and be paid after the final determination of the suit which she had brought contesting the adoption and that, therefore, under Art. 123 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, limitation did not begin to run against the legatees till the final determination of that suit in favour of the testatrix. P C VENKATADARI APPA RAO BAHADUR v. PARTHASARATHI APPA RAO, 23 A. L. J. 261; 48 M. L. J. 627; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 82; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 105; 27 Bom. L. R. 823; 3 Pat. L. R. 208; (1925) M. W. N. 441; 29 C. W. N. 989; 48 M. 312 (P. C.) 324

——— Art. 134—Mortgage—Mortgagee, transfer by—Transferee acknowledging title of mortgagor—Person claiming under transferee, position of—Ejectment suit—Limitation.

Where a mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property sells it to a third person as if he was the absolute owner thereof, but the transferee deals with the mortgagor, acknowledges his title throughout, assumes his own possession to be only that of a mortgagee tenant and pays rent to the mortgagor; he is liable to be ejected at the instance of the mortgagor and Art. 134 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act has no application to such a case. A person claiming title from such a transferee stands on no higher footing than the transferee himself. M VEETIPARAMBIL AHAMMAD v. CHERIATH CHENNAMANGALATH 578

——— Sch. I, Art. 141—Suit by reversioners to recover property on death of widow—Limitation.

Where on the death of a Hindu his widow takes possession of his estate, it is not incumbent upon his reversioners to bring a suit for a declaration that a certain person who claims to be the adopted son of the deceased was not in fact adopted by him. The reversioners are entitled to wait till the death of the widow and then bring a suit for recovery of possession, and if such a suit is brought within twelve years of the death of the widow it cannot be held to be barred by time. A SHIB DEO MISRA v. RAMPRASAD, 22 A. L. J. 690; 46 A. 637; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 79 938 ——— Arts. 142, 144—Ejectment suit—"Discontinuance of possession," meaning of—Adverse possession—Article applicable.

The starting point for limitation under Art. 142 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act is the date of dispossession or discontinuance. The words "discontinuance of possession" mean an abandonment of possession by one person, followed by actual possession of another person; for, if no one succeeded to the possession vacated or abandoned, there could be no one in whose favour or for whose protection the Statute could operate. To constitute discontinuance there must both be dereliction by the person who has the right, and actual possession, whether adverse or not, to be protected. The Article has no application to claims which neither in terms nor in substance are claims to possession made necessary by reason of dispossession or discontinuance of possession.

Where in a suit in ejectment, the plaint does not show any case of dispossession or discontinuance of possession and the defendant denies the plaintiff's title and sets up a claim by adverse possession, the proper Article applicable is Art. 144 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. M PERIYA JEEYANGARSWAMI v. MAHOMED ESOOF SAHIB, 21 L. W. 398; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 834 386 ——— Arts. 142, 144, scope of—Suit for possession after dispossession—Limitation—Burden of proof.

Every suit for possession of immoveable property in which the plaintiff alleges that he has had possession must fall under Art. 142 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. It is only where the plaintiff does not allege that he has ever been in possession, that the case will fall under Art. 144. Where the plaintiff while in possession has been dispossessed and is out of possession, the onus is upon him to prove that he was in possession and was dispossessed within twelve years of the suit. N SINGUAJI v. GAMBHIRJI 1023 ——— Arts. 142, 144—Suit to recover possession from Hindu widow—Limitation applicable.

Obiter dictum.—To a suit for possession involving the question as to whether possession of certain property by a Hindu widow is in lieu of her maintenance or is adverse the Article applicable is Art. 144 and not Art. 142 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. O LAL BAHADUR SINGH v. MATHURA SINGH, 1 O. W. N. 740 164 ——— Art. 144—Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation of family property—Suit to challenge alienation—Limitation—Reversioner capable of challenging alienation in existence at date of alienation, effect of.

If at the date of an alienation of joint family property there is in existence any person who has a cause of action for a suit to set aside the alienation, time begins to run from the date of the alienation and cannot be extended by the subsequent birth of other members of the family who would also be entitled to challenge the alienation. In such a case, after the expiry of twelve years from the date of the alienation, the alienation cannot be challenged at the instance of another person whether he was or was not in existence at the date of the alienation. A THAKUR PRASAD v. GULAB KUNWAR, L. R. 6 A. 320 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 563 662

——— Sch. I, Arts. 144, 148—Adverse possession—Mortgage—Mortgagee put in possession as purchaser—Registered deed, absence of, effect of—Redemption, whether can be allowed.

Where a mortgagee is put in possession of the mortgaged property on the basis of an arrangement that the property is sold to the mortgagee in lieu of the interest due under the mortgage, the possession of the mortgagee is adverse to the mortgagor, and after the expiry of the statutory period the property cannot be redeemed on the allegation that in the absence of a registered deed of sale the transfer in favour of the mortgagee was invalid and that the mortgage still subsists. O SHEONATH v. TULSI PAT RAM, 12 O. L. J. 139; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 385 188 ——— Arts. 181, 182—Execution of decree—Stay order—Execution suspended by order of Court—Application for revival—Limitation.

——— Art. 171. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 115 173

Where the execution of a decree is stayed pending the decision of a suit the Court making the stay order must make it clear as to when the order is to come to an end. An order staying execution until the decision of a suit is not satisfactory. In one sense a suit is not decided until it is no longer appealable. Where a right of appeal is given a suit is often finally decided in the Appellate Court, and the Court ought to make its order clear by saying whether the stay is to operate until the decision of the suit in the Trial Court or the decision of the appeal, if any.

Where the execution of a decree has been suspended through no act or fault of the decree-holder, the latter has a right to ask the Court to revive and carry through the execution proceedings which have been thus suspended, and no question of limitation arises with regard to an application made under these circumstances to revive and carry through the proceedings. A GANGA JEE v. SAT NARAIN LAL, L. R. 6 A. 249 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 572 205 ——— Art. 182—Execution of decree—Objections—Dismissal of execution—Objection case, pendency of—Limitation.

An application for execution of a decree may be treated as one in continuation or revival of a previous application, similar in scope and character, the consideration of which has been interrupted by the intervention of objections and claims subsequently proved to be groundless.

An application for execution was filed on 12th June 1918. The judgment-debtor filed objections to the execution which were dismissed on 21st February 1919 and on that date the execution case was also dismissed, but not for any default of the decree-holder. The judgment-debtor appealed against the order dismissing the objections and the case was remanded by the Appellate Court for re-hearing. The case was re-heard and the objections were again dismissed on 20th May 1920. The judgment-debtor appealed and this appeal was dismissed on 4th April 1921. The decree-holder made an application for execution on the 19th June 1922:

Limitation Act—1908—concld.

Held, that the application for execution was not barred by time inasmuch as,

(a) the order dismissing the execution case on 21st February 1919 was not a final order in the sense that it barred the right of the decree-holder to continue the execution without presenting a fresh application for execution and the present application must, therefore, be treated as a continuation of the previous application;

(b) the time occupied in the proceedings started by the judgment-debtor against the order dismissing his objections which terminated either on 20th May 1920 when his objections were finally dismissed or on 4th April 1921 when the appeal from the order of dismissal was also dismissed, must either be deducted in computing the period of limitation or a fresh start of time must be reckoned from one of those dates. C MADHUSHUDAN KOWOR v. GIRINDRA NARAYAN SINGHA 561

——— Sch. I, Art. 182 (5)—Execution of decree—Payment of process fees, whether application for step-in-aid of execution.

The deposit of process fees for the issue of attachment in execution of a decree is not an application for execution or an application to take a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Art. 182 (5) of Sch. I to the Limitation Act so as to operate to extend limitation for the execution. A JAIDEO PRASAD v. GHASI 745 ——— ——— Art. 183—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 22, 23—"Revivor", what amounts to—Transmission of decree, order for, whether revivor—Dismissal of execution application for default—Notice of assignment and substitution.

——— ——— Art. 182 (6). See C. P. C., 1908, O. XXI, R. 22 531

An order directing the transmission of a decree is an administrative act which does not judicially determine the enforcibility of the decree. Neither an application for transmission nor an order for such transmission does, therefore, amount to a "revivor" within the meaning of Art. 183 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act.

In order to constitute a "revivor" within the meaning of Art. 183 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act, there must be a determination, either in express terms or by implication, that the decree is still capable of execution. An order dismissing an application for execution for the decree-holder's default does not amount to a "revivor" of the decree.

The mere issue or service of a notice under O. XXI r. 22 of the C. P. C., is not sufficient to declare that the decree is capable of execution so as to constitute "revivor" within the meaning of Art. 183 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. A further order by the Court under r. 23 of O. XXI is necessary for the purpose of determining that the decree may be executed or is capable of execution. C AMULYA RATAN BANERJI v. BANKU BEHARI CHATTERJI, 41 C. L. J. 152; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 668 61

Lunacy Act (IV of 1912), s. 62—"Residing", meaning of—Actual stay, whether necessary.

If a person has a private house to which he may resort in a certain town he has a residence there, and therefore "resides" there within the meaning of s. 62 of the Lunacy Act even if he goes there only occasionally. For the purposes of this section a person may have several residences and may be residing in more places than one. A TAWASSUL HUSAIN v. WAJID ALI, L. R. 5 A. 695 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 140 795

Madras Civil Rules of Practice, r. 64. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 115, O. XIII, RR. 1, 2 351

Madras District Municipalities Act (V of 1920), election held under—Voting paper—Name of candidate struck out—Marks or writing on voting paper—Cross-marks bisected by line between names of two candidates—Validity of votes.

In an election held under the Madras District Municipalities Act, a vote recorded in favour of a candidate will not be invalidated by the fact that the name of the candidate for whom the vote was not cast was struck out on the voting paper. Nor will mere unintelligible tracings, or other mark or writing, on the voting paper invalidate a vote unless the Court finds that the tracing, mark, or writing is such by which a voter may afterwards be identified.

Where the intersecting point of the cross mark on a voting paper is bisected by the line between the names of two candidates the vote cannot be counted in favour of any of those candidates and must be excluded altogether. M T. C. XAVIER v. E. C. JOSEPH, 48 M. L. J. 268; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 614; 21 L. W. 654 216 ——— Rules for Conduct of Elections, r. 8 (e)—Electoral roll, correctness of, whether can be questioned by Court holding election enquiry—"Election proceedings," meaning of—"Failure to observe other directions", meaning of—Election petition—Objection that petition does not disclose ground for enquiry, dismissal of—Revision—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115.

Under r. 8 (e) of the Rules for the preparation of electoral rolls prepared under the Madras District Municipalities Act, the electoral roll when finally settled must be taken as final for the purposes of election proceedings. The expression "election proceedings" in the rule includes all proceedings relating to an election until it is finally determined who the candidate is who has been properly elected. The expression thus includes an election enquiry and it is not competent to the Court holding such enquiry to question the correctness of the electoral roll.

The expression "failure to observe other directions" in r. 8 (e) is not confined to directions contained in the Rules but includes directions contained in the Madras District Municipalities Act as well.

Where an objection is taken to an election petition on the ground that it does not disclose any ground for enquiry, and the objection is disallowed, the order disallowing the objection is open to revision under s. 115 of the C. P. C., inasmuch as if the order is erroneous the lower Court in holding an enquiry would be exercising a jurisdiction not vested in it. M JANARDHANAN v. N. M. VERGHESE, 48 M. L. J. 451; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 707; (1925 M. W. N 305 113

Madras Local Boards Act (XIV of 1920), ss. 8, 15, 56 cl. (4), 57—Taluk Board President—Absence for three months from meetings, effect of—Presidentship, whether vacated—Restoration to membership, whether operates as restoration to Presidentship—Effect on ex-officio membership of District Board—Member- ship—De facto member—Collateral attack in election petition—Election Rules—Invalid nomination—Fresh election.

Under the Madras Local Boards Act of 1920, a President of a Taluk Board who absents himself for 3 successive months from the meetings of the Taluk Board, not only ceases to be a member of the Taluk Board but vacates his office as President of the Board under s. 15 (1) of the Act. A restoration of him to his office as member of the Board under s. 56, cl. 4 of the Act does not operate to restore him to the office of President as well.

A President of a Taluk Board who is an ex officio member of a District Board under s. 8 of the Madras Local Boards Act and who subsequently ceases to be President of the Taluk Board also ceases to be a member of the District Board and is not entitled to take part in the election of its Vice-President.

The Madras Local Boards Act does not recognise any de facto member as distinguished from a de jure member. When the Act speaks of a member, President or Vice-President, it refers to a member, President or Vice-President validly elected or appointed according to the provisions of the Act.

The effect of s. 57 of the Madras Local Boards Act and the rules framed under the Act is that, in the case of elected members, the validity of the election can be questioned by (1) an election petition under the rules or (2) by a petition under s. 57. In the latter case the petitioner is confined to certain grounds. The election cannot be questioned in any other way. In the case of a nominated member, the validity of his membership can be questioned by a petition under s. 57 on the grounds alleged in it. But there is nothing in the Act to prevent the fact of membership of a person claiming to be an ex officio member from being questioned collaterally in another election petition.

Where on an election petition, the nomination of one of the candidates is found to be invalid under r. 12 of the Election Rules under the Madras Local Boards Act, the Judge has a complete discretion to declare the only other candidate elected or to order a fresh election. M S. DEVASIGAMONY v. M. R. SETHURATANA IYER 363 ——— ss. 159, 207, 223—Failure to remove alleged encroachment after notice — Offence—Acquittal—Fresh notice—Second prosecution, legality of—Period of three months under s. 223, extension of, by fresh notice, whether permissible.

In a prosecution against an accused for an offence under s. 207 (c) read with s. 159 of the Madras Local Boards Act XIV of 1920, for failure to remove an alleged encroachment after due notice by the local authority, the real offence is the wrongful encroachment that is committed by the person. The notice referred to in s. 159 is in a sense merely in the nature of a condition precedent to the prosecution.

An offence within the meaning of the sections comes to be committed, at any rate, on the expiry of the notice by which the person is called upon to remove the encroachment and fails to do so within the time limited in the notice. Where a person commits an offence by disobeying the terms of the notice, he should not be deemed to commit a fresh offence every time the local authority chooses to give a fresh notice calling upon him to remove the obstruction.

The real principle underlying s. 223 of the Madras Local Boards Act is that it should not be within the power or province of a local authority to molest and annoy persons by prosecutions which are not promptly undertaken by the local authority. The local authority has no power by giving fresh notices to constitute the disobedience to each of such fresh notices as amounting to a fresh offence under s. 207 of the Act.

Where an accused person who was charged under s. 207 of the Local Boards Act for failure to remove an alleged encroachment after due notice under s. 159 is acquitted, a second prosecution for the same offence after a fresh notice is illegal, especially where it is instituted more than three months after the issue of the first notice. M RAMANUJACHARIAR v. KAILASAM IYER, (1925) M. W. N. 472; 49 M. L. J. 386; 26 Cr. L. J. 1014 969

——— ss. 159 (1), 163 (1). See CR. P. C., 1898, s. 423 924

——— s. 170—Market, what is—Market in existence before Act, whether "new market".

A market is a place set apart for the meeting of the general public, of buyers and sellers, freely open to any such, to assemble together, where any seller may expose his goods for sale and any buyer may purchase.

Where arecanuts were brought to certain premises weighed and there purchased or sold to or by people and a fee was levied by the owner thereof:

Held, that the place constituted a "market" within the meaning of the Madras Local Boards Act.

The expression "new market" in s. 170 of the Madras Local Boards Act is used in its ordinary signification as "for the first time opened or kept open." M PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. CHERU KUTTI, 26 Cr. L. J. 1053 973

——— as amended by Madras Act II of 1922, Sch. X, r. 15, sub-cl. (3)—Local Board—Oath of allegiance, failure of members to take—Election of President by such members, validity of—Meeting for election of President—Adjournment—Election at adjourned meeting, legality of

Under the Madras Local Boards Act of 1920 as amended by Madras Act II of 1922 every person appointed or elected to be a member of a Local Board is bound to take the oath of allegiance before he takes his seat, that is to say, before he enters upon the rights and duties of his office.

The election of a President by members who have not taken their oaths of allegiance is an election not by members of the Union Board at all, and is invalid.

Under sub-cl. (3), r. 15 of the Transitory Provisions in Sch. X of the Act, the power to elect a President is conferred only on a meeting called by the President on the date and at the time fixed by him.

Where a meeting called for such a purpose is adjourned, an election of a President held at the adjourned meeting is invalid. M DIVI DWARKACHARYULU v. KOTHAPALLI SRIKRISHNAN 825

Malabar Law—Maintenance deed—Tavazhi, whether constituted—Suit to recover maintenance by some members, maintainability of.

A deed executed by a Malabari in favour of one of his children recited that the properties of the executant were assigned in favour of the children named in the deed and "for those children, boys and girls who are uterine relations below you and your mother for your livelihood." In a suit to recover maintenance on the basis of the deed by some of the children:

Held, (1) that the donees under the deed with their mother constituted a tavazhi;

Malabar Law—concld.

(2) that, therefore, the karnavan of the tavazhi was a necessary party to the suit. M KAZHIPPURATH PAPPIAMMA v. KUNHU, 21 L. W. 432; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 761 198

Master and servant—Master, criminal liability of, for acts of servant.

A master is not criminally responsible for the acts of his servant unless he expressly commands or personally co-operates in them or such responsibility is expressly imposed on him by Statute or contract. N FAKIRA SAMBHAJI v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1030 918

Mortgage—Declaration of title, suit for, by mortgagor against mortgagee, whether maintainable. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT, 1877, s. 42 647

——— or sale. See CONSTRUCTION OF DOCUMENT 546

——— Redemption by co-mortgagor—Subsequent suit by another co-mortgagor, whether barred. See C. P. C., 1908, ss. 10, 11, 47, O. XXXIV, R. 8 290 ——— suit—Interest pendente lite—Discretion of Court—Appellate Court, interference by—Hindu Law—Damdupat, rule of, applicability of.

In a mortgage-suit there is a discretion vested in the Court to decide whether interest should be allowed on the redemption money from the date of the suit. Where the Trial Court does not deal with the question of interest pendente lite at all, the Appellate Court is entitled to consider whether such interest should or should not be allowed.

It cannot be said that a person who has invested his money in a mortgage and has succeeded in doubling his capital in less than ten years has any particular claim on the Court to award him any further amount as interest.

Semble:—The rule of damdupat has no application in calculating interest in a mortgage-suit from the date of the suit to the date fixed for redemption. The matter is entirely in the discretion of the Court. B ACHYUT NARAYAN KHARE v. RAMCHANDRA KESHAV UKIDEE, 27 Bom. L. R. 492; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 362 719 ——— ———Mortgaged property purchased by mortgagee during pendency of suit, effect of—Procedure.

During the pendency of a mortgage suit the mortgagee purchased the right, title and interest of the mortgagor in the mortgaged property in a Court auction in execution of a money-decree:

Held, that the purchase operated to discharge the mortgage and that the mortgage suit ought to be dismissed. M BALAMANI AMMAL v. K. N. RAMA IYER, 48 M. L. J. 213; (1925) M. W. N. 163; 21 L. W. 528; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 786 57

Muhammadan Law—Hanafi school—Gift — Life-interest, whether can be created—Possession, delivery of, what constitutes—Will in favour of heir, validity of—Estoppel—Ignorance of law.

Per Ashworth, A. J. C.—There can be no estoppel in favour of a party who was not misled except by his own ignorance of the law.

A family arrangement cannot be effected by mere conduct apart from any explicit agreement.

Where a Muhammadan after making a Will gifts away the whole of his property the gift has the effect of operating as a revocation of the Will.

A Hanafi Muhammadan cannot make a Will in favour of one of his heirs.

Under the Muhammadan Law the owner of an estate may retain what is virtually a life-estate, but he cannot transfer anything more than a mere use. If he purports to transfer something more than a use, namely a use, which is not revocable during the term for which it is granted, and which can be lent or leased to another or otherwise alienated, he will be held to have transferred not only the use, but also the corpus. A life-estate, therefore, can only, under the Muhammadan Law, be created by reservation after the transfer of the corpus. It cannot be created by transfer to another whether the corpus is retained or not by the donor.

Muhammadan Law—contd.

The requirements of the Muhammadan Law that a gift must be perfected by delivery of possession negatives the possibility of a life-estate being conferred by gift under that law.

Under the Muhammadan Law delivery of possession may be given in such a way as the nature of the gift permits but this does not mean that delivery of the corpus, either constructive or actual, can be entirely absent in the case of a gift.

The word "construction" used with reference to a document may mean the meaning which the person executing the document expressed, and it may also mean the effect which the law allows the deed to have. The Muhammadan Law does not in fact require that a deed giving a life-estate should be construed against the intention of the donor as having meant that he gives an absolute estate, but it requires that whatever his intention was, the deed is to be treated as giving an absolute estate.

Under the Muhammadan Law there must be evidence produced by the person claiming under a gift that the donor did all in his power to enable the donee to exercise his possession over the property gifted. It is necessary for a gift by a husband to a wife, who is not a minor, to be completed by some act of delivery of possession other than a mere declaration in the deed of gift that possession has been transferred to the donee.

Per Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.—In order to construe a deed of gift it is necessary to ascertain the intention of the donor and this must be done primarily with the help of the language used by him. For this purpose it is permissible to derive such assistance as can be derived from the surrounding circumstances.

Under the Muhammadan Law proof of the intention of a donor to create a life-interest is permissible. The giving of interest in a certain property is different from, and is not the same thing as, the gift of the corpus, and such an interest may be supported on the basis of a trust resulting from an agreement for valuable consideration. Where the manifest intention of the donor is to give the corpus of, and the absolute interest in, the property gifted to one person and such gift is accompanied with a reservation of a limited estate in the same property in favour of another, both the gift and the reservation are valid.

There is no rule of Muhammadan Law to the effect that where a donor in a transaction of a simple gift merely creates a life-interest in the property gifted in the donee and reserves the reversion to his heirs-at-law the donee of the interest takes the absolue estate.

The argument that where the intention of the donor is to give merely an interest in, and not the whole of, his property the gift must be construed to convey the whole is erroneous.

If the law of the Muhammadans or of any other class of people must keep pace with the progress of society and the multifarious relations arising therefrom, interests in property apart from the property itself must be recognized.

Muhammadan Law—concld.

Mutation of names in the Collector's office is not actually necessary to complete a transfer of possession under a deed of gift. The reason of the rule of the change of possession will be fully satisfied where in the circumstances of a particular case such a change may only be constructive.

A Muhammadan executed a deed of gift in favour of his wife who was a pardah nashin lady, the subject-matter of the gift being merely a life-interest in the property dealt with by the deed and not the corpus of it. The deed contained a recital that possession of the property gifted had been transferred to the donee. The donor continued to live for a year after the execution of the deed of gift and continued to collect the rents and profits of the property, the wife living in the same house with him:

Held, that, under the circumstances, the collection of the rents and profits by the husband after the execution of the deed must be taken to have been made in the capacity of an agent of his wife and it must be held that possession of the interest gifted had been transferred to the wife so as to satisfy the requirements of the Muhammadan Law. O AMJAD KHAN v. ASHRAF KHAN, 2 O. W. N. 83 . 445

——— Heba-bil-ewaz, whether gift or sale. See HINDU LAW—MITHILA SCHOOL 849

——— Jointness, presumption of—Debt incurred by member of Muhammadan family—Liability of other members.

There is no presumption of jointness in the case of a Muhammadan family, and when money is borrowed by one member of a Muhammadan family he alone is liable to repay it and the other members of the family do not incur any liability in respect of the loan, merely because they have also benefited from the loan. C FATEMA BIBI v. RADHA SYAM SAHA BANIK 660 ——— Wakf—Coercion—Undue influence.

A childless Muhammadan of about 67 years of age executed a deed of wakf, comprising the greater portion of his property, by which he appointed himself the mutwalli of the wakf during his lifetime and appointed one of his nephews as mutwalli after his death. Another nephew was appointed supervisor and provision was made for the emolument and expenses of both of them. It was found that the settlor was of sound disposing mind at the time of the execution of the deed. He reserved a substantial portion of the property for the maintenance of himself and his wife. He continued to live for seven years after the execution of the deed and gave effect to it in the character of mutwalli:

Held, that it could not be said that the provision in favour of the nephews was at all unreasonable or that the settlor had been dominated or coerced by his nephews into executing the deed. P C FIDA RASUL v. YAKUB BEG, 12 O. L. J. 98; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 101; L. R. 6 A (P. C.) 55; 27 O. C. 346 (P. C.) 702 Negligence—Invitee, duty towards—Injury by dog—Damages.

A man has a right to keep a fierce dog for the protection of his property, but he has no right to put the dog in such a situation, in the way of access to his house, that a person innocently coming for a lawful purpose may be injured by it.

Plaintiff went to the defendant's house on lawful business, and not finding any servant or any other means of announcing her visit to the defendant proceeded towards the dining room door with the intention of entering that room and waiting there till the defendant came to her. Before she could enter the room she was bitten by a ferocious dog that had been chained behind the door. She sued the defendant for damages:

Held, that the plaintiff was in the position of an invitee and defendant was guilty of negligence in keeping a fierce dog in the room at a time when it was possible that a person coming to him on lawful business might go to the room, and that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages for the injury done to her. B MARY LENNON v. PERCY FISHER, 25 Bom L. R. 873; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 207 75

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), ss. 9, 118—Person holding bill for collection with lien on bill; whether holder in due course.

Under s. 118 of the Negotiable Instruments Act the holder of a bill is to be presumed to be a holder in due course until the contrary is proved.

A person holding a Bill of Exchange for collection with a lien on the bill is a holder of the bill for consideration within the meaning of s. 9 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. B ROYAL BANK OF SCOTLAND v. RAHIM CASSUM & SON, 27 Bom. L. R. 506; 49 B. 270; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 369 982 ——— ss. 13, 87—Pro-note payable to specified person, whether negotiable instrument — Material alteration in pro-note after execution, effect of.

A promissory-note payable to a specified person only is a negotiable instrument within the meaning of s. 13 of the Negotiable Instruments Act and is subject to the provisions of s. 87 of the Act. Where, therefore, a material alteration is made in a promissory-note after its execution without the knowledge or consent of the executant the note becomes void. A SUNDER KHATIK v. MAHADEO PANDE, 23 A. L. J. 253; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 282 796

——— s. 33—Goods ordered by Company—Bill of Exchange drawn on Agent of Company—Acceptance "for and on behalf of the Company," effect of—Agent, personal liability of.

The alleged acceptance of a Bill of Exchange must, if possible, be construed ut res magis valeat and not ut res magis pereat. Where, however, the proper construction is clear on the face of the document, there is, no room for the application of this principle.

Company management is different in India to what it is in England and in the great majority of Companies the entire management rests with the Secretaries and Agents according to the terms of their agreement with the Company subject to the supervision of the Directors.

A certain Company indented certain goods from a firm in England and it was arranged that the latter firm should draw Bills of Exchange on the Company in respect of the said goods. Some of the bills in respect of the goods so indented for by the Company were drawn on the defendants who were the Secretaries and Agents of the Company. The bills were sent by the plaintiff Bank to the Company for acceptance and were accepted by the defendants "for and on behalf of the Company." In a suit by the plaintiff Bank to recover the amount of the bills from the defendants:

Held, that the form of acceptance adopted by the defendants clearly excluded the personal liability of the defendants in respect of the bills and that the plaintiff was not entitled to a personal decree against the defendants on the bills. B IBRAHIM FAZALBHOY v. INTERNATIONAL BANKING CORPORATION, 27 Bom. L. R. 283; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 252 485

Negotiable Instruments Act—contd.

——— ss. 58, 85—Hundi—Forged endorsement—Holder, whether acquires title—Payment by drawee to holder, effect of—Wrongful conversion—Suit to recover amount, maintainability of—Property in hundi, when passes—Post Office, whether agent of payee.

If a party primarily liable on a negotiable instrument pays the amount thereof to a wrong person, who holds it under a forged indorsement, he remains liable to the true owner. The only exception to this is where the payee's indorsement on a cheque payable to order is forged.

No holder of a negotiable instrument, though he may be a holder in due course, can acquire a title to the instrument through a forged indorsement.

Section 58 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, which protects a holder in due course where a negotiable instrument has been obtained by means of an offence, does not apply to a case of forgery.

If a person wrongfully convert a bill and receive the amount, the owner of the bill may either sue in tort or may waive the tort and recover the money as received to his use.

In order to make the property in a bill pass it is not sufficient to indorse it; it must be delivered to the indorsee.

The Post Office is the agent of the person to whom the bill or note is posted if there be express or implied authority to send by post, but if there be no such authority the Post Office is the agent of the sender. B THORAPPA DEVANAPPA v. UMEDMALJI, 25 Bom. L. R. 604; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 205 226

——— s. 76 (b)—Bill of Exchange accepted by drawee—Presentment, whether necessary—Presentment before maturity, validity of—Endorser, whether can waive presentment—Promise to pay, effect of.

A Bill of Exchange comes to maturity on the expiry of the period of grace and no presentment of the bill is valid unless it is made after the bill has reached maturity.

Where a person is himself the drawer and the acceptor of a Bill of Exchange it is open to a holder of the bill to treat it as a promissory note and the drawer would be liable on the bill whether there was presentment of the bill or not.

All the provisions relating to the presentment of a Bill of Exchange are made for the protection and benefit of the party who is liable on the bill and it is open to such a party to waive a presentment for payment.

Where a Bill of Exchange is presented to an endorser before it reaches maturity and he makes an oral promise to pay the bill after a certain period of time, the presentment itself is not valid but the promise by the endorser to pay the money can be treated as an undertaking to pay without any further presentment of the bill and presentment is consequently unnecessary in such a case. A JHANDU LAL-MITTHU LAL v. WILAYATI BEGUM, 23 A. L. J. 349; L. R. 6 A. 310 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 442; 47 A. 572 488

——— s. 87—Pro-note executed by one person—Name of another person added as security—Pro-note, whether, vitiated—Illegal contract.

No Court ought to enforce an illegal contract or allow itself to be made an instrument of enforcing obligations alleged to arise out of a contract or transaction which is illegal, if the illegality is duly brought to the notice of the Court and if the person invoking the aid of the Court is himself implicated in the illegality. If the contract in itself is illegal, the plaintiff would not be entitled to enforce his remedy against any one who is a party to the contract. But where the contract is legal and as evidence of the contract something illegal is done, it cannot be said that the whole contract is void.

If after the execution of a negotiable instrument or any other document, the parties thereto alter it, such alteration does not vitiate the document; if, however, the alteration is made without the consent of the party against whom it is sought to be enforced, the document is vitiated. It is immaterial whether or not the alteration is beneficial to the person against whom the document is sought to be enforced.

Section 87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act has reference only to an alteration after execution and has no application to anything done at the time of the execution.

First defendant executed a promissory-note in favour of the plaintiff and for the purpose of giving additional security to the plaintiff the name of the second defendant was added to the pro-note. It was found that there was no intention to cheat or to deprive second defendant of her property. In a suit to enforce the pro-note:

Held, (1) that the pro-note could not be enforced against the second defendant;

(2) that so far as the first defendant was concerned the pro-note was not vitiated inasmuch as no alteration had been made in the pro-note after execution and without the knowledge or consent of the first defendant; the pro-note itself was legal and was consequently enforceable against the first defendant. M MADAM PILLAI v. ATHINARAYAN PILLAI, 21 L. W. 532 48

Oudh Laws Act (XVIII of 1876), s. 9—Pre-emption—Member of village community, who is—Admission of fact and admission of law—Admission of fact made by Pleader, whether binding on party.

An admission made by a Pleader on a point of law is not binding on the party whom he represents.

Whether an admission is one of law or of fact, must depend upon the circumstances of each case.

In the matter of pre-emption ownership of land is the one condition of the membership of the village community for the purpose of s. 9 of the Oudh Laws Act. It is immaterial whether the land consists of one plot only on which no revenue is assessed. The owner of a plot of land in the village on which there stands a grove for which no Government revenue is paid is a co-sharer for the purpose of pre-emption within the meaning of the Oudh Laws Act.

An admission of a Pleader that a certain person owns land in the village so as to be a member of the village community within the meaning of s. 9 of the Oudh Laws Act is an admission of fact and not one of law and is binding on the party whom the Pleader represents. O KANHAYA BAKHSH SINGH v. SHEO NATH 956

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), ss. 108 (15), 126 (1) (2)—Co-sharers—Suit for profits—Lambardar, liability of—Gross negligence, proof of—Decree, basis of.

In a case falling under cl. (2) of s. 126 of the Oudh Rent Act, the lambardar is entitled to collect rent from the tenants and to act on behalf of the other co-sharers, and is liable to the latter for the collections.

Oudh Rent Act—concld.

Where in a suit for profits against the lambardar the plaintiff establishes gross negligence on the part of the lambardar, it is the duty of the lambardar to prove that he could not collect more than a certain percentage of the gross rental. In the absence of such proof the plaintiff is entitled to a decree on the basis of the gross rental. O KUNJAN LAL v. RUKMANGAD SINGH 1013

——— ss. 126, 138—Joint estate—Lambardars, several—Lambardar, single, right of, to recover arrears of rent—"Third person", in s. 138, meaning of.

Ordinarily the power in regard to the recovery of arrears of rent cannot be exercised by a co-sharer or a single lambardar when there are more lambardars than one in a joint estate.

The expression "third person" in s. 138 of the Oudh Rent Act means a person who has not the ostensible right to recover the rent and cannot include a co-lambardar who has a legal title to recover it.

A thing is deemed to be done in good faith where it is in fact done honestly and there can be no question of honesty where rent is paid to a person who has a legal title to receive it. As between a tenant and his landlord there is no doubt that a co-lambardar has such a title. O MAYA RAM v. SARJOO, 2 O. W. N. 150; 12 O. L. J. 185; L. R. 6 A. (O.) 81; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 455 168 Partnership, dissolution of—Accounts, suit for—Neglect of partner, liability for.

In a suit for accounts upon a dissolution of partnership one partner is not liable for the probable loss sustained by the firm owing to the neglect or failure of such partner to carry out the duties imposed upon him by the partnership agreement to the prejudice of the firm's business. B MAHADEV VITHU PATIL v. GANOO CHANGOO PATIL, 27 Bom. L. R. 500; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 324 735 ——— Partner—Arrangement to share in profits, effect of.

An arrangement to share in the profits does not necessarily show that the person who shares such profits is a partner of the firm; but this fact must be considered along with the evidence relating to other characteristics of a partnership, such as sharing of losses, etc., in arriving at a conclusion whether the parties intended to carry on business in partnership. M CHOCKILINGA CHETTIAR v. MUTHUSWAMI CHETTIAR, 48 M. L. J. 518; 21 L. W. 541; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 768 663 ——— Two firms—Partner in one firm owner of other—Mutual dealings—Suit by one firm against other, whether maintainable.

When the owner of one firm is a partner in another firm, no suit can be brought by one of them against the other in respect of any dealings between them. B KRISHNA ANNAPPA GOREGAONKAR v. GANPAT SAKHARAM BHOSLE, 25 Bom. L. R. 1307; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 263 289

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 29, 464, 473—Reserved forest—Letters imprinted on trees, whether "document"—Counterfeit stamp for the purpose of imprinting letters on trees in reserved forest, possession of—Offence.

Letters imprinted on a tree which are intended to be evidence of the fact that the tree has been passed by a Forest Officer and so can be removed from the place where it lies in the forest, constitute a "document" within the meaning of s. 29 of the Penal Code.

The possession of a counterfeit stamp, which is intended to be used for imprinting letters upon trees in a reserved forest so as to cause it to appear that those trees have been passed by a Forest Official for removal from the forest, is an offence under s. 473 of the Penal Code. B EMPEROR v. KRISHTAPPA KHANDAPPA, 27 Bom. L. R. 599; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 327; 26 Cr. L. J. 1014 838 ——— ss. 34, 114, 307—S. 34, application of—Charge of substantive offence—Abetment, conviction for, whether legal.

Where several persons conspire to kill another and one of them shoots him down, all the conspirators are guilty under s. 34, Penal Code.

Obiter:—A man charged with the substantive offence can be rightly convicted of that offence read with s. 114 of the Penal Code, although not charged with it. B RANCHHOD SURSANG v. EMPEROR, 26 Bom. L. R. 954; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 502; 49 B. 84; 26 Cr. L. J. 1000 600 ——— ss. 99, 100—Attack, previous knowledge of—Right of private defence, whether exists.

Where a party of men become aware that they are about to be attacked and they know that they can avoid the attack by dispersing or running away, it is their duty to get out of the way of their enemies until the anger and resentment of the latter have subsided. If, however, they have a reasonable belief that if they separate they will be pursued and attacked individually they have every right to keep together or to come together and to repel the attack when it is made with every means in their power.

Accused received information that they were about to be attacked by a hostile section in the village. They believed that if they separated they would be pursued and attacked individually and under this belief they collected together and awaited the attack. Their enemies then appeared on the scene and one of them fired a pistol and hit one of the accused. One of the accused then fired a pistol and hit the man who had first fired, and then a fight with lathis commenced during the course of which one member of each party was killed :

Held, that under the circumstances of the case the accused were entitled to exercise the right of private defence and it could not be said that they had exceeded that right. A AJODHIA PRASAD v. EMPEROR, L. R. 6 A. 81 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 997 597

——— ss. 120B, 193, 467, 471. See CR. P. C., 1898, s. 403 847

——— s. 147. See CR. P. C., 1898, s. 297 98

——— ss. 147, 323. See CR. P. C., 1898, s. 423 842

——— ss. 182, 211. See CR. P. C., 1898, s. 195 (1) 418

——— s. 186—Obstruction to public servant—Refusal to sit on panchayat with certain members, whether offence.

The accused when asked by the Sub-Divisional Officer to sit on a panchayat with a member of the depressed classes refused to do so and told the Sub-Divisional Officer that the panchayat would cease to exist and instigated his fellow panches and other persons not to sit with members of the depressed classes in the panchayat :

Held, that the accused was guilty of bad manners and was not a good citizen or a useful member of the community but that there was nothing in his conduct which would bring him within the purview of s. 186 of the Penal Code. A RAM GHULAM SINGH v. EMPEROR, 23 A. L. J. 352; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 401; 47 A. 579; 26 Cr. L. J. 978 514

——— s. 216 A, applicability of. See ACCOMPLICE 916

——— s. 294 A—Lottery—Publication of proposal to pay—Offence.

Petitioner issued a circular relating to a lottery in which he stated that the Sweep would close on a particular day and that the Draw would take place on a certain day under the supervision of the patrons stated in the tickets and that the prize winners would be notified of the result by telegram. Prizes of different values were mentioned in the circular and orders were solicited :

Held, that the accused was guilty of an offence under s. 294-A of the Penal Code. B CHIMANLAL PRANJIVANDAS v. EMPEROR, 27 Bom. L. R. 363; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 243; 26 Cr. L. J. 980 516

——— ss. 300 (4), 302, 304 A, 309—Mother jumping into well and causing death of her child tied to her back—Attempt to commit suicide—Murder —Death caused by negligent act.

Accused who was harassed and ill-treated by her husband, in a fit of disappointment and annoyance jumped into a well with the object of drowning herself. At the time when she jumped into the well she had her child tied at her back, but she was not conscious of the fact and the result was that although the accused escaped the child died:

Held, (1) that the accused was guilty of attempting to commit suicide ;

(2) that it could not be said that her act came within the purview of cl. (4) of s. 300 of the Penal Code and that, therefore, she was not guilty of the offence of murder with regard to the death of her child;

(3) that she was guilty of a negligent omission, that is the omission to put the child down before jumping into the well and that the death of the child having been caused by such negligence, the accused was guilty of an offence under s. 304A of the Penal Code. B SUPANDI v. EMPEROR, 27 Bom. L. R. 604; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 310; 26 Cr. L. J. 1016 840

——— s. 302. See CR. P. C., 1898, ss. 423, 439 424

——— ss. 307, 326, 336, 511—Firing gun in air —Rash and negligent act—Attempt to murder or cause grievous hurt.

Section 336 of the Penal Code contemplates a lawful act, but it punishes the same act which is otherwise lawful only if it is done in a rash or negligent manner

A person who deliberately throws brickbats at passers-by and wants to shoot them and for that purpose aims a gun and fires shots, is guilty of an attempt at murder or of an attempt to cause grievous hurt with a dangerous weapon of shooting and not merely of an offence under s. 336 of the Penal Code.

When riots are taking place in different parts of a town a man possessing a gun may very well fire shots just to indicate to would-be mischief-makers that there are arms of defence in the house and that any body who might be mischievously inclined might take care of his safety. Such an act would not amount to an offence under s. 336 of the Penal Code.

Merely firing a shot is not punishable as an offence in itself. A BABU RAM v. EMPEROR, 23 A. L. J. 356; L. R. 6 A. 121 Cr.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 396; 47 A. 606; 26 Cr. L. J. 987 523

——— s. 363—Kidnapping, what constitutes—Minor leaving guardian's protection—Intention—Offence.

In order to support a conviction for kidnapping from lawful guardianship the following are the points which require proof :—

(1) That the person kidnapped was then a minor under sixteen years of age, if a female.

(2) That such person was in the keeping of a lawful guardian.

(3) That the accused took or enticed such person out of such keeping.

(4) That he did so without the consent of the lawful guardian.

The mere fact that the minor leaves the protection of her guardian, does not put her out of the guardian's keeping, but if she abandons her guardian with no intention of returning, she cannot be held to continue in the guardian's keeping. The decision of the question in each case depends upon the facts of the case. C R. W. VALLIANT v. MRS. N. ELEAZER, 26 Cr. L. J. 977 513

——— s. 368. See CR. P. C., 1898, s. 297 845

——— s. 377—Coitus per os.

Coitus per os falls within the provisions of, and is punishable under s. 377, Penal Code. S KHANU v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 945 97

——— s. 400—Habitually associating for the purpose of committing dacoity—Previous conviction or order directing security to be of good behaviour, whether admissible.

In a trial in respect of an offence under s. 400 of the Penal Code, evidence of the commission of an offence by the accused or that the accused were bound down under s. 110 of the Cr. P. C. is admissible for the purpose of proving habit as well as association. C LEDU MOLLA v. EMPEROR, 52 C. 595; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 872; 26 Cr. L. J. 1037 925

——— s. 401—Habitually associating for the purpose of committing theft—Gang, existence of, not proved, effect of.

Ten persons were put on their trial for an offence under s. 401 of the Penal Code as being members of a gang associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft. Nine out of the ten were acquitted and the appellant alone was convicted. In addition to the evidence of the approver against the appellant there was the evidence that several thefts and several articles stolen from different houses were discovered on the information supplied by him and that he had made promises to restore certain stolen property :

Held, that the story of the approver having been disbelieved with regard to the remaining nine accused the inference was that his testimony that they were members of an alleged gang was not true and that the mere fact that certain stolen property had been discovered as the result of information given by the accused and that he had promised to restore other stolen property was not enough to prove that he was the member of a gang of habitual thieves whose existence had not been established. L BANWARI v. EMPEROR, 26 Cr. L. J. 1024 848

——— s. 409. See CRIMINAL TRIAL 962

Penal Code—concld.

——— s. 411—Possession of stolen goods—Goods found in room belonging to joint family.

Where stolen goods were found in a room which had no shutters and which was accessible to all the members of a joint family of whom the accused was one:

Held, that it could not be held that the accused was in possession of the goods within the meaning of s. 411 of the Penal Code. A RAM ACTAR v. EMPEROR, 23 A. L. J. 421; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 478; 47 A. 511; 26 Cr. L. J. 1022 846

——— s. 417—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 439—Debtor inducing creditor fraudulently to grant time for payment—Cheating—Acquittal—Revision—Procedure.

Accused owed a sum of money to the complainant. The complainant served the accused with a notice requiring immediate payment. Accused thereupon approached the complainant and induced him to grant 15 days' time to pay up. During the time granted the accused removed their goods from their shop with the intention of escaping the payment of their debt to the complainant. Complainant prosecuted the accused for the offence of cheating and the accused were convicted. On appeal the Sessions Judge held that the prosecution evidence showed that the accused fraudulently induced the complainant to grant them time but that the fraud was inchoate and inconsequential, and on this finding the accused were acquitted. On an application for revision being made on behalf of the complainant:

Held, (1) that on the finding arrived at by the Sessions Judge there was a clear case of cheating and that the order of acquittal was, therefore, erroneous;

(2) that the order of acquittal must, therefore, be set aside and the case remanded to the Sessions Judge for re-hearing of the appeal. A RAMESHWAR v. GOBIND PRASAD, 23 A. L. J. 433; 26 Cr. L. J. 970; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 473 426

——— s. 456—House breaking—Trespass with intention to force illicit intrigue on woman—Offence.

Accused broke the lock of a room in which certain women of the family of the complainant were sleeping and introduced his head into the room. The object of the accused was found to be to force an intrigue upon one of the women sleeping in the room:

Held, that the accused was guilty of an offence under s. 456 of the Penal Code. Pat MOHAMMAD NASIR-UDDIN v. EMPEROR, 4 Pat. 459; 26 Cr. L. J. 954; 6 P. L. T. 588 106

Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), s. 4—Assignment of land revenue—Subsequent settlement of proprietary rights—Merger—Mortgage—Decree for sale—Right to receive revenue, whether can be sold.

Government assigned the right to receive the revenue in respect of two villages to the predecessors-in-title of the defendants. Subsequently the proprietors of the soil died out or became extinct and a settlement of the proprietary rights was made with the assignees of the land revenue, but no grant of the land was made in their favour. The defendants mortgaged the villages and the mortgagees obtained a decree on foot of the mortgage. In execution of the decree;

Held, (1) that the mortgagors held two separate capacities with respect to the village in question, that is to say, that they were assignees of land revenue and also the holders of the proprietary right;

Pensions Act—concld.

(2) that in the absence of a revenue-free grant from the Government, it could not be said that there was a merger of the two different rights.

(3) that the pure zamindari rights of the defendants in the villages could be sold in execution of the mortgage-decree but that their right to receive the Government revenue as assignees thereof was protected from sale by the provisions of s. 4 of the Pensions Act. A LALLA BABU v. LAL BAHADUR, 23 A. L. J. 463; L. R. 6 A. 289 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 565; 47 A. 557 569

Ports Act (XV of 1908), s. 54—"Disobedience", meaning of. See CR. P. C., 1898, s. 264 914

Practice—Departure from rules of procedure—Privy Council, whether will interfere—Interpretation of Act—Special leave, whether will be granted.

The Privy Council will interfere if there has been any departure from the ordinary rules of procedure such as to amount to a denial of ordinary justice but where the matter depends upon the particular view taken of sections of an Indian Act, it cannot be said that grave and substantial injustice has been done and special leave to appeal to the Privy Council will not be granted. P C UMRA v. EMPEROR, (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 52; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 16; 21 L. W. 160; 48 M. L. J. 61; 2 O. W. N. 5; 27 Bom. L. R. 701; 3 Pat. L. R. 93 Cr.; 6 L. 45 (P. C.); 26 Cr. L. J. 1020 844

——— Pleadings—Variance between pleadings and proof—Duty of Court.

As a general rule a Court ought not to set up on behalf of a party a new case which has not been pleaded by him. Where, however, neither party in his pleadings discloses the entire truth and the findings adduced disclose a set of facts which is either midway between, or, at any rate, different from the case which either party has set up in his pleadings, the Court is bound to take notice of the true state of facts as proved by the evidence and to give effect to the legal rights which arise on that state of facts. O ABDUL GHAFOOR v. RAM SEWAK, 2 O. W. N. 364; 12 O. L. J. 342 822

Pre-emption—Custom. See CUSTOM 298

———Pre-emptor associating stranger in suit, effect of.

It is fatal for a plaintiff in a pre-emption suit to associate with him in that suit any person who is not entitled to pre-empt. A UMAR DARAZ v. SRI RAM DAS, 23 A. L. J. 198; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 355; 47 A. 450 55 ——— Sale or lease—Nature of transaction—Fraud.

Where in a suit for pre-emption the question arises as to the nature of the transaction sought to be pre-empted, the true nature of which has been mis-described, the question must be decided on the particular circumstances of the case.

A transaction is determined by the right which it confers on the transferee and not by the name with which it is labelled by the parties for a fraudulent object.

Fraud would be presumed where on the face of the document it appears that a transfer was miscalled a lease when it in reality was a sale of under-proprietary rights.

A transfer was described as a perpetual lease and the consideration for the transfer was described as nazrana. The transferee was, however, given the power of transfer, and indulgence was granted to him so far that he was to have his name entered in the list of under-proprietors in the village record. In a suit for pre-emption :

Pre-emption—concld.

Held, that the transaction was really a sale of under-proprietary rights and not a lease and was consequently liable to pre-emption. O HAR BUX SINGH v. RAM AUTAR, 1 O. W. N. 897 347 ——— Transfer by one of several vendees in favour of person having superior right, before institution of suit, effect of—Attestation of sale-deed—Estoppel.

If out of several vendees the one whose rights are inferior to those of the pre-emptor sells his share, before the institution of a suit for pre-emption, to a person having rights not inferior to those of the pre-emptor, the claim of the latter would be defeated.

The attestation of a deed does not by itself estop the person attesting from denying that he knew of the contents of the deed or that he consented to the transaction which it effected. L ABDUL AZIZ v. ABDULLA, (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 413 652 ——— Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, construction of—Sale to co-sharer of inferior class—Pre-emption by co-sharer of superior class.

In the absence of specific words in a wajib-ul-arz giving priority in the case of a sale by a co-sharer belonging to one category to a co-sharer belonging to another category, a clause for pre-emption defining the rights of co-sharers inter se as against a stranger cannot be construed so as to give a right of pre-emption to a co-sharer of a superior class upon a sale to a co-sharer of an inferior class.

The wajib-ul-arz of a village provided that if a co-sharer wanted to sell his share the right of purchase would belong, in the first instance, to a co-sharer who was a paternal kinsman, then to a co-sharer of the patti and then to a co-sharer of the village, on payment of the proper price, in preference to a stranger :

Held, that the right of purchase under the clause was given in the order mentioned in the event of a sale to a stranger, and though the different categories in which priority was to be exercised were mentioned, they were subject to the main qualification that the question of priority would only arise where a sale to a stranger was made. A KALIKA SINGH v. RAM LAL SINGH, L. R. 6 A 150 Civ.; 47 A. 320; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 378 92

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909)—Insolvency—Transaction between insolvent and creditor, validity of—Fraud—Transaction, whether can be enforced against third party.

A transaction between an insolvent and one of his creditors conducted behind the back of the Official Assignee and without informing the Court is null and void. Any such transaction is wholly repugnant to the scheme of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, inasmuch as the whole of the insolvent's estate vests in the Official Assignee, his affairs have to be investigated by the Official Assignee and by the Court which deals with his discharge, and there is nothing left for the insolvent to do except to perform his duties which are prescribed by the Act by giving information and assistance to the Official Assignee, and to proceed to take the steps necessary to obtain his discharge.

Plaintiff obtained a decree against the first defendant who was subsequently adjudged insolvent. Plaintiff thereupon compromised his claim against the first defendant by accepting a cash payment of a certain amount from the first defendant and taking promissory notes for a portion of the balance. The second defendant was induced to sign the promissory notes without receiving any consideration for them. In a suit to recover the amount of the promissory notes :

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act—concld.

Held, (1) that the transaction between the plaintiff and the first defendant was null and void as against the Official Assignee, as being fraudulent ;

(2) that as the whole transaction was tainted with fraud the plaintiff could not succeed as against the second defendant either. B MOHANLAL MOTILAL SHAH v HARILAL BHOGILAL SHAH, 27 Bom. L. R. 419; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 346 929

——— s. 55—Transfer of all available assets by insolvent in favour of creditor, validity of—Good faith—Burden of proof—Principles applicable.

If a trader assigns all his property, except on some substantial contemporaneous payment, or some substantial undertaking to make payment in future, the assignment amounts to an act of bankruptcy and, is void against the creditors of the assignor because nothing is left with which to carry on his business, whereas if he had received substantial assistance, something would have been left to carry on the business.

When a transaction is challenged under s. 55 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, the onus of proving that the transfer was in good faith and for valuable consideration lies on the transferee.

Per Buckland, J.—In considering the effect of a transaction which is challenged under s. 55 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, the facts must be considered in the light of the law of bankruptcy the object of which is to ensure rateable distribution of an insolvent's property among his creditors. A transaction which may in other circumstances be free from all taint may amount to an offence when it is established that it contravenes the law of bankruptcy. C OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF BENGAL v. YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK, LTD., 29 C. W. N. 374; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 640 392 ——— ss. 55, 56—Transfer by insolvent, validity of—Purchaser in good faith and for valuable consideration—Burden of proof.

Section 55 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act is quite general and a transfer of property made by an insolvent falling within the provisions of that section is void altogether as against the Official Assignee unless it is shown by the transferee that he is a purchaser in good faith and for valuable consideration. O BANWARI LAL BHARGAVA v. BISHAMBHAR NATH TANDAN, 2 O. W. N. 221; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 396 935

Principal and agent—Commission agent and principal, relationship of, after contract has been carried into effect.

The agreement between a commission agent and the party for whom he is acting may, at the outset, be that as between a principal and his agent, and so long as the contract remains executory the relationship of principal and agent may subsist between the parties. But after the contract of purchase has been effected the relationship of the parties quoad the contract of sale ceases to be that of principal and agent and ripens into that of vendor and purchaser, though it may be necessary to refer to some other prior agreement in order to ascertain the terms and conditions of the contract of sale. C MCLEOD & Co. v. JVAN JONES & Co. 218

Privy Council appeal—Decree, whether can be objected to—Objection not taken in grounds of appeal.

A litigant cannot be allowed to take exception to a decree before the Privy Council on a ground which he did not urge before the Court below and did not embody in his grounds of appeal. P C DHANRAJ JOHARMAL v. SONIBAL, 23 A. L. J. 273; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 118; 2 O. W. N. 335; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 97; 27 Bom. L. R. 837; 21 N. L. R. 50; 52 C. 482; 49 M. L. J. 173; (1925) M. W. N. 692 (P. C.) 357 ——— Finding of fact—Interference.

Where the question depends not upon any question of law but upon the general conclusion that is to be drawn from many minute portions of the evidence, the Privy Council will not on appeal disturb the judgment of the Court below unless there are brought before them particular instances of where the Court below has gone wrong. P C JAGANNADHA RAO v. SURANARAYANARAJ, (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 31; 21 L. W. 436 (P. C.) 252

Probate, application for—Dismissal for default, effect of—Subsequent application, whether maintainable. See SUCCESSION ACT, 1865, ss. 50, 187 621

Procedure—Decree conditional on payment of money within prescribed period—Court closed on last day for payment—Payment, whether can be made on re-opening.

Where a decree is passed conditional on the payment of money and a period is specified within which the payment must be made, it is open to the decree-holder, if the Court is closed on the last date on which the money could be deposited under the terms of the decree, to make the deposit on the day on which the Court re-opens. A MUHAMMAD HASHIM v. RADHA KRISHUN, L. R. 6 A. 287 Civ. 620 ——— Hearing of case concluded—Delivery of judgment, date fixed for—Accused, absence of—Complainant, whether can be required to deposit process fees—Acquittal of accused, legality of.

After the hearing of a summons case was concluded a date was fixed for delivery of judgment. On that date the complainant appeared but the accused did not appear and the Court made an order directing the complainant to deposit process fees to secure the attendance of the accused and the case was adjourned to another date. On the next date it appeared that the complainant had failed to deposit process fees as directed and the Court made an order that the case may be dismissed for default of prosecution and that the accused be acquitted:

Held, (1) that the order of the Court directing the complainant to deposit process fees for securing the attendance of the accused was entirely illegal and without jurisdiction;

(2) that the accused having failed to appear on the date fixed for the delivery of the judgment the Court should have cancelled his bond and should have issued a warrant for his arrest;

(3) that the order dismissing the complaint and directing the acquittal of the accused was consequently also illegal and without jurisdiction;

(4) that the case must, therefore, be remanded to the Trial Court with the direction that it should fix a fresh date for delivery of judgment and should deliver a judgment on that date on the evidence already before it. A BHIMMI v. PERSHADI, 23 A. L. J. 304; L. R. 6 A. 105 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 963, (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 392 419

——— Offer made by party to suit, acceptance of, effect of—Terms of offer, compliance with, effect of.

Procedure—concld.

It is open to a litigant, be he plaintiff or defendant, at any stage of the proceedings to make an offer to the other side to bring litigation to a close, and if the offer is accepted and its terms are complied with accurately and fully, the promise made by the offerer must be carried out by him.

During the pendency of a suit the defendant made an offer that if a certain witness who was about to be examined on behalf of the plaintiff would eat food cooked by a certain woman and served by the plaintiff, the plaintiff's suit may be decreed. The offer was accepted by the plaintiff and the witness named in the offer ate food cooked by the woman named in the offer and served by the plaintiff:

Held, that the offer having been accepted and its terms having been carried out, the Court was bound to decree the suit. A RAM SUNDER MISRA v. JAI KARAN SINGH, 23 A. L. J. 251; L. R. 6 A. 270 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 271; 47 A. 456 174 ——— Set-off, whether can be forced on defendant—Jurisdiction.

It is not for the plaintiff to force the defendant to claim a set-off.

A person claiming to recover a certain amount of money cannot claim the sum due from him to the defendant on an altogether different transaction and thus bring his claim within the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court. S AYASING-UTTAMSING v. CHETANDAS-TANOOMAL 955

——— Small Cause transferred to regular list—Re-transfer to Small Cause list, validity of.

A suit was originally filed as a Small Cause by the plaintiff. On the application of the defendant it was transferred to the regular list and became a regular suit until the record was closed. The Judge, however, without recording reasons re-transferred the case back to the Small Cause Court's list and eventually dismissed the suit on the merits:

Held, that there being an order by a competent Court that the suit may be tried as a regular suit and not as a Small Cause Court suit, the Judge had no power to set aside that order and to re-transfer the case back to the Small Cause Court's list. B RAGHO LAXMAN LOHAR v. GOVIND VAMANDHAPRE, 27 Bom. L. R. 246; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 246 820

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 4, 5—Stranger claimant, suit by—Jurisdiction of Civil Court, when barred—Possession, whether proof of title—Presumption.

Long continued exclusive possession gives rise to a presumption that such possession had a lawful origin, i. e., it originated in an exclusive title.

If a stranger who is not bound to go to the Insolvency Court at all invites the decision of that Court upon the merits of a claim, he cannot afterwards turn round and question its jurisdiction. But where the Insolvency Court has refused to entertain and enquire into or adjudicate upon the rights of the stranger claimant or the latter has not preferred any claim for the consideration of the Bankruptcy Court there is no decision by it, which would operate to oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to decide the matter. N DEORAO v. VITHAL 1000

——— s. 24 (2)—Examination of debtor, absence of—Burden of proof—Adjudication—Petition, whether can be based on debt to which creditor is entitled along with others—Bond executed by debtor along with others, whether can form basis of petition—Suit to enforce bond, pendency of, effect of.

One of several persons who is entitled to the benefit of a decree is not entitled to utilize the decretal debt so as to found upon it a petition for adjudication against the judgment-debtor.

A bond upon which a debtor is jointly and severally liable along with other persons is sufficient to support a petition for adjudication. It is immaterial that the petitioning creditor may not be absolutely entitled to all the money secured by the bond, it is enough that the bond is in his favour.

The fact that a suit has been commenced to enforce the bond is not necessarily a bar to a petition for adjudication based on the bond.

The provisions of sub-s. (2) of s. 24 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, with regard to the examination of the debtor are mandatory, but are applicable only to a case where the debtor is present. Where a debtor alleges a contravention of the provisions of the sub-section the onus is on him to show that he was present in Court at the time of the hearing of the petition. C ANANTA KUMAR SAHA v. SADHU CHARAN SAHA PODDAR 751

——— s. 28—Hindu Law—Joint family—Insolvency of father—Share of sons, whether vests in Receiver—Transfer after adjudication, validity of.

When a member of a joint Hindu family is adjudicated as an insolvent, the undivided share of his sons but not that of other members of the family, vests in the Receiver, though the sons' share would not be liable for any debts which they could prove to be illegal or immoral.

Section 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act protects the secured creditor in respect of his security, but it does not protect the insolvent in respect of a voluntary transfer of his property. N SHIOGOPAL v. SUKHRU 957 ——— ss. 39, 44—Composition, whether binding on creditor not entered in schedule—Cancellation of adjudication, whether amounts to discharge.

Section 39 of the Provincial Insolvency Act makes a composition binding on creditors entered in the schedule. A creditor who is not entered in the schedule and who has not consented to the composition is not bound by the composition.

An order cancelling an adjudication does not amount to a discharge within the meaning of s. 44 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. L RAM SARUP v. KHALIL-UL-RAHMAN, 26 P. L. R. 117; (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 376 348 Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 17——"Amount due under decree," meaning of.

The words "the amount due from him under the decree" in s. 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, mean the amount due under the decree at the date it was given and not the amount due under the decree at the time of presenting the application. A BISESAR RAM-DASSI RAM v. HAR KISHAN-PAHLAD RAI, 23 A. L. J. 296; L. R. 6 A. 345 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 412 370 ——— ss. 23, 25—Suit for rent—Denial of tenancy—Question of title—Order directing return of plaint—Revision, whether lies.

——— s. 23. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 102 659

Where a plaint is returned by a Small Cause Court under s. 23 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, the case is disposed of by the Small Cause Court by its decision that it has no jurisdiction, and its order is open to revision under s. 25 of the Act.

The matter is, however, different where the Court after contest comes to the contrary opinion and decides that it has jurisdiction and continues with the proceedings. In such a case the proceedings are still pending in the Small Cause Court and no case has been decided, and the provisions of s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act would consequently be inapplicable.

Where in a suit for rent the defendant denies the tenancy set up by the plaintiff and claims ownership of the premises for a third person, no question of title arises between the parties, inasmuch as the defendant does not claim title in himself. The question at issue is one of tenancy only and a Court of Small Causes is capable of deciding that question. O DHANI RAM v. MAIKOO LAL, 1. O. W. N. 957 286

——— s. 25. See BUNDELKHAND ALIENATION OF LAND ACT, 1903, ss. 2, 16 262

——— Sch. II, Art. 28. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 102 354

——— Art. 31—Legal representative of tenant holding over—Suit for damages for use and occupation, whether cognizable by Small Cause Court.

The legal representative of a tenant holding over is a mere trespasser.

A suit for damages for use and occupation against such a person when the title of the plaintiff is in dispute falls within the purview of Art. 31 of Sch. II to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. M KOPPA ANKI v. PONNAPALLI VENKATA SOBAYYA, 48 M. L. J. 685; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 884 695 ——— Art. 35 (a) (ii)—Suit to recover value of property misappropriated by defendant—Small Cause Court, jurisdiction of.

Plaintiff alleged that he gave a certain quantity of silver to the defendant to be made into bangles and that when the bangles were delivered to him he found that base metal had been substituted for silver. On the basis of this allegation he sued the defendant to recover a certain sum from him as the amount of which he had been defrauded by the defendant :

Held, that the allegations in the plaint amounted to an offence of criminal breach of trust and that the suit fell within the purview of Art. 35 (a) (ii) of Sch. II to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, and was, consequently, excluded from the cognizance of the Small Cause Court. O LALTA PRASAD v. MAHRAJ BAHADAR, 2 O. W. N. 374; 12 O. L. J. 358 346

Public Demands Recovery Act (I B. C. of 1895), s. 7—Bengal Drainage Act (VI of 1880), s. 37—Notice under s. 37, absence of—Certificate proceedings, validity of.

The failure to serve a notice in accordance with the provisions of s. 37 of the Bengal Drainage Act vitiates certificate proceedings under the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act. C ARUN CHANDRA SINGH v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA 339

Punjab Courts Act (VI of 1918), s. 41 (3). See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT, 1887, s. 59 (2) 902

Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 59 (2)—Punjab Courts Act (VI of 1918), s. 41 (3)—Occupancy tenancy—Succession — Collaterals—Custom—Appeal second—Certificate, whether necessary.

Under s. 59 (2) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, the right of succession to an occupancy tenancy must, where the collaterals are governed by custom, be regulated by the rules of Customary Law, and a finding with regard to such custom is not open to challenge in second appeal in the absence of a certificate under s. 41 (3) of the Punjab Courts Act. L PIRA v. MELA 902

Railway Company—Carriage of goods—Risk Note Form "B"—Loss of goods—Wilful neglect—Burden of proof—"Robbery," whether synonymous with "theft."

Certain goods were consigned for carriage to the defendant Railway Company under Risk Note Form "B." When the wagon containing the goods arrived at an intermediate station, it was found that the seals had been broken. Fresh seals were thereupon fixed on the wagon and it was shunted to a siding. Three days afterwards the wagon was opened by the Railway officials and its contents were checked whereupon a part of the goods were found missing. In a suit by the consignee to recover the price of the missing goods:

Held, that the action of the Railway officials at the intermediate station did not amount to wilful neglect and that the plaintiff having failed to prove that the loss had been caused through theft by the Railway servants he was not entitled to recover.

The word "robbery" in the proviso to Risk Note Form "B" is synonymous with the word "theft" which appears in the earlier portion of the Risk Note. L FIRM GULABRAI-LAHORI MAL v. E. I. RY. CO., CALCUTTA, 6 L. 305; (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 515 592 ———Carriage of goods—Risk Note Form "B"—Wilful neglect—Waggon sealed and not locked.

In a suit to recover damages for the loss of goods consigned to the defendant Railway Company for carriage under Risk Note Form "B" it was found that the Company had sealed the waggon which contained the goods on one side and that the seal was broken and it was not known how the goods disappeared;

Held, that the putting of a seal instead of a lock on the waggon did not amount to wilful neglect on the part of the Railway Company and that the plaintiff's suit was liable to be dismissed. O FIRM BHAGAI RAM-BHADUR RAM v. B. N. W. RY., 1 O. W. N. 766 215 ———Risk Note Form "B"—Suit for damages for loss of goods—Burden of proof—Duty of Company—"Wilful neglect," meaning of—"Robbery," whether theft—Loss occasioned by failure of guard to stop train—Liability of Company.

In a suit to recover damages for the loss of goods consigned to a Railway Company for carriage under Risk Note Form "B" the onus lies on the plaintiff to prove that the loss was due to theft or to the wilful neglect of the Company's servants. The Company must give prima facie or formal evidence that so far as they know, the Company or its servants through whose hands the goods have passed are not keeping back the goods. For this purpose they must tender their servants for cross-examination, and it is for the plaintiff, if he can, to prove by such cross-examination wilful neglect of, or theft by, the railway servants. It is not necessary for the plaintiff to show that there is no other possible explanation for the loss. It is enough if the facts proved strongly preponderate in favour of the theory which fixes the Company with liability.

Negligence is really the absence of such care as it was the duty of the defendant to use.

The word "wilful" ordinarily implies nothing blameable, but merely that the person of whose action the expression is used, is a free agent, and that what has been done arises from the spontaneous action of his will.

The word "robbery" in Risk Note Form "B" is equivalent to theft.

Where the loss is found to have been due to the failure of the guard to stop the train, after he had noticed that the doors of the wagon containing the goods were open, the Company must be held to have been guilty of "wilful neglect". M B. B. & C. I. RY. CO. LTD. v. FIRM NATTAJI PRATAPCHAND, 48 M. L. J. 400; (1925) M. W. N. 186; 21 L. W. 728; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 745 79

Railways Act (IX of 1890), ss. 47, 72—Rules framed under s. 47—Goods consigned for carriage—Delivery of goods, proof of—Evidence other than Railway receipt and signature in Railway books, whether admissible.

Neither s. 72 of the Railways Act nor the rules framed under s. 47 of that Act lay down any rules of evidence with regard to the proof of delivery of goods by a Railway.

The facts that a consignor is in possession of the Railway receipt in respect of goods consigned to a Railway Company for carriage and that his signature as to the receipt of those goods does not appear in the Railway books, are not conclusive evidence that the goods have not been delivered to him, inasmuch as these facts are not the only evidence which is admissible to prove delivery of the goods. O DURGA PRASAD v. AGENT, BENGAL & N. W. RY., 12 O. L. J. 224; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 389 350

———s. 56. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, SCH. I, ARTS. 30, 31 579

Receiver appointed by High Court—Subordinate Court, power of, to restrain Receiver from performing his duties—Procedure.

It is not competent to a Subordinate Court to restrain a Receiver appointed by the High Court from performing his duties as a Receiver.

Where a Receiver is appointed in a suit pending on the Original Side of the High Court and is given permission to sell certain property, any person who desires to prevent the sale of the property by the Receiver must apply on the Original Side in the suit on notice to the Receiver asking the Court to direct the Receiver not to sell the property. C NURUDDIN AHMED v. SUBODH CHANDRA MITRA 808

Record of Rights, entry in—Presumption of correctness—Suit for declaration that entry is wrong—Burden of proof.

Plaintiffs were landlords in a patti and defendants were tenants of certain land in the patti which belonged to persons other than the plaintiffs. A certain plot was recorded in the Record of Rights as ghairmazrua bandh, and as the property of the plaintiffs but certain trees standing on it were recorded as belonging to the plaintiffs and defendants jointly. Plaintiffs brought a suit for a declaration that the trees belonged to them and that the entry in the Record of Rights was wrong. It was found that the Survey Authorities in making the entry in dispute had proceeded solely on what was stated by the defendants on special oath which was administered to them at the instance of the plaintiffs' gomashta:

Held, (1) that the initial onus was on the plaintiffs to prove that the entry in the Record of Rights was incorrect and that they were entitled to the trees to the exclusion of the defendants;

(2) that the entry in the Record of Rights being based on no foundation at all and the plot in dispute having been recorded in the Record of Rights as ghairmazrua bandh and as the property of the plaintiffs in which the defendants had no interest at all, the presumption was that the trees standing on the plot belonged to the plaintiffs. Pat SHEO PERSHAD v. JHAMAN SINGH, 3 Pat. L. R. 87; (1925) A.I.R. (Pat.) 498 741

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 17, 47. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, 1882, s. 52 568

——— ss. 17, 49—List of properties allotted on partition signed and attested, whether partition deed—Registration, whether necessary—Admissibility in evidence to prove division of estate.

The question whether a document is a deed of partition or a mere memorandum of partition is a pure question of fact to be decided on a perusal of the actual document.

After an award directing a partition was passed by panchayatdars, a list was drawn up which contained the shares given to the different members and was signed by them and attested by witnesses:

Held, that the document was a deed of partition declaring an interest in the immoveable property mentioned therein and, if unregistered, it was not admissible in evidence respecting any transaction affecting such property.

Semble:—If the document were looked at not as evidence of a transaction affecting immoveable property but merely in order to show that a division of status had taken place it would only evidence an intention to divide and not the actual division itself. M. VEERAPPAN v. MYLAI UDAYAN 285 ——— ss. 17 (1) (b), 49—Surety—Hypothecation deed, unregistered, whether admissible to prove personal liability.

Appellant stood surety for a judgment-debtor and executed a deed hypothecating his house as security for the performance of the decree. The deed was not registered. In a statement made before the Court the appellant made himself personally liable for the decretal amount:

Held, (1) that the surety having made himself personally liable for the decretal amount, the unregistered hypothecation deed may be ignored and by virtue of the personal liability of the surety the very house which he had hypothecated by the unregistered deed could be attached and sold in satisfaction of the personal liability;

(2) that the hypothecation deed, though inadmissible in evidence in order to affect the house, for want of registration, was admissible in evidence in proof of the personal obligation which the surety had thereby undertaken. L BASANT LAL v. JOWAHIR SINGH, 7 L. L. J. 3; (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 356 609

——— ss. 82, 83—Prosecution for offence under s. 82—Sanction of Registering Officer, whether necessary.

The permission of the Registering Officer under s. 83 of the Registration Act is not a necessary condition precedent to the initiation of a prosecution by a private individual against a person for an offence under s. 82 of the Act. N INDRANI BAHU v. RANI BADI DULAIYA, 26 Cr. L. J. 1025 913

Res judicata—Compromise rent-decree, previous, operation of, as regards rate of rent.

A rent-decree passed in a previous suit on the basis of a compromise is, in the absence of the terms of the compromise, by itself no evidence to prove what the defendant admitted, and amounts only to proof of an admission in respect of the amount claimed. It does not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties with regard to the rate of rent. C OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL v. SAGAR PAIK. 781 ——— Cross-appeals—Two decrees—Appeal against one decree, whether competent in absence of appeal from other decree.

Where there are two decrees arising out of two appeals to a Subordinate Appellate Court and only one of such decrees is brought up in second appeal and there is nothing prejudicial to the appellant in the decree from which no appeal has been brought which is not raised and cannot be set right if the appeal which he has brought succeeds, the right of appeal is not barred either by the rule of res judicata or at all by reason of the failure of the appellant to appeal from the decree which does not prejudice him.

A suit to recover damages for a period of six years was decreed by the Court of first instance in respect of a period of five years. Both parties appealed, the defendant claiming in appeal that the whole suit ought to have been dismissed as time-barred and the plaintiff claiming that his suit with regard to the sixth year should also have been decreed. The two appeals were heard together and were disposed of by one judgment by which it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to claim damages for the sixth year and that no part of his claim was barred by time, but the rate of damages allowed by the First Court was reduced and the net result was that the decree which had been passed by the First Court in favour of the plaintiff was reduced in amount. Two separate decrees were prepared in the two appeals. The defendant filed a second appeal in the High Court only from the decree in the appeal filed by him in the lower Appellate Court in which his objection, that the whole suit ought to have been dismissed, was not allowed. It was objected by the plaintiff that the decree in the other appeal having become final, operated as res judicata and that the defendant's appeal was not, therefore, competent:

Held, that the decree in the other appeal, which had not been appealed from by the defendant, being substantially in his favour, the second appeal preferred by them was not barred by the fact that no formal appeal had been preferred from the decree in the other appeal. A RAM NARAIN v. NIHAL SINGH, L. R. 6 A. 222 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 488 804

Riparian owners, rights and liabilities of—Obstruction—Injunction, suit for—Cause of action—Present use of water, whether necessary.

Every riparian proprietor has, subject to similar natural rights of upper and lower proprietors, the right to have the water of a natural stream come to him in its ordinary and accustomed course, undiminished in flow, quantity and quality, and unaffected in temperature and to go from him without obstruction. The same principle applies to a natural stream flowing in an artificial channel.

An upper proprietor has, in the absence of a right acquired by contract or by prescriptive use, no right to dam back a river running through his land and impound as much of the water as he may find convenient for the purpose of irrigation, leaving only the surplus, if any, for the use of the proprietors below.

In such a case in order to give a riparian owner a cause of action for a suit it is not necessary that the plaintiff or any other riparian proprietor should make any actual use of the water at the time of the suit; it is sufficient if he is prevented by the action of the defendant from any possible use of the water due to Riparian owners—concld.

the obstruction caused by erecting the dam. N BHIKU v. R. M. DOYE, 8 N. L. J. 41; (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 273 184

Sale of goods—Acceptance of bill against documents —Suit on bill—Consideration, want of—Burden of proof.

A purchaser of goods who has accepted a bill against documents is under an obligation, as the acceptor of the negotiable instrument, to pay for the value of the instrument according to its tenor, notwithstanding that at the time when the bill is duly presented for payment the goods may not have arrived at the place where they are to be delivered and, therefore, the purchaser may not have had an opportunity before payment of examining the goods. The position in law of such a purchaser is this that although he is bound to honour the bill according to its tenor the payment of the bill will not in any way prejudice his right subsequently to reject the goods if he is entitled to do so under the contract after examination. But in a suit to recover the amount of the bill the onus is upon the defendant to prove that no consideration passed to him which would sanction the obligation under which he accepted the bill. C MCLEOD & Co. v. IVAN JONES & Co. 218

Specific performance—Agreement to re-sell—Strict compliance with terms—Part-performance, doctrine of, applicability of.

A right to re-purchase reserved in a deed of sale must be exercised according to the strict terms of the covenant.

It is not every kind of part-performance that will attract the operation of the doctrine of part-performance. The acts relied upon as part-performance must be unequivocal and in their own nature referable to some such agreement as that alleged. They must be consistent with the contract alleged and also such as cannot be referred to any other title than the contract, nor must they have been done with any other view or design than to perform the contract.

Where the main contract is one of re-sale and there is a subsidiary contract of tenancy upto the period allowed for the enforcement of the contract of re-sale, and all the acts of part-performance are explainable either as due to some inaction or to a willingness to continue the tenancy as one from month to month, the doctrine of part-performance can have no applicability. M DAKSHINAMURTHI MUDALIAR v. DHANAKOTI AMMAL, 48 M. L. J. 661 552

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), ss. 12, 20, 22—Agreement to sell immoveable property—Penalty for default—Specific performance, whether should be decreed.

A party to an agreement to sell immoveable property cannot be allowed to evade specific performance of the agreement merely because the agreement provides a penalty to be paid on default.

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell immoveable property the onus is upon the defendant to show that the case is one in which the Court should not exercise its discretion and grant specific performance in favour of the plaintiff. L NAWAB v. HUKAM DIN, 2 L. C. 149 511

——— s. 23. See HINDU LAW—JAINS 724

——— s. 42—Declaratory decree, when to be granted.

The grant of a declaratory decree is a matter within the discretion of the Court and the Court is not bound to make a declaratory decree, simply because it is within its competence to do so. A declaratory decree should not be granted where the grant of the decree would be a useless affair. A LAKSHMI CHAND v. LILA DHAR, L. R. 6 A. 111 Rev. 182

——— s. 42—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 120—Mortgage—Declaration of title, suit for, by mortgagor against mortgagee, whether maintainable —Revenue Records, entry in—Adjudication by Civil Court—Revenue proceedings after civil adjudication—Limitation, commencement of.

Where after an entry is made in the Revenue Records which is adverse to the interests of the plaintiff, the latter obtains an adjudication of a Civil Court in his favour relating to the subject of such entry, but subsequently to such adjudication and in spite of it, proceedings are taken in the Revenue Courts the result of which is adverse to the plaintiff, there is a fresh denial of his rights as the result of such proceedings, and limitation in respect of a suit for declaration of his rights by the plaintiff commences to run not from the date of the first adverse entry but from the date of the fresh denial of his rights after the adjudication by the Civil Court in his favour.

A mortgagor has sixty years from the date of the mortgage within which to redeem the mortgaged property by tendering the mortgage money. If before the expiry of that period it turns out that the mortgagee is denying the title of the mortgagor and is casting a cloud on his title and there is a danger that by lapse of time reliable evidence may disappear it is open to the mortgagor to bring a suit for a mere declaration of his title if he is not prepared to pay the mortgage money at once and to redeem the property. A GAJADHAR SINGH v. HARI SINGH, 23 A. L. J. 291; L. R. 6 A. 237 Civ. & L. R. 6 A. 95 Rev.; 47 A. 416; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 421 647 ——— ss. 42, 45—Suit to declare electoral rolls illegal and for injunction restraining election, nature of—Writ of mandamus—District Judge, jurisdiction of.

A District Judge has no jurisdiction to make any order which would be in the nature of a mandamus in a suit under s. 45 of the Specific Relief Act. That jurisdiction has been given only to the High Courts mentioned in the section and it can only be exercised within the local limits of their Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction.

Plaintiff filed a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council and the Collector of a District praying for a declaration that the preparation and publication of the lists for voters for a certain District Board constituency was illegal, void and ultra vires and that no valid election to the District Board could be held under those lists; he also prayed for an injunction restraining the Collector himself or by his subordinates from holding any elections to the District Board under the alleged illegal lists:

Held, that the suit fell within the purview of s. 45 of the Specific Relief Act and that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to grant an interim injunction in the terms prayed for by the plaintiff. B KANAIYALAL NANALAL DESAI v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, 27 Bom. L. R. 368; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 255 475

——— s. 45. See CITY OF BOMBAY MUNICIPAL ACT, 1888, ss. 3 (z), 394, 515 771

——— s. 56 (1). See C. P. C., 1908, O. II, R. 2 994

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 35. See EVIDENCE ACT, 1872, s. 91 382

Subrogation, doctrine of, applicability of. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, 1882, s. 101 264

Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 43, 187. See C. P. C., 1908, s. 102 354

——— ss. 50, 187—Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870)—Attestation—Witnesses, whether must attest in each other's presence—Unprobated Will, whether can be set up in defence—Probate, application for—Dismissal for default, effect of—Subsequent application, whether maintainable—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11, O. IX, rr. 8, 9.

Where a person asks another to attest a document it may be legitimately inferred that he admits that the document has been executed by him and the person whom he wants to attest is required to attest the document in token of the executant's admission of execution.

Section 50 of the Succession Act, which is made applicable to Hindu Wills by the Hindu Wills Act, does not require the witnesses to a Will to attest the Will in the presence of each other.

Where a Will is disputed several years after its alleged execution, one important test is to see what was the conduct of the parties; and where the conduct of the parties can only be rationally explained by the fact of the existence of a Will, it will have a considerable bearing in appreciating the evidence of the witnesses as to its genuineness.

Section 187 of the Succession Act does not say that an unprobated Will should not be looked into for any purpose whatever. It only says that title cannot be proved to establish a claim as a legatee without taking out Probate of the Will. Where a plaintiff comes into Court claiming as on an intestate succession, his claim can be displaced by proving that the deceased did not die intestate but left a Will. In such a case the plaintiff who claims adversely to the Will is out of Court irrespective of any proof of claim or title by the defendant. In cases where the plaintiff necessarily fails on the ground that there is a Will left by a deceased person and that by reason of the Will his claim to succeed to the estate of the deceased on the ground of intestacy under the ordinary law is not sustainable, there is nothing to prevent the defendant from pleading and proving the existence of the Will. It is unnecessary in such cases for the defendant to prove any independent title of his own.

The dismissal for default of an application for Probate would not debar an application by another person claiming an interest under the Will or by the executor himself. An executor presenting an application for Probate of a Will cannot be regarded as a plaintiff who brings a suit in respect of a cause of action.

Where a suit is dismissed for default it does not extinguish the right of the party whose suit is dismissed. All it involves at best is that he cannot file a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action. Where he is in the position of a defendant in another action it is open to him as defendant to set up his title as a bar to the plaintiff's suit.

A dismissal for non-prosecution or for the absence of the plaintiff does not operate as res judicata. M GANSHAMDOSS NARAYANDOSS v. SARASVATHI BAI, 21 L. W. 415; (1925) M. W. N. 285; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 861 621 ——— ss. 173, 174, 175, 176—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115—Will—Statement that certain property belonged to testator, admissibility of—Election by legatee—Estoppel.

Succession Act—concld.

A Will made by a Hindu testator contained the following clause:—"I do hereby direct that all properties moveable and immoveable standing in the name of my wife including the house No. 45, G. P. C. Lane Calcutta, and all household furniture and articles of domestic use shall remain in the possession of my said wife who shall during her life enjoy all the income and profits arising therefrom. But my said wife shall have no power to sell, mortgage or dispose of any such property. After the death of my said wife the same shall form a part of the residue and remainder of my estate and shall be divided equally amongst my sons." After the death of the testator his widow sold one of the houses standing in her name and the executors of the Will of her husband joined in the sale. With the sale-proceeds and certain moneys paid to the widow by the executors which represented the share of the widow in the income of a certain business which was being carried on in the name of the testator, the widow purchased another house in her own name. Subsequently she sold this house also representing herself to be its real owner stating that she had purchased it with her stridhan money and that it was not included in her husband's estate. The executors of her husband's Will and her sons joined in this sale-deed also. Disputes subsequently arose as to whether the house mentioned specifically in the testator's Will and certain other houses were the property of the widow or of the testator:

Held, (1) that the statement in the Will that the house mentioned in the Will and certain other property standing in the name of the widow belonged to the testator was not admissible in evidence as a statement with regard to the title to the houses, but that the fact that the testator had treated the house specifically as being his to dispose of by Will was admissible as conduct on his part in regard to the ownership of the houses which showed what his attitude was shortly before his death, and that the Court was entitled to draw an inference from it as to his intention when he supplied the purchase-money;

(2) that the widow and her representatives were not estopped from setting up their ownership of the houses by virtue of any declaration or act of the widow, unless she had done or said anything which had caused the executors to believe something to be true and to act on such belief, which would operate as an estoppel under s. 115 of the Evidence Act;

(3) that the widow being a pardanashin lady of slight education and there being no evidence that the Will was ever explained to her, and the executors never having called upon her as they were required to do under s. 176 of the Succession Act to make her election under the Will, no case of an election had been made out.

Under s. 173 of the Succession Act acceptance of a benefit given by a Will constitutes an election by the legatee to take under the Will if he has knowledge of his right to elect and of those circumstances which would influence the judgment of a reasonable man in making an election, or if he waives enquiry into the circumstances. Under s. 174 of the Act such knowledge or waiver of enquiry shall, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be presumed if the legatee has enjoyed for two years the benefits provided for him by the Will without doing any act to express dissent. C INDUBALA DEBI v. MANMATHA NATH ROY, 41 C. L. J. 258; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 724. 404

ults Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8. See COURT FEES ACT, 1870, s. 7 ii, iv (c). 801

——— s. 8. See COURT FEES ACT, 1870, s. 7 iv (c) 190

Tariff Act (VIII of 1894), s. 10—"Increase," meaning of—Contract after increase of tax—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 74—Contract of sale—Misunderstanding of market rate—Breach of contract.

The word "increase" in s. 10 of the Tariff Act refers to the act of Government and not to the actual levy of the excise at the factory. Parties who have entered into a contract of sale before the date on which the increase is to come into force and whose contract is still subsisting on that date, would come within the mischief of the section but the section has no reference to parties who enter into a contract of sale after the date on which the increase of the tax is to come into force although they may never have heard of such increase.

In a suit to recover the value of salt sold by the defendant to the plaintiff but not delivered, the fact that the market rate on the date of breach was due to a misunderstanding of the intentions of Government in respect of the levy of the enhanced rate of salt tax is no reason for refusing compensation to the plaintiff at that rate. M SOLAIMALAI THEVAN v. SINNATHAMBI PADAYACHI, 21 L. W. 434; (1925) M. W. N. 301; 49 M. L. J. 331 119

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 2, 8, applicability of. See HINDU LAW—MITHILA SCHOOL 849

——— s. 6 (e). See CONTRACT ACT, 1872, ss. 253, 254 812

——— s. 15. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, ss. 5, 14 17

——— s. 41—Charge created on property by decree—Judgment-debtor, whether ostensible owner—Transferee, whether gets good title.

A charge created by a decree on property in the possession of a judgment-debtor reduces his full ownership to a limited ownership and the judgment-debtor is in no better position than a mortgagor who retains for himself the equity of redemption, so that it is only the equity of redemption that he can dispose of. A transferee from such a judgment-debtor cannot claim the benefit of the provisions of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act. The judgment-debtor in such a case is not an "ostensible owner" within the meaning of the section so as to be able to give a good title to a transferee for value without notice. B KALLAPPA RAMAPPA DEYINNAWAR v. BALWANT DASO BETTIGERI, 27 Bom. L. R. 434; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 343 951

——— s. 41—Transferee from Hindu widow, whether can claim benefit of section.

A Hindu widow enters into possession of her husband's estate by right and not with any express or implied consent of the reversioners. While she is alive the reversioners have no voice in the matter and have no right to intervene. She can continue in possession in spite of their protest. A transferee from the widow, who is in possession by her own right and as to whose possession no consent of the reversioners can be implied by law, cannot claim the protection of s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act. A SHIB DEO MISRA v. RAM PRASAD, 22 A. L. J. 690; 46 A. 637; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 79 938

——— s. 43. See C. P. TENANCY ACT, 1920, ss. 12, 13, 35 115

——— s. 43. See HINDU LAW—WIDOW 790

——— s. 51. See HINDU LAW 44

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

——— s. 52—Lis pendens, doctrine of, applicability of—Decree based on compromise—Collusion.

The fact that a decree is made in pursuance of a compromise does not exclude the application of the doctrine of lis pendens provided, however, that such compromise is not tainted by fraud or collusion. A suit may be collusive at its very inception or a decree may be obtained by collusion in a suit which was honestly begun.

Where during the progress of a suit honestly instituted, the parties enter into a collusive agreement of compromise with the express object of defeating the rights of an auction-purchaser at the Court sale pending the suit, the doctrine of lis pendens is inapplicable. M PERIAMURUGAPPA ASARI v. MANICKA CHETTY, 49 M. L. J. 68 213

——— s. 52—Lis pendens, doctrine of, applicability of—Mortgage-decree—Property sold in execution of money-decree—Subsequent sale in execution of mortgage-decree—Priority between purchasers.

In a mortgage suit the applicability of the doctrine of lis pendens continues upto the date when either foreclosure takes place or the property is sold and the mortgage-decree is satisfied.

Where a person purchases in execution of a simple money-decree property in respect of which a mortgage-decree has already been passed, the purchase is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens and must be regarded as subject to the rights of the auction-purchaser in execution of the mortgage-decree. The purchaser in execution of the simple money-decree in such a case is the representative of the mortgagor judgment-debtor and is bound by the execution proceedings against the mortgaged property. M MARINA AMMAYI v. CHAGANTI SITARAMAYA 714

——— s. 52—Lis pendens, doctrine of, applicability of—Mortgage suit—Transfer of mortgaged property pendente lite, effect of—Purchaser, rights of—Mortgage-decree—Private sale by judgment-debtor in favour of decree-holder—Decree-holder, whether can eject transferee pendente lite.

Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act does not say that any conveyance made pendente lite is void. It only says that such a conveyance does not affect the rights of any party under any decree or order which may be made in the suit. The effect of the doctrine of lis pendens is not to annul the conveyance made in contravention of it, but only to render it subservient to the rights of the parties to the litigation.

During the pendency of a mortgage suit the mortgagor sold a portion of the mortgaged property to the defendant. The plaintiff obtained a preliminary decree for sale which was made final, and the Court ordered the property to be sold and the case was sent to the Collector for execution. The mortgagor judgment-debtor applied to the Collector for permission to sell the property to the plaintiff and, permission having been given, the sale was effected. The plaintiff then brought the present suit to eject the defendant from the property purchased by the latter from the mortgagor during the pendency of the mortgage suit:

Held, that the defendant's purchase was subject to the decree eventually passed in the mortgage suit and that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to enforce the mortgage decree against the property in the hands of the defendant but was not entitled to eject the defendant from the property in his capacity of private

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

purchaser of the property from the judgment-debtor in execution of the decree. N SHEOKISAN v. DOMA 995

——— s. 52—Lis pendens, doctrine of, effect of.

Under s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, a transfer during the pendency of a suit, of property directly and specifically in question in the suit, cannot affect the rights of any other party thereto with respect to any decree or order which may be made therein. N BALWANTRAO v. FARID SAHEB, 8 N. L. J. 44; (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 274; 21 N. L. R. 133 253

——— s. 52—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 17, 47—Lis pendens, doctrine of, applicability of—Sale-deed executed before but registered after filing of suit.

A sale-deed executed before but registered after the filing of a suit is not affected by the doctrine of lis pendens.

It is not the registration of a document which operates to create title but it is the document itself. The Registration Act makes valid such documents as soon as they are registered but the right conveyed or transferred is the right which exists in the transferor on the date of the document. When the document is presented for registration, the executant simply admits execution whereupon the document is registered and if the executant does not admit execution or if he refuses to appear before the Registrar, the law provides for compulsory registration of the document. In such a case it cannot be said that the executant by any act of his gives validity to the document. M In re AKKI GURU BASAPPA, 48 L. L. J. 496; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 710 568

——— s. 54—"Delivery" and "possession", meaning of—Adverse possession—Usufructuary mortgage—Oral sale of equity of redemption—Possession for 12 years thereafter—Prescriptive title, acquisition of.

A usufructuary mortgagee to whom the mortgaged property is sold without a registered instrument and who holds possession of the property for over 12 years from the date of sale acquires a title to the property by adverse possession, even if the sale is held to be infructuous.

The principle that possession can be adverse only to a person competent to sue does not apply where the change in the character of the possession is by mutual consent.

A direction by a mortgagor to the mortgagee to keep the property as absolute owner amounts to "delivery" within the meaning of s. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The word "delivery" in s. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act means only such delivery as the thing to be delivered is capable of.

The word "possession" in s. 54, Transfer of Property Act, cannot be taken to be synonymous with occupation. M SHEIK DAWOOD SAHIB v. MOHIDEEN BATCHA SAHIB, 48 M. L. J. 264; 21 L. W. 327; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 566 331

——— s. 54—Muhammadan Law—Transfer in lieu of dower, whether sale—Registration, whether necessary.

Where a transfer of property is made in lieu of a sum of money, whether the money is paid in cash or by the extinction of a dower debt, the transaction comes within the definition of sale contained in s. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act which is applicable to a transaction between Muhammadans. Where the value of the property transferred is over Rs. 100, the transfer must be effected by a registered instrument. O MUHAMMAD ZAKI KHAN v. MUNNU SAHU, 2 O. W. N. 171; 12 O. L. J. 267; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 407; 28 O. C. 227 176

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

——— s. 55—Sale of immoveable property—Encumbrance, existence of, not disclosed—Purchaser compelled to pay amount of encumbrance, whether can recover from vendor.

If, when an immoveable property is sold, the vendor does not disclose an encumbrance on the property and subsequently the vendee has to pay off the encumbrance to save the property from sale in execution of encumbrancer's decree, there is a breach of warranty of title and possession and the vendee is entitled to recover from the vendor the amount paid by him. A KANIZ FATMA v. IMAM-UD-DIN, L. R. 6 A. 319 Civ 756

——— s. 60—Mortgage—Clog on equity of redemption, what amounts to—Usufructuary mortgage for 95 years—Covenant to pay interest after expiry of period, validity of.

Where a mortgage-deed is drafted with the intention that redemption of the mortgaged property should be practically frustrated, that is to say, made so difficult and so hedged about that there is no likelihood of its ever being redeemed, the covenants contained in the deed must be regarded as clogs on the equity of redemption and the mortgagor is entitled to be relieved from the operation of such covenants.

A usufractuary mortgage contained a stipulation that the mortgage would not be redeemed for a period of 95 years, and that in addition to the rents and profits of the property, the mortgagee would at the expiration of the period of the mortgage be paid interest at a certain rate along with the principal money:

Held, that the stipulation was inequitable and that the mortgagor was entitled to redeem the mortgage property at any time on payment of the principal and interest at the stipulated rate. A RAJAI SINGH v. RANDHIR SINGH, L. R. 6 A. 314 Civ. 30

——— s. 60—Mortgage—Redemption—Clog on equity of redemption—Long term, coupled with other conditions.

The ordinary rule relating to clogs on the equity of redemption is that wherever the bargain is unconscionable and makes redemption impossible the mortgagor is entitled to relief.

A long term is not by itself sufficient to constitute a clog on the equity of redemption but it is a factor to be considered in arriving at the conclusion where the terms of the mortgage amount to such clog. A term of seventy-five years by itself raises a strong ground for interference.

Under a deed of mortgage the mortgagee secured a profit at the rate of 25 per cent. and the period of redemption was fixed at seventy-five years. There was a further condition that if redemption was not effected in the 76th year, a further term of 75 years would be added:

Held, that the intention of the mortgagee was to make redemption impossible and that the mortgagor was, therefore, entitled to relief. O MADHO SINGH v. LACHHMIN 909

——— ss. 60, 63—Mortgage—Redemption—Covenant permitting mortgagee to continue in possession after redemption—Clog on equity of redemption—Grove, whether accession—Grove planted with consent of mortgagor—Mortgagor, whether bound to pay cost of planting grove.

Conditions which prevent or impede the right of the mortgagor to obtain possession of the mortgaged property even after redemption, if entered into at the time when the mortgage is made, must be taken to operate as a clog on the equity of redemption. On the other hand, a subsequent contract which modifies the right of redemption may not amount to such a clog.

A covenant contained in a mortgage-deed under which the mortgagee even after redemption is entitled to retain the property on payment of a fixed rent operates as a clog on the equity of redemption and is unenforceable in a Court of Equity.

A contract for the grant of a lease does not run with the land and cannot bind the representatives of the original parties thereto.

A grove as a grove is an accession to the mortgaged property within the meaning of s. 63 of the Transfer of Property Act and is incapable of separate possession and enjoyment. In order to be enjoyed as a grove a grove has to be maintained and the fruits and the produce of it are to be enjoyed. This cannot be done without detriment to the land on which the grove stands. Therefore, where a grove is planted by a mortgagee on mortgaged land with the consent of the mortgagor, the mortgagee is entitled to insist that at the time of redemption the mortgagor must take the land with the grove and pay to the mortgagee the cost of planting the grove. A PARMANAND v. MATA DIN RAI, 23 A. L. J. 307; L. R. 6 A. 305 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 427; 47 A. 582 477

——— ss. 60, 72, 83, 84—Mortgage—Money spent by mortgagee in litigation, whether can be charged —"Mortgage-money," "amount due on mortgage," meaning of—Tender, insufficient, effect of—Bombay Regulation V of 1827, s. 14, applicability of.

Section 72 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act cannot be taken to imply that a mortgagee not in possession has no right to charge the mortgaged property for payments properly made by him in relation to the security.

Under the ordinary law of mortgage the mortgagor is bound, so long as the equity of redemption remains with him, to indemnify the estate against expenses incurred by the mortgagee in protecting the title.

An incumbrancer is always entitled to add to his security the costs of proceedings to which he is properly made party in respect of his incumbrance.

The expression "the amount remaining due on the mortgage" used in ss. 83 and 84 of the Transfer of Property Act is a very wide one, and covers any just allowances or costs which can be tacked on under the ordinary law of mortgage.

The words "mortgage-money" in s. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act must be taken as including all money which, on taking an account between the parties, may be properly allowed to the mortgagee.

Section 14 of the Bombay Regulation V of 1827 must be read as if the words "in the absence of a contract to the contrary" preceded the operative words of the section.

If a debtor-mortgagor tenders an insufficient sum in payment of the entire mortgage-debt due from him and asks that the mortgagee shall accept that tender as being the full amount due to him under his mortgage, s. 14 of the Bombay Regulation V of 1827 will not operate to allow cessation of interest on the insufficient amount tendered. B NADERSHAW SHERIARJI RABADI v. SHIRINBAI BAPUJI MUSA, 25 Bom. L. R. 839; 1924) A. I. R. (B.) 264 129 ——— ss. 60, 101—Mortgage, indivisibility of— Mortgagee purchasing rights of one of several mortgagors in satisfaction of entire debt—Suit by puisne mortgagee—Option.

In order that a mortgage may fully attain its end of securing satisfaction of the entire obligation in the rank and with the efficacy which the law or the will of the parties determined, it is essential that it should not suffer any disintegration. This character of indivisibility exists not only with reference to the mortgagee, who may generally be more benefited thereby, but also with reference to the mortgagor. And save as a matter of special arrangement and bargain entered into between all the persons interested, neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee, nor persons acquiring through either a partial interest in the subject, can, under the mortgage, get relief except in consonance with the principle of indivisibility.

The mere circumstance that by a contract between the prior mortgagee and one of the mortgagors, the prior mortgagee purchases the share of that mortgagor in the mortgaged property in full satisfaction of the whole of the mortgage-debt due to him, cannot affect the principle of the indivisibility of the mortgage. In such a case the prior mortgagee has under s. 101 of the Transfer of Property Act, in answer to a claim based upon an intermediate mortgage, the option to stand by his purchase or to give up his rights thereunder, and fall back on his own prior mortgage. Where he elects to fall back on his prior mortgage and disclaims his rights qua owner of the equity of redemption the only capacity which remains with him is that of a prior mortgagee, and in virtue of that capacity he is entitled to demand the entire debt due to him from whomsoever may claim to recover the property in his possession by redemption. N LAXMANSINGH v. JANARDAN, 20 N. L. R. 115; (1924) A. I R. (N.) 266 87

——— s. 68—Mortgage of occupancy holding—Sub-mortgage, legality of—Sub-mortgagee not put in possession—Suit to recover mortgage money, maintainability of.

Where a mortgagee of an occupancy holding purports to make a sub-mortgage of his mortgagee rights, he is doing nothing forbidden by law and the sub-mortgagee is entitled to enforce his sub-mortgage by any of the means which are open to him in law. For instance, if his mortgagor fails to put him in possession of the mortgaged property, the sub-mortgagee may bring a suit to recover the mortgage money under s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act. A RAM SARUP CHAUBE v. RAM DULAR PANDE, L. R. 6 A. 123 Rev 439

——— s. 72. See C. P. C., 1908, O. XXI, R. 89 829

——— s. 76—Mortgage— Mortgagee encroaching upon mortgaged land—Suit by mortgagor for restoration—Remedy.

It is the duty of a mortgagee, when he takes possession of the mortgaged property, to manage it as a person of ordinary prudence would manage it if it were his own. A duty is cast on him to see that the property is not lost by any encroachment. So long as he is in possession as mortgagee he is trustee for the mortgagor and is bound to protect his rights.

Where immoveable property is trespassed upon, a money compensation is not the proper remedy to the plaintiff.

Defendants were put in possession of certain property by the plaintiff under a mortgage for a definite period. Shortly before the expiry of the period they erected a building on land adjoining to the mortgaged land and encroached upon a portion of the mortgaged land. After redeeming the property the plaintiff brought a suit for demolition of that portion of the building which stood on the mortgaged land and for restoration of the site to its original position :

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

Held, that during the period of the mortgage the defendants were entitled to use the land in any manner they pleased provided that on redemption they restored it to the same condition in which it was when the mortgage was made, and that, therefore, no question of acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff could arise and the plaintiff was entitled to have the building demolished and the site restored to its original condition. A DIP NARAIN SINGH v. JAGMOHAN AHIR, L. R. 6 A. 252 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 576 15

——— s. 98—Mortgage, construction of—Anomalous mortgage—Lease for fixed period—Continuance in possession—Payment of rent—Implied tenancy.

The terms of a mortgage in favour of the plaintiff were as follows :—"Having given to you the land for cultivation for an equal share for a period of three years, I have taken a loan of Rs. 750. This amount shall bear interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per year and the interest of each year shall be added on to the principal amount and the same accumulated. You shall obtain payment of the principal and interest by means of sale of the mortgaged property. As regards the rajabhagam paddy, etc., you shall be given the rajabhagam paddy at the rajabhagam rates." Eight years after the date of the mortgage the mortgagor gave a lease of the mortgaged property to the defendant who dispossessed the plaintiff. In a suit by the latter for possession :

Held, (1) that the document was in its terms neither a simple nor a usufructuary mortgage but was an anomalous mortgage and the rights of the parties must be determined according to its terms ;

(2) that the plaintiff had only a right to keep possession of the property for a period of three years fixed in the deed;

(3) that plaintiff's continuance in possession subsequently on payment of the rajabhagam to the mortgagor created an implied tenancy which in this case was a yearly one, the property leased being agricultural land ;

(4) that till the plaintiff's tenancy was properly and legally put an end to, he was entitled to enforce it. M GOPINATHA CHOWDHARI v. KRISTNO CHOWDHARI, 21 L. W. 582; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 881 669

——— s. 101—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), ss. 19, 20, Sch. I, Art. 132—Mortgages, prior and subsequent —Subsequent mortgagee paying off prior mortgage—Subrogation, doctrine of, applicability of—Intention of parties—Presumption—Suit by subsequent mortgagee on basis of prior mortgage redeemed by him—Limitation.

Where a subsequent mortgagee pays off a prior mortgage, an intention to hold up the mortgage redeemed as a shield for his own benefit as against intermediate mortgagees must be presumed on behalf of the person paying off the mortgage, whenever necessity arises for such a presumption.

Where a man had a right to act in either of two ways he must be assumed to have acted according to his interest.

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

Where a subsequent mortgagee paid off a decree obtained by a prior mortgagee the day after the execution of his own mortgage and obtained a receipt in the name of the mortgagor but kept it with himself and recited the fact of the existence of the decree on the prior mortgage in his own mortgage stating that part of the money under the mortgage was required for paying off the decree:

Held, that all the circumstances pointed to the conclusion that it was the intention of the subsequent mortgagee to keep the security under the prior mortgage alive for his own benefit.

The principle underlying s. 101 of the Transfer of Property Act is applicable to the case of a subsequent mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage.

Where a prior mortgage is paid off with money borrowed from a subsequent mortgagee and the document creating the first charge is handed over to the subsequent mortgagee, the latter is entitled to the benefit of subrogation on the principle that there is an assignment in his favour by operation of law.

The advantages of the doctrine of subrogation are available to strangers who are mere volunteers having no pre-existing rights to protect and even to persons holding under invalid transfers, for instance, a transfer made pendente lite.

The question as to whether the claim of a subsequent mortgagee based upon an earlier mortgage redeemed by him is within time depends upon the question, when the amount sued for became due to the prior mortgagee with reference to Art. 132 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act. If the due date fixed by the prior mortgage is found to have been beyond 12 years from the date of the suit, a further question of extension of time by payment of interest or by acknowledgment within 12 years of the due date would become material. N NARAYAN v. HAFIZ, (1925) A. I. R. (N.) 21 264

——— s. 106—Notice to quit, service of—Joint tenants—Notice to each tenant, whether necessary.

A notice to quit under s. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act must be addressed to and served on the persons intended to be bound by it in any one of the modes suggested in the section. The section does not make any exception or lay down any special or peculiar procedure in the case of joint tenants.

It is necessary, in order to bind even a joint tenant, that the notice must be addressed to and served on him in one of the ways mentioned in the second clause of the section. It should be addressed to him and may be served either on him personally or on one of the family or servants or affixed to a conspicuous part of the property.

A person whose tenancy or existence is ignored and not recognised, cannot be regarded as a "party to be intended to be bound" by the notice under s. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. C BEJOY CHAND MAHATAB v. KALI PRASANNA SEAL, 29 C. W. N. 620; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 752 708 ——— ss. 108, 111—Lease for term—Breach of condition by lessor—Lessee, whether entitled to put an end to lease—Waiver—Liability to pay rent.

There is nothing in the provisions of ss. 108 and 111 of the Transfer of Property Act which entitles a lessee for a term to put an end to the lease on account of a breach of a term of the contract by the lessor.

Plaintiff granted a lease of a house for five years to the defendant and one of the terms of the lease was that within six months from its date the lessor should have a latrine constructed, a well sunk and a room built upstairs. The term was not carried out by the lessor but the defendant continued to occupy the house for nearly two years after the expiry of the period within which the construction had to be made and then purported to put an end to the lease. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover rent:

Held, (1) that it was not open to the defendant to continue to occupy the house after the breach by the plaintiff of the terms of the lease, without giving notice that he was willing to extend the time for performance up to a specified date, and then to throw up the lease on a date arbitrarily chosen by him; (2) that under the circumstances it must be taken that the defendant had waived the benefit of the condition and that the plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to succeed. M GOVINDASAMI CHETTIAR v. PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR, 21 L. W. 271; 48 M. L. J. 397; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 833 10

——— s. 108 (j)—Tenants, ejectment of—Landlord, right of, to proceed against sub-tenant.

Section 108, cl. (j) of the Transfer of Property Act preserves the right of the lessor to proceed against the tenant who transfers the tenancy but does not take away the lessor's right to proceed against the transferee. He is at liberty to proceed against both of them provided he can have execution only against one of them. S GOBIND RAM UTTAM CHAND v. MOHAMED HUSAIN 802 ——— ss. 122, 123, 126—Deed of gift—Execution—Attestation—Acceptance—Revocation before registration, validity of—Registration, subsequent, effect of.

Per Full Bench (Shah, A. C. J. and Mulla, J., dissenting).—Where a gift of immoveable property has been effected by means of an instrument signed by the donor and duly attested and accepted by the donee, it is not competent to the donor to revoke the gift before the instrument is registered.

Per Shah, A. C. J. and Mulla, J.—It is competent to a donor to revoke a gift of immoveable property before the instrument is in fact registered and the subsequent registration of the instrument against the wishes of the donor does not make the revocation ineffective.

Per Shah, A. C. J.—The essentials of a completed gift are that a transfer of the property should be made voluntarily and without consideration by an instrument which is signed by or on behalf of the donor and attested by at least two witnesses and which is registered, that is, registered in British India under the law for the time being in force regulating the registration of documents and that it should be accepted by the donee. Until all these conditions are fulfilled the gift is incomplete. So long as the transfer is incomplete it is open to the donor to resile from it and to cancel what he may have done. The gift is incomplete according to law so long as the document is not registered, and it is open to the donor to revoke it before it is completed.

Per Mulla, J.—The registration prescribed by s. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act is not mere evidence of the gift but is part of the gift itself. It is a necessary part of the proposition that a gift has been effected. It is not mere evidence to prove that there has been a gift, but it is a fact to be proved to constitute the proposition that there has been a gift.

Section 126 of the Transfer of Property Act applies only to a "gift", that is, a gift made in the manner prescribed by s. 123 of the Act. Where there is no such completed gift s. 126 has no application. B ATMARAM SAKHARAM KALKYE v. VAMAN JANARDAN KASHELIKAR, 27 Bom. L. R. 290; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 210; 49 B. 388 490

——— s. 123—Retiring gratuity, nature of—Gift, when complete—Sending amount to Bankers, whether constitutes delivery—Imperfect gift—Construction.

A retiring gratuity is in the nature of a gift and must be completed either by a registered document or by actual payment as required by s. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act.

Where, therefore, a Railway Company sanctions a gratuity to any one of their employers on his retirement, the mere fact of sending the amount to their Bankers is not equivalent to delivery, even though it is coupled with a request to remit it to their office at London where actual payment is to be made.

A transfer intended to operate as a gift, but invalid as such, will not constitute the donor a trustee of the property for the intended donee, in other words, an imperfect gift will not be construed as a declaration of trust. B NATHA GULAB & Co. v. W. C. SHALLER, 25 Bom. L. R. 599; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 88 312

——— s. 130—Assignment of debt, what constitutes—Words of transfer, absence of—Assignment of part of debt, validity of—Notice to debtor, whether assignment.

To constitute a valid assignment of a debt under s. 130 of the Transfer of Property Act there must be words of transfer in the instrument which must be executed in favour of the assignment and such assignment must be of the whole debt and not merely of a part of the debt.

A notice to the debtor not containing words of transfer nor referring to a transfer does not amount to an instrument of transfer.

For a document to operate as an equitable assignment, the fund out of which the payment is to be made should be specified and if no fund is specified the order does not operate as an equitable assignment.

The word 'absolute' in s. 130, Transfer of Property Act, is used in contrast to the expression 'by way of security' and has nothing to do with the question whether the assignment is of the whole debt or of a part thereof. An assignment may be of the whole debt by way of security though when the security is worked out, a part only may suffice. M DORAISWAMI MUDALIAR v. DORAISWAMI IYENGAR, (1926) M. W. N. 180; 48 M. L. J. 432; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 753 382

Trusts Act (II of 1882), s. 34—Trust property—Court, whether can sanction sale—Bombay High Court—Extraordinary Civil Jurisdiction — Order sanctioning sale, when can be challenged—Marketable title—Vendor, duty of—Vendee, when can repudiate contract.

Section 34 of the Trusts Act does not enable the Court to sanction a sale of the trust property by trustees when no power of sale is given by the trust deed.

The High Court of Bombay has Extraordinary Civil Jurisdiction to sanction a sale by trustees of property vested in them.

But this jurisdiction is of an extremely delicate character and has to be exercised with the greatest caution.

The Court will not in the exercise of its Extraordinary Jurisdiction sanction an unauthorised change of investment proposed on the mere ground that it will be to the advantage of the beneficiaries.

Trusts Act—concld.

When an order sanctioning a sale of property by trustees has been made, it cannot be challenged except on the ground of "fraud or underhand dealing."

The title which the vendor must show must be a title in himself, or in those whom he has a legal or equitable right to require to join in the conveyance; he has no right to say that some other person is willing to enter into a contract, and to force the title of that other person on the purchaser.

When a person sells property which he is neither able to convey himself nor has the power to compel a conveyance of it from any other person, the purchaser, as soon as he finds that to be the case, may repudiate the contract.

This right of repudiation must be distinguished from the common law right of rescission, and arises out of that want of mutuality which, unless waived, is generally fatal to relief by way of specific performance. But the right must be exercised, if it is to be exercised at all, as soon as the defect is ascertained. If, after ascertaining the defect, the purchaser still treats the contract as subsisting, he does not retain the right to repudiate at any subsequent moment he may choose. B PAULO DAVID DE SOUZA v. K. R. DAPHTARY, 25 Bom. L. R. 610; (1924) A. I. R. (B.) 252 230

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 36—Ex-proprietary tenant, rent payable by—Agreement between parties, whether can be enforced.

An agreement between a vendor and a vendee as to the amount of rent to be paid by the former as an ex-proprietary tenant is not by itself void. So long as a reasonable rent is fixed by the parties the Revenue Court can accept it as a fair estimate of the rent to be paid under s. 36 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act by the ex-proprietary tenant. The ultimate word on the question of the amount of rent, however, lies with the Revenue Court. A LAKSHMI CHAND v. LILA DHAR, L. R. 6 A. 111 Rev. 182 ——— ss. 111, 233 (k)—Partition, perfect and imperfect, difference between—Section 233 (k), applicability of, to imperfect partition.

The substantial difference between a perfect and an imperfect partition is that in an imperfect partition the joint responsibility for payment of land revenue is not done away with, but subject to this joint responsibility the shares are just as much allotted in separate ownership in the one kind of partition as in the other. Section 233 (k) of the U. P. Land Revenue Act applies just as much to the case of an imperfect partition as to the case of a perfect partition.

The policy of the law is that all disputes as to ownership of a mahal or patti to be partitioned should be finally disposed of in the partition proceedings. A TEJ SINGH v. MITTER SEN, L. R. 6 A. 120 Rev. 719

——— s. 111 (1) (b)—Zemindari belonging to joint family recorded in name of manager—Order directing institution of suit in Civil Court—Suit not filed within prescribed period—Suit by member of family, whether maintainable.

It is a common practice in the case of a zemindari owned by a joint family for the name of the manager alone to be recorded in the revenue papers. In such cases the manager is recorded in a representative capacity, and it is really the joint family which is the recorded co-sharer.

U. P. Land Revenue Act—concld.

Where a valid order is passed under s. 111 (1) (b) of the U. P. Land Revenue Act directing a party to institute a civil suit for the determination of a question of title and the suit is not brought within the period of three months, no subsequent suit for the determination of the same question of title can be entertained.

Where a zemindari owned by a joint family is recorded in the name of the manager alone and an order is made under s. 111 (1) (b) of the U. P. Land Revenue Act against the manager and he fails to institute a suit within three months, a suit brought subsequently by another member of the family is not maintainable. O SHEO BAKHSH SINGH v. INDRA BAHADUR SINGH, L. R. 6 A. (O.) 65; 12 O. L. J. 239; 2 O. W. N 209; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 392; 28 O. C. 194 185

——— s. 120—Partition of mahal—Tank situated in mahal allotted to plaintiffs — Order declaring defendants entitled to use water of tank for irrigation —Injunction, suit for—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

On the partition of a mahal, a tank situated within the mahal was allotted to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs represented to the partition Court that the defendants who were co-sharers in the mahal before partition had no longer any right to irrigate their fields from the tank which had been allotted to the plaintiffs. The partition officer passed an order that the defendants had right to continue the irrigation from the tank in question as they used to do under the terms of the wajib-ul-arz previous to the partition. Plaintiffs thereupon instituted a suit in the Civil Court for an injunction restraining the defendants from irrigating their fields from the water of the tank:

Held, (1) that the tank must be taken to have been originally made for the benefit of the whole mahal as it stood prior to the partition and could be availed of for the benefit of those lands by virtue of the provisions of s. 120 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act;

(2) that the order of the partition officer was covered by the provisions of that section and that the Civil Court had consequently no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. O CHANDRA PAL SINGH v. BISHAN SINGH 1053

U. P. Municipalities Act (II of 1916), ss. 19 to 27—Government of India Act, 1915, (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61), ss. 79, 107—Letters Patent (All.), cl. 11—Local Legislature, powers of legislation of, extent of —Municipal election—Election tribunal, creation of, whether ultra vires*—Election tribunal, whether subordinate to High Court—Appeal, Reference, Superintendence, powers of—Election dispute, decision of—Jurisdiction of Courts—Procedure.*

The language of s. 79 of the Government of India Act, conferring Legislative power on a Local Legislature, is very wide. Such Legislatures have been given a general power to make laws for the peace and good government of the territories for the time being constituting the province; and this power includes the power to direct that disputes of a particular kind shall be decided in a particular way and before a tribunal specially created for the purpose. The provisions of the U. P. Municipalities Act, therefore, which provide a special Court or tribunal for the exclusive trial of election cases are not ultra vires of the U. P. Local Legislature.

The right of appeal is not an inherent right of the subject but only exists where it is expressly conferred by a Statute.

U. P. Municipalities Act—concld.

The term "Civil Courts" in cl. 11 of the Letters Patent of the Allahabad High Court was not intended to cover a tribunal created under a particular Statute for a particular purpose, for instance, the election tribunal created under s. 22 of the U. P. Municipalities Act. Nor is such an Election Court subject to the "superintendence" of the High Court within the meaning of that expression in cl. 11 of the Letters Patent.

There is a radical difference between a right of appeal and a power of reference. A right of appeal is a right conferred on the suitor. The power of reference is a power vested in the Court. It lies in the sole discretion of the Court to exercise such power or not to exercise it. An appeal pre-supposes a decree or order already passed against which the appeal is directed. The power of reference is exercised while the case is still pending in order to enable the Court to arrive at a correct decision.

However widely a power of superintendence may be construed, it does not extend to conferring a right of appeal in cases where an appeal is expressly barred by Statute.

The whole scheme of ss. 19 to 27 of the U. P. Municipalities Act implies an intention that the election of any person as a member of a Board shall only be challenged by an election petition presented in accordance with the Act. The enquiry held by the Commissioner is not a mere summary enquiry subject to the result of a suit. The Commissioner is armed with all the powers of a Civil Court and his decision is intended to be a final settlement of the question in dispute.

Where a Statute which creates a right also prescribes a specific remedy with respect to that right a person aggrieved is limited to the remedy so prescribed. A ABDUL RAHMAN v. ABDUL RAHMAN, L. R. 6 A. 191 Civ.; 23 A. L. J. 385; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 381; 47 A. 513 51

Vendor and purchaser—Portion of sale consideration left in hands of vendee for payment to other person—Failure of vendee to make payment—Suit for damages — Limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 23, Sch. I, Art. 115.

Where a vendee is aware that a portion of the property which he is trying to purchase cannot be purchased by him under the provisions of the law and nevertheless enters into the contract with his eyes open in violation of the express provisions of the law, he cannot subsequently refuse to pay that portion of the sale consideration which is left in his hands at the time of the sale on the ground that the vendor has failed to fulfil his part of the contract in respect of that portion of the property which was not legally transferable in favour of the vendee.

Where a certain portion of the sale consideration in respect of a sale of immoveable property is left in the hands of the vendee for payment to a third person, no time being fixed for the payment, and the vendee fails to make the payment, the breach is committed by the vendee on the date when the sale-deed was executed and limitation for a suit to recover damages from the vendee for the breach commences from that date. In such a case there is no continuing breach within the meaning of s. 23 of the Limitation Act, nor successive breaches within the meaning of Art. 115 of Sch. I to the Act. A RAM NARAIN v. NIHAL SINGH, L. R. 6 A. 222 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A) 488 804

Village Chaukidari Act (VI B. C. of 1870), s. 50: See BENGAL PATNI TALUKS REGULATION, 1819, s. 11 529

Waiver. See CONTRACT ACT, 1872, s. 74 129

Wajib-ul-arz, successive, entries in, value of. See CUSTOM—PRE-EMPTION 298

Watan property—Mortgage by watandar—Death of mortgagor—Mortgagee, liability of, to pay mesne profits to successor of watandar.

A mortgagee of watan land from a watandar is liable to pay mesne profits to the successor of the original mortgagor after the latter's death for the period between the death of the mortgagor and the time when his successor to the watan obtains possession. B SUNDRABAI VITHAL v. LAKSHMAN RAMCHANDRA, 27 Bom. L. R. 497; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 325; 49 B. 583 723

Will, construction of—Bequest to daughters followed by clause creating right of pre-emption—Estate taken.

A testator directed his executors to alter a certain house belonging to him so as to convert it into four houses and to give one house to each of his four daughters after getting grants issued in their names. This was followed by a clause that in case any of the four daughters should be in need of money and should wish to sell her share, she should sell to the other daughters and not to strangers:

Held, that the Will conferred an absolute estate on the daughters and that the subsequent clause which only amounted to a direction in the nature of pre-emption did not operate to cut down the right of each of the daughters in the property given to her to a life-estate. M GANSHAMDOSS NARAYANDOSS v. SARASVATHI BAI, 21 L. W. 415; (1925) M. W. N. 285; (1925) A. I. R. (M.) 861 621 ———, construction of—Devise of absolute estate—Alienation, restriction on, validity of.

A Hindu testator by his Will devised certain property to his daughter-in-law with power to make gift, sale, mortgage, or any permanent morusi mukarrari settlement. By a subsequent clause, however, it was provided that any transfer by the devisee should be made only with the consent of her husband and the other sons and grandsons of the testator:

Held, that the intention of the testator was to make an absolute gift in favour of his daughter-in-law and that the subsequent restriction on her power of alienation must be regarded as repugnant to the gift and consequently void. C DYAMOYI v. SANKAR NATH MUKHOPADHAYA, 42 C. L. J. 30 159 ———— Execution—Proof.

The fact of the execution of a Will was put in issue 25 years after its alleged date of execution. The Will had been witnessed by several persons, all of whom, except two, had died before suit, but these two gave clear evidence that the Will was executed in their presence, that it represented what the testator wished, and that the testator, although he may not have understood some of the flowery expressions contained in the Will, was yet perfectly competent to comprehend the simple provisions of the Will. The Will was in favour of the son-in-law of the testator and was challenged by a distant reversioner, the question of whose relationship was not clear at the time of the execution of the Will. No Probate had been obtained, but the Will was produced before a Mutation Officer shortly after the death of the testator. The Courts in India held the execution of the Will proved:

Held, that under the circumstances their Lordships of the Privy Council did not see any reason to hold that the judgment of the Court of Appeal in India was not correct. • P C CHANDIKA BAKHSH SINGH v. MADHO SINGH, 10 O. & A. L. R. 931; (1924) A. I. R. (P. C.) 231; 20 L. W. 699; 40 C. L. J. 466; (1924) M. W. N. 913; 27 O. C. 304; 1 O. W. N. 595; 29 C. W. N. 582 (P. C.) 95

WIH—contd.

——— Probate—Execution—Burden of proof—Signature, doubtful—Sound disposing mind, what constitutes.

When a Will is propounded the burden lies upon the propounder of satisfying the conscience of the Court that the document in suit is in truth and in fact the last valid Will of a free and capable testator. The onus is in general discharged by proof of capacity and fact of execution from which knowledge of and assent to the contents of the instrument is assumed. But whenever circumstances exist which excite the suspicion of the Court, and whatever their nature may be, it is for those who are propounding the Will to remove such suspicion and to prove affirmatively that the testator knew and approved of the contents of the document, and it is only when this is done that the onus is thrown upon those who are opposing the Will to prove fraud and undue influence or whatever else they rely on to displace the case made of proving the Will.

The admitted abnormality of a signature is at least some evidence that it is not the handwriting of the person who purports to have written it.

Where the character of the alleged signature of a testator is such that the Court is satisfied that the signature is not that of the alleged testator, the Court must act upon its conviction and pronounce against the document as a valid testamentary disposition. But in a case where the witnesses have positively affirmed that the testator did in fact execute the Will in their presence, the Court will be slow to hold the document to be a forgery unless evidence is to be found aliunde which tends to confirm the conclusion at which the Court has arrived independently and from a consideration of the nature of signature by which the testator is alleged to have executed the Will.

In order to constitute sound disposing mind a testator must not only be able to understand that he is by his Will giving the whole of his property to one object of his regard, but he must also have the capacity to comprehend the extent of his property and the nature of the claims of the others whom by his Will he is excluding from all participation in that property, and the protection of the law is in no case more needed than it is in those where the mind has been too much enfeebled to comprehend more objects than one and more especially when that one object may be so forced upon the attention of the invalid as to shut out all others which may require consideration. C LILA SINHA v. BIJOY PROTAP DEO SINGH, 41 C. L. J. 300; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 768 534

WIH—concld.

Wrongful arrest—Damages, suit for—Decree passed against legal representative—Arrest in execution of decree.

A decree on a promissory note executed by a deceased member of a joint Hindu family was passed against the surviving member of the family and it was ordered that it was to be executed by seizure and sale of the property of the deceased that would come to the hands of the judgment-debtor as his heir and legal representative. More than a year after the date of the decree a notice for renewal of judgment was issued under O. XXI, r. 22 of the C. P. C. The judgment-debtor did not appear and an order was passed that execution was to issue against him. The decree-holder took out a warrant for arrest of the judgment-debtor, arrested him and brought him before the Court, where he was released on the ground that the decree was not capable of execution against him personally. The judgment-debtor, thereupon, brought a suit against the decree-holder for damages for wrongful arrest:

Held, (1) that the decree-holder must have known that he was not entitled to execute the decree against the person of the judgment-debtor, and that the order of the Court directing that execution should issue against the judgment-debtor was a merely formal order allowing execution to proceed;

(2) that the decree-holder's act in causing the judgment-debtor to be arrested was wrongful and the latter was entitled to recover damages for wrongful arrest. B VELJI BHIMSEY & Co. v. BACHOO BHAIDAS, 26 Bom. L. R. 349; 48 B. 691; (1925) A. I. R. (B.) 118 199

ADDENDA

TO THE

Comparative Tables showing seriatim the Volumes and Pages of all Indian Law Journals and Reports for the year 1922 with the corresponding Volumes and Pages of Indian Cases.

Allahabad, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLIV.

Page.	Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
587	LXXXIII	288
683 ...	LXXX	1006

Allahabad Law Journal. Vol. XX.

468	LXXXIII	288
621 ...	LXXX	1006

Bombay Law Reporter. Vol. XXIV.

214	... Not reportable.
449	... LXXXII	628
471 ..	„	641
1060	..LXXXIV	759
1162	.. LXXXII	618
1318	.. LXXXI	296

Patna, I. L. R., Series, Vol. I.

Page.	Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
153	LXXXVII	250
157 ...	„	251

Patna Law Times. Vol. III.

501	... LXXVII	957

(1922) All India Reporter.

Allahabad High Court.

47	... LXXX	183
316	... LXXXII	68
321	..Not reportable.
321	... LXXX	1006
338	LXXXIII	288

(1922) All India Reporter—contd.

Bombay High Court.

Page.	Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
18	..Not reportable.
84	... LXXXII	628
254 ...	„	641
296 ...	LXXX	189
454 ...	LXXXI	296

Calcutta High Court.

1 ..	LXXX	192
18 ...	„	315
279 ...	„	172

Lahore High Court.

55	...Not reportable.
68 ...	LXXX	194
75	... Not reportable.
263 ..	LXXXI	555
368 ..	„	301

(1922) All India Reporter—concld.

Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court.

Page.	Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
15	... LXXVII	697
46	...Not reportable.
200	... LXXVII	306
216 ...	LXXX	199

Patna High Court.

24 ..	LXXX	308
207	...Not reportable.
222 ...	LXXX	187
407	LXXXVII	251
408 ..	LXX	306
449	..Not reportable.
483	LXXXVII	250

Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.

18 ...	LXXIX	847
41 ..	„	841

Comparative Tables showing seriatim the Volumes and Pages of all Indian Law Journals and Reports for the year 1923 with the corresponding Volumes and Pages of Indian Cases.

Allahabad, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLV.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXXV	14
5	...	LXXVII	927
7	...	LXVIII	985
11	...	„	32
13	...	„	989
17	...	LXXIV	1046
18	...	LXVIII	978
21	...	LXX	553
25	...	LXXIV	1049
27	...	LXIX	981
43	...	LXVIII	981
46	...	LXXIV	999
49	...	LXXIX	234
53	...	LXXIV	1004
56	...	LXX	854
58	...	LXXIV	1054
59	...	LXXX	1041
66	...	LXX	805
72	...	„	132
77	...	LXIX	683
79	...	LXX	124
81	...	LXXIV	991
84	...	LXX	917
90	...	LXXIX	238
96	...	LXXIV	995
99	...	LXIX	688
107	...	„	641
109	...	LXXI	865
115	...	LXVIII	798
124	...	LXXI	115
128	...	„	243
130	...	„	234
133	...	LXIX	645
135	...	LXXIII	341
137	...	LXXI	110
140	...	„	684
142	...	„	503
143	...	LXXIV	270
145	...	„	262
148	...	LXXIII	453
149	...	LXXIX	308
152	...	LXIX	836
154	...	LXXIX	303
157	..	LXXI	455
159	...	LXXVI	191
162	...	„	527
164	...	LXIX	840
166	..	LXXI	54
169	..	LIX	971

Allahabad, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLV— contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
179	..	LXXI	629
185	..	LXXV	751
186	..	LXXI	836
189	...	LXXIV	277
191	..	LXXVI	12
193	..	LXXI	411
196	...	„	416
198	...	LXIX	944
203	...	LXXIX	82
208	..	LXXIII	299
215	...	LXXI	420
218	...	LXIX	921
220	...	LXXI	452
223	...	„	501
226	...	LXXVII	961
235	...	LXXIV	248
237	...	LXXIV	124
245	...	LXXI	574
250	...	„	605
255	...	LXXVI	983
258	..	„	969
260	..	LXXIV	113
263	..	„	133
267	...	LXXI	291
268	...	LXXIX	498
272	..	LXXIV	260
273	..	LXXI	278
276	...	„	1034
277	...	„	405
281	..	LXXVI	971
286	...	LXXI	321
290	..	„	460
297	...	LXXIII	648
300	...	„	62
304	..	LXXI	457
306	...	„	402
309	...	„	488
311	...	„	749
316	...	„	631
319	...	„	480
321	...	LXXVI	1050
323	...	„	1025
329	..	LXXI	689
332	..	LXXXIV	538
335	...	LXXI	767
336	...	„	773
339	...	LXXII	8
353	...	LXXI	614
359	...	LXXIV	836
361	..	LXXI	971
363	...	„	692

Allahabad, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLV— contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
364	...	LXXIII	413
369	...	LXXIV	873
374	...	LXX1	1027
376	..	„	965
378	..	LXXII	86
380	..	LXXI	609
383	...	„	991
384	...	LXXIII	977
386	..	LXXI	1038
388	..	LXXIII	945
390	...	LXXI	959
395	..	„	975
396	..	LXXII	92
401	...	LXXIV	687
404	...	„	88
407	..	LXVII	668
410	..	LXXIV	939
413	...	„	449
419	...	„	476
425	..	„	778
429	..	LXXII	134
432	...	LXXIV	1039
434	...	LXXIII	1018
437	..	LXXI	1026
438	..	LXXIV	1024
441	...	„	834
443	...	„	8
445	...	LXXV	323
449	...	LXXIII	1029
450	...	LXXIV	666
453	..	„	300
455	..	LXXIII	958
456	...	LXXIV	745
458	...	LXXIII	1016
459	...	LXXV	792
461	...	„	35
466	..	LXXIV	656
472	...	LXXIII	615
474	...	„	943
478	..	LXXXII	646
482	..	LXXIII	646
485	...	LXXIII	520
487	..	LXXVII	27
490	..	LXXIV	315
492	...	LXXXII	643
495	...	LXXIII	526
497	..	LXXIV	367
501	..	LXXIV	379
503	..	LXXIII	477
506	...	LXXIV	411
515	..	LXXVI	370

Allahabad, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLV— contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
518	...	LXXIV	358
520	..	LXXIV	307
524	...	LXXXI	275
526	...	LXXIII	801
529	..	LXXIII	935
530	..	LXXIII	986
534	..	LXXVII	1046
535	..	LXXXIV	585
537	...	LXXXIII	780
541	...	LXXIII	929
545	...	„	656
548	...	„	538
553	...	„	773
554	..	LXXIV	746
557	..	LXXV	361
559	..	LXXIV	339
561	...	„	382
563	..	„	389
565	..	„	822
567	...	LXXV	280
569	...	LXXIV	64
571	...	LXXVII	609
575	...	LXXIV	814
576	..	LXXIII	1024
581	...	LXXVII	572
588	...	LXXIII	508
592	...	LXXIV	763
594	...	LXXVI	1032
596	..	„	922
606	..	„	765
608	...	LXXV	351
610	...	LXXIII	990
613	...	LXXIV	865
616	..	LXXXII	134
618	..	LXXV	387
621	...	LXXXIII	19
623	..	LXXV	898
624	..	LXXIV	466
628	...	„	817
630	...	LXXIII	950
633		LXXIV	529
640	..	„	924
642	..	LXXXII	139
644	...	LXXXV	79
649	..	LXXIV	927
653	...	„	345
654	..	„	931
656	..	„	849
667	...	LXXV	100
669	..	LXXIV	905
671	...	LXXV	358

Allahabad, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLV—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
676	..	LXXIV	11
679	...	„	353
680	...	LXXV	159
682	..	LXXIV	142
685	..	„	24
687	...	„	2
691	...	LXXVII	448
692	...	LXXIV	325
700	...	LXXV	934
701	...	LXXVII	30
709	...	„	694
711	...	LXXV	835
715	...	LXXIV	495
718	...	„	498
720	..	„	490
724	...	„	918
725	...	„	502
727	..	„	858
729	...	„	869
735	..	„	513
741	...	LXXIX	87
744	..	LXXIV	647
749	..	LXXXI	269

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. XXI.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXIX	138
9	..	„	163
13	...	LXVIII	1000
18	..	LXIX	71
23	.	LXVII	914
27	..	LXIX	114
32	...	LXXVI	749
33	..	„	12
36	...	„	969
37	...	LXXIX	85
39	...	LXXI	278
42	...	LXXVII	961
50	...	LXXVI	983
53	..	LXXIX	82
57	...	LXVIII	573
60	...	LXXV	751
61	...	LXX	951
63	...	LXXI	1034
65	...	LXXIV	124
72	...	„	260
73	...	LXXI	574
77	...	LXXIV	113
81	...	„	133
84	..	LXXIX	470
86	...	LXXIII	495
88	...	LXXIV	75
89	...	LXXIII	576
90	..	LXXI	368
91	...	„	321
95	...	LXXXIII	771
97	...	LXXI	457

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. XXI—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
99	..	LXXIII	536
100	..	„	694
101	..	LXXI	291
102	..	„	402
105	...	LXX	990
109	...	LXXI	460
114	...	LXVII	569
118	...	LXVIII	900
120	..	LXXIII	651
122	...	LXXI	376
125	...	LXVIII	876
135	...	LXXIII	453
137	...	LXXI	525
140	...	„	405
143	..	LXXIII	62
148	...	LXXI	480
149	...	LXXVI	971
153	...	Not reportable.
159	...	LXXI	488
161	..	„	1032
162	..	„	1018
168	...	„	749
173	...	„	474
175	...	„	623
176	...	„	631
179	...	LXXVI	1025
184	..	LXXI	562
185	...	„	456
187	...	Not reportable.
189	....	LXXI	773
191	..	„	767
193	...	„	628
194	...	„	600
195	...	LXXIII	882
201	...	LXIX	273
204	...	LXXI	640
205	...	LXXXIV	538
207	...	LXXI	692
209	...	„	761
211	...	„	661
213	...	„	645
215	...	„	696
216	...	LXXIII	413
220	...	LXXI	609
223	...	„	614
228	...	LXXIV	873
232	...	LXXIII	648
235	...	LXXII	8
248	...	LXXIV	836
250	...	LXVIII	1
263	...	LXXI	1027
265	...	LXXII	86
267	...	LXXI	965
269	..	LXXIII	977
271	...	LXXI	959
276	...	Not reportable.
277	...	LXXI	1038
279	...	„	973
280	...	Not reportable.
282	...	LXXIV	604
288	...	LXXI	1013
289	...	LXXI	1028
292	...	„	971
294	...	LXXIII	945

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. XXI—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
296	...	LXXI	991
297	...	LXVIII	172
300	...	LXXIV	88
303	...	LXXII	92
308	...	LXXIV	687
310	...	Not reportable.
312	...	LXXIII	217
313	...	LXXIV	778
316	...	„	257
318	...	LXXVI	28
319	...	LXXIV	1039
321	...	Not reportable.
323	...	LXXIII	1018
326	..	LXXIV	834
328	...	LXXII	483
329	...	„	140
330	...	„	155
331	...	LXXIV	286
333	...	„	757
335	...	„	666
338	...	„	8
340	..	„	557
341	...	LXXXIV	585
342	...	LXXIV	1024
345	...	„	939
348	...	LXVII	668
351	...	LXXIV	300
353	..	LXXIII	958
354	....	„	1010
357	...	„	956
358	..	LXXV	323
361	...	LXIX	44
365	...	„	134
369	...	LXXIII	943
372	...	LXXIV	367
377	...	LXXIII	1016
378	...	LXXV	792
380	...	LXXIII	615
382	...	LXXIV	640
385	...	„	379
387	...	„	358
389	...	LXXIII	520
391	...	„	526
393	...	LXXIV	656
399	...	LXXV	148
402	...	LXIX	31
409	...	LXXV	35
413	...	LXXXII	643
416	..	LXXIV	528
417	..	LXXIII	646
420	...	LXXXI	153
421	...	LXXVI	370
424	...	LXXIV	307
428	...	LXXV	460
430	...	LXXXII	646
434	...	LXXIV	349
436	..	„	481
438	...	LXXIII	986
441	...	„	538
446	..	„	458
447	...	„	494
448	...	LXXVII	1046
450	..	LXXXI	275
452	..	LXXIV	761

Allahabad Law Journal Vol. XXI—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
454	...	LXXIV	746
455	...	LXXIII	935
457	...	„	529
459	..	„	773
460	...	LXIX	123
465	...	LXXIV	411
474	...	„	248
476	...	Not reportable.
478	...	LXXXI	490
480	..	LXXXIII	19
481	...	LXXIII	929
485	...	LXXIII	656
488	...	LXXIV	964
490	...	LXIX	278
495	...	LXXV	387
498	...	LXXIV	911
500	...	„	845
503	...	LXXVII	572
510	..	LXXIII	508
513	...	„	337
515	..	LXXIV	814
516	...	„	756
518	..	„	382
521	...	„	389
522	...	„	64
524	..	LXXV	280
526	...	LXXIV	372
527	....	LXXV	104
529	...	LXXIV	849
538	...	„	822
541	...	„	817
542	..	„	322
545	..	„	763
548	..	LXXIII	990
551	...	LXXV	351
554	..	LXXIV	747
563	..	„	865
567	...	„	827
569	..	„	922
571	...	„	466
576	...	„	924
578	...	„	449
582	...	„	462
585	...	„	529
591	...	LXXV	898
593	..	„	730
595	..	LXXIV	343
596	..	LXXXV	79
602	...	LXXIII	518
604	...	LXXIV	927
607	...	„	345
608	...	„	931
610	...	„	325
617	...	LXXIII	950
619	...	LXXV	984
621	...	„	353
622	...	LXXVII	448
623	..	LXXIV	858
626	...	LXXVII	30
634	..	LXXV	835
637	...	LXXIV	918
639	...	„	24
641	..	„	513
646	...	„	502

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. XXI—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
648	...	LXXVII	694
650	...	LXXIV	142
654	...	LXXV	159
656	...	LXXIV	495
659	...	„	498
661	...	„	490
665	..	LXXV	100
667	..	LXXIV	905
669	..	„	353
671	...	„	11
673	..	„	443
675	...	„	469
683	...	LXXV	316
686	..	LXXIX	87
689	..	LXXV	392
697	..	LXXIV	647
701	...	„	943
703	..	LXXV	339
713	...	„	309
718	..	LXXIV	499
723	...	„	482
726	...	LXXVI	594
730	..	LXXIV	492
734	...	LXXV	404
737	...	LXXVII	57
750	...	„	66
754	...	„	37
757	...	LXXIV	476
763	...	LXXVII	35
765	...	„	183
770	..	„	82
772	..	„	188
774	...	LXXXV	41
776	..	LXXVII	236
777	...	LXXVI	922
784	...	„	910
791	...	LXXXI	140
793	...	LXXVII	753
796	...	LXXIX	25
801	...	„	41
805	...	LXXXI	217
808	..	„	143
809	...	LXXV	785
811	...	„	502
817	...	„	254
818	...	LXXXIII	832
820	...	LXXVII	818
822	...	LXXIX	438
825	...	LXXXI	595
828	...	LXXV	777
830	...	LXXIX	562
834	...	LXXXI	615
836	...	„	558
838	...	„	717
839	...	„	613
841	...	„	600
844	...	LXXXIV	1053
847	...	LXXXI	598
850	...	„	609
855	...	„	618
858	...	„	615
859	..	„	612
861	...	LXXIX	605
865	...	LXXXIII	993

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. XXI—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
869	..	LXXXIII	904
871	...	„	910
873	..	„	997
875	...	„	1004
877	...	Not reportable.
879	...	LXXXI	215
881	...	„	238
882	..	LXXIX	310
886	...	„	314
890	...	„	332
893	...	LXXXI	177
896	..	LXXIX	341
899	...	„	367
901	...	„	381
907	...	„	577
908	...	LXXXI	586
911	...	„	112
912	...	„	40
914	..	„	142
915	...	„	176
916	...	„	260
917	..	LXXIX	532
922	..	LXXXII	705
925	...	LXXXIII	350
928	..	LXXVIII	904
930	..	LXXXIII	498
932	...	LXXIX	320
934	..	LXXVII	689

Bombay, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLVII.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	LXVII	658
4	...	LXXVI	71
11	...	LXIX	169
15	..	„	94
18	...	LXVII	852
28	...	„	754
31	...	LXXVI	1035
35	..	LXIX	172
37	..	LXXVII	117
44	...	LXIX	175
48	..	LXXVII	219
56	...	LXVIII	506
65	...	„	504
71	...	LXIX	96
74	..	LXXXIV	643
76	...	LXIX	84
89	...	LXVIII	619
92	..	LXXV	283
95	..	LXVIII	746
102	...	„	416
104	...	LXIX	207
106	...	„	80
110	..	LXXXII	618
117	..	LXXVI	78
128	...	„	115
137	...	„	73
146	...	LXXII	202
155	...	LXVII	162

Bombay, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLVII—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page
174	...	LXVII	267
182	...	„	326
191	...	LXXXII	628
218	...	„	641
227	...	LXXVI	34
231	...	LXX	263
244	...	LXVII	757
250	...	LXXV	221
263	...	LXVIII	481
270	...	„	33
275	...	LXXV	61
283	...	LXXIII	666
290	...	LXXII	118
298	..	LXXIX	179
306	...	„	192
315	...	„	197
321	...	LXXIII	718
327	...	LXXII	898
335	...	LXXI	763
344	...	LXXII	485
349	...	LXXVII	83
369	...	LXVIII	862
389	...	„	682
401	...	LXIX	291
431	..	LXXVI	265
438	...	„	294
451	...	LXXXI	449
465	...	LXXII	25
485	..	„	130
487	..	LXX	474
493	...	LXXII	246
509	...	„	266
523	...	„	224
527	...	„	62
529	...	„	312
534	..	LXXIII	912
542	...	LXXII	309
548	...	LXXXIV	684
552	..	LXXII	277
556	..	„	307
559	...	„	324
563	..	LXXIV	396
578	...	LXXIII	436
589	..	LXXII	321
593	...	LXXXII	593
597	...	LXXIII	196
607	...	LXXIX	226
621	..	LXXV	118
632	...	LXXII	249
637	...	„	659
643	..	LXXV	893
652	...	LXXII	404
654	..	„	636
657	...	LXXIII	304
664	..	LXXXIV	71
674	...	„	74
678	...	LXXVI	607
692	..	LXXII	556
696	...	„	626
699	...	LXXIII	354
707	..	„	279
712	..	„	246
716	...	„	365
719	...	„	469

Bombay, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLVII—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
721	..	LXXIII	464
724	...	LXXIV	469
742	..	LXXV	392
756	...	LXX	920
764	...	LXXXVI	440
773	..	LXXIII	369
778	...	„	233
783	..	„	1030
785	...	„	1027
790	...	LXXVI	929
798	...	LXXIV	362
809	..	LXXXIII	856
843	..	LXXVII	654
907	...	„	189
915	..	LXXX	75
924	...	LXXXVII	67
940	..	LXXVII	224
942	...	„	226
956	...	LXXVI	1023
960	..	LXXVII	995

Bombay Law Reporter, Vol. XXV.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	LXVIII	578
7	..	LXXXV	464
13	...	„	432
15	...	LXXII	17
26	..	„	25
43	...	LXXXI	148
45	...	LXXII	118
52	...	LXXIX	179
58	...	„	192
63	...	„	197
68	...	LXXVI	265
74	..	LXXII	130
76	...	„	62
77	...	„	127
79	...	LXXIII	666
84	...	LXXXVIII	316
95	...	LXXII	70
97	...	LXXVI	294
107	...	LXXII	73
112	...	LXXIII	718
116	...	LXX	156
121	..	Not reportable.
127	...	LXXII	202
131	..	LXIX	367
134	..	LXXXI	449
144	..	LXXII	249
147	...	„	256
151	...	„	242
153	...	„	275
155	..	LXXXIV	684
157	..	LXXII	277
161	...	„	261
164	...	„	266
173	...	LXX	474
177	...	LXXII	246
189	...	„	282

Bombay Law Reporter, Vol. XXV—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
192	...	LXXII	304
195	...	„	285
197	...	„	307
199	..	„	224
203	...	„	290
207	...	„	312
211	...	„	315
214	...	LXXV	67
220	...	LXXII	187
224	...	„	349
228	...	Not reportable.
231	...	LXXXII	709
234	...	LXXII	321
236	..	„	401
239	...	„	406
242	...	„	324
245	...	„	326
247	...	Not reportable.
248	...	„
251	...	LXXXVI	287
252	...	„	240
264	...	LXXII	353
268	...	LXXIII	912
274	...	LXXII	309
278	...	„	404
280	..	LXXXII	593
282	...	LXXII	359
286	...	LXXXIV	652
289	...	LXXIII	304
293	...	„	196
301	...	LXXI	753
305	..	LXXII	636
308	...	LXXV	743
310	..	LXXXIV	74
313	...	LXXIII	296
315	...	„	178
323	...	LXXII	659
328	...	LXXIX	226
339	..	LXXXIV	71
345	..	LXX	920
350	...	LXXIII	606
354	..	LXXIV	302
358	...	LXXII	556
361	..	LXXVI	607
371	..	LXXIII	310
375	..	„	231
378	...	„	240
381	...	LXXV	118
390	..	LXXIII	254
392	...	LXXXV	424
395	...	LXXII	626
398	...	LXXIII	354
404	...	„	279
408	...	„	246
411	...	LXXII	631
414	...	LXXXII	977
429	..	LXXIII	412
431	...	LXXIV	292
435	...	LXXIII	365
437	..	„	415
440	...	„	419
443	...	„	464
445	..	„	465
446	...	„	454

Bombay Law Reporter, Vol. XXV—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
447	...	LXXIII	442
449	...	„	443
450	..	„	125
452	..	LXXV	102
453	..	LXXIV	149
456	...	LXXVI	217
459	..	LXXIII	187
462	..	„	455
463	...	„	133
468	...	„	474
470	...	„	468
474	...	LXXV	893
480	...	LXXXV	11
484	...	LXXXVI	440
488	...	LXXIII	974
490	...	„	1011
491	...	„	424
494	...	„	402
499		„	379
503	..	„	978
508	..	„	1017
510	...	„	1023
513	...	„	1027
516	...	„	1020
518	..	„	1030
520	...	„	1032
521	...	„	1035
527	..	LXXII	898
531	..	LXXI	763
537	...	LXXII	485
541	..	LXXI	1035
548	...	„	632
560	..	„	769
568	..	„	933
577	...	„	643
582	...	„	650
588	...	LXXIII	436
595		LXXXVII	166
599	..	„	312
604	...	„	226
610		LXXXVII	230
621	...	LXXIII	242
625	..	LXIX	323
630	...	LXVII	914
634	..	LXIX	71
640	...	LXVIII	172
643	...	LXIX	278
648	..	„	36
655	...	„	44
660	..	LXXVII	1009
670	...	LXXI	646
676	..	LXXVII	1041
683	..	LXXIII	252
689	..	LXXXIII	856
713	...	LXXXII	852
726	...	„	867
747	..	LXXXIV	808
767	...	LXXVII	186
772	..	„	189
778	..	„	150
785	...	„	146
789	..	„	131
794	...	„	137
797	..	„	92

Bombay Law Reporter, Vol. XXV—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
806	..	LXXIII	369
810	..	„	233
813	...	LXXVI	937
818	...	LXXVII	342
826	...	LXXVI	1014
837		LXXXVII	122
839	..	„	129
854	..	LXXIV	396
863	..	LXXVI	557
867		LXXXVII	37
873	...	„	75
881	..	LXXXV	416
888	..	LXXVII	171
893	...	„	206
896	..	„	226
908	...	LXXIV	469
920	..	LXXV	392
929	..	LXXVII	224
931	..	„	247
938	..	LXXXV	442
945	...	LXXVII	654
990	...	LXXVI	1023
992	..	LXXVII	241
1005	..	LXXIV	362
1014	..	LXXVII	266
1027	..	„	305
1032	...	„	307
1037	..	„	275
1063	..	LXXXVII	67
1074	...	LXXVII	562
1078	..	„	336
1081	...	„	1055
1083	..	LXXX	75
1089	...	LXXVII	995
1093	..	„	548
1099	..	LXXVI	996
1137	...	LXXXV	504
1144	..	„	491
1160	..	LXXXII	577
1170	...	„	791
1172	...	LXXXI	770
1178	...	„	843
1180	..	„	844
1182	...	LXXXII	796
1192	...	LXXXV	1038
1207	...	LXXXII	533
1209	...	LXXXI	673
1211	...	„	679
1214	..	„	684
1218	...	„	688
1222	...	LXXXII	124
1225	...	LXXVII	699
1232	..	„	702
1237	..	„	747
1240	..	„	749
1248	...	LXXVI	7
1256	..	LXXIV	462
1259	..	„	747
1269	...	„	499
1275	..	„	492
1279	...	LXXVI	910
1287	...	LXXIV	482
1290	...	LXXVI	594
1296	...	LXXXIX	529

Bombay Law Reporter, Vol. XXV—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1307	...	LXXXVII	289
1309	...	„	93
1313	...	LXXXIV	953
1318	..	„	938
1321	..	„	854
1333	..	„	796
1340	...	„	878

Calcutta, I. L. R., Series, Vol. L.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LX	777
12	...	LXXIV	273
23	...	„	283
29	..	„	287
41	...	„	267
49	...	„	630
68	...	LXX	161
79	...	LXXI	307
84	..	LXVIII	573
94	..	LXXI	120
100	..	LXIX	48
115	..	LXX	606
127	..	LXXIV	264
135	..	LXXI	239
141	...	LXXIV	244
146	...	LXXI	327
153	...	LXXIV	250
159	...	LXXI	670
166	..	LXX	937
171	...	LXXI	314
180	...	LXX	794
197	....	„	175
202	...	„	874
208	...	LXXIX	218
215	...	„	242
223	...	LXXI	662
229	...	LXXXI	149
233	...	LXXII	686
239	..	„	472
243	..	LXXIV	906
253	...	LXX	169
258	...	LXVIII	439
266	..	LXXII	1019
276	...	LXX	510
292	...	LXXIV	793
308	...	LXXXI	319
311	...	LXXXIV	876
318	...	LXXVII	819
329	....	LXXI	646
338	...	„	650
347	..	LXXVII	1025
356	..	LXX	663
367	...	LXXVII	991
370	...	„	450
394	..	„	1030
399	...	LXXX	485
419	...	LXXVII	910
423	....	„	990
426	..	LXXV	435
439	...	LXXIII	252

Calcutta, I. L. R., Series, Vol. L—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
446	...	LXXVII	1048
461	...	LXXV	533
468	..	LXXVI	311
475	....	LXXII	1041
482	..	LXXIII	934
487	...	LXXIV	193
491	...	LXXV	521
508	...	„	379
518	...	LXXI	792
526	...	LXXXV	221
531	..	LXXV	346
549	...	„	81
564	...	LXXII	372
572	...	LXXV	89
577	...	LXXIV	153
585	...	LXXII	362
594	..	LXXIII	931
597	..	LXXV	466
604	..	„	474
610	...	LXXIV	1010
615	..	„	996
626	..	„	1001
632	...	LXXVI	300
639	..	LXXV	27
650	..	LXXIV	929
658	...	„	950
664	...	LXXII	953
667	..	LXXXIII	757
680	..	LXXIII	193
689	...	LXXIV	1041
694	..	LXXV	55
700	...	„	421
718	...	LXXIV	1021
727	..	LXXV	11
737	...	LXXIV	1032
743	...	„	1017
749	..	LXXV	447
756	...	„	20
762	..	LXXVII	193
807	...	„	10
813	...	„	529
822	...	„	707
849	...	LXXIII	780
853	...	LXXIX	298
867	..	LXXXI	912
872	..	LXXIII	773
878	..	LXXIX	287
892	..	„	333
898	..	„	309
903	..	„	312
907	...	„	305
912	..	LXXXI	940
919	..	LXXX	419
929	...	LXXIV	499
939	...	LXXV	715
948	...	LXXVII	795
957	...	LXXIX	852
969	..	LXXV	537
972	..	LXXXI	974
974	..	LXXIX	537
978	...	„	491
985	..	LXXXI	909
992	...	LXXV	173
1004	..	LXXXI	906

Calcutta Law Journal, Vol. XXXVII.

Jan. to June 1923.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	LXVIII	254
15	..	„	451
20	...	Not reportable.
30	..	LXXXI	236
34	...	LXXIII	770
39	...	LXXI	225
42	..	LXXIII	706
48	...	LXXII	22
52	...	LXXIII	416
56	...	LXIX	138
67	..	„	114
73	...	LXVII	573
79	...	LXVII	569
86	...	LXVIII	900
90	...	LXX	886
94	...	„	792
99	...	LXXIII	306
101	...	LXXII	221
105	...	LXXI	509
108	...	LXXIII	17
118	...	LXX	895
122	...	LXXIV	392
127	...	LXXIII	271
128	..	LXXIII	265
131	..	LXXII	202
136	...	LXIX	367
139	..	LXXIV	925
141	..	LXXI	327
145	..	LXXIV	975
171	..	„	1043
173	..	LXXI	657
180	...	LXXV	529
181	...	LXXIV	591
191	..	LXXVII	790
199	..	LXVIII	538
219	...	LXXI	641
222	...	LXXIII	482
233	...	LXXVII	450
253	..	LXXVI	293
254	..	LXXIII	322
256	..	„	53
257	...	LXVII	902
263	...	LXXVI	252
265	...	„	241
281	...	„	220
287	..	LXXVII	1041
292	...	LXXVI	455
298	...	LXXI	611
302	...	„	753
305	...	LXVIII	1000
314	...	LXXII	1013
319	...	LXXIV	612
326	...	LXXIII	931
327	...	„	934
329	..	„	936
331	...	„	328
333	..	LXXII	719
336	..	LXX	777
343	..	„	937
346	...	LXXI	629
351	..	LXIX	278
356	...	„	71

Calcutta Law Journal, Vol. XXXVII—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
363	...	LXXI	643
369	...	„	769
377	..	LXIX	44
383	..	„	36
391	...	LXII	831
394	...	LXX	919
395	...	LXXIV	575
399	..	„	601
403	...	LXXV	196
406	...	„	443
409	...	„	362
410	..	„	364
413	..	„	367
415	...	„	541
417	...	„	417
420	...	LXIX	323
426	..	LXVIII	172
430	...	LXVII	914
435	...	LXIX	123
440	...	LXXI	763
447	...	LXXXII	507
452	...	LXXV	2
457	...	LXIX	273
461	..	LXXVI	948
464	...	LXXII	898
469	...	Not reportable.
473	..	LXXII	37
475	...	LXX	570
478	...	LXXV	105
482	...	„	41
489	...	LXXII	136
491	...	LXXI	453
494	...	„	545
496	...	LXXII	475
499	...	LXXVI	448
501	...	LXXI	632
515	...	LXXIII	252
521	...	LXXIV	547
524	..	„	552
526	..	LXXII	508
535	...	LXXIV	542
538	...	„	555
542	...	LXXII	128
545	..	LXX	187
548	..	„	999
552	...	LXXV	557
556	...	LXVIII	937
561	...	LXXIV	906
569	...	LXXII	48
580	...	„	55
585	...	LXX	784
539	..	LXXV	506
592	...	„	537
595	..	LXXIII	773
598	..	„	77

Vol. XXXVIII.

July to Dec. 1923.

1	...	LXXV	145
7	...	LXXIII	938
9	...	LXXV	250
13	...	LXXIII	776

Calcutta Law Journal, Vol. XXXVIII—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
17	..	LXXI	378
21	..	LXXV	402
25	..	LXXI	933
31	..	„	1035
41	..	„	650
47	..	LXXVII	707
67	...	LX	895
72	...	LXV	47
74	..	LXX	101
77	...	LXXV	129
104	...	„	173
111	...	„	319
114	...	LXXIV	178
121	...	LXXII	979
126	...	„	187
130	..	LXXIII	436
137	...	LXXVI	307
139	..	„	333
142	..	„	343
147	...	„	358
149	..	„	353
150	...	„	407
155	..	„	389
158	..	„	391
161	..	„	392
163	...	„	417
175	..	LXXVII	812
177	..	LXXII	98
183	..	LXXVI	517
186	...	LXXI	336
190	...	LXXVI	510
192	..	LXXV	20
196	..	LXXIII	940
198	..	LXXVI	429
201	..	„	432
202	...	LXXII	953
203	...	LXXVI	430
206	...	„	431
207	...	LXXII	329
213	...	LXXXI	680
220	...	LXXVI	511
229	...	LXXV	278
231	..	LXXVII	1009
242	...	LXXI	646
248	..	LXXII	485
253	..	LXXIII	530
255	...	LXXIV	373
265	..	LXXV	203
266	...	„	325
272	...	LXXX	307
275	..	„	419
281	..	LXXVI	961
284	...	„	963
285	...	„	965
286	...	„	300
291	..	„	917
298	...	Not reportable.
299	...	LXXIII	214
302	...	LXXIV	449
307	..	XXIV	286
309	...	LXXVI	966
350	...	„	586
353	...	LXXVII	986
355	...	LXX	583

Calcutta Law Journal, Vol. XXXVIII—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
358	...	LXXVII	907
360	..	„	529
365	..	„	949
369	..	„	954
372	..	„	1015
379	...	LXXXI	261
384	...	„	246
388	..	„	220
397	...	„	264
406	..	LXXXII	763
411	...	LXXXI	353

—

Calcutta Weekly Notes, Vol. XXVII.

Jan. to Sept. 1923.

150	...	LXVII	569
156	...	LXVIII	900
159	..	LXIX	707
166	...	Not reportable.
168	...	LXXIII	322
171	..	LXXI	225
174	...	LXVII	561
179	...	LXVIII	573
183	...	LXX	606
189	...	LXXI	327
193	...	LXXV	262
196	...	LXXII	173
199	...	LXIX	323
204	...	LXXXIV	581
208	...	LXXV	196
210	...	LXXIII	17
218	...	LXXVI	213
221	...	LXVIII	876
231	...	LXXX	485
240	...	LIX	340
245	...	LXVIII	538
259	..	LXX	602
263	...	„	532
267	...	LXXIII	53
269	...	LXIX	71
275	..	LXXIII	882
280	...	LXXI	378
285	...	LXXV	218
287	...	LXXIII	47
290	...	Not reportable.
294	...	LXVII	914
299	...	LXIX	273
305	...	LXX	555
312	...	„	874
315	...	LXXII	794
317	...	LXVIII	1
328	...	LXX	273
336	..	LXXVII	154
340	...	LXVII	1005
343	...	LXIX	367
350	...	LXV	318

Calcutta Weekly Notes, Vol. XXVII—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
365	...	LXXIV	604
370	...	LXXXII	76
372	...	LXXII	722
381	...	LXX	828
386	...	„	869
387	...	LXVII	705
389	...	LXXI	792
408	...	LXVIII	172
411	...	LXXII	686
414	...	LXX	919
418	...	LXVIII	980
420	...	LXXX	459
430	...	LXXV	443
433	...	„	281
437	...	LXIX	44
442	...	LXXX	498
449	...	LXXVII	576
457	...	LXXV	567
459	...	LXXII	77
461	..	LXIX	134
466	..	LXXVII	774
469	...	„	77
472	..	„	1025
479	...	LXXII	508
485	..	LXIX	31
491	..	LXXVII	769
496	...	LXXV	557
501	...	LXXVI	1052
502	...	LXXII	719
505	..	LXXVI	455
509	...	LXIX	356
513	..	LXXVII	845
521	...	„	384
528	...	LXII	831
531	..	LXXIII	936
533	...	LXX	937
537	..	LXXVII	1022
542	..	„	253
548	...	LXXV	201
519	...	LXXIV	601
552	..	LXXVI	236
554	..	LXXIII	931
555	...	LXXV	352
557	..	LXXXIV	737
561	...	LXIX	123
566	..	LXX	101
569	..	LXXVII	623
575	...	LXXII	38
578	...	LXXVI	300
582	..	LXIX	278
587	...	LXXIV	975
607	..	LXX	932
611	..	LXXXV	984
621	...	LXXIV	929
624	..	LXIV	773
626	..	LXXVII	231
629	..	LXXI	632
639	..	LXXIV	996
646	..	LXXVII	619
647	..	LXVII	294
649	..	LXXIV	1041
651	..	LXXVII	816
653	..	LXIX	36

Calcutta Weekly Notes, Vol. XXVII—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
660	...	LXX	777
666	..	LXXVII	868
669	...	LXXV	11
673	..	LXX	187
675	..	LXXV	541
677	..	LXXII	48
684	..	LXXVII	833
693	..	LXXV	421
700	..	„	364
701	..	LXXVII	1009
710	..	LXXV	255
716	..	LXXVII	10
720	..	LXXIV	575
723	...	LXXVII	29
725	...	Not reportable.
733	...	LXXX	632
739	...	„	651
740	...	„	577
743	..	LXXV	715
749	..	LXXIV	906
755	..	LXXX	538
759	...	LXXV	447
760*n*	...	LXX	328
763	..	LXXVII	26
765	...	LXXXII	507
769	...	LXXIII	10
772	...	LXXV	231
774	..	LXXII	202
783	...	LXXXII	348
787	..	LXXVII	529
792	...	LXXV	682
797	...	LXXII	286
802	...	„	187
806	..	LXXX	612
809	..	„	598
812	...	LXXV	466
816	...	LXXX	323
817	..	„	353
820	...	LXXVI	430
821	...	LXXXII	545
854	...	LXXVI	948
857	...	LXXV	129
878	..	LXXII	485
883	...	LXXX	419
888	...	LXXVIII	7
893	...	LXXIX	271
897	...	„	257
901	..	LXXI	769
908	...	LXXX	849
916	..	„	840
918	...	LXX	408
919	...	LXXIV	76
923	...	LXXXII	278
925	...	LXXI	984
933	...	LXXX	510
936	...	LXXVI	401
941	...	LXXIV	1010
943	...	LXX	385
947	...	LXXX	513
947	..	LXXXI	974
949	..	LXXI	629
955	..	LXXX	637
959	..	LXXV	474

Calcutta Weekly Notes, Vol. XXVII—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
962	..	LXX	535
964	...	LXXX	628
969	...	„	580
972	...	„	589
974	...	LXXIV	396
982	..	LXXX	1034
987	..	LXXIV	1001
989	...	„	373
996	...	LXXXI	61
997	...	LXXIII	252
1004	...	Not reportable.
1007	...	LXXIX	287
1013	...	LXXX	294
1017	..	„	279
1021	...	LXXI	643
1025	..	LXXX	623
1029	...	„	1017
1033	..	LXXXI	874
1037	..	Not reportable.
1040	...	LXXX	654
1042	...	LXXIII	328

Vol. XXVIII.

Nov.-Dec. 1923.

1	..	LXXI	650
6	..	LXXX	317
10	...	LXXV	173
16	..	LXXX	300
20	..	„	257
23	...	LXXVI	429
25	..	LXXI	1035
31	..	„	753
34	..	LXXXI	17
46	..	„	29
49	...	LXXII	898
55	..	LXXXIV	267
57	..	LXX	990
62	...	LXXXI	667
66	...	LXXXI	675
70	...	„	641
73	...	LXXI	763
79	...	LXVI	853
86	..	LXXVII	783
92	..	LXIX	530
98	..	LXXVII	1041
104	..	LXXXIII	260
114	..	LXXIV	153
116	...	LXXIX	312
118	..	LXXV	367
119	...	LXXVI	961
121	..	LXXI	646
127	..	LXXXII	930
131	...	„	934
140	...	LXXII	128
143	..	Not reportable.
145	..	LXXXII	870
157	...	LXXVI	365
160	...	LXXXIV	554

Lahore, I. L. R., Series, Vol. IV.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXXIII	696
7	...	LXXI	77
10	...	LXXIII	699
12	...	„	700
15	...	LXXVII	1009
32	...	LXXII	187
38	...	LXXIII	702
44	...	„	927
46	...	LXXI	459
49	...	LXXIII	937
52	...	LXXIV	122
55	...	LXXIII	805
58	...	LXXI	596
61	...	LXXXI	337
66	...	LXXIV	79
69	...	LXXVI	702
72	...	LXXIV	146
76	...	LXXII	765
85	...	LXXVI	267
90	...	LXXI	495
93	..	LXXVI	907
99	...	„	921
102	...	LXXIV	589
106	...	LXXIII	893
109	...	LXXIV	600
111	..	LXIV	549
113	...	LXXI	829
116	...	LXXVI	946
120	...	LXXIV	433
122	...	„	451
127	...	LXXIII	673
130	...	„	779
133	...	„	613
137	...	„	318
140	...	„	655
142	...	LXXI	951
151	...	LXXV	827
156	...	„	99
158	...	LXXIII	813
160	...	„	791
164	...	„	442
165	...	„	106
168	...	„	799
171	...	LXXV	87
173	...	LXXIII	209
176	...	„	658
179	...	LXXV	542
182	..	„	456
185	...	„	520
187	...	„	528
189	...	LXXIII	452
192	...	„	590
195	...	LXXV	545
198	...	„	555
200	...	LXXIV	484
202	...	LXXIII	898
208	..	LXXVII	333
211	...	LXXII	452
215	...	LXXIII	421
224	...	LXXI	617
233	...	LXXV	57
236	..	„	109

Lahore, I. L. R., Series, Vol. IV—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
239	...	LXXVII	338
243	..	LXXV	103
246	...	LXXVII	423
249	...	LXXIII	889
252	...	„	894
254	...	„	759
256	..	„	785
258	..	LXXVII	523
263	..	LXXV	461
271	..	LXXVI	385
282	...	LXXIII	988
284	...	LXXV	7
295	...	LXXIII	645
297	...	LXXVI	535
323	..	LXXV	915
327	..	LXXVI	91
334	..	LXXXV	701
336	..	LXXVIII	266
344	...	LXXIII	441
316	..	LXXVIII	103
350	..	LXXIV	462
354	..	LXXVI	605
356	..	LXXIV	2 4
359	...	LXXVI	189
364	...	LXXVII	398
367	..	„	409
373	..	„	433
376	..	LXXV	980
382	...	LXXVII	425
390	...	LXXV	1028
392	...	LXXIII	786
399	...	LXXVII	446
402	..	LXXIII	425
406	...	LXXV	375
408	..	LXXIX	201
423	...	„	194
428	...	„	208
432	...	„	185
434	..	LXXV	938
439	...	LXXIX	248
442	..	LXXV	908
445	...	LXXVII	869
448	...	LXXVI	29
451	...	LXXXI	964
460	..	LXXVI	20
462	..	LXXXI	955
467	...	LXXIX	260

Lahore Law Journal, Vol. V.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXX	929
3	..	LXXI	459
5	..	„	734
9	..	LXXIII	367
11	...	Not reportable.
14	...	LXXIX	462
17	...	Not reportable.

Lahore Law Journal, Vol. V—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
19	...	LXXIX	275
26	...	LXXIII	292
30	...	LXXI	730
36	...	„	246
38	...	Not reportable.
40	...	LXXXI	173
44	...	LXVII	547
47	...	LXXIX	279
49	...	LXXXV	92
53	...	LXX	901
55	...	LXVIII	722
63	...	LVI	931
67	...	LV	816
70	...	LIX	594
73	...	Not reportable.
75	...	LXXI	739
78	...	Not reportable.
81	...	„
82	...	„
87	...	LXXIII	331
89	...	LXXIX	504
90	...	„	506
91	...	LXIX	283
92	...	„	330
95	...	LXXIX	286
97	...	LXXIII	817
99	...	LXXI	837
106	...	LXXIX	970
108	...	„	977
109	...	Not reportable.
111	...	LXXIX	294
114	...	LXVII	463
117	...	LXXXIV	1039
119	...	Not reportable.
121	...	„
124	...	„
128	...	„
135	...	LXVI	147
137	...	LXVIII	890
140	...	LXXI	487
142	...	LXVI	9
143	...	LXXII	405
146	...	LXXIII	459
148	...	LXVIII	461
150	...	LXVII	888
163	...	LXXIV	577
172	...	LXIX	723
174	...	LXXIII	817
175	...	„	889
178	...	LXIX	721
180	...	LXXXI	143
183	...	LXIX	370
185	...	LXXIII	894
187	...	LXXIV	682
190	...	„	685
193	...	LXXI	746
196	...	LXIX	6
198	...	LXXI	783
200	...	LXXII	452
203	...	LXIX	495
210	...	LXXV	786
212	...	LXXI	864
214	...	LXX	1006
217	...	LXXIV	688

Lahore Law Journal, Vol. V—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
224	...	LXVIII	817
228	...	LXXI	52
230	...	„	603
234	...	LXXIV	479
236	...	„	484
238	..	LXXII	765
246	..	LXXIV	451
251	...	LXXII	91
253	..	LXXIV	589
257	..	LXXIII	927
259	..	LXXIV	122
262	..	LXXXI	322
266	..	LXXIV	489
269	..	„	497
271	...	LXXI	998
272	...	„	700
276	...	LXXVI	702
279	...	LXXVI	529
287	..	LXXXIV	24
289	..	LXXXV	24
292	..	LXXXI	331
296	..	LXXV	528
298	..	LXXII	403
300	...	LXXV	590
304	...	LXXIII	871
307	...	LXXII	586
310	...	„	385
317	..	Not reportable.
322	...	LXXVI	824
325	..	LXXXIV	321
329	...	LXXIII	691
332	...	LXXVI	589
335	..	LXXIII	673
338	..	„	209
341	...	LXXVI	10
345	...	LXXIII	655
347	...	LXXVI	592
351	...	LXXV	94
355	...	„	99
357	...	LXXIII	767
361	...	LXXV	827
366	..	LXXII	480
370	...	Not reportable.
372	..	LXXIII	779
375	...	„	272
377	...	LXXVI	606
381	..	LXXIII	370
384	..	LXXVI	496
389	...	„	501
392	..	LXXIII	650
394	..	LXXVI	445
398	...	LXXIII	461
401	..	„	590
404	...	„	988
406	...	„	442
407	..	LXXVI	398
412	...	LXXIII	699
414	..	Not reportable.
417	..	LXXVI	397
420	..	LXXII	617
429	...	LXXIII	521
431	...	LXXIII	818
435	...	„	719
438	...	LXXVII	523

Lahore Law Journal, Vol. V—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
444	...	LXXIII	441
446	...	LXXIII	881
449	...	LXXVI	147
451	...	LXXX	170
454	...	LXXVIII	61
459	...	LXXVII	585
462	...	LXXVI	91
469	..	LXXXV	701
471	..	LXXIII	759
473	...	„	895
475	...	LXXVII	894
477	...	LXXXIII	499
480	..	LXXIII	645
482	..	LXXIV	146
487	..	LXXIX	572
494	..	LXXIII	874
496		LXXVIII	266
505	...	LXXIII	896
507	...	LXXIV	1
509	..	LXXIII	785
511	...	„	1
513		LXXVIII	103
517	...	LXXIII	791
520	...	Not reportable.
522	...	LXXIV	433
524	...	LXXIII	932
528	..	LXXVII	983
530	..	LXXVII	872
533	...	LXXIII	600
539	..	„	903
541	...	LXXX	494
543	...	„	496
546	...	„	503
548	..	LXXIII	911
551	...	LXXV	915
555	...	LXXIII	889
558	..	LXXIV	187
569	...	LXXIV	600
571	..	LXXIII	800
572	...	LXXVII	895
574	..	LXXIII	939

Madras, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLVI.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXV	727
10	..	LXVI	800
30	...	LXV	720
35	...	LXVI	115
40	...	LXX	787
47	...	LXXIV	804
54	...	LXVIII	898
60	...	„	971
64	...	LXXI	153
83	...	LXXXVI	650

Madras, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLVI—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
88	...	LXXI	49
90	...	LXIX	464
92	...	LXX	729
104	...	LXXI	374
108	...	„	1035
117	...	LXIX	636
123	...	LXXII	902
133	...	LXIX	994
135	...	LXXII	207
148	...	„	868
162	...	LXXI	514
167	...	LXXI	643
177	...	LXX	469
190	...	„	689
253	...	LXXI	212
257	...	„	242
259	...	LXXIV	785
300	...	LXXIII	991
349	...	LXXI	274
360	..	„	756
373	...	LXIX	123
382	...	LXXII	599
405	..	„	225
415	...	„	189
423	...	„	278
435	...	LXXIII	188
449	...	„	163
476	..	LXXII	358
478	...	„	727
488	...	LXXIII	106
506	...	LXXII	820
525	...	LXX	994
536	..	LXXI	1039
567	...	LXXII	833
574	...	LXXI	530
579	..	LXXII	5
583	..	„	545
592	..	„	925
597	...	„	145
605	..	LXXIII	343
631	..	„	87
650	..	LXXII	671
659	...	LXXIII	584
673	..	LXXIV	22
679	...	LXXIII	1050
685	..	LXXVI	721
706	..	LXXVII	621
712	..	LXXIII	926
715	..	LXIX	374
719	...	LXXI	608
721	...	LXXIII	944
723	...	LXXII	881
726	...	„	745
734	..	LXXIII	793
736	..	LXXV	869
751	..	LXXIV	492
758	...	„	945
766	...	„	959
768	..	„	155
782	...	„	198
791	..	„	166
808	..	„	223
811	..	„	4
815	...	LXXV	406

Madras, I. L. R., Series, Vol. XLVI—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
823	...	LXXII	826
836	...	„	141
839	..	LXXV	17
844	...	„	334
847	...	„	390
852	...	LXXVII	580
866	...	LXXV	38
873	..	LXXIV	896
895	...	LXXVI	594
903	...	„	873
919	...	„	886
929	...	„	992
938	...	LXX	888
948	..	LXXIV	1029
955	...	LXXVI	342
958	...	LXXV	604

Madras Law Journal, Vol XLIV.

Jan. to May 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXXI	1039
23	...	LXX	321
27	...	LXIX	634
29	...	LXXI	641
32	...	LXIX	367
35	...	LXXII	202
39	...	LXX	780
43	...	LXXI	374
45	...	„	274
53	...	„	61
56	...	LXXI	514
60	...	LXIX	529
62	...	LXXI	298
64	...	LXXI	200
66	...	„	49
67	...	LXXII	622
69	...	„	902
74	...	LXIX	440
77	...	LXXI	288
80	...	LXXII	839
84	...	LXXI	212
87	...	LXX	446
90	...	LXXII	328
91	...	„	826
100	...	LXX	888
107	...	LXXII	868
116	...	LXXI	463
119	...	LXXII	885
122	...	„	874
123	...	„	187
128	...	Not reportable.
130	...	LXIX	447
132	...	LXXII	214
138	...	LXXI	798
141	...	LXXII	857
146	...	„	925
149	...	LXXVII	1009
161	...	LXX	987
166	...	LXXIII	155
171	..	LXXII	194

Madras Law Journal, Vol. XLIV—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
179	...	LXXIII	139
184	...	LXXI	466
187	...	LXXII	109
201	...	„	358
202	...	LXXI	530
206	...	LXXII	189
212	..	„	833
217	...	„	250
226	...	„	42
231	...	„	175
234	...	LXIX	95
236	...	LXXII	139
238	...	„	314
240	...	„	95
243	...	„	538
247	..	„	220
249	...	„	63
251	...	„	225
258	...	„	149
263	...	LXXIII	470
271	...	LXXII	141
274	...	„	145
279	...	LXXIII	308
282	..	LXXII	284
284	...	LXXIII	374
285	...	LXXII	258
290	...	LXXI	756
299	..	LXXIII	409
303	...	LXXII	488
309	...	„	81
318	...	„	5
320	...	„	337
322	...	„	156
325	...	„	335
328	...	„	536
332	...	LXXI	753
337	...	LXVIII	1000
344	...	LXXII	449
349	...	„	278
357	...	„	464
359	...	LXXIII	202
361	...	LXXII	325
362	...	LXXIX	40
363	...	LXXII	638
366	...	Not reportable.
367	...	LXXVI	781
373	...	LXXIII	188
382	...	LXXII	838
385	...	„	134
386	...	„	154
388	..	LXXIV	906
396	...	LXXII	48
407	...	„	356
409	...	„	137
411	...	LXXI	1056
413	..	LXXII	820
424	...	LXXIII	217
427	..	„	456
428	...	LXXII	381
431	...	„	842
437	...	LXIX	433
443	...	LXXII	582
450	...	„	599
465	...	LXXI	643

Madras Law Journal, Vol. XLIV—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
471	..	LXXII	898
476	...	LXXI	769
485	...	LXXII	615
486	...	LXXIII	670
488	...	LXXII	669
489	...	LXXI	629
495	...	LXXII	770
498	...	„	485
503	...	LXXVII	1041
510	..	LXX	670
513	...	LXXII	978
515	..	LXXIV	309
523	...	LXXVII	621
527	...	LXXII	727
534	...	„	292
557	...	„	515
561	..	LXXIII	252
567	...	„	163
585	..	LXXII	609
588	...	„	558
590	...	„	865
595	...	LXIX	272
596	...	„	363
599	...	LXXII	836
602	...	LXXI	650
608	...	„	763
615	...	„	933
624	...	„	646
631	...	„	1035
638	...	LXXIV	25
642	...	LXXVI	872
643	...	LXXIII	793
645	...	LXXIV	281
648	...	LXXII	69
649	...	LXXII	690
652	...	„	430
655	...	LXXIII	343
673	...	„	1050
677	...	LXXI	343
680	...	LXXII	545
685	...	LXXIV	785
699	...	LXXII	286
706	...	LXXIII	436
714	...	LXXVI	948
718	..	LXVII	944
723	...	LXIX	134
728	..	„	273
732	...	LXX	937
735	...	LXIX	278
740	...	LXVIII	172
745	...	LXIX	123
751	...	„	71
758	...	LXX	777
766	...	LXIX	36
774	...	LXXII	340

Vol. XLV.

July to Dec. 1923.

1	...	LXXIV	58
8	...	LXXII	745
12	...	LXXIII	106
23	...	„	619
36	..	LXXII	881

Madras Law Journal, Vol. XLV—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
39	...	LXXV	673
41	...	LXXII	795
44	...	„	815
53	...	„	632
56	...	LXIX	158
59	...	LXXIV	1006
66	...	LXXIII	985
67	...	LXXII	436
71	...	„	397
74	...	LXXV	768
76	...	LXXIV	609
78	...	LXXIII	131
83	...	LXXV	161
91	...	LXXIII	733
100	...	LXXII	456
104	...	LXXIII	944
105	...	LXXII	805
116	...	„	165
124	..	LXXIII	926
125	..	LXXIV	223
129	..	LXXIII	74
133	...	LXXII	612
135	...	LXXIII	87
150	...	LXXIV	22
153	...	LXXIII	1054
156	..	LXXVI	212
157	...	LXXIII	297
161	...	„	954
164	...	LXXII	703
166	...	LXXV	572
175	..	LXXII	559
186	..	LXXIV	166
199	..	LXXII	683
203	..	LXXV	406
208	..	„	17
210	...	LXXIII	956
212	...	LXXIV	4
215	..	LXXIII	244
219	..	„	193
224	..	LXXIV	945
228	...	LXXV	170
230	..	LXXIV	959
231	..	LXXV	739
233	...	„	848
238	...	LXXVI	61
240	..	LXXIV	1003
242	..	LXXXIV	696
247	...	LXXIII	530
249	..	„	242
253	..	LXXV	502
254	..	Not reportable.
255	..	LXXIII	941
258	..	LXXV	476
263	...	„	369
274	..	LXXIV	198
279	...	LXXV	695
289	..	LXXIV	449
295	...	„	469
305	...	„	952
309	..	LXXVI	342
312	...	LXXVII	12
315	...	LXXV	491
321	..	LXXV	334
323	...	LXXIII	1041

Madras Law Journal, Vol. XLV—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
324	..	LXXIV	218
327	..	„	139
329	...	LXXIII	540
333	...	LXXV	38
339	...	LXXVII	347
346	...	LXXIV	155
355	...	„	462
359	..	LXXI	621
363	...	LXXIII	391
385	..	LXXV	838
389	...	LXXVI	467
399	...	LXXIV	1029
403	..	LXXV	546
406	...	LXXVI	289
409	..	LXXVI	756
413	..	LXXV	46
424	..	„	250
431	..	LXXVII	542
438	..	„	141
444	..	„	1048
453	..	LXXXIV	721
460	..	LXXI	984
471	...	LXXVI	752
473	..	„	187
476	...	LXXIV	1018
478	..	LXXVII	148
481	...	LXXIV	896
497	...	LXXV	7
505	..	LXXVI	910
514	..	„	811
516	..	LXXVII	580
528	...	LXXVI	886
533	...	LXXIII	584
543	..	LXXV	620
543	...	XLVII	949
545	..	LXXVI	992
551	..	„	306
553	...	„	647
555	..	LXXV	691
557	..	LXXVI	721
572	..	LXIX	323
578	..	LXXIV	747
588	...	„	492
592	..	LXXV	392
602	...	LXXXI	203
611	...	LXXVI	124
613	..	„	642
617	...	LXXIV	499
623	...	„	476
630	...	„	396
639	...	LXXVI	873
651	...	„	750
653	..	„	1011
657	..	„	594
663	..	LXXIV	482
667	...	LXXIX	510
675	..	LXXVI	1018
680	...	„	769
682	...	„	896
683	...	LXXV	985
684	...	„	977
687	...	„	566
689	...	„	876
690	...	LXXVII	264

Madras Law Journal Vol. XLV—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
693	...	LXXV	1016
699	...	„	390
703	...	LXXVI	207
707	..	LXXVII	216
711	...	„	39
716	...	LXXVI	893
718	...	LXXXI	57
719	..	LXXVI	154
721	...	LXXIV	944
722	...	LXXXIII	852
724	...	LXXVI	331
728	...	LXXXI	310
731	..	„	72
735	...	LXXIX	372
742	..	LXXXI	241
749	...	LXXVII	70
754	...	LXXXI	129
763	...	LXXIX	452
770	...	LXXI	625
776	...	LXXV	287
779	...	„	556
780	...	LXXVI	996
791	..	LXXVII	568
798	...	LXXVI	813
800	...	„	695
804	..	LXXIX	340
805	...	„	968
808	...	LXXXI	54
811	..	LXXIX	325
813	...	LXXVI	836
817	...	LXXIX	809
822	...	„	779
825	...	LXXVI	793
826	...	„	894
827	...	„	805
829	..	LXXVII	631
840	...	LXXVI	840
842	..	„	641
844	..	LXXX	376
845	...	LXXVI	829
846	...	LXXV	987
849	..	LXXIX	651

Madras Law Times, Vol. XXXII.

Jan. to April 1923.

Privy Council.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	..	LXXI	984
10	..	LXIX	278
15	..	„	356
19	...	LXX	777
25	...	Not reportable.
36	...	„
41	..	LXXII	187
45	...	„	202
48	..	LXXI	643
52	..	LXXVII	1009
62	...	Not reportable.
70	..	LXXI	1035
81	..	LXXXIV	737

Madras Law Times, Vol. XXXII—concld.

Privy Council—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
86	...	Not reportable.
96	..	LXXI	753
99	...	LXXII	48
109	...	LXXI	641
111	...	LXXII	898
115	...	LXXIV	906
121	..	LXXI	769
129	...	„	933
137	..	„	632
149	...	LXXIII	252
153	...	LXXI	646
157	..	LXXVII	1041
162	..	„	1048
171	..	LXXII	485
175	..	LXXI	763
180	..	LXXI	621
184	...	„	650
189	..	Not reportable.
190	...	„
196	..	„
205	..	„

Vol. XXXIII.

July to Dec. 1923.

209	..	Not reportable.
212	...	„
214	...	LXXIII	242
216	...	LXXI	629
219	..	Not reportable.
225	..	„
228	...	„
232	..	LXXV	502
233	..	LXXIV	747
241	...	LXXI	625
246	...	Not reportable.
257	..	„
262	..	LXXVI	594
267	...	LXXV	392
275	...	„	546
277	..	LXXIII	530
279	...	Not reportable.
283	...	LXXIV	462
285	...	„	492
289	...	LXXIII	244
291	...	LXXIV	482
294	...	LXXXIV	721
301	...	LXXIV	469
309	..	LXXVII	141
314	...	LXXIII	193
317	...	LXXIV	449
321	...	„	476
325	...	LXXIII	391
342	...	LXXIV	396
349	..	LXXV	7
355	..	LXXVI	922
361	...	LXXVII	63
365	...	LXXIV	499
370	...	LXXVII	755
372	..	LXXVI	929
376	...	LXXVII	355
378	..	„	100

Madras Law Times, Vol. XXXIII—concld.

Privy Council—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
389	...	LXXIV	362
395	...	LXXVI	910
401	..	„	996
408	...	LXXXII	879
419	..	LXXIII	436
424	...	LXXIX	452
430	...	LXXV	287
432	...	„	556
433	...	Not reportable.
437	...	„
438	...	„
443	...	„
457	...	LXXVII	689
462	...	LXXIX	948
465	...	LXXIX	944
466	..	LXXXI	518
470	..	LXXIX	946
472	..	LXXXI	752

Vol. XXXII.

Jan. to April 1923.

Madras High Court.

1	...	LXXIV	596
3	...	LXX	787
6	...	LXXI	305
9	..	„	153
20	..	LXIX	954
25	...	LXVI	396
27	...	LXX	324
32	..	LXXIII	470
37	...	LXXI	756
44	..	LXIX	529
46	..	„	402
47	...	LXXIII	991
81	..	LXXI	608
82	..	LXXII	207
89	..	XLVII	35
96	..	LXIX	393
98	..	„	977
100	..	LXXI	212
102	..	„	49
104	...	„	514
107	..	LXXIV	309
114	...	LXX	987
118	...	LXXII	325
118	..	LXX	329
122	...	LXXII	925
124	...	LXX	168
126	..	LXXII	250
133	...	LXXI	463
136	...	LXXII	139
137	..	LXXVI	1042
146	..	LXXII	582
152	..	„	358
153	...	LXXI	798
155	...	Not reportable.
157	...	LXXIII	213
158	...	LXIX	396
164	..	LXXII	69
166	...	LXX	576
169	..	LXVI	844

Madras Law Times, Vol. XXXII—contd.

Madras High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
172	..	LXXI	1056
174	..	LXXII	5
175	...	„	335
178	...	LXXIII	619
190	...	LXXII	356
191	...	LXXVI	872
192	..	LXX	670
195	...	LXXII	381
198	...	„	820
212	..	„	284
214	..	„	536
217	..	LXXI	603
217	..	LXXII	842
222	...	LXXIII	183
230	..	LXXIV	281
232	..	LXXII	308
234	..	„	612
236	..	LXXIII	106
245	..	LXXII	134
246	..	„	464
248	..	LXXV	768
249	..	„	219
251	..	LXXXVI	647
252	..	LXXII	46
253	...	„	42
258	...	LXXVI	781
263	...	LXXII	81
269	..	„	745
273	..	„	638
276	...	„	314
277	...	„	322
279	...	„	214
285	..	„	545
288	..	LXVIII	983
290	...	LXXII	141
293	..	„	137
294	..	„	154
296	..	„	669
297	..	„	615
298	..	LXXIII	202
300	...	LXXII	515
301	..	LXXIII	297
304	..	LXXII	558
306	..	LXXVII	621
309	...	LXXII	436
312	...	„	456
315	..	LXXVI	235
316	...	LXXII	900
317	...	Not reportable.
318	...	LXXII	538
321	...	„	838
323	..	LXXIV	58
330	...	LXXII	735
340	..	LXIX	272
341	..	LXXII	865
344	..	„	978
345	...	LXXIII	944
347	..	LXXII	881
349	...	LXXIII	954
352	...	„	343
364	..	„	670
365	...	LXXII	616

Madras Law Times, Vol. XXXII—concld.

Madras High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
366	...	LXXII	833
369	..	LXXIV	609
371	...	LXIX	40
372	...	LXXII	727
377	...	LXXIII	926
378	...	LXXIV	223
380	...	LXXV	673
382	...	LXXIII	1050
385	..	„	163
399	..	LXXII	627
401	...	„	836
403	...	LXXIII	793

Vol. XXXIII.

July to Dec. 1923.

1	..	LXXVII	264
3	...	LXXVI	756
5	...	LXXIII	87
17	...	LXXVI	187
18	...	„	767
19	...	„	752
21	..	LXXIV	198
25	...	LXXV	46
34	..	LXXII	683
37	...	LXXIII	540
40	..	LXXV	38
44	...	LXXV	334
45	..	LXXIII	1041
46	..	LXXIV	218
48	...	LXXVII	347
53	...	LXXVI	886
57	...	LXXIII	584
64	...	LXXVI	761
66	...	LXXV	250
71	...	LXXVI	670
72	...	„	124
73	..	„	1003
77	...	„	642
80	...	LXXIV	896
92	...	LXXIX	372
98	...	LXXV	977
100	...	LXXXI	57
101	...	LXXV	566
103	...	LXXVI	1011
106	..	LXXIX	651
110	..	LXXVI	873
119	...	LXXVII	216
122	...	„	39
125	...	LXXVI	750
126	...	„	1018
130	..	LXXXI	241
137	..	LXXVII	631
146	..	LXXIX	510
152	..	LXXVII	70
156	...	LXXVI	642
159	..	LXXXI	203
166	...	LXXV	760
168	...	LXXXI	129
175	..	LXXVII	568
181	..	LXXXIII	852
182	...	LXXXI	310
184	..	LXXIV	856

Madras Law Times, Vol. XXXIII—concld.

Madras High Court—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
185	..	LXXXI	72
188	...	LXXIX	340
189	...	LXXXI	54
191	..	LXXVII	214
194	..	LXXVI	695
196	..	LXXIX	395
204	...	LXXVI	840
205	...	„	805
207	...	„	836
210	...	„	644
213	...	LXXV	987
215	..	LXXVI	813
217	...	LXXIX	809
221	..	LXXVI	786
223	..	„	893
224	..	LXXV	985
225	...	LXXIV	120
227	...	LXXV	838
230	...	LXXIX	322
231	..	LXXV	17
234	..	„	691
235	..	LXXVII	740
243	...	„	464
252	...	LXXIX	608
254	..	LXXVIII	90
255	..	„	91
261	..	LXXIX	635
263	...	LXXVII	730
266	..	LXXIV	22
268	...	„	949
269	...	LXXVI	708
272	..	LXXVIII	82
275	...	„	829
278	..	LXXIX	1017
279	..	LXXVIII	1017

Law Weekly, Vol XVII.

Jan. to May 1923.

1	...	LXX	949
6	...	LXXI	200
8	...	LXIX	529
11	...	LXXI	343
14	...	LXX	286
18	...	LXXI	212
21	...	LXXII	360
23	...	LXIX	634
25	..	„	402
26	...	LXX	586
31	...	LXXIII	991
62	...	LXXII	328
64	...	LXX	673
67	...	LXXII	874
69	...	„	351
71	...	LXXIII	470
77	...	LXXI	374
79	...	LXXII	243
90	...	LXIX	994
92	...	LXXI	298

Law Weekly, Vol. XVII—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
94	...	LXIX	517
100	...	LXXIII	155
104	...	LXXI	798
107	...	„	533
147	...	„	463
150	...	„	450
152	...	LXXII	46
154	...	LXXIX	40
155	...	LXXII	624
157	...	Not reportable.
159	..	LXXI	204
161	...	„	756
169	...	LXXII	131
174	...	LXIX	323
179	...	LXXII	154
182	...	„	857
187	...	„	220
188	...	„	207
197	...	LXXIII	147
208	...	LXXII	202
213	...	LXX	937
216	...	LXXII	868
226	...	LXXI	244
229	...	LXXII	885
232	...	LXXIII	206
235	...	LXXII	134
236	...	Not reportable.
238	...	LXXII	925
241	...	„	63
243	...	LXXI	466
247	...	LXXII	525
249	...	„	613
251	...	LXXI	530
254	...	LXXIV	416
273	...	LXXII	358
274	...	„	109
288	...	„	48
298	...	LXXI	643
303	...	LXXII	149
308	...	„	175
311	...	„	337
314	...	„	189
319	...	LXXIII	213
321	...	LXXII	774
322	...	„	582
329	...	„	156
332	...	„	81
341	...	„	141
344	...	„	5
346	...	„	838
348	...	„	322
350	...	LXXI	1056
352	...	LXXII	308
355	...	„	314
357	...	Not reportable.
358	...	LXXIII	329
361	..	LXXXVI	647
363	...	LXXII	408
364	...	„	42
370	...	„	538
374	...	„	325
375	...	LXXIII	131
380	...	LXXII	638
383	...	LXXI	1035

Law Weekly, Vol. XVII—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
390	...	LXXII	820
402	...	„	464
405	...	„	898
409	...	„	536
412	..	LXXI	608
413	...	LXXII	13
415	...	„	214
422	...	„	284
424	...	LXXIII	202
426	...	LXXII	381
429	...	LXXIV	447
431	..	LXXIII	619
445	...	LXXII	918
448	...	„	770
451	..	LXXI	242
453	..	LXXIV	209
462	...	LXXI	514
467	..	LXXII	842
473	...	„	194
481	...	LXXI	632
495	...	LXXII	632
499	...	„	615
500	...	„	165
509	..	LXXI	646
514	...	LXXII	627
517	...	„	745
521	...	„	789
531	...	„	436
535	...	„	356
536	...	„	833
541	...	LXXIII	297
545	...	„	670
546	...	LXXII	616
547	...	„	727
555	...	„	795
558	...	LXXIV	309
566	...	LXXII	397
570	...	LXXVI	872
572	...	LXXI	763
577	...	LXXVI	235
579	...	LXXII	900
580	...	„	612
582	...	„	558
584	...	LXXVII	621
588	...	LXXII	456
592	...	LXXIII	343
610	...	LXXIV	25
613	...	LXXII	978
615	...	„	515
618	...	LXXIV	281
622	...	LXXIII	374
623	...	LXXI	173
627	...	LXXII	669
629	...	„	635
632	...	LXXI	288
635	...	LXXII	836
638	...	LXXIII	409
643	...	LXXII	865
648	...	LXXV	850
656	...	LXX	987
661	...	LXXI	153
674	...	LXXIII	952
676	...	LXX	670
680	..	LXXVI	853

Law Weekly, Vol. XVII—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
683	...	LXXIII	106
695	...	„	188
705	...	LXX	888
712	...	LXXIII	733
722	...	„	163
740	...	LXXII	430
744	..	LXXVI	781
750	...	LX545XII
755	...	„	548
763	...	„	559
775	...	„	250

Vol. XVIII.

July to Dec. 1923.

1	...	LXXIII	87
17	...	„	956
19	...	„	793
21	...	„	1050
26	...	LXXIV	609
29	...	„	703
30	...	LXXIII	1041
32	...	„	941
35	...	LXXII	488
41	...	LXXI	641
44	...	„	753
48	...	LXX	932
49	...	LXXIV	218
53	...	LXXIII	946
54	...	LXXV	739
56	...	LXVIII	900
59	...	LXIX	367
61	...	LXXII	292
77	...	LXXV	673
80	...	LXXII	609
82	...	LXXIV	223
86	...	LXXIII	530
88	...	„	244
92	...	LXXV	287
96	..	LXXIV	22
99	..	LXXV	848
105	...	LXXII	688
109	..	LXXV	489
111	...	LXXII	881
113	..	LXXV	695
124	...	LXIX	44
130	..	LXXII	703
132	...	LXXIII	944
133	..	LXXXI	219
135	..	LXXIII	985
137	..	LXXV	546
141	...	Not reportable.
146	..	LXXV	502
147	..	„	556
148	...	LXXXIV	696
153	...	LXXIII	242
156	...	„	954
160	...	„	540
165	..	LXXII	459
167	..	LXXVI	234
169	...	LXXII	683
173	...	LXXIII	948
177	...	LXXV	336
181	..	LXXIV	856
183	...	LXXV	406

Law Weekly, Vol. XVIII—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
188	...	LXXIII	961
193	...	LXXI	621
198	...	LXXVI	207
203	..	LXXV	476
209	...	LXXIII	982
210	..	LXXIV	785
233	...	LXXIV	1003
236	...	LXXIII	528
237	..	LXXV	189
243	..	LXXIV	4
247	...	„	115
256	...	„	896
273	..	„	462
277	..	LXXVII	755
280	...	LXXIII	456
282	...	LXXVI	977
288	...	LXXII	798
296	...	„	335
299	...	„	449
304	...	LXXIV	966
309	..	LXXV	170
311	..	LXXVII	148
314	..	LXXIV	1006
322	...	LXXV	260
324	..	„	465
326	..	LXXIV	198
333	...	LXXVII	542
341	..	LXXII	187
345	..	LXXV	334
348	...	LXXVI	811
350	...	LXXIV	1044
354	...	„	139
356	...	LXXVII	347
363	...	LXXVI	342
366	...	LXXV	38
372	...	LXXIV	469
383	...	LXXI	629
387	...	LXXIII	252
392	...	LXXVI	375
399	...	LXXV	115
404	...	LXXIII	66
414	..	LXXV	390
418	..	LXXI	274
426	...	LXXII	805
437	..	LXXVII	355
441	...	LXXII	485
446	..	LXXI	650
451	...	LXXVI	767
453	..	„	845
465	..	LXXIV	166
478	..	„	945
482	...	LXXVI	289
485	..	LXXIV	1029
491	..	LXXIII	284
502	..	LXXII	671
515	..	LXXVI	752
517	...	„	187
520	...	LXXVII	264
523	...	LXXVI	789
525	...	LXXII	145
530	...	LXXV	1016
537	..	LXX	777
545	..	LXXVII	580
553	..	LXXV	613

Law Weekly, Vol. XVIII—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
555	..	LXXVII	1041
560	...	LXXVI	756
564	..	LXXII	735
577	...	LXXV	46
588	..	„	881
597	...	LXXI	769
606	..	LXXVI	642
610	..	„	1006
612	..	LXXIV	959
613	...	LXXVI	670
615	...	LXXV	901
618	...	„	691
620	...	LXXVI	1003
625	..	„	1042
636	...	LXXV	572
646	..	LXXIII	926
647	..	LXXVI	124
649	...	„	76
651	..	„	1030
652	..	„	761
655	...	LXXV	604
656	...	LXXVI	798
664	...	LXXXIV	737
670	...	LXXVI	948
674	..	LXXV	161
681	...	LXXIII	193
685	...	LXXV	876
686	..	„	566
689	...	„	977
692	...	LXXVI	151
694	...	LXXV	760
696	..	LXXIII	532
705	...	LXXXI	203
715	...	„	60
717	..	„	57
718	..	„	129
728	...	LXXIV	747
739	..	LXXVI	750
741	..	LXXXI	42
743	...	„	310
747	...	LXXVI	269
752	..	„	1011
757	..	LXXIV	155
767	..	LXXI	933
775	..	LXXVII	216
780	..	„	631
792	...	„	39
796	...	„	70
802	..	LXIX	273
808	...	LXXX	376
809	...	LXXXI	241
818	..	„	312
823	..	LXXVI	873
836	..	LXXIX	408
837	...	„	340
838	..	LXXVI	1018
844	...	LXXIX	651
849	..	„	372
857	...	„	395
868	...	LXXVI	805
870	...	„	836
874	..	LXXIX	325
876	..	LXXVI	786
879	..	LXXXI	72

Law Weekly, Vol. XVIII—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
883	...	LXXVI	861
884	..	LXXIX	322
886	..	LXXVI	829
887	...	LXXVII	568
895	..	LXXVI	695
899	..	LXXIV	952
903	..	„	492
907	...	„	120
911	...	LXXVI	893
913	...	„	594
918	..	LXXV	392
928	...	„	838
933	...	LXXVI	992
940	...	„	929
946	...	„	644
949	...	LXXXI	54
953	..	LXXVI	894
960	...	LXXV	985

(1923) Madras Weekly Notes.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

1	..	LXXII	868
7	...	LXXIII	470
11	..	LXXVI	1041
12	..	LXXI	298
13	...	„	374
14	...	LXVIII	856
15	...	LXXI	533
42	...	LXIX	724
49	...	LXXI	305
51	...	LXXII	839
54	...	LXX	82
56	...	LXVIII	824
57	...	LXXI	238
57	...	„	130
70	...	LXX	321
73	...	„	784
74	...	LXXI	32
75	...	LXVIII	565
76	..	LXX	20
77	...	LXXI	244
78	...	LXX	987
81	...	LXXI	466
84	...	„	463
86	...	LXXII	774
87	...	„	638
89	..	„	328
89	...	„	63
91	...	„	189
94	...	„	599
104	...	LXXIII	147
111	...	„	991
133	...	LXXI	1039
148	...	LXXII	826
154	...	„	149
157	...	LXXI	530
159	...	LXXII	137
160	...	„	925
162	...	„	335

(1923) Madras Weekly Notes—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
164	..	LXXII	308
166	...	LXXIII	188
172	...	LXXI	343
173	...	LXXII	145
176	...	LXXIII	733
182	...	LXXI	798
184	...	LXIX	994
186	...	LXXII	243
189	...	LXIX	517
193	...	LXXXVI	647
194	...	LXXII	314
195	...	„	488
199	...	„	449
202	...	„	81
208	...	LXXVI	781
211	...	LXXII	13
212	...	„	225
217	...	„	464
218	...	„	42
222	...	„	838
223	...	„	337
225	...	„	548
230	...	„	258
233	...	„	141
235	...	„	770
237	...	„	95
239	...	„	284
240	...	„	536
242	...	„	322
244	...	LXXIII	131
247	...	LXXII	833
250	...	„	139
251	...	LXXVI	869
252	...	LXXII	5
253	...	LXXI	194
258	...	LXXIII	106
266	...	„	619
274	...	LXXII	609
276	...	LXXVI	872
277	...	LXXII	745
280	...	LXXIII	297
282	...	LXXII	558
284	...	„	842
288	...	„	381
290	...	„	515
292	...	„	459
294	...	„	430
296	...	LXXIII	202
297	...	LXXII	836
299	...	„	897
301	...	LXXIV	309
306	...	LXXII	805
313	...	„	612
314	...	„	615
315	...	LXXIV	25
317	...	LXXII	436
320	...	„	978
321	...	LXXVII	621
323	...	LXXII	545
327	...	LXXIV	281
328	...	LXXIII	74
331	...	LXXIV	609
332	...	LXX	670
335	...	LXXII	735

(1923) Madras Weekly Notes—contd.

Page.		Ind. Vol.	Cas. Page.
343	...	LXXII	627
344	...	„	632
347	...	„	789
353	...	LXXIII	793
354	...	LXXII	688
357	...	„	683
359	...	LXXI	1056
361	...	„	984
368	...	LXIX	278
372	...	LXX	777
377	...	LXXI	769
382	...	„	933
388	...	LXIX	356
392	...	LXXI	632
401	...	LXXIII	944
402	...	LXXII	881
403	...	LXXVI	207
406	...	LXXIII	956
408	...	LXXV	739
409	...	LXXVI	833
411	...	LXXIII	926
412	...	„	946
413	...	LXXIV	22
415	...	LXXII	250
421	...	LXXIII	941
423	...	„	954
425	...	„	343
437	...	„	670
437	..	LXXII	616
438	...	LXXIII	252
441	...	LXXI	646
444	...	LXXV	768
445	...	„	673
447	..	LXXIII	540
450	..	LXXVI	212
451	..	LXXIV	856
452	...	„	218
454	..	LXXIII	66
460	..	LXXVII	1041
469	..	LXXV	369
471	...	LXXIII	1050
474	....	LXXII	865
477	...	LXXIII	163
489	..	„	87
499	...	LXXIV	166
508	...	LXXIII	1041
509	..	LXXIV	609
510	...	„	703
511	...	LXXVII	1048
518	...	LXXIV	1026
519	..	„	945
522	...	LXXI	753
524	..	LXXIV	968
525	..	LXX	932
526	...	LXVIII	900
528	...	LXIX	367
529	..	LXXV	491
533	..	LXXII	292
545	..	LXXV	336
547	...	LXXII	483
550	..	LXXIV	198
554	..	LXXVI	894
557	...	LXXV	392
564	..	LXXIV	777

(1923) Madras Weekly Notes—contd.

Page.		Ind. Vol.	Cas. Page.
564	...	LXXV	93
565	...	„	334
566	...	LXXVI	306
567	...	LXXV	170
568	...	LXXIV	966
571	...	„	155
578	..	LXXIII	242
580	...	LXXXIV	696
583	..	LXXIV	396
590	...	LXXV	502
591	...	LXXVI	922
596	..	LXXIII	436
601	..	„	530
603	..	LXXIV	469
609	..	LXXVI	910
614	...	LXXV	287
616	..	LXXVI	929
620	..	LXXIII	244
622	...	LXXVII	141
626	..	LXXVI	996
633	..	LXXVII	264
634	...	LXXIV	862
636	..	„	1018
638	..	LXXVII	100
647	...	LXXV	881
652	...	LXXIV	58
657	..	„	1012
660	...	LXXVI	769
662	...	LXXVII	148
664	...	LXXV	189
668	..	LXXIII	948
670	...	LXXVI	126
672	...	LXXVII	12
675	..	LXXVI	756
677	...	LXXIV	4
679	...	LXXVII	758
681	..	LXXIII	1054
682	...	LXXVII	347
687	...	LXXIV	462
689	..	„	362
695	...	LXXVI	289
697	..	„	642
699	...	LXXVII	48
702	..	LXXXII	879
711	...	LXXVII	63
714	...	LXXV	546
716	...	LXXVII	755
718	..	LXXV	556
719	..	„	604
720	..	LXXIV	944
720	..	LXXVI	767
721	...	LXXIV	1006
726	...	LXXVII	542
731	..	LXXV	260
732	...	„	465
734	...	LXXXIV	721
739	..	LXXVI	752
741	...	„	187
743	...	LXXIV	1029
745	..	LXXVI	647
746	...	LXXX	376
747	...	LXXV	115
750	...	„	390
753	...	„	566

(1923) Madras Weekly Notes—concld.

Page.		Ind. Vol.	Cas. Page.
754	...	LXXV	876
755	...	LXXVI	61
756	...	LXXIV	1003
758	...	„	952
761	..	LXXVI	342
762	..	LXXI	650
766	..	LXXVI	896
767	..	LXXV	691
768	...	„	977
770	..	„	830
772	..	LXXVI	1011
775	..	„	1018
779	..	„	76
780	...	„	1006
781	...	„	154
782	...	LXXV	987
786	...	„	406
789	...	LXXVI	1003
793	..	LXXI	621
796	...	LXXIII	961
799	...	LXXIV	449
802	...	LXXIII	982
803	...	LXXIV	499
807	..	LXXV	476
811	...	LXXIX	651
814	...	LXXXI	42
815	...	„	54
817	..	LXXV	46
825	...	LXXIX	510
831	..	LXXXIII	852
832	...	LXXIV	482
834	..	LXXVI	124
835	...	„	761
837	...	„	1030
838	...	LXXIX	340
839	..	„	325
840	..	„	408
841	..	LXXVI	798
846	..	LXXXIV	737
849	..	LXXII	671
860	...	LXXV	695
867	...	„	848
871	..	„	489
872	...	LXXII	703
873	...	LXIX	44
876	...	LXXIV	949
878	...	LXXVI	992
882	..	LXXIII	985
883	...	LXXVI	721
893	...	LXXIV	959
894	..	LXXV	901
895	..	„	572
902	..	LXXIV	896
913	...	LXXXI	129
919	...	„	241
925	...	LXXVI	905

Nagpur Law Journal, Vol. VI.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Vol.	Cas. Page.
1	...	LXXI	140
7	...	LXXII	1016
14	...	Not reportable
21	...	LXXI	477
25	...	LXIX	500
27	...	LXVII	282
37	...	LXVI	422
39	...	LXXI	727
47	...	„	418
49	...	„	816
52	...	LXVII	343
59	...	LXXI	831
63	...	LXIX	627
66	...	LXXI	404
68	...	„	669
70	...	LXXIV	51
73	...	Not reportable.
78	...	LXXVI	615
81	...	LXXI	566
85	...	„	777
91	...	LXIX	894
93	...	LXXI	804
97	...	LXXIII	375
100	...	LXXI	436
111	...	„	443
115	...	„	532
119	...	LXXIII	335
121	..	LXXI	1
130	...	LXXII	121
144	...	LXXIII	262
151	..	LXXI	468
157	..	LXXII	318
161	...	LXXIII	959
166	...	„	1042
170	....	„	24
177	...	LXXII	361
179	..	LXXIII	251
181	..	„	8
185	...	LXXII	1044
189	..	LXXXIV	658
202	...	LXXV	158
205	...	LXXIII	1021
209	..	LXXIV	45
213	..	LXXIII	1037
217	...	LXXII	461
224	..	LXXIII	15
227	...	LXXII	438
231	..	LXXXIV	639
234	...	Not reportable.
237	...	LXXXII	77
239	...	LXXVII	640
269	..	„	738
274	..	LXVII	346
279	...	LXVIII	340
281	...	LXXI	556

Nagpur Law Reports, Vol. XIX.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXIX	511
4	...	„	669
6	...	LXXI	17
8	...	„	401
10	...	„	325
11	...	„	205
15	...	LVI	550
18	...	LXV	503
21	...	„	324
22	...	„	416
23	...	„	674
24	...	LXXIII	142
26	...	LXXI	129
29	...	„	351
32	...	„	418
34	...	LXXI	404
36	...	„	436
45	...	„	443
48	...	„	669
50	...	„	445
54	...	„	816
56	...	LXXII	333
59	...	LXXI	777
64	...	LXXII	427
67	...	LXIX	615
69	...	LXXI	566
72	...	LXXIII	1055
75	...	„	228
79	...	LXXIV	20
81	...	LXV	786
99	..	LXXVI	934
104	..	„	980
110	..	LXXII	438
114	..	LXVII	245
116	...	LXXII	388
119	..	LXXV	589
122	...	LXXIII	52
124	..	„	32
126	...	LXV	941
128	..	LXXII	327
131	..	LXVII	806
135	...	LXV	716
139	...	LXXIII	1033
144	..	„	1037
147	...	LXXIV	81
150	...	LXXVII	620
151	...	LXXVIII	372
154	...	LXXXI	145
160	...	LXXV	979
162	..	LXXVIII	47
164	...	LXXV	752
165	..	„	993
170	..	LXXVI	122
172	...	LXXV	749
176	...	„	544
178	...	LXXVII	761
179	..	LXXV	769
183	...	LXXVI	655
186	..	LXXI	468
191	..	LXXV	559
193	..	LXXVIII	367

Oudh & Agra Law Reporter, Vol. IX.

16th Nov. 1922 to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXXIX	274
3	...	LXXII	1034
5	...	LXX	953
10	...	LXXII	883
17	...	Not reportable.
20	...	LXXII	832
23	...	„	916
27	...	LXIX	457
29	...	LXXII	877
32	...	LXXIV	380
35	..	LXXIII	523
37	...	LXXII	911
40	...	LXXIII	53
43	...	LXVIII	809
46	...	LXXIII	54
49	...	LXVIII	1000
59	...	„	861
60	...	LXXIV	712
62	...	„	162
67	...	LXXIII	219
68	...	„	211
70	...	„	230
74	...	„	255
77	...	„	307
79	...	„	372
81	...	LXXIV	321
85	...	LXXIII	244
87	...	„	238
90	...	„	261
92	...	„	241
93	...	LXIX	180
103	...	LXXIV	445
107	...	LXXIII	13
113	...	LXXIV	360
118	...	LXXVII	733
121	...	LXXXIV	377
123	...	LXIX	167
130	...	„	199
131	...	„	944
139	...	Not reportable.
141	...	LXXIX	214
146	...	LXIX	921
150	...	„	208
155	...	LXXIV	316
157	...	LXXIII	466
163	...	„	465
165	...	LXXII	948
166	..	„	142
173	..	LXXIV	301
175	...	LXIX	71
191	...	LXXII	79
194	...	LXVII	914
203	...	LXXIV	533
205	...	„	485
207	...	„	558
216	...	LXXVI	749
218	...	LXXIII	693
222	...	LXXI	581
236	...	LXXIII	688
237	...	LXIX	163
259	..	LXXII	1000
264	..	LXXI	974

Oudh & Agra Law Reporter, Vol. IX— contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
267	...	LXXIII	215
269	...	„	352
270	...	LXXI	629
277	...	LXXVI	12
282	...	LXXIII	428
302	...	LXXII	57
309	...	LXXIX	285
313	..	LXXVI	969
315	...	LXXII	390
319	...	LXXIV	573
321	...	„	582
324	...	„	543
327	...	LXXI	1032
332	...	LXXIII	591
341	..	LXXII	1046
344	...	LXXIII	504
349	...	LXXI	749
359	...	LXXIII	27
366	...	LXX	919
368	...	LXXXI	58
373	...	LXVIII	172
378	...	LXXIII	336
381	...	LXXII	199
384	..	LXXIV	563
404	...	LXXI	1027
410	...	LXXIX	550
412	..	„	545
414	...	LXXIX	547
415	...	LXXVII	874
419	...	LXXIX	552
421	...	LXXII	428
424	...	LXXIV	784
429	...	LXXII	86
433	...	LXXI	474
437	...	LXXIV	792
440	...	LXXIV	802
443	...	„	811
445	...	„	813
448	...	„	715
450	...	LXIX	44
458	..	LXXIV	718
460	...	LXXIV	818
463	..	„	821
465	...	„	816
477	...	LXXII	106
479	...	„	108
482	..	Not reportable.
484	...	LXXV	502
485	...	LXXX	441
488	..	LXXII	187
494	..	„	134
495	...	„	247
498	..	„	276
501	..	„	286
511	..	LXXXV	39
514	...	LXXXIII	630
517	...	LXXIV	535
521	..	„	553
526	...	„	539
531	...	LXXIII	986
538	...	„	309
541	...	LXXI	641
545	...	LXXIV	299
547	...	„	544

Oudh & Agra Law Reporter, Vol. IX— contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
549	...	LXXIV	108
554	...	LXXIX	576
556		LXXXIII	482
558	...	LXXXI	949
560		LXXXIII	484
561	..	Not reportable.
563	...	LXXVIII	244
567	...	LXXIX	578
577	..	LXXVI	763
581	...	LXXIV	449
587	...	„	503
611	..	„	518
614	..	LXXVII	120
617	..	„	109
625	...	„	79
631	...	„	78
635	...	LXXIV	40
638	...	LXXVI	1033
642	...	„	1050
643	..	„	1017
645	...	LXXIV	905
648	...	LXXVI	1021
651	..	LXXVII	125
667	...	LXXVI	1053
672	...	„	1055
674	..	LXXIV	353
677	...	LXXIII	113
694	...	LXXIV	443
696	..	LXXIX	693
703	..	LXXVI	33
707	...	LXXX	213
733	..	LXXIV	304
742	...	LXXX	483
746	...	LXXVI	922
761	...	LXXIV	42
766	...	LXXV	316
770	..	LXXX	819
773	..	„	821
776	...	LXXVIII	334
779		LXXXIII	481
783	...	LXXIV	469
796	..	LXXV	790
799	...	LXXIII	242
805	...	„	252
812		LXXVIII	47
815	..	LXXVI	267
820	..	LXXII	1011
822	...	„	470
826	..	„	1031
832	..	LXXIX	87
836	...	LXXVII	439
846	..	„	553
847	..	„	115
848	..	LXXII	1023
850	...	LXXIV	69
857	..	LXXV	770
865	...	„	736
867	...	LXXVII	192
869	..	LXXV	978
871	..	„	875
873	...	„	888
875	..	LXXVIII	39
879	..	LXXIV	931
885	...	LXXV	868

Oudh & Agra Law Reporter, Vol. IX—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
889	..	LXXX	454
893	...	„	457
898	..	„	467
900	..	LXXXI	140
901	..	LXXIV	476
910	...	LXXX	469
913	...	„	330
918		LXXXIII	659
922	..	LXXXI	143
925	...	LXXIII	127
928		LXXXIII	663
931	...	LXXX	327
937	..	LXXVI	910
947	...	LXXV	753
968		LXXXIII	997
973	...	„	993
978	..	LXXIV	56
982		LXXXIII	1004
983	...	LXXX	444
989	...	LXXIX	605
994	...	LXXXIII	904
1001	...	LXXV	292
1007	...	LXXIII	61
1013	...	LXXIX	25
1017	..	LXXV	254
1019	..	LXXIX	438
1024		LXXXIII	636
1030	..	LXXX	781
1041	...	LXXV	936
1045	...	LXXX	860
1047	...	LXXVII	818
1049	..	LXXXI	595
1053	..	LXXV	777
1056	..	LXXXI	615
1061	...	LXXX	847
1066	..	„	855
1074	..	LXXIX	562
1083	...	LXXXI	717
1085	..	„	613
1089	...	„	573
1092	..	„	562
1096	...	„	333
1102	..	„	529

NOTE.—Decisions of the Board of Revenue not printed in Indian Cases.

Oudh Cases, Vol. XXVI.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	LXIX	714
4	...	LXXI	58
10	...	LXXIII	591
18	...	„	49
24	...	LXXIV	214
33	...	„	255
36	...	LXVIII	520
39	...	„	969
41	...	„	613
44	...	LXIX	81

Oudh Cases, Vol. XXVI—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
52	...	LXIX	649
53	...	„	893
56	...	LXXIV	253
59	...	„	246
62	...	„	249
64	...	LXXIX	274
66	...	LXXV	331
71	...	LXIX	660
82	...	LXVI	90
98	...	LXXIV	459
104	...	LXVIII	414
107	...	LXXIV	401
109	...	LXIX	421
113	...	LXXIV	409
118	...	„	429
121	...	LXX	85
125	...	LXVIII	972
128	...	LXXIV	390
133	...	LXXV	626
191	...	LXXVII	697
194	...	„	701
196	...	„	749
197	..	„	737
200	...	LXXII	916
201	...	„	877
204	...	LXXIV	316
206	...	LXXX	775
209	..	LXXIV	304
216	...	LXXV	502
217	..	LXXIV	449
223	...	LXXI	629
228	..	LXXIII	244
231	..	LXXIV	476
239	..	LXXVI	534
242	..	LXXIII	261
244	...	„	215
245	...	LXXI	581
257	...	LXXVI	922
266	...	LXXIV	563
282	..	LXXXI	314
284	..	„	316
286	..	„	303
288	..	LXXIII	241
289	..	LXXIV	360
295	...	LXXVII	618
297	...	LXX	311
299	..	LXXIII	27
306	...	LXXII	390
308	..	LXXVII	125
317	..	LXXII	1031
319	..	LXXIV	802
321	..	LXXVI	1055
324	..	LXXIII	127
327	..	LXXIX	576
329	...	LXXIV	295
333	...	LXXX	495
336	...	LXXIII	13
341	..	„	466
345	...	LXXIV	558
350	...	„	299
352	...	LXXVII	768
355	...	LXXX	492
358	...	LXXXV	39
361	...	LXXIV	813

Oudh Cases, Vol. XXVI—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
363	..	LXXXI	917
368	...	LXXVII	109
374	...	LXXVI	763
378	...	LXXVII	78
381	..	LXXXIV	377
383	..	LXXIII	465
384	...	LXXIV	301
386	...	LXXVI	774
393	..	LXXX	796

Oudh Law Journal, Vol. X.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

1	...	LXVIII	223
7	...	„	196
13	...	LXIX	778
20	..	LXXIII	222
24	...	LXXIV	295
29	...	„	299
31	...	„	301
33	...	LXIX	204
36	...	LXXIII	591
43	...	LXXIV	316
45	..	LXXXIV	377
46	...	LXXIV	304
54	...	Not reportable.
56	...	LXVIII	896
58	...	LXXII	428
61	...	LXXIII	27
68	...	LXXIV	434
86	...	„	517
109	...	„	480
112	...	„	503
132	...	„	549
139	...	„	546
141	..	„	563
157	...	LXIX	268
159	..	LXVIII	892
166	..	LXIX	789
178	..	LXXIII	238
180	..	LXIX	786
185	....	LXXII	142
191	..	„	1023
193	...	LXXI	581
205	...	LXXVII	115
206	...	„	116
208	..	„	192
209	...	LXXIV	335
216	...	LXXVII	125
226	...	LXXIII	39
229	...	LXXVI	763
232	...	LXXII	1031
235	...	LXXX	480
240	...	„	475
245	..	LXXV	770
252	..	LXXX	447
263	..	LXXIII	428
280	...	Not reportable.
288	..	LXXV	502
289	...	LXXI	339
295	..	LXXIX	214
299	..	LXXIV	539

Oudh Law Journal, Vol. X—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
303	..	LXXI	974
305	..	LXXIX	654
315	...	„	784
335	..	LXXVII	352
337	...	LXXIV	792
339	...	LXXVII	358
347	..	LXXXI	949
348	..	LXXIX	576
349	..	LXXVI	1050
351	..	LXXVII	337
353	...	„	353
357	...	„	120
360	..	„	329
368	..	LXXIV	449
374	..	LXXVII	340
376	..	„	340
379	..	LXXIII	244
383	..	LXXIV	476
390	..	LXXVII	383
393	..	„	391
399	...	„	79
404	..	LXXIX	666
409	...	„	644
412	...	LXXV	227
420	...	LXXX	796
424	...	LXXV	579
442	..	LXXXI	647
443	...	LXXIX	685
447	..	LXXX	213
468	...	LXXIX	697
481	..	LXXIII	393
491	..	LXX	253
513	..	LXXVI	922
524	..	LXXIX	722
525	..	„	725
535	...	LXXV	626
593	..	LXXIII	321
595	..	LXXVIII	256
606	...	LXXX	698
611	..	LXXVII	768
614	..	LXXVI	566
619	..	LXXX	674
643	...	„	457
646	..	LXXVIII	895
657	...	LXXX	333

NOTE.—Decisions of the Board of Revenue, U. P., not printed in Indian Cases.

Patna, I. L. R. Series, Vol II.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	LXVII	631
7	...	LXXII	637
10	...	LXIX	278
18	...	LXVII	642
38	...	LXXI	984
52	...	LXVIII	383
65	...	LXXVII	957
74	...	LXVIII	623
75	...	„	601
84	...	LXX	312

Patna, I. L. R. Series, Vol. II—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
92	...	LXXIX	199
94	..	LXVIII	149
110	...	LXIX	947
125	...	LXVIII	700
134	..	„	945
168	...	LXXXIV	1001
171	...	LXV	675
175	...	LXIX	677
183	...	LXXIV	454
192	...	„	464
198	...	LXVIII	316
207	...	„	363
217	...	„	394
230	...	LXXI	769
243	...	LXIX	613
247	...	LXXIV	608
249	...	LXXII	938
257	...	LXXIV	713
260	...	„	619
264	...	LXXI	426
273	...	„	341
277	...	LXXII	912
285	...	LXXI	933
296	...	LXXXIII	290
309	...	LXXIV	705
317	...	LXXIV	150
319	...	LXXVII	1041
328	...	LXXI	741
333	...	LXXXIII	345
335	...	LXXI	705
372	..	„	484
379	...	LXXII	375
386	...	LXXXV	1014
391	...	LXXIV	403
403		LXXXVII	274
414	...	LXXI	902
432	...	LXXII	916
435	...	LXXI	948
442	...	LXXII	440
452	...	LXXVII	32
459	...	LXXIV	536
466	...	LXXVI	988
469	..	LXXII	230
488	..	LXXIV	695
504	..	LXXII	629
508	..	„	811
517	..	LXXIII	561
534	...	LXXII	907
538	..	„	1049
548	..	LXXVI	113
554	...	LXXIII	542
585	..	LXXV	1022
595	...	LXXXII	156
607	..	LXXIII	822
676	..	LXXIV	747
685	..	„	668
708	..	LXXVII	734
712	..	„	357
715	...	LXXIV	102
720	..	LXXX	377
724	..	LXXVII	589
731	...	„	14
739	..	LXXV	284
746	...	LXXVII	587

Patna, I. L. R. Series, Vol. II—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
749	..	LXXXI	298
754	..	LXXVI	55
759	..	LXXIV	130
765	..	LXXXII	502
768	...	LXXIII	593
771	...	LXXIV	781
777	...	LXXVI	2
784	...	LXXIV	847
787	...	„	144
793	..	LXXV	72
796	..	LXXIV	867
800	...	LXXV	430
805	...	LXXXIII	478
809	..	LXXIV	174
814	..	LXXXI	326
819	...	LXXVII	209
829	..	LXXVI	927
833	..	LXXIV	825
839	..	LXXV	955
874	...	LXXIV	820
879	...	LXXVII	611
890	..	„	73
898	....	LXXV	209
906	..	LXXXII	505
909	...	LXXIV	753
913	..	LXXXI	321
916	...	LXXIV	838
919	....	LXXVI	347
925	.	LXXIV	758

(1923) Patna Cases, Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXXII	912
5	...	LXVII	869
6	...	LXXI	26
8	...	LXV	484
17	...	LXX	782
19	...	LXXIV	330
20	...	LXX	804
22	...	LXXI	319
23	...	LXXXIV	536
26	...	LXXI	353
33	...	„	887
42	...	LXXII	875
45	...	LXXI	703
46	...	LXXXI	295
47	...	LXXXIII	345
49	...	LXXI	944
54	...	„	570
57	..	LXIX	565
61	...	LXXI	741
65	...	„	902
76	...	LXXII	860
78	...	LXXI	484
82	...	LXXII	440
88	...	LXXXIII	290
96	...	LXXII	71
97	...	„	230
109	...	„	959
111	...	„	954
113	...	LXXVII	929

(1923) Patna Cases—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
118	...	LXXI	948
122	...	„	1022
125	...	LXX	18
127	...	LXXII	657
130	...	„	811
137	...	LXXI	843
142	...	LXXVI	1049
143	...	„	991
145	...	LXXI	383
153	...	LXXVI	940
159	..	LXXI	341
161	...	LXXIV	668
175	..	„	941
177	...	LXXV	1022
184	...	LXXII	1049
190	...	LXXVI	113
194	...	LXXI	937
197	...	LXXVII	14
202	...	LXXII	1035
205	...	LXXX	377
207	...	LXIX	624
208	...	LXXIII	317
209	...	LXXIV	144
213	...	LXXV	284
216	...	LXXIV	626
220	...	LXXVII	177
225	..	LXXVI	2
229	..	LXXIV	174
234	...	LXXVII	500
235	..	„	421
237	..	LXXXV	35
239	...	LXXV	72
241	..	LXXVII	209
247	..	„	378
249	..	LXXVI	277
256	..	LXXIII	1053
258	..	LXXV	305
263	....	LXXIV	758
266	...	LXXIX	335
269	...	LXXII	157
271	..	LXXIX	696
273	..	„	5
276	...	LXXVI	950
280	...	LXXIV	753
283	...	„	838
284	...	„	993
287	...	LXXIX	56
290	...	LXXVII	718
293	..	LXXIV	820
298	...	LXXXIII	747
300	...	LXXII	938
305	..	LXXV	794
329	..	„	728
332	..	„	946
336	..	„	343
339	..	LXXVIII	593
342	...	LXXVI	927
345	...	LXXV	411
353	...	LXXVII	73
357	..	LXXV	433
361	...	LXXV	177
369	...	„	96
372	..	LXXVI	8
374	...	LXXV	321

Patna Law Reporter, Vol. I.

Nov. 1922 to Dec. 1923.

Criminal.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXVIII	402
2	...	„	149
15	...	„	44
17	...	LXXII	887
22	...	LXXIII	327
25	..	LXXII	959
28	...	„	950
29	...	„	891
31	...	LXIX	631
32	...	„	635
34	...	LXXII	71
35	...	LXIX	383
36	...	LXXII	875
41	...	LXXI	703
42	...	LXIX	367
45	...	LXXII	894
50	...	„	76
53	...	„	171
55	...	„	519
57	...	LXXI	209
68	...	LXXII	954
77	...	LXXI	353
93	...	LXXIII	161
97	...	LXXII	945
109	...	LXXXIII	345
117	...	LXXIV	947
130	...	LXXII	345
135	..	LXXXV	40
137	...	LXXIV	710
142	—	LXXII	161
151	...	„	360
152	..	„	544
154	..	LXXIV	1047
158	...	LXV	576
159	...	„	552
161	...	LXXIV	258
164	..	LXXII	956
166	...	„	883
171	..	LXV	573
174	...	LXXXV	35
177	...	LXXXII	480
178	...	LXXIII	561
192	..	LXVII	502
195	...	LXXII	951
199	..	LXVIII	945
223	..	LXXV	531
229	...	LXXVII	177
236	..	LXXIV	705
242	..	LXXIII	158
248	...	LXXII	375
255	...	„	69
256	..	LXXXI	602

Civil.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXVIII	700
6	...	LXXII	938
12	..	LXXI	426
16	...	LXXVII	1054
18	...	„	957

Patna Law Reporter Vol. I—contd.

Civil—contd.

Page.	Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
24 ..	LXVIII	288
25 ...	„	316
32 ...	LXXI	15
34 ...	LXVII	954
43 ...	LXIX	616
47 ...	„	565
51 ...	LXX	332
53 ...	LXXII	860
55 ...	LXIX	613
59 ...	LXXXIII	290
69 ..	LXXXIV	536
73 ..	LXXIV	134
80 ...	LXXI	589
86 ...	„	341
89 ...	LXXII	148
91 ...	LXXVII	929
99 ..	LXXI	1022
103 ..	LXIX	624
105 ...	Not reportable.
109 ...	LXXII	138
111 ..	LXXI	902
127 ...	„	573
129 ...	LXXII	657
134 ...	LXXI	484
139 ...	LXXII	862
145 ...	LXXIII	359
157 ...	„	5
161 ...	LXIX	929
167 ..	LXXII	391
169 ...	„	440
179 ...	LXIX	872
186 ...	„	681
190 ...	LXXVII	32
196 ...	LXIX	700
199 ...	LXXVII	865
201 ...	LXXII	230
217 ...	„	1049
225 ...	LXXI	944
233 ...	LXXVI	991
235 ...	„	1049
238 ..	LXXI	948
244 ...	LXXIV	649
252 ...	LXXI	843
258 ..	LXXIV	642
263 ...	LXX	402
267 ..	Not reportable.
269 ...	LXXIII	451
270 ...	LXXXIV	1013
273 ..	LXIX	31
281 ..	LXXIV	693
285 ..	LXXI	957
288 ..	LXXII	135
289 ..	LXXIII	629
311 ...	LXXX	377
314 ..	LXXXV	8
316 ...	LXXVII	252
318 ...	LXXVI	194
322 ..	LXXII	648
328 ..	„	152
332 ...	„	409
336 ...	LXXVII	260
338 ...	LXXII	912
345 ..	LXXIV	747

Patna Law Reporter, Vol. I—concld.

Civil—concld.

Page.	Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
356 ...	LXXVII	357
358 ...	LXXVI	927
361 ...	LXXV	430
366 ...	LXXIV	877
370 ..	„	474
373 ..	„	758
377 ..	LXXVII	403
386 ...	LXXV	1046
390 ...	LXXIV	815
393 ...	LXXVI	49
398 ...	LXXIX	183
402 ..	LXXV	794
434 ..	LXXIV	396
445 ..	LXXI	933
453 ..	LXXIV	174
458 ...	LXXXI	648
459 ...	LXXV	265
462 ...	„	381
467 ...	LXXX	570

NOTE.—Decisions of the Board of Revenue Behar and Orissa not reported in Indian Cases.

Patna Law Times, Vol. IV.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

1	...	LXVIII	973
6	...	LXX	24
10	...	LXIX	891
13	...	LXXIII	327
15	...	LXXII	956
17	...	LXVIII	372
29	...	LXXI	933
35	...	LXXVI	136
39	...	Not reportable.
44	...	LXXI	79
46	...	LXXIII	373
48	...	LXXI	11
54	...	LXXII	1003
58	...	LXVII	606
60	...	LXIX	383
61	...	„	278
64	...	LXXII	1053
68	...	LXXIII	5
71	...	LXVIII	316
76	...	LXXI	219
81	...	LXIX	947
89	...	LXXII	910
91	...	LXXI	940
93	...	„	484
97	...	„	703
98	...	„	246
99	...	„	741
102	...	„	843
107	..	LXVII	592
108	...	LXXI	948
112	...	„	937
115	...	„	383
123	...	„	570
127	...	LXXXIII	290

Patna Law Times, Vol. IV—contd.

Page.	Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
134 ...	LXXI	473
135 ...	LXXI	902
147 ...	„	705
170 ..	LXIX	624
171 ...	LXXII	954
173 ..	„	440
185 ..	LXXIX	571
186 ...	LXXII	961
199 ...	LXIX	134
202 ..	LXXII	409
204 ..	LXVIII	337
209 ...	LXIX	684
210 ...	„	929
213 ..	LXXI	113
217 ..	„	769
223 ..	LXXII	218
226 ..	LXVIII	638
229 ...	LXX	172
231 ..	LXXII	71
232 ...	LXXI	117
235 ...	„	209
239 ...	LXVIII	383
245 ...	LXXII	157
247 ..	LXXIII	12
248 ..	LXXII	883
251 ...	„	811
251 ...	„	916
259 ...	LXIX	681
261 ..	LXXII	629
263 ..	LXIX	668
265 ...	LXXII	959
267 ...	LXVIII	601
272 ...	LXX	312
277 ...	LXIX	666
278 ...	LXVII	635
279 ..	LXXIII	569
285 ..	LXXI	887
290 ..	LXIX	686
292 ..	„	886
295 ..	LXVIII	629
297 ...	LXXII	951
301 ...	LXXI	143
303 ...	„	122
306 ...	LXXII	625
308 ..	LXXIII	173
311 ...	LXXII	1049
318 ..	LXXIII	451
319 ..	LXXVII	1041
322 ..	„	848
326 ..	LXXI	280
329 ..	„	341
331 ..	„	565
333 ...	LXXV	363
335 ...	LXXIII	822
367 ..	LXIX	613
370 ...	LXXI	997
372 ...	LXXII	69
373 ...	LXXIV	626
377 ..	LXXI	489
381 ...	LXXIII	963
392 ...	LXXII	133
393 ..	LXXI	332
396 ...	LXX	290
397 ...	LXXI	897

Patna Law Times, Vol. IV—contd.

Page.	Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
401 ...	LXXII	148
402 ...	LXXIV	1047
405 ...	LXXV	284
409 ...	LXXVII	1
414 ..	„	32
418 ...	LXXI	881
424 ...	LXXII	135
425 ..	LXXXVI	712
427 ...	LXXII	230
439 ..	LXXI	345
441 ..	LXXIV	258
443 ..	„	431
447 ...	„	747
457 ...	LXXI	944
462 ...	LXXIII	561
473 ...	LXXIV	668
487 ..	LXXII	648
491 ..	LXXV	430
495 ..	„	676
498 ...	LXXVI	113
502 ...	LXXII	519
503 ...	„	360
504 ...	„	405
505 ..	LXXV	705
508 ..	LXXVI	49
512 ..	LXXV	681
513 ...	LXXIV	174
516 ..	LXXV	53
521 ..	LXXII	375
525 ...	LXXV	305
531 ..	LXXV	1022
538 ..	LXXVII	611
544 ...	LXXIV	87
545 ...	LXXXIV	1028
546 ...	LXXIV	820
552 ..	LXXII	613
553 ...	LXXVIII	483
562 ..	LXXV	209
567 ...	LXXIX	414
571 ..	LXXIV	831
575 ...	LXXII	637
577 ..	LXXIX	420
579 ...	LXXII	544
581 ...	LXXV	794
606 ...	LXXIV	038
608 ...	LXXII	614
609 ...	LXXIV	499
613 ...	LXXVII	209
619 ...	„	401
622 ...	„	177
627 ...	LXXIV	482
629 ...	LXXV	1036
633 ...	„	1046
638 ...	„	871
640 ..	LXXX	377
642 ...	LXXI	925
647 ..	LXXII	668
648 ...	LXXV	72
650 ...	LXXIV	815
652 ...	LXXII	643
657 ..	LXXVI	49
659 ..	„	277
666 ...	LXXIV	619
669 ..	„	643

Patna Law Times, Vol. IV—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
675	..	LXXIV	403
633	..	LXXII	161
689	..	LXXIV	454
694	..	LXXX	588
696	..	„	568
698	..	LXIX	677
703	..	LXXII	76
705	...	LXXIV	464
707	..	„	695
718	..	„	474
720	..	LXXIII	1053
721	...	LXXIV	838
723	..	LXXII	345
727	..	LXXIV	536
730	....	LXXXI	324
731	...	LXXX	652
735	...	LXXIX	594

Rangoon, I. L. R. Series. Vol. I.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	LXXIII	1044
15	...	LXXIV	6
19	...	„	58
22	...	„	82
34	...	„	104
42	...	„	100
47	...	„	16
49	...	„	65
53	..	„	68
56	...	„	74
60	..	LXXI	753
66	..	„	650
78	..	LXXVI	458
102		LXXXVII	686
121	...	LXXVI	522
129	...	„	475
135	..	„	449
138	..	„	441
142	..	LXXIV	913
146	...	„	916
153	...	„	919
161	..	„	933
176	..	LXXV	31
186	..	LXXIV	970
189	..	„	1027
196	...	„	835
199	..	„	1050
209	..	„	1042
211	...	„	954
218	...	„	960
220	...	LXXVI	519
226	...	„	479
231	...	„	482
256	...	„	493
258	..	„	494
261	...	„	508
265	..	„	594
274	...	„	600
276	...	„	677

Rangoon, I. L. R. Series, Vol. I—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
281	....	LXXVI	812
283	..	LXXVII	1021
285	...	LXXV	295
290	...	LXXVI	425
299	...	„	431
301	..	LXXV	296
303	..	LXXVI	396
306	...	„	21
308	...	„	649
313	...	„	646
316	...	LXXXIII	10
335	...	„	20
339	..	LXXIX	291
343	...	LXXVI	620
351	..	LXXV	166
360	...	LXXVI	679
363	...	„	612
370	...	„	814
372	..	LXXXV	362
384	..	LXXXIII	3
390	..	LXXVI	705
397	...	„	700
402	...	„	639
405	...	„	855
419	..	„	665
427	...	„	729
430	...	„	672
433	..	„	669
436	..	„	711
447	...	„	709
449	..	„	697
451	..	LXXVII	63
460	..	LXXVI	835
463	..	„	802
472	....	LXXXII	610
481	...	LXXVI	841
487	...	„	836
492	..	LXXXIII	132
494	..	LXXVI	807
500	...	„	794
510	...	„	869
512	..	„	817
517	...	„	865
520	....	LXXXI	106
526	...	LXXVI	821
533	..	LXXVII	368
545	....	LXXV	287
549	..	LXXVI	693
555	...	LXXVII	402
557	...	„	362
562	..	„	380
565	...	„	372
580	...	„	382
584	...	„	385
600	..	LXXVI	564
604	..	„	830
609	..	LXXVII	429
618	...	„	393
629	..	LXXVI	719
632	..	LXXVII	885
634		LXXXIV	683
637	....	LXXVI	910
651	...	LXXIX	579
656	...	„	482

Rangoon, I. L. R. Series, Vol. I—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
661	..	LXXVI	525
665	...	LXXIX	485
668	...	„	432
682	...	LXXVI	791
687	...	LXXVII	882
689	..	„	887
690	..	LXXXI	41
694	...	LXXIX	755
700	...	„	718
702	..	LXXVI	588
705	...	LXXIX	719
714	..	„	766
722	..	„	705
751	...	LXXXI	945
756	..	„	930
759	...	LXXXIII	668
770	...	LXXIX	724
772	....	„	505

Burma Law Journal, Vol. II.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	LXXI	753
4	...	Not reportable.
5	..	LXXV	71
8	...	LXXXI	53
8	...	LXXV	357
10	...	Not reportable.
11	...	LXXXI	74
12	..	„	75
15	...	LXXIX	817
16	...	LXXV	358
17	...	LXXXI	141
19	...	LXXII	67
21	...	LXXXI	111
22	...	LXXIV	65
25	...	LXXI	650
29	...	LXXIX	818
30	...	LXXIV	6
32	...	„	68
34	...	LXXII	14
37	..	LXXXI	187
39	...	LXXV	217
40	...	LXXIV	74
42	...	LXXV	225
45	...	„	237
46	...	LXXIV	16
47	...	LXXIX	815
48	...	LXXV	74
50	...	LXXIV	58
52	...	LXXIX	813
54	...	LXXV	343
55	...	„	353
58	...	„	200
60	...	„	322
61	...	„	304
63	...	„	328
65	...	„	6
67	...	LXXIV	1037
69	...	„	82

Burma Law Journal, Vol. II—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
75	..	Not reportable.
76	...	LXXIV	1042
78	...	LXXV	309
79	..	LXXIV	933
85	...	LXXXI	154
89	...	LXXXII	606
92	...	LXXVI	21
94	...	LXXV	295
96	...	„	294
98	...	Not reportable.
99	...	„
101	...	LXXV	296
102	...	LXXIX	244
103	..	LXXVI	575
106	...	„	597
108	...	„	600
109	..	„	612
113	...	„	617
114	...	„	620
119	..	„	624
125	..	„	646
127	..	„	649
130	..	LXXIX	291
134	...	LXXVI	677
136	...	„	812
138	..	„	814
139	....	„	700
142	...	„	705
146	...	„	693
149	...	„	697
150	..	„	704
151	..	„	679
153	...	„	709
154	...	LXXXV	362
158	..	LXXVI	835
160	...	LXXXI	345
161	...	„	328
163	...	LXXIX	742
164	..	„	744
165	...	Not reportable.
166	...	LXXIX	747
169	...	„	755
173	..	LXXVI	841
177	...	LXXVII	372
186	...	LXXVI	588
188	...	LXXXII	610
193	...	LXXVI	525
196	...	„	561
199	...	„	573
201	..	„	564
203	..	„	571
205	..	„	817
208	..	„	788
210	..	„	827
213	...	„	825
214	...	„	867
216	...	„	816
217	...	„	785
218	...	„	791
221	..	„	719
224	..	„	820
227	...	„	810
229	..	LXXVII	866
231	...	„	864

Burma Law Journal, Vol. II—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
233	..	LXXVII	877
235	...	„	882
236	...	„	885
238	..	„	887
239	...	„	889
241	..	LXXIV	1050
246	...	„	960
248	...	„	919
252	...	LXXXIV	683
254	...	LXXVI	910
260	..	LXXVII	63
264	...	LXX	937
266	...	LXXXIII	329
270	..	„	668
275	...	„	334
277	...	LXXXI	945
280	..	LXXIX	505
282	..	„	506
285	..	LXXXI	970
287	...	„	930
289	...	LXXXIV	863
291		LXXXVI I	198
292	...	LXXIX	501
294	..	„	504
295	..	LXXXI	985
296		LXXXVIII	138
298	..	LXXXI	960

Sind Law Reporter, Vol. XV.

Parts II to IV 1921.

119	...	LXV	481
126	..	LXIV	663
128	...	„	1007
131	...	LXIX	625
135	...	LXV	37
140	...	Not reportable.
149	..	LXIV	511
152	...	LXV	26
156	..	„	14
160	..	„	356
165	..	„	50
171	..	LXVI	999
172	...	„	789
175	..	„	888
180	..	LXVII	19
193	...	LXVI	489
195	...	„	808
200	...	„	179
202	...	„	720
205	...	„	191
207	...	LXVII	44
214	..	LXVI	267

Sind Law Reporter, Vol. XVI.

Parts I to IV 1922.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	LXVI	657
11	..	LXXIX	564
15	...	LXVI	672
17	..	„	833
25	..	LXXX	118
67	...	LXXXI	62
71	..	LXVI	873
76	...	„	682
79	..	„	796
87	...	LXXIX	819
98		LXXXVII	258
106	..	LXXIX	847
109	..	LXX	852
112	...	LXXI	161
131	...	LXVIII	835
133	...	LXXIX	841
143	...	LXXXV	833
147	...	LXXXIV	253
149	...	„	62
150	...	„	58
156	...	„	448
158	..	LXXXIII	335
161	...	„	899
169	..	„	697
174	...	LXXXI	653
195	...	LXXXIII	897
197	...	„	889
201	...	„	895
205	..	LXXXIV	329
207	...	LXXXIII	360
221	..	LXXIX	539
226	...	LXXV	497
235	..	LXXIX	456
245	..	„	477
255	.	LXXXVI	33
260	...	LXXIX	553
267	...	„	535
273	...	„	582
278	...	LXXVII	897
285	..	LXXXII	59
293	...	LXXX	303

Sind Law Reporter, Vol. XVII.

Parts I to IV 1923.

1	...	LXXX	962
9	..	„	958
15	...	„	969
41	...	„	985
46	...	„	951
52	...	LXXVI	657
58	..	LXXX	990
63	...	„	994
73	..	„	1002
82	...	„	955
86	...	„	1009
93	..	LXXVI	660
105	..	LXXXIII	749

Sind Law Reporter, Vol. XVII—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
110	...	Not reportable.
133	..	LXXXIII	353
150	...	„	845
160	....	„	883
164	...	„	539
172	..	„	543
178	...	„	548
182	..	„	702
188	...	„	708
195	...	LXXXI	759
206	...	LXXVI	408
211	..	LXXXIII	913
223	...	LXXXV	893
228		LXXXVII	83
236	..	LXXVI	52
245	...	„	230
255	..	LXXIII	311
257	...	LXXXIII	870
260	...	„	893
263	..	LXXVI	119
268	..	LXXXIII	881
273	...	LXXXI	134
281		LXXVIII	279
288	...	LXXIX	376
300	...	LXXVI	250
306	...	LXXVIII	953
312	...	LXXIII	319
316	...	LXXV	1014
320	...	LXXXIV	282
324	...	LXXIX	914
330	...	„	409
334	..	LXXX	642
341	...	LXXXI	102
344	...	„	197

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XXIV.

Jan. to Dec. 1923.

1	...	LXXI	49
2	...	„	49
3	...	„	51
4	...	„	52
5	...	„	53
6	...	„	54
8	...	„	56
10	...	„	58
13	...	„	61
14	...	„	62
15	...	„	63
17	...	„	65
29	...	„	77
31	...	„	79
33	...	„	81
62	...	„	110
64	...	„	112
65	...	„	113
67	...	„	115
69	...	„	117
72	...	„	120
74	...	„	122

Criminal Law Journal Vol. XXIV—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
76	...	LXXI	124
78	...	„	126
80	...	„	128
81	...	„	209
84	...	„	212
85	...	„	213
86	...	„	214
87	...	„	215
88	...	„	216
89	...	„	217
91	...	„	219
94	...	„	222
97	...	„	225
100	...	„	228
104	...	„	232
106	...	„	234
108	...	„	236
110	...	„	238
111	...	„	239
113	...	„	241
114	...	„	242
115	...	„	243
116	...	„	244
118	...	„	246
118	...	„	246
119	...	„	247
120	...	„	248
120	...	„	248
124	...	„	252
126	...	„	254
128	...	„	256
129	...	„	353
135	...	„	359
136	...	„	360
141	...	„	365
143	...	„	367
144	...	„	368
145	...	„	497
149	...	„	501
151	...	„	503
151	...	„	503
152	...	„	504
153	...	„	505
154	...	„	506
155	...	„	507
156	...	„	508
157	...	„	509
159	...	„	511
160	..	„	512
162	...	„	514
164	...	„	516
167	...	„	519
171	...	„	523
173	...	„	525
175	...	„	527
176	...	„	528
177	...	„	593
179	...	„	595
180	...	„	596
181	...	„	597
183	...	„	599
184	...	„	600
185	...	„	601
186	..	„	602

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XXIV—contd.

Page.	Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
187	LXXI	603
189	"	605
192	"	608
193	"	657
197	"	661
198	"	662
201	"	665
202	"	666
203	"	667
204	"	668
205	"	669
206	"	670
209	"	673
217	"	681
220	"	684
221	"	685
225	"	689
227	"	691
228	"	692
229	"	693
230	"	694
232	"	696
233	"	697
234	"	698
235	"	699
236	"	700
238	"	702
239	"	703
240	"	704
244	"	785
245	"	789
248	"	792
248	"	792
251	"	795
251	"	795
253	"	797
254	"	798
257	"	865
263	"	871
269	"	877
271	"	879
273	"	993
275	"	995
276	"	996
277	"	997
278	"	998
279	"	999
286	"	1006
289	LXXII	17
294	"	22
297	"	25
304	"	32
305	"	65
307	"	67
308	"	68
309	"	69
309	"	69
310	"	70
311	"	71
311	"	71
312	"	72
313	"	73
316	"	76
317	"	77

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XXIV—contd.

Page.	Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
318	LXXII	78
319	"	79
319	"	79
321	"	161
325	"	165
331	"	171
332	"	172
333	"	173
335	"	175
337	"	337
339	"	339
340	"	340
345	"	345
348	"	348
349	"	349
351	"	351
353	"	353
355	"	355
356	"	356
356	"	356
358	"	358
359	"	359
360	"	360
360	"	360
361	"	361
362	"	362
367	"	367
368	"	368
369	"	369
370	"	370
371	"	371
372	"	372
375	"	375
379	"	379
381	"	381
381	"	381
383	"	383
385	"	497
396	"	508
401	"	513
403	"	515
405	"	517
407	"	519
408	"	520
409	"	521
411	"	523
413	"	525
414	"	526
415	"	527
417	"	529
421	"	533
424	"	536
426	"	538
429	"	541
432	"	544
433	"	593
439	"	599
449	"	609
451	"	611
452	"	612
453	"	613
453	"	613
454	"	614
455	"	615

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XXIV—contd.

Page.	Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
456	LXXII	616
457	"	617
461	"	621
462	"	622
462	"	623
464	"	624
465	"	881
466	"	882
467	"	883
467	"	883
469	"	885
471	"	887
474	"	890
475	"	891
476	"	892
477	"	893
478	"	894
481	"	945
484	"	948
485	"	949
486	"	950
487	"	951
489	"	953
490	"	954
491	"	955
492	"	956
493	"	957
494	"	958
495	"	959
497	"	961
506	"	970
507	"	971
509	"	973
510	"	974
511	"	975
513	LXXIII	49
516	"	52
517	"	53
517	"	53
518	"	54
519	"	55
525	"	61
526	"	62
529	"	145
531	"	147
537	"	153
539	"	155
541	"	157
542	"	158
545	"	161
547	"	163
557	"	173
559	"	175
561	"	257
564	"	260
565	"	261
566	"	262
569	"	265
570	"	266
573	"	269
575	"	271
576	"	272
577	"	321
578	"	322

Criminal Law Journal Vol. XXIV—contd.

Page.	Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
579	LXXIII	323
581	"	325
583	"	327
584	"	328
584	"	328
585	"	329
587	"	331
588	"	332
590	"	334
590	"	334
591	"	335
592	"	336
593	"	337
594	"	338
595	"	339
597	"	341
599	"	343
608	"	352
609	"	497
615	"	503
616	"	504
618	"	506
620	"	508
622	"	510
625	"	513
627	"	515
629	"	517
630	"	518
631	"	519
632	"	520
633	"	521
635	"	523
635	"	523
636	"	524
638	"	526
639	"	527
640	"	528
641	"	561
649	"	569
656	"	576
657	"	689
658	"	690
659	"	691
661	"	693
662	"	694
663	"	695
664	"	696
667	"	699
668	"	700
670	"	702
673	"	769
674	"	770
677	"	773
677	"	773
679	"	775
680	"	776
683	"	779
684	"	780
686	"	782
688	"	784
689	"	801
690	"	802
693	"	805
693	"	805

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XXIV—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
695	..	LXXIII	807
696	..	„	808
700	..	„	812
701	...	„	813
702	..	„	814
703	..	„	815
705	..	„	929
707	...	„	931
708	...	„	932
710	..	„	934
711	..	„	935
712	..	„	936
713	..	„	937
714	..	„	938
715	..	„	939
716	..	„	940
717	...	„	941
719	...	„	943
720	..	„	944
721	...	„	961
723	..	„	963
732	..	„	972
734	...	„	974
735	...	„	975
735	..	„	975
736	..	„	976
737	..	LXXIV	65
738	..	„	66
740	..	„	68
741	...	„	69
744	..	„	72
745	...	„	73
746	...	„	74
747	...	„	75
748	..	„	76
750	..	„	78
751	...	„	79
753	...	„	257
754	..	„	258
755	..	„	259
756	..	„	260
757	..	„	261
758	..	„	262
760	...	„	264
763	..	„	267
766	...	„	270
767	..	„	271
769	..	„	433
770	...	„	434
779	..	„	443
780	...	„	444
781	...	„	445
783	..	„	447
784	...	„	448
785	..	„	529
789	..	„	533
790	..	„	534
791	...	„	535
792	...	„	536
795	...	„	539
798	...	„	542
799	...	„	543
800	..	„	544
801	...	„	705
804	...	„	708

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XXIV—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
806	...	LXXIV	710
808	..	„	712
809	...	„	713
811	...	„	715
811	...	„	715
812	..	„	716
813	...	„	717
814	...	„	718
815	..	„	719
817	...	„	849
823	...	„	855
824	..	„	856
825	..	„	857
826	..	„	858
828	..	„	860
829	...	„	861
830	...	„	862
831	..	„	863
833	..	„	945
835	..	„	947
837	..	„	949
838	..	„	950
840	...	„	952
842	...	„	954
845	...	„	957
846	...	„	958
847	..	„	959
848	..	„	960
849	...	„	1041
850	...	„	1042
851	..	„	1043
852	...	„	1044
854	...	„	1046
855	..	„	1047
857	..	„	1049
858	...	„	1050
862	..	„	1054
862	..	„	1054
865	..	LXXV	161
867	...	„	67
869	...	„	69
870	...	„	70
871	...	„	71
872	..	„	72
874	..	„	74
875	...	„	75
877	..	„	77
879	..	„	79
880	...	„	80
881	..	„	129
897	...	„	145
900	..	„	148
902	..	„	150
904	...	„	152
910	..	„	158
911	..	„	159
913	...	„	289
916	...	„	292
918	..	„	294
919	...	„	295
920	...	„	296
921	...	„	297
923	...	„	299
928	..	„	304
929	...	„	353

Criminal Law Journal Vol. XXIV- concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
929	...	LXXV	353
932	...	„	356
933	...	„	357
934	...	„	358
934	..	„	358
935	...	„	359
937	...	„	361
938	...	„	362
939	...	„	363
940	..	„	364
941	..	„	365
943	...	„	367
944	..	„	368
945	...	„	529
947	...	„	531
949	...	„	533
951	...	„	535
953	...	„	537
954	...	„	538
957	...	„	541
958	...	„	542
959	...	„	543
960	...	„	544

(1923) All India Reporter.
Jan. to Dec. 1923.

Privy Council.

1	...	LXXVII	1048
6	...	LXXII	898
8	..	LXXI	643
11	...	„	621
13	...	„	632
21	..	„	769
26	..	„	1035
29	..	LXXVI	948
31	...	Not reportable.
37	..	LXXI	933
41	...	LXIV	826
44	...	Not reportable.
44	...	LXXI	646
47	..	„	763
50	...	„	650
54	..	Not reportable.
54	..	LXXII	485
57	...	LXXIII	252
59	...	LXXVII	1041
62	..	LXXXIV	696
65	...	LXXIII	530
66	..	„	436
70	..	LXXIV	449
73	...	LXXIII	391
86	..	LXXV	556
87	...	„	287
88	..	LXXIII	193
90	...	„	244
93	...	LXXV	546
95	...	LXXVII	141
98	...	LXXXIV	721
102	..	LXXV	502
103	.	Not reportable.
105	...	LXXIV	396
112	..	LXXIII	242
114	...	LXXV	7

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Privy Council—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
118	...	LXXIV	476
122	...	LXXVI	996
128	..	LXXIV	747
136	...	„	462
138	...	LXXV	392
146	...	LXXVII	755
148	...	LXXIV	469
156	...	LXXVII	63
160	..	LXXVI	922
167	...	„	594
171	..	„	929
175	...	LXXIV	492
178	...	LXXIX	452
184	...	LXXVII	355
187	...	LXXIV	482
189	...	„	499
194	...	LXXVII	100
205	...	LXXIV	362
211	...	LXXVI	910
217	...	LXXXII	879

Allahabad High Court.

1	...	LXIX	981
7	..	LXXVII	122
10	...	LXX	849
11	...	„	836
11	...	„	958
12	...	„	836
14	...	Not reportable.
14	...	LXXVII	927
15	...	LXXVI	618
17	...	LXX	833
18	...	„	820
20	...	LXXXIII	417
22	...	LXIX	199
22	...	LXVIII	981
24	...	LXX	811
25	...	LXXV	14
28	..	LXX	815
29	...	„	840
30	...	LXXXIII	601
31	...	Not reportable.
33	...	LXXXIV	1008
33	...	LXIX	457
34	...	LXXXV	44
35	...	LXXI	865
41	...	LXX	917
43	...	LXIX	509
44	...	LXX	805
48	...	„	132
50	...	LXVIII	985
52	...	LXXI	408
53	...	LXIX	647
54	...	„	840
55	...	„	641
56	...	LXX	124
57	...	LXXI	836
58	...	LXIX	971
63	...	LXX	70
64	...	LXVIII	978
65	...	LXXIX	246
67	...	LXIX	688
71	...	LXXXII	772
75	...	LXIX	912

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

All. High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
77	...	LXXVI	527
78	...	LXIX	645
79	...	LXX	854
79	...	LXXVII	91
81	...	Not reportable.
81	...	LXXI	115
83	...	LXXVI	191
84	...	LXXI	684
85	...	„	243
86	...	LXXXI	56
87	...	LXXI	503
88	...	„	507
88	...	„	234
90	...	„	54
91	...	LXXVII	961
109	...	LXXI	574
112	..	„	452
113	...	LXXII	1024
115	...	LXXIX	486
117	...	LXXII	924
118	..	LXIX	921
119	...	LXXI	424
120	..	„	420
122	...	LXV	422
122	..	LXXVII	1020
123	...	„	56
123	...	LXXI	412
124	...	„	417
126	..	„	501
127	...	LXIV	918
128	..	„	943
129	...	LXXIV	124
134	...	LXXVI	12
135	...	LXXIII	295
137	..	LXXI	505
137	...	„	411
139	...	„	144
140	..	LXXVII	140
141	...	LXXVI	862
141	..	LXIX	944
145	..	XLIII	440
146	...	LXXIII	299
149	..	„	341
150	..	LXXV	751
151	...	LXXI	402
153	..	LXX	942
159	..	LXXVI	749
160	..	LXXI	480
161	..	LXXVII	933
161	...	LXXVI	983
163	...	LXXVII	940
164	...	LXXI	273
165	...	LXXVII	918
167	...	„	913
168	...	LXXI	350
169	...	LXXVII	862
170	...	„	955
171	..	LXXIX	308
173	...	LXXVII	909
173	...	LXXI	296
175	...	LXXIII	694
175	...	LXXIV	75

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

All. High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
176	..	LXXX	1041
179	...	LXXI	291
180	...	LXXIX	508
181	...	„	542
182	..	„	503
183	...	LXXI	278
185	..	LXXIX	225
186	..	„	82
187	...	„	220
189	...	LXXI	283
191	...	LXXIX	232
192	..	LXXVI	969
193	...	LXXI	368
193	...	LXXIV	260
194	..	LXXI	605
197	..	LXXIX	234
199	..	LXXX	297
202	...	LXXXIII	745
203	...	LXXIX	85
204	..	LXXI	405
206	...	LXXIX	238
210	...	LXXI	488
211	...	„	321
213	...	„	456
214	...	LXXIX	464
216	...	LXV	648
218	...	LXVII	668
220	...	LXXIX	473
225	..	LXV	844
229	...	„	641
230	..	„	585
231	...	„	511
232	..	„	654
233	...	„	593
234	..	„	653
234	...	„	583
235	...	LXVIII	307
242	...	LXVII	231
247	..	Not reportable.
248	..	LXXII	134
249	...	LXXIII	495
250	...	LXXI	1034
251	...	„	460
254	...	LXX	951
255	...	LXXIX	470
256	...	LXXI	562
257	...	„	447
260	...	LXXXIII	771
261	...	LXXX	1021
263	...	LXXIII	651
263	...	LXXI	529
265	...	„	376
267	...	„	1032
267	...	LXXIV	133
269	...	LXXX	313
270	...	LXXI	474
271	...	„	457
271	...	LXXIX	498
273	...	Not reportable.
274	...	„
276	...	LXXI	525
277	...	LXXXIII	509

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

All. High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
281	...	LXXIX	77
282	...	LXXIII	536
282	...	LXXI	631
284	...	„	623
285	...	LXXXI	80
286	...	LXXI	628
287	...	„	749
291	...	„	640
291	...	„	991
292	...	„	1012
293	...	„	983
293	...	„	979
294	...	LXXII	247
295	...	LXXI	991
296	...	„	1038
296	...	„	1025
297	...	„	1027
298	...	„	975
298	...	„	959
301	...	„	614
304	...	„	1028
306	...	LXXV	597
310	...	LXXIV	836
311	...	LXXI	965
312	...	„	755
313	...	„	773
315	..	„	1018
319	...	„	767
319	...	LXXXIV	538
321	...	LXXII	86
322	...	LXXVI	1025
325	...	LXXI	661
327	...	„	704
327	...	„	689
329	...	Not reportable.
331	...	LXXIII	977
332	...	LXXI	692
332	...	„	696
333	...	LXXIV	1049
334	...	LXXV	527
335	...	„	553
337	...	„	686
338	...	„	593
340	...	„	655
341	...	„	657
342	...	„	669
343	...	LXXI	381
344	...	LXXV	663
345	...	LXXI	610
346	...	LXXV	666
347	...	LXXIV	286
349	...	„	757
349	...	LXXII	483
350	...	LXXV	323
352	...	LXXIII	62
355	...	„	1029
355	...	LXXIV	257
356	...	LXXXIV	585
357	...	LXXIII	975
357	...	Not reportable.
358	...	LXXIV	1004
360	...	„	1054

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

All. High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
361	...	LXXV	676
361	...	LXXVI	1050
362	...	LXXI	369
363	...	„	299
364	...	LXXIX	402
365	...	LXXV	679
366	..	LXXI	390
367	...	„	400
367	...	LXXV	681
368	...	LXXXII	790
369	...	LXXI	292
371	...	LXXV	607
372	...	„	616
373	...	„	619
374	...	„	621
375	...	LXXI	655
377	...	„	382
378	...	„	432
382	...	LXXV	672
382	...	„	603
383	...	LXXIII	576
384	...	LXXIV	1014
386	...	LXXVI	28
387	...	LXXII	8
392	...	LXXIV	778
394	...	LXXIV	873
396	...	Not reportable.
397	...	LXXI	973
398	...	„	1013
398	...	LXXV	605
399	...	LXXI	265
401	..	„	992
401	...	Not reportable.
402	...	„
403	...	LXXV	596
404	...	LXXIII	1040
404	...	LXXV	624
405	...	Not reportable.
406	...	LXXI	971
407	...	LXXV	609
408	...	LXXI	393
409	...	LXXIV	991
410	...	LXXI	287
411	...	„	441
412	...	Not reportable.
413	...	LXXIX	408
414	..	LXXI	424
414	..	„	308
415	...	LXXIX	411
416	...	LXXI	559
417	...	„	444
417	...	LXXII	108
418	...	LXXI	1033
419	...	LXXIII	212
420	..	„	217
420	..	„	989
421	..	LXXIV	88
423	..	LXXIII	227
424	..	„	1018
425	...	LXXI	1026
426	..	„	609
428	..	„	615

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

All. High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
429	...	LXXII	106
429	...	LXXI	768
430	..	LXXV	612
431	..	Not reportable.
432	..	„
433	..	LXXI	996
433	...	LXXIII	945
435	...	LXXIV	1024
436	...	LXXI	564
437	...	LXXII	276
438	..	LXXI	619
439	..	„	475
440	...	LXXXII	592
441	...	LXXI	654
442	...	„	762
443	...	„	620
443	...	„	761
445	...	„	455
446	...	„	649
447	...	„	653
448	...	LXXV	614
449	...	LXXIV	277
449	..	„	248
451	..	LXXIII	1030
452	..	LXXVI	585
453	...	LXXIII	981
454	...	LXXIV	320
455	...	„	1039
456	...	LXXVI	473
457	..	LXXIV	684
458	...	„	666
460	...	LXXIII	453
460	..	LXXXII	513
462	..	LXXVI	507
463	..	„	516
464	..	„	521
464	..	„	525
465	...	LXXI	431
465	...	„	472
466	...	LXXIII	413
469	...	LXXVI	572
470	...	LXXIV	995
471	...	LXXI	963
473	..	LXXVI	650
473	..	LXXIV	270
474	..	„	262
476	...	LXXVI	568
479	...	LXXXIII	483
479	...	LXXIV	715
480	...	LXXVI	971
483	..	LXXI	359
483	...	LXXVI	652
484	...	LXXI	668
484	..	„	600
485	...	LXXVI	556
486	...	LXXI	370
487	...	Not reportable.
488	...	LXXII	491
488	...	LXXI	465
489	..	LXXVII	630
490	..	LXXI	617
490	...	LXXIV	411

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

All. High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
494	..	LXXIV	687
495	..	„	656
499	...	LXXXI	275
500	...	LXXV	35
502	..	LXXIV	834
503	...	„	557
504	...	LXXII	92
507	..	LXXIII	646
508	...	LXXII	140
509	..	LXXIV	640
511	..	LXXXII	643
513	..	LXXIV	379
514	..	LXXXII	646
516	..	LXXIV	745
517	...	LXXIII	1012
518	..	„	615
519	...	LXXIV	824
520	...	LXXVII	27
522	..	LXXXIII	32
523	...	LXXV	792
523	...	LXXIV	8
525	...	„	315
526	..	„	382
527	..	LXXVII	638
529	...	LXXIII	607
529	...	LXXIV	359
530	...	„	339
531	..	LXXIII	446
532	..	„	495
532	...	LXXIV	939
534	...	LXXIII	953
535	..	„	1010
536	..	LXXVI	375
537	...	LXXIV	19
538	...	„	358
538	..	„	300
539	..	LXXIII	958
540	...	LXXIV	349
541	..	LXXIII	1016
542	...	„	531
543	..	„	956
544	...	LXXIV	7
544	...	LXXIII	805
545	...	LXXXI	191
546	...	LXXIII	526
547	...	„	520
548	...	„	943
549	..	LXXIV	845
551	...	LXXV	387
553	..	LXXIII	529
554	...	LXXVII	756
556	...	LXXIII	460
557	...	LXXIV	251
558	...	LXXIII	584
559	...	LXXVII	760
560	...	LXXIV	971
562	...	„	914
563	..	LXXVII	705
565	...	LXXIV	879
566	...	„	964
567	..	Not reportable.
568	...	LXXIII	947

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

All. High Court—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
569	...	LXXIV	18
570	...	LXXIII	983
571	...	LXXV	270
572	..	LXXXIV	535
573	...	LXXIV	351
574	..	LXXIII	1052
575	...	LXXVII	875
576	...	LXXIV	528
577	...	LXXIII	538
579	...	LXXIV	761
580	...	LXXV	280
581	...	LXXIV	367
583	...	LXXVI	307
584	...	LXXIII	902
585	..	„	477
586	...	LXXVII	572
590	..	LXXIII	458
591	...	„	656
592	...	„	929
595	...	LXXVII	886
596	..	LXXIII	337
597	..	„	690
598	..	„	508
599	..	LXXXII	134
600	..	LXXVII	871
601	..	LXXV	148
603	..	LXXIII	494
603	...	LXXIV	822
605	..	„	814
605	...	„	64
606	...	LXXIII	801
608	..	LXXV	361
609	..	LXXIII	775
609	..	LXXVI	1040
610	...	LXXVII	883
612	..	LXXIII	654
613	...	LXXIV	830
613	..	LXXVI	370

Bombay High Court.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	LXXII	25
8	...	„	17
12	...	Not reportable.
13	...	LXIV	246
15	...	LXVII	865
16	...	LXX	839
16	...	LXVII	658
17	...	LXXXII	618
22	...	LXVI	997
23	...	LXVII	938
23	...	„	417
24	...	„	326
26	...	„	667
27	...	LXVIII	514
29	...	LXVII	941
30	..	LXVI	817
30	...	LXXVI	895
32	...	LXXV	188
33	...	LXXIII	880
33	...	LXVII	757
35	...	LXVII	722

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Bombay High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
36	...	LXXVI	148
37	...	LXXII	993
39	...	LXXIX	210
40	...	LXX	832
41	...	LXXII	1003
41	...	LXXIX	489
42	...	„	491
42	...	LXX	850
44	...	LXXVI	34
44	...	LXVII	818
51	...	LXXVI	433
59	...	Not reportable.
60	...	LXXVI	442
62	...	LXVII	857
63	..	LXXIII	862
65	..	LXXV	70
66	..	LXVIII	627
67	...	LXIV	353
70	..	LXVII	430
71	..	LXXV	67
73	...	LXVI	8
74	...	LXXIII	812
75	..	LXXV	233
79	...	LXXVI	897
82	...	„	115
85	..	LXVIII	682
90	..	LXXVI	73
92	..	LXX	875
96	...	„	178
105	...	LXXI	523
107	...	LXXV	203
113	...	LXXVII	943
119	...	LXX	47
125	...	„	138
130	...	LXIX	291
142	..	LXVII	965
145	...	LXX	103
146	...	LXXVII	952
148	..	LXVIII	862
155	...	LXVII	761
163	...	LXXXI	449
169	...	LXIV	457
170	...	LXXVI	152
172	..	LXXIX	245
173	...	„	179
176	...	LXXII	927
177	...	LXXVII	83
183	...	LXXXIV	643
187	..	LXXII	118
190	...	„	62
191	...	LXXVI	265
193	...	LXXII	130
194	..	LXXXI	148
194	...	LXXII	349
196	..	„	406
198	..	Not reportable.
199	...	LXXII	404
200	...	„	401
201	...	LXXII	359
201	...	„	290
203	..	LXXIII	912
206	...	LXXII	324

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Bombay High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
207	..	LXXII	275
208	..	LXXXII	27
211	...	LXXII	321
213	..	LXXV	561
214	..	LXXVI	256
216	..	LXXV	569
216	..	LXXII	282
218	...	LXXVI	317
226	..	LXXIII	666
228		LXXXVIII	316
233	...	LXXXIV	684
234	...	LXXII	353
236	..	LXXVI	215
237	...	LXXIII	718
239	..	LXXII	249
241	...	„	246
242	...	LXXII	73
244	...	„	242
245	...	„	261
247	..	„	224
248	...	„	70
249	..	„	266
253	...	Not reportable.
253	...	LXXII	304
254	..	„	326
255	...	LXXVI	294
260	...	LXXII	277
261	...	LXXXIV	652
262	...	LXXXII	709
264	..	LXXII	285
264	...	LXXXVI	287
265	...	LXXII	307
265	...	„	659
268	...	LXXVII	497
271	...	„	500
272	...	LXXIII	178
276	..	„	196
281	...	LXXVII	412
284	...	LXXIII	304
287	...	„	296
287	..	LXXII	315
289	...	„	636
290	...	LXXIII	354
293	...	LXXVII	472
294	...	„	449
296	...	Not reportable.
296	..	LXXVII	463
297	...	LXXII	309
299	...	LXXVII	474
299	...	LXXIII	454
300	...	LXXII	556
301	...	„	631
302	...	LXXVII	477
303	..	LXXV	743
304	...	LXXVI	555
305	...	LXXXIII	856
321	...	LXXVII	654
358	...	LXXII	312
359	...	LXXVII	502
361	...	„	506
364	..	„	479
365	..	LXXIII	415

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Bombay High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
366	...	LXXIII	233
368	...	LXXVII	476
369	...	LXXIV	302
370	...	LXXVI	521
371	...	„	549
372	...	LXXXII	977
379	...	LXXVI	551
381	...	LXXIII	419
382	...	LXXVI	559
383	...	„	659
384	...	LXXIII	412
385	..	LXXII	626
386	..	LXXX	182
387	...	LXX	920
389	...	LXXIII	606
391	..	„	443
392	..	„	240
393	..	LXXIX	517
394	...	LXXIII	254
395	..	LXXX	178
396	...	LXXIV	149
397	..	„	292
398	...	LXXIII	442
399	...	„	474
400	...	„	310
401	...	LXXV	102
402	...	LXXIII	464
403	...	„	465
404	..	LXXV	893
407	...	LXXVI	478
408	...	LXXIII	365
409	..	LXXVI	764
410	...	LXXIII	231
411	...	„	246
412	..	„	455
412	...	„	125
413	..	LXXIV	205
414	...	LXXX	180
415	...	LXXVI	217
416	..	LXXIV	196
417	..	LXXVII	137
419	...	LXXIX	208
420	...	LXXIII	187
421	...	„	133
423	...	„	468
425	..	„	279
427	..	„	1023
428	...	LXXIX	200
429	..	„	186
431	..	LXXIII	1030
432	...	LXXVI	607
437	..	LXX	474
440	..	LXXIII	424
441	..	LXXIX	226
449	..	LXXVII	878
450	...	LXXIII	402
452	...	„	1027
453	...	„	1017
454	..	„	1020
455	...	„	974
456	...	LXXIX	192
458	..	LXXIII	1032

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Bombay High Court—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
459	..	LXXIX	197
461	..	LXXIII	1011
462	...	„	1035
464	...	LXXVII	914
467	...	„	92
471	..	LXXVI	937
473	...	LXXV	118
478	...	LXXVII	147
480	...	„	901

Calcutta High Court.

1	...	LXXIV	630
8	...	LXX	663
11	..	LXXI	670
13	...	LXXII	698
18	...	„	680
21	...	LXXI	314
25	...	LXXVII	261
27	...	LXXII	1019
30	...	LXX	175
32	..	LXXII	696
33	...	„	221
35	...	LXX	794
41	...	„	161
45	...	LXIX	153
49	...	LXXII	270
53	..	LXX	960
57	...	LXXVII	558
60	..	LXXII	1026
63	...	LXVIII	993
66	..	LXXIII	312
71	...	LXXII	692
74	...	„	663
79	...	LXX	548
82	..	LXXVII	564
85	...	LXX	606
90	...	LXXI	1
95	...	„	225
97	...	LXXXI	236
99	..	LXXVI	985
102		LXXIII	416
105	...	LXXI	509
106	...	LXXII	22
108	..	LXXIII	770
111	...	LXVII	1001
113	...	LXXIII	34
116	...	LXIX	48
121	...	LXXVI	247
130	...	LXIX	707
135	..	LXII	577
135	...	LXIX	863
138	...	LXXVII	1035
141	..	LXX	437
142	...	LXXIV	793
149	..	LXXVII	1047
149	...	LXX	532
152	..	„	169
154	...	LXVIII	648
157	..	„	439
160	...	LXXII	686
162	...	LXVIII	495

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Calcutta High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
163	..	LXVIII	467
164	..	LXXI	5
165	...	LXVIII	203
166	...	LXX	931
166	...	LXVII	149
168	..	LXXIII	322
169	..	LXX	371
176	...	LXXIII	53
176	..	LXX	841
177	...	LXXVI	213
179	...	LXXII	973
180	...	LXXIII	47
181	..	LXVIII	295
182	...	LXXX	485
189	...	LXXI	327
192	...	LXX	792
194	...	LXVII	871
195	...	LXVIII	449
196	...	LXXI	662
198	...	LXXII	173
200	...	LXX	263
204	...	LXVIII	322
207	...	LXX	119
208	..	LXVIII	285
210	..	LXX	68
212	..	LXIX	209
215	...	LXX	933
217	...	LXXI	497
221	...	LXX	687
223	...	LXIX	963
227	...	LXX	494
228	...	„	555
233	...	„	510
240	...	„	194
247	..	LXXI	849
252	...	LXX	427
256	..	LXXII	576
261	...	LXXIV	383
265	...	LXX	463
268	...	LXVIII	497
269	...	LXV	704
269	...	LXVIII	730
270	...	LXVI	787
271	...	LXX	939
273	..	LXVIII	334
274	..	LXIX	530
278	...	LXVII	998
279	..	LXVIII	500
280	...	„	430
281	..	LXVII	741
282	..	LXVIII	475
282	...	„	298
283	...	LXV	598
283	...	LXVII	386
285	..	„	770
286	..	LXVI	914
287	..	LXVII	663
288	...	LXVIII	727
289	..	LXVII	290
290	...	LXVIII	282
291	...	„	267
294	...	LXVII	244

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Calcutta High Court —contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
292	..	LXVIII	721
292	..	LXV	701
294	...	LXVIII	194
294	...	LXVII	66
296	..	„	394
297	...	„	271
298	..	„	294
299	...	LXVIII	329
300	...	„	293
302	...	LXXV	196
303	...	LXXI	365
305	...	LXVII	468
306	...	LXVIII	664
307	..	„	489
308	...	LXVII	93
309	...	„	90
310	..	„	300
310	...	LXVIII	897
311	...	LXVII	302
313	..	„	885
313	...	LXVIII	301
314	...	LXV	851
315	..	LXVII	277
315	...	LXV	692
316	..	LXVIII	305
316	...	„	607
317	...	LXVII	883
318	..	LXVIII	331
319	...	„	303
319	..	„	448
320	...	„	38
321	...	„	626
322	...	LXV	696
322	...	LXVII	879
323	...	LXVI	922
324	..	LXVII	398
327	...	„	709
327	..	LXVIII	472
329	..	LXXV	567
331	...	„	474
333	...	LXXII	1013
335	...	LXXVI	413
338	...	Not reportable.
339	...	LXXI	611
342	..	LXXVI	311
344	...	„	316
345	...	LXXXIV	525
351	..	LXXVI	324
354	...	Not reportable.
356	...	LXXVI	328
358	...	LXXII	55
361	...	LXXVI	444
362	..	„	448
364	...	LXXII	37
365	...	LXXVI	401
368	...	„	252
369	...	„	481
370	...	„	492
371	..	LXX	187
373	..	LXXVI	382
375	...	Not reportable.
377	..	LXXVI	494

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Calcutta High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
378	..	LXXII	985
379	..	„	1041
382	...	LXXVII	576
385	...	LXXII	588
387	..	LXXI	371
389	...	LXXV	2
392	..	LXXII	329
394	..	LXXXII	776
397	..	LXXII	714
401	..	LXXVI	424
402	...	LXX	790
403	..	LXXVI	651
403	...	Not reportable.
405	..	LXXI	1014
406	...	LXXII	472
407	...	LXXVI	293
408	...	LXXIV	1043
409	..	„	244
410	...	LXXX	459
417	..	LXXVII	154
419	..	LXXIV	273
423	..	LXXV	281
425	...	LXV	318
426	...	LXXIV	250
427	...	LXXXII	76
428	...	LXX	869
429	..	„	828
431	...	LXXIV	925
432	...	LXIX	57
433	..	LXXI	307
435	..	LXX	895
436	..	LXXV	443
438	...	LXXXIII	556
439	..	LXXIV	287
444	..	LXXV	218
445	...	LXXX	498
450	..	LXXIII	306
451	..	LXXXIV	581
453	...	LXXIV	267
456	...	LXXV	529
458	..	LXXIV	264
460	...	Not reportable.
463	...	LXXI	657
467	..	LXX	874
469	..	LXXII	794
470	..	LXXI	792
483	...	LXXIII	271
483	...	„	265
484	..	LXXV	722
485	..	LXXVII	450
496	..	LXXIV	591
499	..	LXXV	625
501	...	LXXVII	790
505	..	LXXVI	586
506	..	„	577
507	...	LXXIII	17
513	...	LXXVI	579
516	...	„	583
517	..	LXXVII	819
520	...	Not reportable.
521	..	LXXIV	392
524	...	LXXII	98

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Calcutta High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
527	...	LXXIII	482
532	...	LXXII	467
535	..	LXXVI	499
536	..	Not reportable.
538	...	LXXIV	975
552	...	LXXVI	533
553	...	LXXVII	623
557	...	LXXIII	931
558	...	LXXVI	1052
559	..	LXXII	719
561	..	LXXVI	394
562	...	LXXIV	542
563	...	„	612
567	..	LXXVI	766
568	..	LXXVII	77
569	...	LXXVI	767
570	...	LXXV	557
572	...	LXXVI	455
575	...	„	598
577	...	„	963
578	...	„	603
579	...	Not reportable.
582	...	LXXVII	774
584	...	LXXIII	328
585	...	LXXVII	1025
589	..	LXXII	77
590	...	„	508
594	...	LXXVI	654
596	..	LXXII	372
598	...	LXXI	702
599	...	LXXVII	619
600	...	LXXII	136
601	..	LXXXIV	876
603	..	LXXVII	1022
606	...	LXXI	453
608	...	LXXXII	90
609	...	LXXIX	218
611	...	LXXV	201
612	...	LXXIV	575
615	...	LXXVII	364
619	...	„	253
622	...	LXXX	195
624	...	LXXIV	1001
626	..	„	929
629	..	Not reportable.
631	..	LXXXV	984
639	..	LXXIX	242
641	...	LXXIV	996
644	..	LXXV	364
645	...	LXXII	38
647	...	LXXVII	231
649	...	LXXXI	149
650	..	LXXIV	601
651	..	LXXVI	236
652	...	LXXIII	934
654	...	LXXVI	300
656	...	LXX	919
657	...	LXXIV	1041
658	..	LXXV	362
659	..	LXXIX	77
662	..	LXXVII	816
663	..	LXXX	200

(1923) All India Reporter—concld.

Calcutta High Court —concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
665	...	LXXIII	77
667	..	LXXIV	552
668	...	LXXXI	319
669	...	LXXVII	1030
670	...	LXX	570
672	..	LXXIII	936
673	...	LXXIV	547
674	...	LXXVII	990
675	...	LXXV	506
676	...	LXXIV	545
677	...	LXXIII	10
679	...	LXXIV	555
681	...	LXXVII	26
682	...	LXXV	105
685	...	„	682
689	...	LXXX	323
690	...	LXXV	541
691	...	LXXVII	910
692	...	LXXII	475
694	..	LXXV	421
699	...	LXXVII	10
701	...	LXXV	447
703	...	LXXX	651
704	...	LXXIX	191
705	...	Not reportable.
707	...	LXXVII	991
708	..	„	833
714	...	„	29
715	...	LXXX	353
716	..	LXXV	231
717	...	LXXVI	430
719	...	LXXX	632
723	...	LXXV	537
724	...	LXXIII	773
725	..	LXXVII	892
727	...	LXXV	715
732	...	„	20
734	...	LXXIV	153

Lahore High Court.

1	..	LXIX	486
6	...	LXXII	445
8	...	LXXXIII	776
10	...	„	726
11	..	LXXVII	225
11	...	LXX	299
12	...	Not reportable.
14	..	LXXVII	616
15	...	LXXII	957
16	...	LXXXIV	257
17	...	LXXI	833
20	..	LXX	810
21	...	LXXIX	440
22	...	LXXXV	102
23	...	LXXII	897
24	...	LXXV	786
25	...	LXIX	4
26	...	LXVIII	768
28	...	LXXII	873
29	...	LXVII	461
30	...	LXX	830

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Lahore High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
31	...	LXXII	623
31	...	LXIX	409
35	...	LXXXI	48
35	...	LXIX	363
36	...	LXXXI	48
36	...	LXXII	970
37	...	LXXI	864
38	...	LXIX	283
39	...	„	330
40	...	LXXXI	271
41	...	LXXIX	211
42	..	LXXXIII	508
43	...	LXXXI	179
45	...	LXIX	458
46	...	„	452
47	...	LXXIX	233
48	...	LXXII	569
53	...	LXX	838
54	..	LXXIX	984
56	...	„	990
58	...	LXVIII	716
58	...	LXXI	899
61	...	„	519
65	...	LXIX	474
66	..	Not reportable.
68	...	LXIX	439
69	..	„	111
70	...	LXVIII	1008
71	..	„	846
71	...	„	883
73	..	LXXXI	140
74	...	LXVIII	733
74	...	„	906
75	...	„	95
76	..	„	821
79	...	„	833
81	...	LXXI	512
81	..	„	28
84	..	„	459
85	...	„	724
88	...	LXXXI	76
89	..	LXXIX	178
89	..	LXVII	615
90	...	„	623
91	...	„	729
92	...	LXXVII	989
93	..	LXVII	434
94	..	LXVIII	811
95	...	Not reportable.
96	..	LXVIII	777
97	...	„	785
97	...	„	753
98	..	„	792
100	...	„	787
102	...	„	727
103	...	„	750
104	..	„	817
105	...	„	760
106	...	„	177
107	...	„	890
108	..	LXVII	888
115	...	LXXVII	207

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Lahore High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
117	...	LXVIII	912
121	...	LXX	205
122	...	LXIX	6
123	...	„	35
124	...	LXVIII	740
125	...	LXX	227
127	...	LXVIII	996
128	...	„	830
129	...	LXIX	653
131	..	LXXII	803
132	...	LXXIII	604
133	...	Not reportable.
135	...	LXXI	737
138	...	LXXIX	221
141	..	LXXIII	874
142	...	„	871
143	...	LXXI	42
144	..	LXXIII	910
144	..	„	909
145	...	LXIX	557
146	...	LXXXIV	382
147	...	LXXIII	660
147	...	„	679
150	...	LXXI	825
150	...	LXXIII	705
151	...	LXXIX	281
153	...	LXXXIV	647
155	..	LXXXI	157
155	...	„	164
158	...	LXXIII	510
160	..	LXXXI	56
161	..	Not reportable.
162	...	LXXI	35
163	..	LXXII	593
167	..	LXXIII	513
169	...	Not reportable.
170	..	„
171	...	LXX	1008
172	..	LXXXIII	497
172	...	LXXIX	494
174	...	„	500
175	..	LXXII	845
184	..	LXXVI	267
186	..	LXXI	481
189	..	Not reportable.
193	...	LXXI	829
194	...	LXXIII	558
194	...	LXXI	795
195	..	Not reprotable.
197	...	LXXI	951
203	...	LXXIV	122
204	...	LXIX	395
205	...	LXXI	557
206	...	LXXIII	756
208	...	LXXIX	808
208	..	„	812
209	...	LXXIII	454
210	..	LXXI	561
211	..	LXIX	442
212	...	LXXI	734
213	...	„	730
216	...	LXXIII	795

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Lahore High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
218	...	LXXXV	998
219	..	LXXI	577
222	...	LXXXI	325
223	...	LXXIII	691
224	...	„	367
225	..	„	805
227	...	LXXXI	322
228	...	Not reportable.
230	...	LXXI	587
232	...	LXXXI	347
236	...	LXXIII	232
236	..	Not reportable.
238	...	LXXXII	64
238	...	Not reportable.
239	...	LXXIX	814
239	...	LXXI	743
242	..	„	739
243	...	LXXXI	336
244	..	LXIX	431
245	...	LXXXI	331
247	...	LXXIII	966
248	...	„	854
249	..	Not reportable.
250	..	LXXXI	329
252	...	LXXIX	462
253	..	LXXIII	519
254	...	LXX	984
254	....	„	986
255	...	LXXIII	818
256	...	„	800
257	..	Not reportable.
257	...	LXXIII	489
259	...	„	817
259	...	LXXXIII	751
260	...	LXIX	437
261	...	„	720
262	...	LXXI	746
264	...	„	1006
267	...	LXXVII	230
268	...	„	174
270	..	LXXV	365
271	...	LXIX	651
272	...	LXXIII	292
274	...	Not reportable.
275	..	LXIX	428
278	...	LXXI	246
278	...	LXVIII	848
279	..	„	825
281	...	LXIX	368
281	...	LXXV	490
282	..	Not reportable.
282	...	LXIX	417
283	...	LXXV	496
284	...	LXXII	389
284	..	LXXV	458
286	..	„	368
286	...	„	654
287	...	LXXII	788
288	..	LXXV	662
288	...	LXXI	268
289	...	„	47
290	...	LXXV	165

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Lahore High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
291	...	LXXV	77
293	..	LXXXV	836
294	...	Not reportable.
295	...	LXXV	79
295	...	LXXI	811
296	...	LXXIII	885
299	..	LXXV	99
299	...	LXXXII	987
301	..	LXXIV	939
301	...	LXXV	107
302	..	„	64
302	...	LXXIII	821
303	...	LXXV	656
304	...	LXXI	748
305	..	LXXV	659
307	...	„	680
308	..	Not reportable.
308	..	„
309	...	LXXV	667
310	..	LXXIII	758
311	...	LXXI	847
312	...	Not reportable.
313	...	„
315	...	LXXV	693
317	...	„	689
319	...	Not reportable.
321	..	LXXXV	839
322	...	„	845
325	...	„	817
326	...	„	822
327	..	LXXIII	815
329	..	LXXVI	1039
329	..	LXXII	369
330	..	LXXIII	260
332	..	LXXVI	1037
333	..	„	871
335	..	„	698
336	..	„	692
337	...	„	702
339	..	„	891
340	...	„	963
341	...	LXXIII	779
342	..	LXXVI	689
344	..	„	710
345	..	LXXIII	506
346	...	LXXXVI	280
347	..	LXXIII	916
350	...	LXXXIV	113
352	...	LXXVI	589
353	..	„	592
355	...	LXXIV	685
356	...	LXXVI	582
357	...	LXXXV	802
359	..	LXXV	774
362	...	LXXVI	742
363	...	„	733
366	..	LXXIII	475
368	...	LXXVI	770
369	..	„	751
371	..	„	747
372	..	LXXIII	922
373	...	„	767

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Lahore High Court—contd.

Page.	Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
374	LXXVI	754
376	Not reportable.
377	LXXIII	924
379	LXXXV	807
380	LXXI	603
381	LXXIII	671
383	LXXII	592
384	LXXXV	795
385	LXXVI	716
388	Not reportable.
389	LXXII	86
389	LXXVI	819
391	„	824
392	„	852
394	„	866
394	„	844
395	Not reportable.
396	LXXV	827
398	LXX	1006
399	LXXVI	907
401	„	921
402	LXXXIV	518
403	LXXIII	893
404	LXXVI	910
405	LXXIII	673
406	LXXVI	946
408	„	970
409	LXXI	779
410	Not reportable.
411	LXXVI	1007
412	„	1010
413	„	1013
414	LXXI	487
415	LXXVI	1028
416	Not reportable.
417	LXXIII	725
419	LXXVI	1034
420	LXXIII	782
422	LXXXV	95
423	LXXII	452
425	„	410
425	LXXV	590
427	LXXIII	205
428	LXXXIV	24
429	LXXV	762
431	„	812
431	Not reportable.
432	LXXIII	447
434	Not reportable.
436	LXXV	733
438	„	781
438	LXXXIV	321
440	LXXIII	689
441	Not reportable.
443	LXXV	610
444	LXXXIV	238
445	Not reportable.
445	LXXV	791
446	„	793
447	Not reportable.
448	LXXIII	898
451	„	318

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Lahore High Court—contd.

Page.	Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
452	LXXXIII	773
453	LXXIII	459
454	„	791
455	„	817
456	„	709
458	LXXXII	480
458	LXXIII	797
459	LXXV	940
460	Not reportable.
461	LXXIII	919
462	LXXXIII	171
462	LXXXVIII	762
465	LXXII	107
466	Not reportable.
467	LXXXII	522
470	LXXXV	82
471	LXXXIII	810
473	LXXIII	143
475	LXXXIII	807
476	LXXIII	786
478	„	719
480	LXXV	87
481	LXXIII	652
483	„	450
484	LXXXIII	543
485	LXXIII	738
487	„	323
488	LXXXIII	721
490	LXXIII	136
491	LXXXIII	768
493	„	712
495	LXXVIII	889
497	LXXIII	894
497	LXXVII	473
499	LXXIII	590
500	LXXV	545
501	LXXIII	759
502	„	895
502	LXXVII	475
503	LXXV	90
504	LXXVII	477
505	„	471
506	„	478
506	LXXV	467
508	LXXVII	443
509	„	446
510	LXXV	261
511	„	269
512	LXXVII	434
513	„	447
513	„	416
514	LXXV	419
516	LXXVII	489
517	LXXIII	452
518	„	302
519	„	425
521	„	209
522	LXXVII	516
523	LXXV	317
524	LXXIII	795
525	LXXII	617
529	LXXIII	444

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Lahore High Court—contd.

Page.	Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
530	LXXVII	518
532	LXXIX	543
534	LXXVII	509
535	LXXIII	650
536	LXXXVIII	705
537	LXXVII	600
539	„	602
541	LXXIII	421
544	LXXV	94
546	LXXIII	616
548	LXXVII	523
551	„	532
553	„	535
556	LXXXV	202
557	LXXII	775
559	LXXVII	538
560	LXXIV	577
564	LXXVII	762
565	„	764
566	Not reportable.
568	LXXII	405
569	„	742
572	LXXIII	281
575	LXXV	449
579	„	109
581	„	461
584	LXXVI	474
585	„	553
587	LXXV	183
589	LXXII	403
590	LXXV	562
591	LXXXII	866
592	LXXV	103
593	LXXVI	550
594	LXXXIII	538
595	Not reportable.
595	LXXV	24
597	LXXI	840
598	LXXV	359
600	„	356
601	LXXIX	579
601	LXXXIV	641
603	LXXXII	63
604	LXXXIV	565
605	LXXX	197
607	„	177
608	Not reportable.
608	LXXX	181
609	LXXII	779
611	Not reportable.
612	LXXII	732
615	LXXIII	247
617	LXXVII	1003
619	LXXXI	64
621	LXXXII	479
622	LXXVII	423
623	LXXIII	600
625	„	441
626	LXXX	264
628	„	266
629	„	251
630	„	235

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Lahore High Court—concld.

Page.	Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
632	LXXV	375
634	LXXIX	995
636	„	998
638	LXXV	950
641	LXXX	170
642	LXXIII	357
643	LXXVIII	61
645	LXXXII	91
646	LXXIX	248
647	„	182
648	LXXVIII	103
649	LXXX	1045
652	LXXIX	284
652	LXXV	441
654	LXXVI	202
655	LXXV	915
657	LXXIII	799
658	LXXV	1013
659	LXXIX	957
660	„	980
662	LXXXIII	499
663	LXXXIII	727
665	LXXVII	903
666	„	984
668	„	906
669	LXXVIII	11
671	LXXVII	879
672	LXXII	1040
673	LXXVI	435
674	LXXVII	901
675	LXXV	740
678	LXXIII	794
679	LXXV	746
680	„	919
683	LXXVII	895
684	„	908
685	LXXII	882
685	LXXVII	926
686	„	421
687	„	981
689	„	987
689	LXXIII	668
691	LXXVII	983
692	„	894
693	LXXIV	1
694	LXXV	743
695	LXXVII	872
696	LXXIII	447

Madras High Court.

1	LXX	729
6	LXIX	923
9	LXVIII	931
11	LXX	653
13	LXIX	513
15	„	369
17	LXX	751
19	LXIX	722
20	LXXII	529
23	LXX	45
24	LXXI	508

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Madras High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
25	...	LXX	755
27	...	Not reportable.
28	....	LXVIII	190
29	...	LXX	672
30	...	Not reportable.
31	...	LXX	82
32	...	LXIX	636
34	...	LXVIII	655
36	..	LXXI	153
40	...	LXXIV	812
44	...	LXVIII	921
46	...	LXX	787
48	..	LXIX	1001
50	...	LXXI	504
50	...	LXVIII	843
51	...	LXIX	438
52	...	Not reportable.
54	..	LXXI	330
55	...	LXVIII	898
57	..	LXIX	977
58	...	LXX	168
59	...	LXVIII	624
60	...	LXXI	228
63	...	LXVIII	971
64	...	LXX	405
67	...	LXIX	673
71	...	LXXII	987
72	...	LXIX	932
76	...	LXX	648
81	..	LXVIII	901
82	...	LXX	828
83	...	LXIX	178
84	...	LXVIII	856
85	...	„	927
85	..	LXIX	203
87	...	LXXI	63
87	...	„	128
88	..	LXX	5
88	...	„	994
92	...	LXXXVI	650
94	...	Not reportable.
95	...	LXXI	217
96	...	LXXIII	863
103	...	LXX	736
108	...	„	446
109	...	LXXII	920
113	....	LXX	655
114	...	LXIX	724
114	..	„	559
120	...	Not reportable.
125	..	LXIX	385
129	...	„	393
131	...	„	954
133	...	LXXVI	966
134	...	LXVIII	824
134	..	LXIX	542
135	...	LXXIV	596
136	..	LXXII	340
141	..	LXIX	95
142	...	„	158
144	...	LXXI	293
144	...	LXVIII	826

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Madras High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
147	...	LXXIV	804
153	...	„	27
160	..	LXIX	562
160	...	Not reportable.
163	...	LXXIV	35
168	..	LXIX	389
169	...	LXX	780
171	..	LXXI	65
177	...	LXX	38
178	...	LXIX	374
180	...	„	413
180	...	LXXI	112
181	..	LXIX	447
182	..	LXXI	305
183	...	Not reportable.
184	...	LXXI	61
185	...	„	212
187	...	LXIX	272
187	...	LXXII	360
188	...	LXIX	464
188	...	„	433
191	...	LXXI	238
192	...	„	1039
204	...	LXX	586
206	...	LXXI	49
207	...	LXX	321
209	...	„	598
211	...	LXIX	994
212	...	„	465
215	...	„	313
222	...	LXX	353
224	...	LXVIII	565
225	...	Not reportable.
227	...	LXXVI	1041
228	...	LXIX	440
229	...	LXXI	32
229	...	LXX	784
230	...	LXXII	839
232	...	„	250
237	...	LXVIII	942
237	...	LXXII	892
238	...	LXIX	546
239	...	LXXI	798
241	...	LXX	659
245	...	„	335
246	...	LXXI	288
248	...	„	855
252	...	LXIX	396
254	...	LXXII	902
257	...	„	207
262	...	LXXI	130
270	...	„	173
272	...	LXXII	982
275	...	„	624
276	...	LXIX	634
276	..	LXXI	463
278	...	„	466
280	...	LXXII	833
282	...	LXXIII	206
284	...	LXXII	868
288	...	„	109
295	..	„	857

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Madras High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
297	...	LXXI	274
301	...	LXXIII	470
304	...	LXX	673
306	..	LXXII	131
308	...	„	826
313	...	„	42
316	...	„	139
317	..	„	874
317	..	„	189
320	..	„	141
321	...	LXXI	530
323	...	LXXII	154
324	...	LXXI	514
326	..	LXXII	351
327	..	„	525
328	...	LXXIII	155
329	...	Not reportable.
330	..	LXXII	774
331	...	LXXI	204
331	..	LXIX	402
332	...	LXXII	214
335	...	LXXI	343
337	...	LXXII	63
338	..	LXXI	244
339	...	LXXII	175
340	..	„	194
344	..	„	243
347	..	LXXIII	139
349	...	LXX	286
350	...	LXXIII	374
351	...	LXXII	314
352	...	LXXI	450
353	...	LXXII	46
354	..	LXXIX	40
354	.	LXXII	220
355	..	„	225
358	..	LXXI	374
359	...	„	298
360	..	LXX	987
362	...	LXXII	925
364	...	Not reportable.
364	..	LXXII	358
365	...	„	538
367	...	LXIX	529
368	—	LXXI	200
369	..	LXXII	328
369	..	LXXIII	147
375	..	LXXII	613
375	..	„	134
376	..	LXXIII	991
392	...	LXXIV	416
402	...	LXXI	533
422	....	„	756
426	...	LXXII	599
434	...	„	95
435	..	LXX	888
439	...	LXXII	885
440	..	„	638
442	..	„	322
442	..	„	464
443	...	„	918
444	...	„	149

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Madras High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
447	...	LXXIII	188
452	...	LXXII	145
454	..	LXXIII	733
459	...	LXIX	517
461	..	LXXII	5
462	...	„	488
465	...	LXXIII	409
467	...	LXXII	81
472	...	LXXIV	447
472	...	LXXII	284
473	..	„	536
475	...	LXXIII	619
481	..	LXXII	838
482	..	„	308
484	...	LXXI	1056
484	..	Not reportable.
485	...	LXXIII	329
486	...	LXXXVI	647
487	...	LXXIII	213
487	..	LXXII	335
489	...	„	13
490	..	„	449
492	..	LXXIV	209
497	...	LXXVI	781
500	..	LXXIII	131
502	...	„	202
503	...	LXXII	137
504	..	„	337
505	..	„	820
511	...	„	258
514	...	„	582
517	...	„	278
521	..	„	156
523	...	„	408
523	..	LXXIII	343
533	..	LXXII	292
545	...	„	789
551	...	„	770
553	...	LXXIV	309
557	.	LXXIII	670
558	...	LXXII	727
562	..	„	558
563	..	LXXIII	297
565	...	LXXII	632
567	...	LXXIII	456
568	...	LXXII	548
572	...	„	627
574	...	LXXVII	621
576	...	LXXIV	609
577	...	LXXII	978
578	..	„	842
581	..	„	669
582	..	„	436
584	...	„	430
585	...	LXXIII	74
587	...	LXXII	165
592	..	LXXI	242
593	...	LXX	670
594	...	LXXII	900
595	..	LXXVI	872
596	...	LXXII	609
597	..	„	612

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Madras High Court —concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page
598	...	LXXII	381
600	...	„	515
602	...	LXXIII	217
603	..	LXXII	356
604	..	„	745
606	...	LXXVI	235
607	...	LXXII	459
608	...	„	616
609	...	LXXIII	163
618	...	LXXII	615
619	..	„	836
621	..	„	456
623	...	„	795
624	...	LXXIV	25
626	..	LXXII	735
633	..	„	635
634	...	LXXIII	952
635	..	LXXII	545
638	..	„	865
641	...	„	805
647	..	LXXIII	1050
649	...	LXXII	397
651	...	LXXIII	793
652	...	„	106
659	...	LXXVI	853
660	..	LXXI	658
661	...	LXXII	690
663	...	„	688
665	...	LXXIV	281
666	..	LXXII	69
667	...	LXXIV	785
674	..	LXXIII	66
679	..	LXXV	848
682	..	LXXIV	22
684	..	LXXVI	833
685	...	LXXIII	926
686	..	LXXV	489
687	..	„	768
688	...	LXXVI	869
689	..	LXXIV	223
690	...	LXXVI	207
693	..	LXXV	673
694	..	„	695
700	...	„	476
703	..	„	491
706	...	LXXIV	1026
707	...	LXXIII	944
708	...	LXXIV	1006
711	..	LXXIII	954
713	..	LXXV	161
718	..	LXXIV	218
719	..	LXXII	881

Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court.

1	..	LXVIII	239
2	...	„	320
4	...	Not reportable.
5	...	LXVIII	289
6	...	„	432
7	...	„	664

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page
7	...	LXVIII	325
11	...	„	559
11	...	LXVII	899
13	...	LXIX	549
15	...	LXVIII	732
16	...	„	506
17	...	LXXVII	1037
18	...	LXVIII	643
20	...	„	443
21	...	„	502
22	...	„	314
23	...	LXIX	569
24	...	Not reportable.
26	...	LXVIII	498
27	...	LXXI	979
30	...	LXIX	521
31	...	„	234
32	...	LXVIII	494
33	...	„	427
34	...	LXIX	669
35	...	LXVIII	855
36	..	„	291
37	..	LXXV	889
39	..	LXVIII	36
41	...	„	940
43	...	„	465
45	..	„	198
46	...	LXX	844
47	...	LXXI	40
48	..	LXIX	186
49	..	LXVII	900
50	...	Not reportable.
51	..	LXXI	48
52	..	LXVIII	394
52	...	„	174
53	..	LXIX	629
54	...	LXVIII	407
55	..	LXIX	627
55	...	„	545
56	..	„	286
58	...	LXVIII	272
60	...	LXIX	511
62	...	„	541
63	...	„	572
64	..	„	560
64	..	LXVIII	47
65	..	LXXIV	51
66	...	LXVIII	832
67	...	„	417
67	...	LXIX	238
69	...	„	522
69	...	LXXI	25
70	...	„	413
73	...	LXXXIV	670
75	...	LXIX	612
76	..	LXXI	33
78	...	LXIX	563
79	...	„	559
80	..	LXXI	37
81	..	Not reportable.
83	...	LXIX	619

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page
85	...	LXIX	205
86	...	LXXI	205
88	..	„	421
90	..	Not reportable.
91	...	LXXI	325
91	...	LXXXII	616
93	...	LXXI	129
94	..	„	42
95	...	LXIX	883
96	...	LXXI	39
97	...	„	418
98	...	LXVIII	605
100	...	LXIX	633
101	...	LXXVI	255
101	...	LXV	542
103	...	LXXI	28
103	..	LXV	48
105	...	LXIX	876
107	...	LXXVII	911
108	...	LXV	881
109	...	LXVII	310
111	..	LXVIII	252
112	..	LXXII	1016
115	...	LXVIII	237
115	...	LXXI	351
117	...	„	17
121	..	LXVIII	294
121	..	LXX	344
124	..	LXIX	193
125	...	LXXI	532
127	...	LXVIII	508
129	...	„	474
129	...	„	178
130	..	„	476
132	...	Not reportable.
133	..	LXXII	158
135	...	LXXI	477
137	..	LXVIII	425
137	...	LXXI	804
139	...	LXXXII	516
139	...	LXXI	863
140	...	LXIX	894
141	..	LXXI	207
142	..	LXVIII	340
143	...	LXXI	556
144	...	LXXXIII	946
145	..	LXXI	816
146	..	LXVIII	157
149	..	LXIX	500
150	...	LXXI	558
151	..	„	566
153	...	„	777
155	...	„	667
156	..	LXXXIV	551
157	...	Not reportable.
158	...	LXXI	669
158	...	„	795
161	..	LXV	654
161	..	LXVIII	429
163	...	LXVII	305
164	...	LXXI	140

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page
166	...	LXXI	176
167	..	LXXII	465
169	...	LXXV	660
171	...	LXXI	468
174	...	Not reportable.
177	...	LXXI	808
180	..	LXVIII	45
181	...	Not reportable.
182	...	LXXI	436
187	..	„	404
188	..	„	727
192	...	„	831
193	..	„	445
195	..	„	409
197	...	LXXIII	142
198	..	LXIX	525
199	..	LXXI	443
201	...	LXXXIV	658
208	..	LXIX	640
209	..	LXX	209
210	...	LXXI	401
211	..	LXX	72
213	...	LXXII	422
214	..	Not reportable.
219	...	LXXII	461
222	...	„	427
223	...	„	333
225	..	LXXXII	77
226	...	LXXIII	39
227	..	LXXII	438
229	...	„	45
230	..	LXXI	491
234	...	LXXII	458
236	...	„	473
237	...	„	318
239	...	„	395
241	..	LXXIV	317
243	...	LXXIII	24
246	...	LXXII	388
247	..	Not reportable.
248	..	LXXIII	262
251	...	„	266
255	...	„	228
257	...	LXXII	327
258	...	LXVIII	890
260	...	LXXII	361
261	...	LXXIII	15
262	...	„	1042
264	...	„	52
265	...	LXXIX	422
272	..	LXXIII	221
273	...	LXV	503
274	...	LXXII	121
281	...	LXXIII	251
282	...	LXXXII	771
283	..	„	645
284	...	LXXIII	65
285	...	„	7
286	...	LXXXIV	639
287	...	Not reportable.
288	...	LXXIV	81

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
289	...	LXV	416
290	..	LXXIII	1037
291	...	LXV	324
292	...	LXXIII	1055
293	...	LXXV	589
295	...	LXXIV	20
296	..	„	107
297	...	LXXV	80
298	...	LXXIV	45
300	...	LXXII	1044
301	..	LXXVIII	177
305	...	LXXIV	53
306	...	LXXIII	1021
307	...	„	959
309	..	Not reportable.
310	...	LXXIV	93
311	..	LXXIII	8
313	...	LXXV	158
314	...	LXXIII	1033
317	...	LXXVI	980
320	...	LXXIII	32
321	...	LXXVI	305
322	...	„	772
324	...	LXXV	906
326	..	„	914
327	...	LXXVI	193
329	...	LXXV	999
330	...	LXXVI	668
332	..	LXXV	440
333	...	„	823
334	..	LXXVII	50
336	...	LXXXIV	862

Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court.

1	...	LXIX	97
3	...	LXXII	877
4	...	LXIX	8
8	...	„	657
8	..	LXXVI	870
9	...	LXIX	660
14	...	LXVIII	972
15	...	„	969
16	..	LXXII	879
18	...	„	394
19	...	LXX	85
21	...	LXIX	893
22	...	LXXII	958
23	...	LXXIV	324
24	...	LXX	66
26	...	„	74
27	...	LXXIV	340
29	...	LXXII	909
30	...	LXIX	717
31	..	LXVIII	534
35	...	LXVII	828
35	...	„	982
36	...	LXXII	911
37	...	„	955
38	...	„	916

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
38	...	LXXIX	237
39	...	Not reportable.
42	...	LXX	966
42	..	LXVIII	977
44	..	LXX	286
44	...	LXIV	286
45	...	LXXVII	695
47	...	LXVI	106
49	..	LXX	283
50	...	„	937
50	...	„	983
52	...	LXVI	938
54	..	LXX	941
55	..	LXIV	767
55	...	LXX	99
56	..	LXV	612
56	...	LXXIII	321
57	...	LXX	930
59	...	„	278
61	...	LXXIV	225
80	..	LXX	253
91	..	LXXIV	206
93	...	„	214
97	..	LXXIII	49
101	..	LXXIV	195
102	...	LXXIII	727
108	...	LXX	79
109	...	LXXV	331
112	..	LXXIV	712
113	..	LXXVII	839
114	...	LXXIV	369
117	..	„	321
118	...	„	344
119	...	„	445
121	...	„	360
123	...	LXXVII	310
139	...	LXXIV	346
142	...	LXXIII	54
143	...	LXXII	263
146	..	LXXIV	380
147	...	„	353
150	...	LXXIII	466
152	...	„	523
153	...	LXXIV	351
154	..	„	301
155	..	LXXIII	222
156	..	LXXIV	162
158	...	LXXVII	768
159	...	„	771
160	...	„	776
161	...	LXXVI	562
162	...	„	500
163	...	„	566
165	...	LXXIV	539
167	...	LXXXI	67
172	...	LXXIV	715
173	..	„	295
175	...	LXXXIV	377
176	..	LXXIV	316
177	...	LXXIII	591
180	...	Not reportable.

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court—concld.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
181	...	LXXIV	299
182	...	LXXIII	27
185	...	LXXV	626
206	...	LXXIV	409
208	...	„	546
209	...	„	304
212	...	LXXII	428
214	...	LXXIV	390
216	...	„	429
217	...	„	434
227	...	„	563
235	...	„	401
236	...	LXXII	390
237	...	LXXIV	480
238	..	„	253
240	...	„	249
241	...	„	246
242	...	„	549
246	..	LXXIX	274
247	...	LXXII	57
250	...	„	199
251	..	LXXI	974
252	...	LXXVII	874
254	...	LXXIV	517
265	...	LXXI	581
271	...	LXXVII	116
272	..	„	115

Patna High Court.

1	...	LXVIII	945
13	..	LXXII	961
22	...	„	938
25	...	LXX	846
28	...	LXXVII	1054
29	..	LXIX	613
30	...	Not reportable.
31	...	LXXII	971
33	...	LXX	312
36	..	„	843
37	...	Not reportable.
41	...	„
44	...	LXXI	26
45	...	LXVIII	363
49	...	LXIX	681
50	...	LXXI	113
53	...	LXXIII	339
55	...	LXIV	1003
56	...	LXV	446
57	...	LXXI	254
58	...	LXVII	954
62	..	LXXI	117
64	...	„	345
65	...	LXIX	947
71	...	LXX	226
72	...	LXVIII	601
76	...	LXXI	999
83	...	LVIII	268
84	...	LXV	494
85	..	„	283
86	...	„	349

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Patna High Court—contd.

Page.		Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
87	..	LXIX	957
88	..	LXII	536
89	..	LXV	432
90	...	„	355
91	...	LXVI	73
94	...	Not reportable.
95	..	LX	521
96	..	LXX	155
96	...	LXVI	471
98	..	LXIII	282
100	..	LVI	422
101	..	LXV	474
102	..	„	360
102	...	LXIV	276
103	...	LXV	443
104	...	„	484
111	..	LXVIII	653
113	...	LXV	294
114	...	„	49
115	...	„	144
116	...	LX	662
119	...	LXVII	506
121	..	LXIV	510
122	...	LXVIII	394
129	...	LXXV	879
130	...	LXX	290
131	...	LXXIII	327
133	...	„	294
134	..	LXXII	860
135	...	LXV	285
137	...	LXVIII	316
140	...	LXIII	278
142	...	LXV	573
143	...	LXII	905
149	...	LXXXII	803
150	...	LXXI	426
152	...	LXX	332
153	...	LXV	576
153	...	LXVII	635
154	..	„	435
155	...	„	511
156	...	LXVII	942
157	..	LXV	552
158	...	LXVII	502
159	..	LXVIII	629
162	..	„	804
163	...	„	676
165	..	LXVII	451
174	...	„	710
176	..	„	859
180	..	LXVIII	337
183	..	LXVII	795
185	..	LXXI	703
185	..	LXXII	875
187	...	LXVIII	372
197	...	LXXII	1053
199	..	LXXI	940
201	...	„	570
203	..	„	944
205	..	LXX	304
206	..	LXIX	565

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Patna High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
209	..	LXXI	11
213	..	LXXIII	5
215	..	LXX	782
217	..	LXXI	318
218	...	LXXXI	295
18	...	LXXI	887
23	..	LXXIII	373
24	..	LXXI	741
26	...	LXXVI	136
228	...	LXXXIII	345
229	...	LXXII	956
231	...	LXXXIII	290
236	...	LXXXIV	536
238	...	LXXII	959
239	..	LXXI	484
242	..	LXXII	135
242	..	LXXI	705
259	...	„	916
268	...	LXXIX	9
275	...	LXXV	780
276	....	LXXI	902
285	...	LXXII	440
290	...	LXXI	948
292	...	LXXII	71
293	...	Not reportable.
295	...	LXXII	157
296	...	Not reportable.
297	...	LXXXII	480
297	...	LXXXV	35
298	...	LXX1	565
299	...	Not reportable.
301	...	LXXII	657
303	...	LXXVI	1049
305	...	LXVIII	641
307	...	LXV	492
309	...	LXVII	464
322	...	LXXI	937
324	...	LXXIX	199
325	...	„	571
327	...	LXXI	843
331	...	„	383
337	...	LXXVI	991
338	...	LXXII	954
340	...	LXXI	1022
342	...	LXXII	916
344	...	„	409
346	...	„	218
348	...	LXVII	592
348	..	LXXII	811
353	...	LXXIII	12
354	...	LXXII	629
355	...	LXXIII	451
356	...	„	569
361	...	„	158
363	...	Not reportable.
364	...	LXXII	883
366	...	„	951
368	...	„	613
369	...	LXXII	173
371	..	LXXII	912
375	...	„	1049

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Patna High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
380	....	LXXIV	619
381	...	„	464
384	..	„	608
385	...	LXXI	341
386	...	LXXVI	940
391	...	LXXI	395
397	...	LXXIV	454
401	....	LXXI	478
402	...	„	470
404	...	„	475
406	...	„	573
407	...	LXXII	1035
410	...	LXXIV	713
411	...	LXXIII	71
413	..	LXXIV	705
417	...	LXXXIV	1001
418	...	LXXII	907
420	...	LXXI	280
423	..	LXXII	230
433	...	„	910
435	...	„	625
436	...	LXXIV	150
437	...	LXXV	363
438	...	LXXIII	161
441	...	LXXIV	642
443	..	LXXI	489
445	...	LXXIII	317
446	..	LXXI	881
451	...	LXXXV	1014
453	..	LXXIV	668
464	...	LXXV	1022
470	...	LXXIV	649
474	..	LXXXVI	712
475	...	LXXIV	403
481	...	LXXI	897
483	..	LXXVII	14
487	...	LXXII	103
488	...	LXXI	332
490	...	LXXIV	132
492	...	LXXIII	822
514	..	LXXV	284
517	..	LXXX	377
518	...	LXXII	148
519	...	„	360
520	..	LXXIV	941
521	...	„	626
525	..	LXXVI	113
527	...	LXXIV	857
528	..	LXXII	69
529	..	LXXV	265
530	...	LXXIV	693
532	...	LXXII	945
536	..	LXXIV	947
537	..	LXXXI	602
539	..	LXXIV	957
540	...	„	1047
542	...	„	710
545	...	LXXXV	40
546	..	LXXV	69
547	...	LXXII	375
550	...	LXXIII	561

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Patna High Court—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
558	...	LXXII	648
562	...	LXXVI	194
564	...	LXXVII	1
572	...	LXXV	676
575	...	LXXVII	500
576	..	„	209
581	...	LXXV	305
585	..	LXXIX	335
588	...	LXXII	544
589	...	LXXVII	378
590	..	LXXIV	758
592	..	LXXVI	277
597	...	„	49
600	...	LXXII	405

Rangoon High Court.

1	....	LXVIII	694
6	...	LXVII	777
9	...	LXVIII	671
11	...	LXX	841
12	...	LXXII	975
13	...	LXX	834
15	...	LXVI	513
15	...	LXX	872
16	...	LXVI	80
17	...	LXVII	636
18	...	LXVIII	928
21	..	„	885
22	...	LXXVII	408
23	...	LXVIII	818
23	...	LXXVII	905
24	..	LXX	911
26	...	„	870
27	...	LXXIII	325
29	...	LXX	893
30	...	„	902
31	...	LXXIII	55
37	..	„	145
40	...	LXXIX	273
41	...	LXXXIII	522
41	...	LXXIX	249
42	....	LXX	126
44	...	LXXIX	278
44	..	LXXIII	328
45	..	„	334
45	...	LXX	843
46	...	„	112
47	...	„	96
49	...	„	144
51	...	LXXIII	1039
52	...	LXXII	34
54	...	LXX	99
55	..	LXXVII	400
57	..	LXXIV	47
60	...	„	52
61	..	LXVIII	887
65	..	LXXIV	72
65	...	LXXIII	972
67	..	LXXIV	78
68	...	LXXXI	163

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Rangoon High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
68	...	LXXIII	157
69	...	LXXIV	54
71	...	LXVIII	690
74	...	Not reportable.
74	...	LXXIV	18
75	...	„	34
75	...	„	39
76	...	LXXXI	32
76	...	LXXIV	41
77	...	„	44
79	..	LXXIII	976
79	...	Not reportable.
80	..	LXXIV	13
81	...	LXXVII	419
82	...	LXXIV	278
82	...	„	164
84	..	LXXVII	920
86	...	LXIX	980
87	..	LXX	121
88	...	„	115
92	..	LXXIV	9
94	..	LXX	135
97	..	„	323
98	...	LXXIX	280
98	...	„	284
98	...	LXX	129
100	...	Not reportable.
102	...	LXXIV	155
102	..	LXXIII	175
103	...	LXVIII	924
107	..	LXXIV	151
108	...	LXX	517
110	...	LXXVII	53
113	...	„	258
114	...	LXXII	205
117	..	LXXXIV	533
119	..	LXXVI	1031
119	..	LXX	530
120	...	LXXII	200
122	..	„	14
124	..	„	4
125	..	„	6
127	..	LXXXII	787
127	..	„	789
128	...	LXXIV	128
129	...	LXXII	212
130	..	„	193
131	...	„	368
132	..	LXXVI	1039
133	...	LXXII	67
134	..	LXXIII	975
135	..	LXXXI	172
135	...	LXXIV	259
136	...	Not reportable.
138	..	LXXIX	817
139	...	LXXXI	111
140	...	„	74
141	...	LXXV	74
143	...	LXXXI	75
144	...	LXXV	367
145	...	LXXXI	141

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Rangoon High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
146	...	LXXIV	65
147	...	LXXXI	53
148	..	Not reportable.
149	...	LXXIX	813
150	..	LXXV	200
151	..	LXXIV	58
152	...	LXXV	358
153	...	„	328
154	..	LXXV	343
155	...	LXXIV	1037
156	...	LXXV	322
157	...	„	353
159	...	„	304
160	...	„	6
161	...	LXXVI	646
163	..	„	458
171	..	LXXIV	104
174	...	LXXV	295
176	...	LXXIV	82
180	...	„	933
185	..	LXXVI	479
187	..	LXXIV	6
188	...	LXXV	296
189		LXXXVII	686
193	...	LXXVI	519
195	..	„	677
196	..	„	449
197	...	„	21
199	...	„	504
202	...	„	475
205	...	„	812
206	...	LXXIV	100
208	...	LXXVI	441

(1923) All India Reporter—contd.

Rangoon High Court—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
209	...	LXXIV	74
211	...	„	68
212	..	„	954
214	..	LXXVI	396
215	..	LXXVII	1021
216	...	LXXVI	649
218	...	„	620
222	...	LXXVI	508
223	..	„	597
225	...	LXXV	74
226	...	LXXVI	493
227	...	LXXIV	1050
230	..	Not reportable.
231	...	LXXIV	960
232	..	LXXVI	624
236	...	LXXIX	244
237	...	LXXVI	617
238	...	LXXV	225
239	..	LXXVI	612
242	..	LXXXII	606
244	...	LXXV	309
245	...	LXXXI	187
246	..	LXXV	217
247	...	LXXVI	575
248	..	LXXXI	154
250	...	LXXIX	818
251	..	LXXIV	1042
252	..	LXXVI	600
253	...	Not reportable.
254	...	LXXVI	522
256	...	LXXIV	835
257	..	LXXVI	494
258	..	LXXIV	1027

(1923) All India Reporter—concld.

Rangoon High Court—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
261	..	LXXV	31
265	...	LXXIX	291
268	...	LXXVI	705
271	..	„	814

Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.

1		LXXXVII	258
5	..	LXXI	161
14	..	LXXIII	311
15	..	„	319
17	...	LXXV	549
20	...	„	497
25	...	LXXXII	81
33	...	LXXXIII	774
35	..	LXXIX	539
38	..	LXXXI	759
42		LXXXXIV	137
50	..	LXXVII	897
54	..	LXXXII	998

Law Reports, Indian Appeals.

Vol. L, 1923.

1	...	LXXVII	1041
9	...	LXXII	485
14	...	LXXI	933
25	...	„	763

Law Reports, Indian Appeals—Vol. L, 192 concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
32	...	LXXI	643
41	...	„	1035
49	...	LXXII	898
58	...	LXXI	769
69	...	„	629
77	...	„	650
84	...	„	646
92	...	LXXVII	1009
108	...	LXXII	202
115	...	„	187
121	...	LXXVII	1048
134	...	LXIX	123
142	...	LXXIV	396
155	...	LXXIII	193
162	...	LXXV	7
173	...	LXXIII	252
179	...	„	244
183	...	LXXIV	747
192	..	„	462
196	...	„	449
202	...	„	476
210*n*	...	LXXI	641
212	...	LXXIV	469
227	...	LXXV	392
239	..	LXXIV	499
247	..	„	906
255	...	„	362
265	..	LXXVI	922
276	...	„	929
283	...	„	910
295	..	LXXIV	492
301	...	LXXVI	594
308	...	LXXVII	100
324	..	LXXIII	436